

Monday.

Dear Sidney,

This week end I stayed with my good friend, Cheryl Crawford. We spent a couple of days at Mary Martins lovely home in Conn. Cheryl is reading my play and giving me in valuable advice about directors, casting etc. Terry Hellburn, a director of the Guild with whom I have a contract for production, came over and we talked a bit. Cheryl and a friend found and are buying the Mamelon farm - real country, a swimming hole, two homes in fine condition, a grape arbor, an orchard - every thing a farm should have.

I hope they can get it. They say I can have a room in it. I come and go as I please.
I do know that no one has friends who are more beautiful than I have.

Deryle wanted me to see her doctor. —
He has boundless faith in her, and feels about her as I do about William Mayer.
What he told me made me cry. He said no cigarettes, no coffee, no nothing. When I got home I called William, and he said I didn't have to give up those things.

I wired you that there is a Statler reservation. If you arrive before we do take for the room that I reserved. Since we already had a room, I just asked for an additional single room for a guest.

What are the chances if the strike is on?
Will the convention be held? or what? My best always
