Baseball.

While the weather has been somewhat disagreeable for baseball the past week, yet the candidates have braved it and been practicing on the field every day.

The games with the second team have proved to be of great advantage and have infused much spirit into the men, the result of which is a marked improvement in the playing and batting.

Captain Snyder is playing strong at first base. His throwing is accurate and speedy and the base always finds a secure resting place in his mit, while his batting is a great improvement over late years.

Myers is showing up well. He is covering more ground this year and his throwing is as quick and accurate as ever and his batting better.

Short-stop Campbell puts a period on every ball that comes his way. He is one of the best batters on the team and is maintaining his record, while his throwing is strong.

Second Baseman, Faulkner is playing about as usual with probably some improvement in his batting.

Maxwell has been prevented from playing lately on account of sickness. He is a good man and if he does not knock some of the infield out of their position, will make a good man in the field.

Alford's catching is improving daily and he will make a first-rate catcher by the opening of the season. His throwing is accurate and speedy and his batting up to the mark. He is the fastest runner among the candidates and uses his head well in running bases.

Burnett has not let himself out much but yesterday showed he had control of deceptive and speedy curves. He is a good fielder and his batting sure.

Pratt has been practicing very little but says he is in better form than ever and can control the ball much better.

Robinson is a good pitcher and it is to be regretted he does not go out and practice more regularly.

Muir is putting up a stiff run for right field and his playing has already scared some of the timorous aspirants away. His batting is fair.

Davis is playing well and is a likely man for one of the fields, his throwing and fielding being very good.

There is not much doubt but that in the near future some of the lights of the second team will become more prominent and we would like to mention them here but space forbids.

Manager Whiteside has added six more games to the schedule as already announced in the RING-TUM PHI, while Lafayette has cancelled her game with us.

The new games are:

At Lexington, Va.—Maryland Agricultural College, April 6.

St. Johns College, May 2nd.

Richmond College, May 14th.

Philadelphia All-Scholastic College, May 20th.

At Blacksburg, Va.—V. P. I., April 15th.

At Roanoke, Va.—Roanoke College, April 16th.

Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association met in Court Street Methodist church, Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 17-20. Washington and Lee had seven delegates—as many as any other institution of learning. They all report a most enjoyable time and are loud in their praises of the Lynchburg people.

Hon. W. L. Wilson made the opening address and held the closest attention of his large audience. He said that he was not accustomed to the pulpit as a platform and was therefore embarrassed; but no one would have known it, for his eloquence was in keeping with his reputation. Rev. Dr. Whaling addressed the college men and preached twice Sunday. Mr. Mathews from Oxford University, was one of the leading men of the convention.

A banquet was given the officers Friday evening and on Saturday afternoon the young ladies of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College gave a concert to the delegates.

The delegates from W. & L. U.

were Preston Allan, J. Randolph Shields, R. Granville Campbell, W. E. Davis, Cary Blain, Robert Glasgow and W. Kyle McClung.

Come out to the Sunday afternoon meeting and hear all about the convention.

Randolph Macon Woman's College.

It would not be fair for so many W. & L. U. men to enjoy the hospitality of Virginia's great female college without specially mentioning that institution. To say that the workings of that college proved a revelation would convey no idea of what a great work they are accomplishing. They have four fully equipped laboratories—chemical, biological, physical and psychological—the only psychological laboratory in the South. They have an elegant gymnasium and everything is strictly up-to-date.

The course is the highest given to girls in the South and almost equals that of Vassar College. Out of about 200 students there are only five full graduates, which speaks well for the high standard.

The discipline there is something new in the South. There is no iron-clad, anti-man rule; but the young ladies are put upon their honor and treated accordingly. A number of college men went out to the college during the Y. M. C. A. convention and several W. & L. U. men were along. We would like to speak of the girls—but Oh, my! what can we say? They are the "all rightest" girls we have seen and we will call again when W. & L. U. goes to Lynchburg to play Harvard.

Other Campuses.

Yale's crew has been on the river several times already.

S. W. P. U., Clarksville, Tenn., has been reinstated into the S. I. A. A., having paid up her dues.

North Carolina will have a field day for the preparatory schools of the state, to be held April 16th.

Forty-one men have been expelled from Leland Stanford for idleness and the president has his eye on several more.

Entered at the postoffice at Lexington as second-class matter.

No one expects regular funeral conduct at an intermediate celebration, nevertheless the behavior should not be insulting to the gentlemen upon the stage. A speaker can hardly get mad with a man for enjoying the pleasant prattle of a dear damsel more than his learned handling of an economic subject; but he is an it who is not riled by such puerile conduct as was displayed by some on Tuesday evening. We fail to see either wit or wisdom in the beating of a tattoo on a bench while a speaker is trying to make himself heard from the rostrum. While quiet persiflage with one's companion and the writing of a billet doux is not to be encouraged, yet the motive which prompts them is pleasure to oneself, not discomfort to another; but the making of useless noise, either for the purpose of showing off or of disturbing the speaker is without excuse. That style of wit which depends on insult for its success is best absent.

It is time all of the clubs which intend entering the Calyx were being organized, and having their names reported to the editor and manager. It will not be long before the March exams are on us, and everything must be in shape for the printers before that time. Too few clubs have been formed thus far. Can not some of the loyal sons of the various states organize their state clubs? So far Kentucky and West Virginia have set a good example, which it is hoped many will follow. Surely the "Cuba Libre" should be stronger this season than ever before.

Mr. A. C. Birch, law '07, is now a successful young attorney in Montgomery, Ala. We watch his record with pride and are glad to know that he now has a case pending before the supreme court of his state.

The Southern Collegian.

We were sorry not to review the January copy of the Collegian which came to us last week. It has very little poetry in it this issue and possibly this is due to the fact that the poetic muse finds summer, or rather spring, best adapted to revive the flow of the poets' pens. Now that spring is putting herself in readiness to come and the arbutus is almost ready to invite affectionate couples to see its flower spread, we may hope that the real poets will in genuine verse tell the thoughts which fact and fancy crowd into their active brains.

The best contribution to the Collegian in recent months is an essay which Prof. Launcelot Minor Harris contributes on "The Creoles of New Orleans." In this essay Mr. Harris makes a study of the very interesting tale which the life of this people affords. He first corrects the erroneous idea which is so prevalent as regards the origin of the Creoles of his sketch. He would disabuse the minds of his readers of the idea that Creole implies a tincture of African blood. He defines him as "a native of Louisiana or other of the Gulf States, whose ancestors were either French or Spanish." The misconception may be due to the use of the word Creole in the West Indies. An unimportant element to lay in the cities which the Americans have in their own hands today, the Creoles have been influential and have left an impress which is easily traceable.

Though Mr. Harris shrinks from anything like a formal characterization of the Creoles of New Orleans, he nevertheless gives us some interesting pictures of the easy contented life they lead. Seriousness is doubtless too often entirely excluded from their ever joyous life. A quality which no one in speaking of the Creoles can pass over is the beauty of the women among them. It is rare that you find a really homely woman among them. It is to be lamented that such an early bloom should be of such short duration. After twenty-five the Creole beauty fades and gives place to the corpulence of the matron.

What Mr. Harris wrote is mainly about what may be called the upper class—the descendants of families of education and refinement. There is cause for interest in the lower class which Mr. Cable's novels and stories have pictured, but just here it is well to notice that they are two distinct classes.

That such an interesting people should be gradually passing out of existence is a lamentable fact.

In verse "Dunlora" incites to higher aims and impresses the truths with illustrations from the various spheres of life. The whole poem shows that whatever is worthy of attainment demands an expenditure of effort, be it in the athletic field or in the field of study. "The spirit world obeys the self-same law." It is further declared that "the hardest is the easiest done."

"Huntley" tells the story of the devotion of Uncle Reuben for his young master and the master's affection for his beloved servant, who despite many weaknesses which manifested themselves, is such overt acts that they could not have been excused in others less beloved.

In two stanzas of verse "Robert Morse" tells how he loved, wooed and won dearest Clare.

"Roche" describes in For the Sake of Ease how a young man's course of love was changed by his considerations for the ease which a marriage with a rich young woman would bring. In this way he "combines pleasure with business."

The Athletic Department contains some timely hints on the importance of careful training in preparation for success in any department of athletics.

Y. M. C. A.

At the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow the delegates who attended the convention in Lynchburg will give reports on the different departments of the Association work. It is expected that this will be one of the most interesting meetings of the year.

In Y. M. C. A. hall tomorrow at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Second Province of the Sigma Chi fraternity will hold its annual conclave here on Thursday and Friday of next week. The Second Province embraces the chapters at the University of Virginia, Hampden-Sidney, Randolph-Macon, Roanoke College, University of North Carolina and Washington and Lee.

Mr. John W. Garrow left this morning for Washington, D. C., where he will spend several days.

Books Received.

WHEN LOVE LAUGHS. Tom Hall $1.50. E. R. Herrick & Co., New York. For sale by W. C. Stuart.

Tom Hall has collected his poems that had been previously published in Munseys', Truth, The Sunday World, The Sunday Journal, and the Yellow Book, and has published them together with a large number of poems appearing for the first time. The title he has given to his collection is significant of the character of his poetry. When Love Laughs is enjoyable to all lovers of light poetry.

The author well carries out his purpose stated in the introduction: "The author shamelessly acknowledges that he has not 'dipped his pen into the boiling crater of Vesuvius,' nor yet endeavored to 'write upon the blue vaults of Heaven'; but has only tried to 'erect a few' fancies for people who have not time to do so for themselves."

BROKENBURNE. Virginia Frazer Boyle. $1.50. E. R. Herrick & Co., New York. For sale by W. C. Stuart.

Next to the beautiful pictures of Virginia life before the war, drawn by Thomas Nelson Page, Brokenburne gives one of the most perfect portrayals. It is a real monument to that elegant social life which no longer exists.

It is a war tale of an old Southern auntie, and in an almost perfect Negro dialect she gives her reminiscences of the "good old times" before the war, and tells of the social fabric which was torn down by civil strife. A Northern and a Southern boy listen to her story, and interest is added by the fidelity of the old auntie and her husband to their young master, who has never returned from the war. A beautiful love story is told and shows an instance of lovers being separated by their principles.

The publishers have put their best work into the book and it is a beautiful little volume.

Lost.

Lost, between the hours of eleven and half-past one last Monday morning at the Randolph-Macon Woman's college at Lynchburg, one heart (also one umbrella). The possessor of the former and the finder of the latter return at once to

J. PRESTON ALLAN.

Annual Celebration of the Washington Literary Society.

The Washington Literary Society held its annual celebration in the University chapel on last Tuesday night under very auspicious circumstances, and with marked credit to the participants.

At 8:45 o'clock the officers, orators and debaters of the occasion filed in with the ushers and marched to the rostrum. When the music ceased the president, Mr. Van Astor Hatchelor, of N. C., in a very graceful and appropriate speech welcomed the audience on behalf of the society and introduced the first orator of the evening, Mr. J. Preston Allan, of Va., whose subject was "A Political Danger of the Day." Mr. Allan handled the subject well, both in composition and delivery, and brought out fully the dangers that threaten our country growing out of the fraud so prevalent throughout the land.

The second orator of the evening was Mr. G. Cuthbert Powell of D. C., whose subject was "The Liberty Hall Volunteers." Mr. Powell's speech combined the elements of eloquence and argument, and in tracing the valiant deeds of that noble band, he had no trouble whatever in holding the almost undivided attention of the entire crowd.

After this speech the band struck up the martial and ever thrilling "Dixie," and when the echoes of applause died away the president asked that the subject for debate be read, whereupon the secretary, Mr. Robert Glasgow of Va., announced the following: Resolved, "That Free Institutions in the United States are in Danger," and Mr. Thos. J. Farrar of Va., was introduced as the first speaker on the affirmative. Mr. Farrar spoke with earnestness and zeal. His speech showed careful work and his points were all sustained by sound reasoning.

He spoke of the dangers attending our individual rights, our social conditions and our political institutions, and further pointed out that two of the most serious dangers that threaten all three are our foreign element and the Romish church.

The second debater of the occasion and the first for the negative was Mr. A. W. Webb of Md., who spoke with ease and force and held that our institutions were freer from danger now than they had ever been, and that most of the so-called dangers were not really existing, but were merely in the minds of those who were ever ready to borrow trouble and find in all things something that smacked of danger.

Following Mr. Webb was Mr. M. G. Perrow of Va., who also sustained the negative, the other representative of the affirmative being absent. Mr. Perrow had a carefully written speech and sustained admirably the views most pertinent to the side of which he was an advocate; following them up with sound and reasonable arguments.

After the music which always follows the debates, the president announced the decision of the judges, which awarded the orator's medal to Mr. Powell and the debater's medal to Mr. Webb. The decision was received with continued applause and congratulation to the fortunate recipients.

The celebration was in every particular a pleasant one and greatly enjoyed by all who were present.

The Bulletin Board.

Washington and Lee has for some time since assumed the high sounding title of University. The preparatory department has been abolished and we rejoice, because we think and trust that a step has been taken in the right direction. The young men are no longer called "preps," but are dignified with the name of University students. But when we notice the conduct on the part of some who adorn our campus we are irresistibly compelled to stop and wonder, whether the foolish and prepish inclinations and propensities of our preparatory stage have been relegated to by gone days. Reader is that you? When you are walking by the bulletin board and focus your gaze upon a notice of a class, club or literary meeting, which has no significance or importance to you, do you pull it down, tear it in two or run your knife through it? If you do, just remember that you are supposed to uphold the dignity of a student of the University, and that such thoughtlessness and prepishness is not even appropriate to children and the academy. Don't "prep" and inconvenience others by such conduct, but be worthy of being called a student of the University. If you wish to get funny and amuse your fellow students, choose some means that will not inconvenience your neighbors. Sic utere tuo ut alienum non leadas.
