CAMPUS LIFE—The many and varied activities during the session make the life of a student in a small college town more interesting than it may seem. Fraternity initiations, intramural athletics, and university assemblies, play their part in the Campus life.
JOURNALISM CLASS—Being founded by Robert E. Lee during his Presidency after the Civil War, the School of Journalism (which was re-established this year) promises to become one of the important branches of the university. Above—shows classes in the new school.
TROUBADOUR SHOW—The Thanksgiving Troubadour production, "The Whole Town's Talking," was one of the most successful presented by the local Thespians during their existence on the Campus. It was enthusiastically received by the students.
TROUBADOUR SHOW—Every player interpreted his role with unusual ability for an amateur dramatist. Above—MacDonough, Mellen, Van Hellenman, Reeves, and Wilkinson, in their characteristic roles.
TROUBADOUR SHOW—Above—Glee Club Quartette which has greatly aided in making the Troubadour productions a success. Below—scene taken from the Thanksgiving production, "The Whole Town's Talking."
FANCY DRESS BALL.—Washington and Lee's dance extravaganza is known throughout the South as a whirl of gaiety unparalleled in college circles. Above—leaders of the "Bal Beaux Arts," ballet dancer, and members of the Fancy Dress figure.
FANCY DRESS BALL—Costumes are worn at Fancy Dress Ball representing every country during every period. The many colors and variety of costumes give the dance an unusual brilliancy. Above—Mr. Gill, director of the ball, and leaders of various tableaux.
ELECTIONS—When the Ides of March fade into the past, the ultra-ambitious student overcomes his superstition and throws his political hat in the ring of competition for Campus honors. Elections play an important part in Campus life, being enlivened by a ten-day campaign by the candidates.

FINALS—Those who have stood the four-year test gather on Tuesday morning during Final Week for their last act on the Undergraduate stage. Above is the procession from Washington College to the Lee Chapel, for the awarding of Diplomas and the Commencement Address.
FINALS—Only when the sun raises its head in the East does the revelry end, sending the students and their guests to the four corners of the earth. Above—the midnight dinner served to the dancers. Below—the gymnasium the "morning after."

The debating season opened on December eighteenth when an open-forum debate was held with Duke University. B. J. Wagner and H. M. Barker represented the local team, debating the question of "Government Operation of the Coal Mines."

The annual Triangular debate was held on February twenty-sixth between the University of North Carolina, Washington and Lee, and Johns Hopkins. The question was on the recognition of Soviet Russia. Washington and Lee won both debates for the first time since 1923. The affirmative team, composed of W. A. Plummer and W. A. McDonough, won over North Carolina at Lexington, while the negative team, consisting of John S. Grasty and Charles W. Lowry, won over Johns Hopkins at Baltimore.

On March twentieth, Washington and Lee defeated the famous University of Arizona team, which was making a transcontinental tour. The visitors upheld the affirmative side of the question: "Resolved, that this House go on record as opposed to the Present Prohibition System." W. A. Plummer and C. W. Lowry represented Washington and Lee. Additional debates were scheduled with Gettysburg College at Lexington and with Duke University, at Durham, North Carolina.

This season marks the close of Charles W. Lowry’s debating career at Washington and Lee. Dr. S. B. Neff, coaching his first year, has welded out of practically new material, one of the best debating aggregations at Washington and Lee in years. He deserves sincere commendation for his conscientious efforts and resulting success.

Mention of Washington and Lee's athletic system cannot be made without reference to Coach Forest Fletcher, or Professor Fletcher as you will. He is head of both the Physical Education department and head coach of track and cross-country.

Coach Fletcher was graduated from Notre Dame University in 1912, where he was a star on the cinder path. In addition to serving his school in athletics, he was on the United States Olympic team of that year.

His success in athletics has been transmitted to the teams he has coached here at Washington and Lee from 1914 on. In his first year here, Coach Fletcher had charge of basketball, track, and gymnastic work, but since then he has specialized on track alone. His charges have many broken records to their credit as well as many State Championships, and he has developed the Blue and White track team to a point where it is always one of the best in the entire South.

In the fall, Coach Fletcher spends his time with the cross-country team, and for the past several years, it has had an outstanding record. He has been consistently fortunate in turning out winning teams.

During the World War, he organized the Washington and Lee ambulance section, and was the main figure in it, something of which he has every reason to be proud.

No matter what he is doing—coaching track, cross-country, as head of the physical education system, or directing Blue and White athletics—Coach Fletcher is a man students are proud to point out as characteristic of Washington and Lee.
Were you to ask anyone on the Washington and Lee campus for R. A. Smith, you would probably be greeted with a blank stare. But should you ask for "Captain Dick" Smith, athletic director, even the newest Freshman could give you all the information desired.

That gives some idea of the regard in which "Captain Dick" is held. It is "Captain Dick" who is the main power behind all Blue and White athletics; who supervises them, coaches some of them, and sees that all runs smoothly. Most of the Student Body do not understand just how it is all done, but they give credit where it is due, and they have an implicit faith in all that "Captain Dick" does.

As Graduate Manager of Athletics he arranges the schedules of teams, takes an active interest in the coaching of all sports, sees that equipment is kept up, and maintains the athletic system on a high standard.

This year he coached the basketball team for the first time and turned out a creditable aggregation. Just how creditable may be known from the fact that wins were scored over both V. P. I. and Virginia, the Old Dominion being turned back by an almost doubled score. "Captain Dick" also coaches baseball, and for the last three years has been behind a winning team. State Championships in baseball have become quite ordinary, and almost to be expected now.

"Captain Dick" is a product of Washington and Lee, captain of the Generals' baseball team in 1911, and one of the most finished players ever turned out here. His value to the institution and his place in student affection cannot be overestimated.
J. P. Herron

J. P. ("Pat") Herron comes to Washington and Lee as the successor of "Jimmie" DeHart, head football coach of victorious Blue and White elevens for four years. As this is being written, spring football practice is under way, with the famous Warner system of play (as adhered to by DeHart) being used. The unanimous opinion of the Student Body is that the Athletic Council was wise in selecting "Pat" Herron as football mentor in order that the method used successfully in the past might be extended in the future.

No better qualified man than "Pat" could be found for such an extension. As a player, as a coach, and as a man, he exemplifies the best that football has to offer.

For four years he was a star end on Panther elevens of the University of Pittsburgh, and was second All-American choice in both 1915 and 1916 when he played on the same team with DeHart.

"Pat" was studying law when America entered the war, but left his books and was among the first to enlist. He served fourteen months as an aviation ace in France, and returned in 1919 to finish his law course at Pittsburgh. That fall he played professional football with the team representing Massillon, Ohio.

He afterwards became assistant coach to "Pop" Warner at Pittsburgh in 1920, 1921, and 1923; head coach at Indiana University in 1922, and head coach at Duke University in 1925.

Blue and White followers have faith in "Pat," and believe that he is well qualified to turn out a winning combination for the Generals—a fighting Big Blue team.

South Atlantic Champions! Virginia Champions! That is the record of the Fighting Generals of 1925, upholding the lofty standard they had set the two previous years. Undertaking the hardest schedule ever attempted by a Washington and Lee football team, the gridmen came through the season with an even break in the number of games won and lost.

In addition to being the hardest schedule ever played by a Big Blue team, the 1925 program called for seven of the ten games to be played on foreign fields. In all, a distance of over thirty-four hundred miles was covered, the team playing from New Jersey to Florida. Followers of the Generals were especially pleased with the Kays, playing his last year in a Blue and White uniform, flashed exceptional form that won the added praise of even the most ardent of his admirers. Playing throughout the season at his position on the flank, he was the Nemesis of every run attempted around his end; his never-lagging spirit and consistent tackling were the dread of many an ambitious back of the opposition. His speed and accuracy in mauling his opponents as they received Rafter’s punt constituted one of his outstanding accomplishments, and the signal for a fair catch was given when he was seen bearing down on the safety man. His rating as one of the South’s best ends is barely suggestive of his true worth.

Tilson is another mainstay of the Generals who has worn a Blue and White uniform for the last time, and no other man’s loss will be felt more keenly. One hundred and seventy-six pounds of fighting fury, he is exemplary of the battling spirit which has always characterized Washington and Lee eleven men. A smashing tackler, a sure diverter of enemy plays, and a charging bulwark that is hard to stop, “Tex” has borne the brunt of innumerable plays during his three-year period on the Varsity. His record includes a year with the Fresh and the captaining of the 1924 squad, during which season he was mentioned by the late Walter Camp in his All-American selections.

showing of the team under these conditions when some of the strongest outfits in the country were met. Added to this was the fact that two of the best grid outfits in the East were encountered in the earliest games of the season.

The opening game was with the strong Panthers of the University of Pittsburgh in the new Pitt stadium. It marked the first encounter of Washington and Lee with the Northern institution, with the added attraction of it being the Alma Mater of Coach DeHart. Entering the game with two of the regulars—ex-Captain Tilson and Captain Thomas on the sidelines—the Fighting Generals were forced to take the short end of a 28-0 score. Pitt clearly outplayed the Generals, but the Northerners found the men from Dixie fighting all the way. "Ty" Rauber gave promise of a brilliant season in his line-plunging, gaining consistently against the Panthers.

Long punts for telling distances and gaining badly needed yardage with smashing line backs. "Ty" was one of the steadiest and most consistent members of the 1925 squad. The added punch required to get Coach DeHart's machine going at top speed often came from a decisive thrust by this back, and his willingness and dependability contributed largely to the Generals' gridiron victories. His selection as captain of the 1925 eleven is a fitting tribute to his sterling qualities, and came after he had proved his worth by two years' Varsity play in addition to his term as captain of the 1923 Yearlings.

R. I. DAVES

Prep School: Morgan (Tenn.) School. Weight, 170; Height, 6 ft.; Age, 14.

Another regular who will be sorely missed from the Varsity line-up next fall is Daves. Active on both offense and defense in every game, his dependable play made him a fitting end to act with Captain Thomas in guarding against flank attacks. Accuracy in picking out a runner from his interference, and a deadly tackle, he could always be counted upon to deliver the best that was in him. He was a hard man to get off his feet, and many times the interference would pass him up as out of the play, only to find him smearing the runner for a loss.
In the first home game of the season (thought by many to be a set-up), the Purple Hurricane from Furman pulled a surprise in annexing a 20-15 victory. Although Furman played a consistent game, and showed unexpected strength, they were undoubtedly aided greatly by the breaks of the game.

Washington and Lee journeyed to Princeton for the next encounter, meeting the Tigers on October 10th. The White and Blue played football of the first order all the way, but had to content themselves with a 15-6 score. The Big Blue team showed its power when it went over the goal early in the game for six points, a showing later added to when the Tiger machine defeated both Harvard and Yale. Washington and Lee made a better showing against the Princeton team than either Old Eli or the Crimson. In holding the winners of the Big Three championship to a 15-6 score, the

H. M. WILSON
Halfback
Prep School: Owensboro (Ky.) High School
Weight: 155; Height: 5 ft. 8 1/2 in.; Age: 21

Although playing in the halfback position most of this year, Henry's valuable headwork at quarterback last year compelled Coach DeHart to have him call signals throughout the season. In this he proved the wisdom of the selection, and his uncanny judgment often accounted for tactics that resulted in victory for his team. An accurate passer, a good man around the ends and, above all, a cool-headed guide of the Generals, describes him to perfection. His daring broken field running endeared him to the lovers of the spectacular as well as gaining much ground that could not have been won otherwise. With Wilson and McVay both leaving this year, it remains for Coach Herron to develop another quarter to fill their shoes.

W. W. PALMER
Halfback
Prep School: San Antonio (Texas) Academy
Weight: 155; Height: 5 ft. 8 in.; Age: 21.

The sidestepping, rushing, broken field runner who was often seen flashing through a field of opposing tacklers was the redoubtable "Mike." A terror in an open field, opposing players made frantic efforts to tackle him before he rounded the end, because once started, he was a phantom to stop. His speed and dodging ability were features of many long passes. Wilson and McVay always finding him well behind the opposing line when they threw. His spectacular exhibition in the Virginia game, where he tore through space regardless of mud and rain, proved his ability to stand on his feet under any circumstance. His return next fall will genuinely gratify every follower of the Generals.

Eighty
White and Blue team more than fulfilled the expectations of its followers. Northern sport writers commended the showing of the team from the South, saying that it was only through unleashing a particularly strong attack that Princeton conquered.

In the next game—the first conference tilt of the year—Washington and Lee demonstrated that the promise of power shown in the previous games was not belied, and scored a 25-0 victory over the strong University of Kentucky team at Lexington, Kentucky. The Wildcats the week before had held Chicago to a 9-0 score, and White and Blue followers had anticipated a bitter battle. Sport writers in the Blue Grass State said that the Virginia outfit was the best team that had ever played in that section, with every man performing his part brilliantly, yet with machine-like efficiency. It was Henry Wilson’s last appearance as a member of the Washington and Lee eleven in his home State, and he sang his swan song in a blaze of gridiron glory.

R. M. Holt
Tackle
Prep School: Culver Military Academy.
Weight, 185; Height, 5 ft. 11 in.; Age, 20.

Early in the training grid, Holt shifting from his former position at guard to tackle, exchanged places with Stemmons. His persistent fighting qualities and aggressiveness proved the wisdom of the change; for time and again he broke up the opponents’ play. His size and power made him the terror of opposing linemen, and his mention in practically every Southern all-star list attests to his outstanding ability and performance. His return next season will add greatly to the strength of the Generals line, and will aid in the construction of what will be almost a new forward wall.

A. R. Hawkins
Center
Prep School: Petersburg (Va.) High School.
Weight, 165; Height, 6 ft.; Age, 21.

Fighting to the last ditch against whatever odds were presented, dependability on the defense, accuracy in starting a play on the offense, "Red" proved a bulwark of strength to the center of the Generals line, despite the fact that he usually faced a heavier opponent. His last year as a member of the Blue and White saw him rise to new heights, and his play will long be remembered as outstanding in practically every game. His willingness to return to his Alma Mater for the football season proved his love and loyalty for the school, and the energy and determination which he displayed on every occasion won for him a place of esteem in the heart of every Washington and Lee sports lover.

Eighty-one
Washington and Lee opened a three weeks' series of games in the mud the next week with the annual V. P. I. tilt in Lynchburg, and the Gobblers went down before a superior team—20-0. Mike Palmer, in spite of the uncertain footing, gave a fine exhibition of broken field running and was the outstanding star of the day. The Maroon team was outclassed in every department, but the game, always colorful, was a battle from start to finish. It marked the second conference win for the Blue and White.

On October 31st, the Fighting Generals met the Mountaineers of West Virginia University on the neutral field at Charleston in a sea of mud. The West Virginians presented a powerful line and smooth backfield, functioning better in the mud than the White and Blue—and Washington and Lee did not score. The Mountaineers

B. B. TIPS
Quarterback
Prep School: San Antonio (Texas) Academy.
Weight, 190; Height, 5 ft. 11 in.; Age, 19.

Coming up from the 1924 Fresh ranks with the well-earned name of "Horse," Tips was a great factor in the Generals' play throughout the season. His ability as an interference runner was easily seen, and this capability was nurtured by Coach De Hart until he had developed a smashing runner of the first class. Fast on his feet when hitting the line, fearless and seemingly impervious to injury, Tips time and again opened up gaps in the opposition which made big gains possible. His experience against some of the best teams in the country this year should have prepared for him a record season in 1926, and his showing will bear watching.

J. T. McVAY
Quarterback
Prep School: Huntington (W. Va.) High School.
Weight, 152; Height, 5 ft. 8 in.; Age, 23.

In his last year as a Washington and Lee gridder, Johnny alternated with Wilson as quarter. Although he seldom started a game, his insertion into the battle after having witnessed his opponents' play and having seen their vulnerable spots from the bench, was often the turning point of the game. His true general-like ability in choosing plays, his speed in running, and accuracy in passing, were responsible for many long gains. His spirit under fire and his confidence in the team served to inspire the Fighting Generals at times when hope ran low. His loss will be keenly felt in the coming campaign.
annexed 21 points. One of the features of an otherwise tame game was the fine showing of the Blue reserves in the closing minutes of play. The scrubs marched more than half the length of the field in an effort to score, only to be held off. Tommy Stearns bucked the line savagely, accounting for most of the gains.

The Virginia Cavaliers went down to defeat—12-0—in the Homecoming Day game on Wilson Field on November 7th. In downing their ancient foes for the third conference victory, the Generals gave an exhibition of a superior brand of football. Once more the diminutive Mike Palmer rose to the heights in the finest bit of broken field running ever seen in Lexington when he received a punt and dashed half the length of the field through the entire Virginia team for a touchdown. It was an added spectacular touch to a game, which, in spite of the mud, was already replete with thrills.

L. S. STEMMONS
Guard
Prep School: Dallas (Texas) High School
Weight, 190; Height, 6 ft.; Age, 21
Stemmons, presenting a bulk of fighting manhood that was hard to move, played a consistent game at guard throughout the 1925 season. Shifted from tackle this year he seems to have been placed in the position best suited to him, for his performance in game after game bore witness of his ability as an offensive and defensive player. His stubborn resistance on the defense, and his driving attack on the offense, served to carry the brunt of many a play. With his experience as tackle in 1924, his performance this year was always of a high order, and he will be hard to replace.

M. I. BUDNICK
Guard
Prep School: Fishburne Military School
Weight, 190; Height, 5 ft. 9 in.; Age, 21
Especially adept at disarming the object of his opponents' thrusts, and equally adept at breaking them up, Budnick was a tower of strength in the Generals' defensive and offensive machinery. In his last season as a Washington and Lee guard he continued to show the marked improvement that characterized his play in the 1924 campaign. The loss of his ability and weight will leave a big hole in the forward wall, and an unusually good man will be needed to adequately replace him.

Eighty-three
The victory over Virginia put the Cavaliers out of the conference running, as they had previously been undefeated. It also assured the Big Blue team of a successful season with both the Old Dominion and Gobblers disposed of.

The Old Liners from the University of Maryland surprised the sports world in holding the Big Blue team to a 7-3 score in the next game, played at College Park stadium, Washington, with the Generals extended to the utmost for victory. In the last quarter, with the count 3-0 against them, the Virginians marched down the field for the winning touchdown.

In the last home game of the season, against the North Carolina State Tarheels, the Generals added another conference win by a 12-0 score. It marked the last appearance on Wilson Field of eight of the Washington and Lee eleven. Henry Wilson played one of the best games of his career.

C. E. VAN HORN
Guard and Center

Weight, 175; Height, 6 ft. 2 in.; Age, 21.

Although not playing regularly for the Blue and White, Van was an ever-willing worker whose spirit and ability were often called upon by Coach Del Hart when a strong defensive combination was needed. In addition to his ability as a center and guard, his speed and uncanny accuracy in getting down the field under punts made him a valuable man when the opponents threatened. His diversity of accomplishments made him the most valuable substitute on the team, and scarcely a game passed without his name appearing in the line-up. Van has one more year of football at Washington and Lee, and his return will solve one of the numerous problems that confront the Generals in 1928.

H. S. SPOTTS
End

Weight, 180; Height, 6 ft. 2 in.; Age, 21.

"Babe," a member of the 1924 Yearlings, played his first year of Varsity ball this season. An end of the first water, as proved by his work both before coming to Washington and Lee and in his Freshman year here, Spotts was picked out as a contender for a regular berth early in the training grid. He had against him Captain Thomas and Davis, both playing their last year on the squad, but this did not prevent him from exhibiting such form as to enable him to break into the line-up with regularity. Starting some games and being substituted in others he was always to be relied upon to give a good account of himself, and his return next fall will greatly strengthen the 1928 team.
Traveling to Jacksonville, Florida, for the Thanksgiving Day game, the Generals were blocked in their conference race by a defeat at the hands of the Florida 'Gators—17-14. The White and Blue team led throughout most of the game, and entered the last quarter with a 10-14 margin, but were defeated through the individual brilliance of Captain Jones of Florida.

Prospects for next year are for another strong team, although many veterans were lost. Jimmy DeHart’s absence will be felt, but all confidence is placed in his successor, Pat Herron, who is an exponent of the same style of play. To take the place of the departing men there are a number of capable players from the reserves, while the undefeated Freshman team will undoubtedly prove a strong factor in moulding another winning machine. Washington and Lee followers are confident in their expectations of another successful season.

J. H. DAWSON
Guard
Prep School: Western (Washington) High School
Weight, 160; Height, 5 ft. 9 in.; Age, 20.
Dawson, playing his first year as a member of the Varsity eleven, displayed the same fighting characteristics that had previously marked his play during his Fresh year and his 1924 season on the squad. He was often injected to take the place of the veterans Stearns and Budnick, and, although light of build for service in the line, more than held his own by dint of his indomitable fighting spirit. He proved a dependable player on both offense and defense and was quick to detect his opponents’ objectives.

Washington and Lee won the Championship of the State in a second major sport. Although the beginning of the season was far from an impressive one, the team steadily improved, and at the close were playing evenly and winningly. All games but one played with State teams were won, thereby giving a clear title to the State Championship.

One of the features of the season was the defeat of Virginia in the last home game in Doremus gymnasium by an almost doubled score. The Cavaliers entered the game heavy favorites, the State title being in balance. Every man on the Blue and White team played his best game of the season, and led by Captain Wilson they showered the Cavaliers with field goals. The final score was 46-27. The game marked the last appearance of Lane and Wilson, both court stars for the past three years.

Basketball this year was under the tutelage of Coach R. A. Smith for the first time. "Captain Dick" showed his ability by taking only two veterans and moulding a winning combination. Three of the team will be eligible for next year, and with the capable reserves and good men from the Freshman team there should be a more powerful aggregation to represent the Blue and White.

Spotts, playing his first year as the Varsity center, won individual honors by being high-point man in the State, with a total of 100 points to his credit. Another feature was the election of F. W. Urmey to the captaincy after only one year of Varsity playing. He had been on the squad previous years, but this year his fighting spirit won him a place at guard and his election as captain.

The Generals met defeat in their first two starts of the season during the week-end before the Christmas holidays, when Maryland defeated them—40-27—at College Park, and Catholic University followed with a defeat in Washington. Bridgewater College was the first victim of the season on January 8th when the Generals won—50-24.

Roanoke College was swamped in the next game—46-14—with Spotts and Lane leading the attack. Maryland was again played on January 11th, and although the game was close throughout, the Old Liners again were victors; this time by a 33-20 score. Maryland presented one of the smoothest floor machines seen on the local court during the year. Wilson and Lane showed up well for the Blue and White. The next night the Generals lost to the strong University of Georgia outfit—47-24.

The losing streak was broken with a win over Lynchburg College—36-22— and following this game there was a shift in the line-up, Wilson being changed from guard to forward, and Urmey going to guard.

The rejuvenated machine outplayed the fast V. P. I. team—47-30—in a game featured by the playing of Spotts and Lane. The University of Richmond was easily beaten on January 30th by a score of 35-20.

The Generals met defeat in their first two starts of the season during the week-end before the Christmas holidays, when Maryland defeated them—40-27—at College Park, and Catholic University followed with a defeat in Washington. Bridgewater College was the first victim of the season on January 8th when the Generals won—50-24.

Roanoke College was swamped in the next game—46-14—with Spotts and Lane leading the attack. Maryland was again played on January 11th, and although the game was close throughout, the Old Liners again were victors; this time by a 33-20 score. Maryland presented one of the smoothest floor machines seen on the local court during the year. Wilson and Lane showed up well for the Blue and White. The next night the Generals lost to the strong University of Georgia outfit—47-24.

The losing streak was broken with a win over Lynchburg College—36-22— and following this game there was a shift in the line-up, Wilson being changed from guard to forward, and Urmey going to guard.

The rejuvenated machine outplayed the fast V. P. I. team—47-30—in a game featured by the playing of Spotts and Lane. The University of Richmond was easily beaten on January 30th by a score of 35-20.
The Generals lost two of three battles in the second trip of the season. Kentucky won—44-3— and West Virginia won—40-34—at Charleston. Marshall College at Huntington, West Virginia, was defeated—33-11. Urmey showed up well, along with Captain Wilson. Spott's playing featured the trip, scoring 62 points in the three contests.

The University of North Carolina, Southern Conference Champions for three years, proved too clever for the Generals on February 11th, and took the long end of a 43-26 score. Two days later the Techmen of V. P. I. won their first court victory from the Generals in four years when they administered a 41-26 defeat.

Carson-Newman furnished one of the most thrilling games of the year, with the Generals nosing out at the last minute. Shoun, giant forward for the visitors, was outstanding in the game.

The Cavaliers of Virginia were defeated—46-27, marking the close of the season on February 20th.

Third Annual Prep and High Basketball Tournament

Begun in the nature of an experiment, continued as a State tournament, and finally expanded to take in the South Atlantic States, tells the story of the annual Washington and Lee Prep and High School Basketball Tournament.

Each year, since its inception three years ago, the tournament has become more of a fixture, more permanent, and this year was no exception. For three days twenty-two teams from the South-Atlantic states were the guests of Washington and Lee in Lexington, displaying, both in winning and losing, a fine brand of secondary-school basketball.

R.A. Smith, director of the tournament, and his staff of assistants headed by Richard Barnett, 1926 football manager, handled everything in a most businesslike manner, and to them must go the greatest credit. To the fraternities, also, is due a large share for their unselfish co-operation in the lodging of the teams. Lastly, to the numerous business houses that contributed the prizes of the tournament must go a share of credit for its success.

While there are State tournaments held in Virginia, the idea of South Atlantic honors is a new one, and one that will bear fruit. The success of the innovation has been proven, and with time it will score even more of a success. After one has seen a South Atlantic tournament, it does not seem an experiment, but rather in the nature of a necessity.

This year the usual awards were made, with Oak Ridge Institute of North Carolina, winner of the tournament, receiving the lion's share. President Henry Louis Smith made each award at the basketball informal dance which had been arranged to come at the end of the tournament.

Oak Ridge was awarded a full-size silver regulation basketball, emblematic of the championship.

Newport News High won the runner-up trophy—a half-size silver basketball.

Individual members of the championship quintet were given miniature gold basketballs, while the Newport News players received miniature silver basketballs.

The All-Tournament team was given gold charms, emblematic of their brilliant playing.

Captain Miller of Oak Ridge easily won the cup for the most valuable and best all-round player. His shooting throughout the tournament was little short of phenomenal; time, guards, or distance apparently having little effect on his performance. He also made eleven of the sixteen fouls attempted, thereby winning the cup for the best foul shooter. To make it complete he scored 89 points in the games played to win the cup for high-point man.

Resume of the 1925 Season

Two victories over the University of Virginia and one over Virginia Tech, achievements which clinched the State Championship title for the Generals, are the reasons that the 1925 baseball season goes down in the annals of history as being successful. Among other victories not to be slighted are those over Navy and Cornell. Coach Dick Smith’s machine won thirteen and lost six games during the season, for a percentage of .684. Res ipsa loquitur! Only one Southern team, North Carolina, defeated the Blue and White, as most of the reverses came on the long Northern trip. Washington and Lee scored a total of 105 runs against 54 by opponents.

The team was composed of veterans, with only two newcomers—Palmer at short, and Stearns in the outfield—in the line-up. “Gus” Lindberg, playing his last year for the Blue and White, was one of the bright lights of the season, both on the mound and at the bat. When not pitching, the Generals’ ace was usually playing in the outfield, placed there because of his heavy and consistent hitting. He finished the season with eight victories to his credit and only one defeat against him. Due to his excellent showing, he was given a trial with John McGraw’s New York Giants, and was with that club for some time, later being fanned out. Another to attract attention was “Duke” Perry, who was signed a short time afterwards for a trial with the Philadelphia Athletics this spring. “Tommy” Seehorn, at third, was in the limelight with his batting, and was rewarded with the captaincy at the close of the season.

Lynchburg College opened the season on Wilson Field on April 3rd. The Generals found their opener an easy one and annexed a 16-0 victory. Featuring the game was the heavy hitting of the Generals, who collected sixteen safe blows for a total of twenty-six bases. Tommy Stearns led in the attack with three hits out of four tries; one a home run with the bases full.

Roanoke College offered the opposition for the next tilt on April 6th, the final score being 7-3, with the Generals on the long end. The game was much in the nature of a pitchers’ duel, the honors going to Lindberg, who was making his initial appearance of the year. Among the twelve hits gathered by the Generals was a homer by McMillan.

The Generals split the next two series with Cornell, Old Nassau winning the first—8-5—and losing the second—4-0. Faulty and slow fielding was the chief cause of the first defeat. In the second game, with Captain Lindberg in the box, the Generals were at no time in danger, and Cornell was literally swamped by the southpaw. The feature of the victory was Tommy Seehorn’s perfect day at bat. One of his four times at the bat resulted in a three-bagger.

On April 11th, the University of Pennsylvania won a heartbreaking game on Wilson Field, the final score being 8-5. Until the ninth inning, the Generals were leading by a 5-3 score, and it looked like the Blue and White had the bacon. In the ninth, both coaches used substitutions in an attempt to get the combination of left-handed pitchers facing left-handed batters, or seeking to prevent it, and when the melee was over, Penn had accounted for five runs. Perry, who pitched eight innings for the home club, twirled a masterful game and deserved the victory. The Generals outhit their Northern opponents by a ratio of 9-8.

Bucknell was an easy foe, and the Generals, in a rare hitting mood, collected seventeen safeties for a 10-3 win. Gus Lindberg cut another nick in his victory stick. Buddy Aylmer, in addition to his usual Altrock activities, was one of the stars of the game, contributing several spectacular catches around first.

North Carolina emerged victors in the next encounter—winning, 5-2. The Generals were unable to hit in the pinches, and men were stranded on the bases in every inning. The Tarheels outhit the Blue and White, and played a fast, clean game.

Lindberg won his fourth straight of the season when Washington and Lee defeated V. P. I. on Wilson Field in a colorless game—7-1. Defective fielding cost the visitors their chance for victory.

In the next game, against the time-honored rivals, Virginia, the old order was reversed, and the contest was replete with thrills. The final count was 5-4 in favor of the Blue and White. There were three features: first, Lindberg scored his fifth victory; second, Tommy Seehorn hit a well-earned homer; and third, a running catch by Tommy Stearns in right field that saved the day when the runs to win were on the bases. Neale fought hard for victory, sending in pinch-hitters one of whom hit for the circuit, but the rally was nipped in the bud. This victory over the Old Dominion put Washington and Lee in the lead for State honors.

The Generals again beat V. P. I. in the next encounter, and the winning streak continued by a win over University of Virginia, both nines being played on their own fields. Tommy Seehorn, according to press stories, hit the longest homer ever witnessed on the V. P. I. field. V. P. I. was downed—6-4—and Virginia—3-0. The two wins clinched the State title for the Generals.

Davidson was defeated—10-3—and with Maben and Hickam on the mound, the home team was never in danger. Emory and Henry proved a surprise, and it was only after a difficult fight that the Wasps were downed—4-3. Weaver, pitching for the visitors, fanned eight out of the first nine Generals to face him.

The Generals had to resort to a squeeze play in the ninth to win from the Panthers of Birmingham Southern in the last home game of the year on May 8th. The Blue and White emerged on the long end of a 2-1 count, when Aylmer laid down a neat bunt with Palmer on third in the ninth for the winning counter.

On the Northern trip, the Generals found the first real opposition of the year, winning only two of the five games. Seton Hall was defeated in the first game—3-2—with Perry pitching, while Captain Lindberg met his first defeat in the Fordham game—3-2. Georgetown won a slugging contest—12-9—featured by two homers by Lindberg, one with the bases full. The University of Maryland defeated the Generals—3-1—but the Blue and White came back in the next game to defeat the Navy at Annapolis—4-3. It was Captain Lindberg's last appearance for Washington and Lee and he twirled a masterful game. Stearns tied the score in the eighth inning with a home run.

Resume, 1925

The cinder path accounted for the third State Championship of the 1925 Generals. North Carolina University succeeded in taking the measure of the Blue and White, but victories were scored over Virginia, North Carolina State, and V. P. I. In addition to this, the indoor track team won two meets, placing first at Charlottesville, and at Richmond nearly trebling the score of their nearest opponents.

No small amount of credit should go to Coach Forest Fletcher. While he had good material, it was his seasoned coaching alone that developed it. He has had unusual success at Washington and Lee, and the 1925 team proved up to his former standards.

One of the highlights throughout the season was the consistent work of Captain Norman. In every meet of the year he won at least one first. Lewis, Howard, and Davis were also consistent winners.

The largest crowd ever assembled to witness a dual meet on Wilson Field was on hand for the first meet of the season on April 4th, when the Generals hooked up with North Carolina University. Probably the impressive advance reports of the visitors accounted for the huge attendance, but they more than lived up to all that had been said of them. During the afternoon, two Southern and two State records were broken. Although Carolina won easily, the events were of such high order that interest never lagged.

Lane Howard broke the Southern record for the two-mile run. Bell, of Carolina, broke the State record for the mile, and his teammate, Jones, shattered the half-mile. Milbank, of Washington and Lee, was the high scorer with ten points.

On April 18th the Generals won over North Carolina
State on Wilson Field, the final score being 72-54. Two local records were shattered, Norman vaulting 11 feet 10 inches, and Lewis throwing the javelin 171 feet 9 inches. Washington and Lee men winning first places were Rushton Gordon, Wigglesworth, Howard, Norman, Davis, Biddle, and Lewis.

A week later, the Blue and White cinder men repeated with a victory over V. P. I. Coach Fletcher’s charges won eight firsts, the score being 76-50. Lewis was high-point man for the day. Firsts were made by Davis, Lewis, Biddle, Rushton, Simmons, Howard, and Norman.

The final meet of the season found the Generals at Charlottesville, where their ancient rival, Virginia, took the small end of a 65-61 score. Norman was one of the stars of the day, accounting for two firsts, pressed closely by Davis who also got two firsts. Others placing first in the various events were Howard and Lewis.

Varsity Cross-Country Resume, 1925

While the record of the harriers for their 1925 season does not appear imposing at first glance, nevertheless the caliber of their opponents and the close margins of victory upon a number of occasions speaks well for the thorough training and stamina of Coach Fletcher’s runners. Not one of the dual meets was won by the Blue and White distance men, and they were forced to take fourth place at the Southern Intercollegiate Conference meet held at Blacksburg.

In the opening meet, that against the V. P. I. harriers, the 23-32 win of the Gobblers shows the degree to which they were forced to extend themselves in order to come out victorious. The course was five and one-tenth miles, and was covered by Captain Dance of the winners in 29 minutes and 49 seconds. Gordon, of W. and L., came in second.

The meet with the Cavaliers was run as an added attraction on the day of the gridiron struggle between the two schools. Poor time was registered over the five and a half miles of the Brushy Hill course in this race, due to the mud and constantly falling rain.

The following Friday, the Duke University harriers were met on their own field, the four-mile course being covered by the Durham first-place runner in 23 minutes and 50 seconds.

The next day, the closest meet of the season was run against the North Carolina State team, the State men being forced to content themselves with a bare margin of one point. The three-mile course over which the race was run was a decided disadvantage to the Generals who had been trained for a longer run and were unable to gauge their speed for the shorter distance. The winner’s time was 15 minutes and 15.9 seconds.

In the Conference run at Blacksburg, November 21st, the best place secured by the Blue and White harriers was ninth position. Gordon finished ahead of his mates in this race, and the Generals were able to finish only fourth in the field of five.

RESUME OF 1926 SEASON

Washington and Lee closed the wrestling season undefeated. Under the tutelage of Coach Mathis, the Generals' matmen amassed a total of four victories and no defeats. The team was seriously handicapped throughout the season by sickness, and several times new men were substituted for veterans.

Captain Tilson, 175-pounder, wrestling his last season, was outstanding throughout all meets. One of the best matmen ever developed here, Tilson finished the season undefeated and also with a record of two falls in one meet—one in his weight and another in the unlimited class—to his credit.

On January 16th, the Blue and White grapplers defeated the team from Duke University—19-8. Summerson, Burton, and Woolwine got decisions, while Captain Tilson got two falls.

V. P. I. met defeat—12-11—in the next meet, with Tilson, Rule, Woolwine, and Holt winning decisions.

North Carolina was the next victim, going down—17-6—on February 12th in Doremus gymnasium. Driver, Rule, Burton, and Seligman won decisions, and Captain Tilson added the remaining points with a fall over his opponent.
In the final match of the season, the Blue and White wrestlers defeated the University of Virginia team at Charlottesville—16-0. The victory was the more outstanding because of the fact that three of the Generals' veterans were replaced by new men in this meet. Driver and Burton won decisions, while Rule and Seligman won falls over their opponents.

Although two of this year’s team will be lost by graduation, the wrestling team next year should be stronger than ever before, from present indications. There are several capable men on the list of reserves, and these, with the Freshman outfit and men developed in the Intramural contests, should enable Coach Mathis to put another winning aggregation on the mat.

RESUME OF 1926 SEASON

The Blue and White ring artists met six of the best teams in the South and East during the 1926 season and were returned victors in three encounters. This was in face of the problem that Coach Mathis faced several times, just as in wrestling, that of finding suitable men for the team.

One of the bright lights of the season was the work of Eddie Felsenthal, featherweight, and captain of the team for three years. He won five out of his six starts, losing the last bout of the season to Layden, Colgate’s ex-captain and 1924 Intercollegiate Champion. Felsenthal had defeated Layden a year previous, but this time, in spite of four furious rounds with honors apparently about even, Layden won out.

The first meet of the year was on January 16th, against V. P. I. It was the first time V. P. I. had entered a team in the ring sport, and Washington and Lee had little trouble in annexing a 4-2 win in Doremus gymnasium.

The Cavaliers from the University of Virginia were too much for the Generals in the next meet, winning by 5-1. Felsenthal, fighting offensively throughout, was the only Blue and White boxer to win. Although beaten, the Washington and Lee mittmen were not outgamed, and the bouts were hard and cleanly fought from start to finish.
Catholic University was defeated in Washington by a 4-2 score. Lancaster, Hearon, Price, and Felsenthal won for the Generals; the latter two by technical knockouts.

On the Northern trip, Washington and Lee was defeated by Yale and the Army by scores of 4-2 in each instance. Felsenthal and Osterman won their bouts in each meet.

In the final encounter of the season, Colgate was defeated in Doremus gymnasium—4-2—with Osterman, Spotts, Hearon, and Durham winning their bouts.

One Hundred Twenty-five
The Little Generals of 1925, under the able tutelage of Coach E. P. Davis, hung up an enviable record that surpasses any made by a local Freshman team in recent years. Going undefeated through a season composed of five games, the maximum number allowed under the Southern Conference rules, and amassing seventy-six points while they succeeded in preventing their opponents from scoring a single time, constitutes a record that any Yearling eleven in the South could well be proud of.

The fact that nineteen men won their numerals during the course of the season bespeaks the type and bountifulness of the material of which the squad was made up. There was no dearth of applicants for any position, and Coach Davis was kept busy during the first weeks of practice getting his men placed where they could be used to the greatest advantage. Even with this accomplished, he still had an abundance of first class material on hand, and could call on able substitutes at any time in a game when his regulars were injured.

The opening game proved a test of the team’s mettle, for they found themselves up against the strong Greenbrier Military Academy eleven at Lewisburg, coached by the Blue and White veteran, “Eddie” Cameron. That the Yearlings had a resistless attack, even with only two weeks’ training was proven by their 10-0 victory in this battle, and by the fight which they exhibited throughout the game. Smith and Whitlock each intercepted a cadet pass and raced for touchdowns in this game, and Lott kicked a beautiful field goal for three markers. The other scores came as the result of a safety and the points after touchdown.

Continuing their onslaught in the battle with the University of Virginia Fresh, the team that was to become Champion of the State defeated the Cavalier eleven, 21-0. In this game, which was played in Charlottesville, Lott brought his kicking ability before the crowd by successfully booting three field goals over the bar. The other points came as a result of touchdowns by Whitlock and White, the latter scoring after intercepting a pass and racing thirty yards. The defensive strength of the IC gridder showed to good advantage at times when the Cavaliers tried to launch an offensive against their goal line.

The highest score run up by the Yearlings was in the game against the Jefferson High School team, of Roanoke. A total of thirty-three points was scored during this battle, and every man who made the trip was injected into the game at one time or another. The High lads appeared unusually weak against the offensive of the Freshmen, and time and time again did the Blue and White backs get through the line for long gains. Whitlock scored two touchdowns on sixty and seventy yard runs, respectively, while Smith caught a pass and scored after a twenty-yard run.

The game against the strong V. P. I. Freshmen on Wilson Field proved a test of the Yearlings' ability on the defense. The Blacksburg team came here boasting of a clean record, and were acclaimed as potential State champions. On a field covered with snow, the Little Generals fought them to a standstill, neither side being able to score during the four quarters. The ability of Lott in punting out of danger saved Coach Davis' charges on numerous occasions, as the backfield was usually unable to make progress because of the mud. Peake, V. P. I., exchanged numerous punts with Lott during the game, the kicking game being resorted to often, due to costly fumbles.

The Little Generals closed their careers as wearers of the '29 when they defeated the Bluefield, W. Va., College eleven—3—0 on the Mountaineers' field, Armistice Day. The collegians clearly had a superiority in weight, but the Freshmen more than offset this by their superior and speedy play. The line of scrimmage seldom got into Fresh territory, but the Yearling backs could not make much headway through the bulky college line. Again Lott's toe was the turning point of the battle, the diminutive quarterback booting the goal from the thirty-yard line. It was also his kicking that kept the ball within striking distance of the Bluefield goal most of the time.

FRESHMAN BASEBALL

The Yearlings of 1925 played through an eleven-game schedule and established one of the best records hung up in recent years by a Frosh nine. Coached by E. P. ('Cy') Twombly, the Freshmen presented an aggregation which lacked only dependable twirlers to make it a really formidable team. In winning five and losing five games, while tying the season's second game in an abbreviated contest, the team showed an attack that would have proven a consistent Nemesis for its opponents had there not been a lack of pitching material throughout the grind.

In the opening battle of the season, April 4th, the Lynchburg High nine put a crimp in the Yearlings' diamond ambition by administering an 11-6 defeat. The Hill City sluggers took advantage of every opportunity to tally, while their opponents' pitchers helped them to victory with twelve free tickets to first.

The next week, the tie game—that with Jefferson High School of Roanoke—was played until broken up by rain on Wilson Field. The teams had battled for six innings before the storm broke, and up to the sixth frame, the Yearlings had held a one-run lead. The invaders put across the tying run in their last time at bat, however.

April 17th, the Shenandoah Collegiate Institute players defeated the Frosh by staging a four-run rally in the ninth inning to take a one-run lead from their grasp. Costly errors spelled defeat in this frame.

The first victory of the year was registered when the Freshmen scored a 3-0 triumph over the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind on April 21st.

The V. P. I. Frosh were forced to yield to the onslaught of the local stick-wielders on April 23rd, when they were defeated—13-6—in a game characterized by free hitting. The winners garnered six extra base hits and slugged their way to eight markers in the first period.

Fishburne Military School came out with a one-run advantage in their game with the Yearlings, April 25th, emerging victorious—5-4. The Frosh had good pitching and consistent hitting in this alfray.

The Northern trip proved disastrous to the Frosh, as they were able to win only one of the three games played. In the first game of the trip, the Shenandoah Valley Academy won a closely-contested battle—4-3. Coach Twombly's charges came back strong against the Devitt Prep nine, however, and won by a 9-8 score after slugging their way to the front. The Navy Plebes batted three Freshmen pitchers for eleven runs, enough to win, over the Yearlings' total of six.
Playing against one of the strongest opponents of the year, the Freshmen defeated North Carolina University Freshmen by a 5-4 score on Wilson Field, May 8th. The Yearlings batted in five runs to clinch the battle in the fifth inning, and held their lead by nipping in the bud a Tar Heel rally in the ninth.

In the final game of the season, the Frosh avenged themselves for the defeat received earlier in the year by winning over the Shenandoah Collegiate Institute nine—6-0. Neither team was able to score until the eleventh inning, though the Yearlings made fourteen hits during the battle. The six markers made in the final frame could not be overcome by the Collegians when they came to bat, and the season ended with a victory for the representatives of '28.

Recumbent Statue of Robert Edward Lee

Recumbent now, as if asleep,
Lies the great Chieftain of the South;
And as before his shrine we weep,
Let his great life inspire our youth
To greater deeds, and greater yet,
Lest we his sacrifice forget.

Asleep is he, but not in death,
This Chief, this Idol of us all;
Nor draws a son of Dixie breath
Who does not hear his clarion call,
To build a Southland greater still.
Nor would one fail to do his will.

Lee is not dead, but only lies
Asleep, and in our memories
He lives, and dwells within our souls,
Still urging us unto the goal
He set, of greatness—not of gain—
Nor shall we let him urge in vain.

The Sermon From The Mount

Three Hundred Twenty-three
A Commerce Senior cut one class eight times last January, saying that "the classroom was too cold." It is understood that the prof made it hot for him.

The State of Virginia is said to have 867,005 swine. It is not clear whether or not this includes the two-legged ones in Lexington who lay down peanut burlages in the Lyric on Saturday nights.

The American Mercury would like to see a world series in poetry. We imagine that Prof. McPeek's idea of a "hurling staff" would be a pitchfork.

Members of the Lexington Police force held tests last winter to determine the efficiency of tear gas bombs. Pleasing results obtained were largely due to the fact that the tests were run immediately after the Gypsy Smith Revival, while folks still had on their party manners.

It is stated that there are several species of singing fish in the South Seas. All of them seem to be represented on the Glee Club, judging by the annual tryouts.

The English Department is planning a literary field day for next year. The fur-lined loving cup will probably go to the student who can throw the bull up on the bank in left field without batting an eye.

If it takes a thief to catch a thief, we can have the satisfaction of claiming an honest police force.

Scientists have revealed to us that Mars is coming toward us at the rate of almost a million miles a day. No, Mars is not one of the waiters in the Beanery.

The government has offered to give a buffalo to anyone who will be kind to it. They must have offered plain old bulls to the University about three or four generations ago, under entirely different agreements.

Edison maintains that six hours a day is enough sleep for anyone. Several of the Faculty members seem to consider this entirely too extravagant.

A Tasmanian kangaroo imported to this country is said to be able to broad-jump forty feet. There's a hint for Coach Fletcher, unless he is opposed to scouting.

An East Lexington restaurant man announced several months ago that the Charleston had killed all desire to eat in his high-class cabaret. Another thing that helped kill it, probably, was eating in his restaurant.

Say, did you ever have a date with a girl who had read all the swift literature of the day? Who told you that she believed in free love? That women had been held down by morals for ages, and that now was the time for them to revolt; that girls had just as much right to have a good time as boys?

You were tremendously impressed, and believed that at last you had found a girl who had some sense; as she sat close to you and looked into your eyes, you felt that she was sex in its most attractive form; yet when you tried to kiss her, she said coldly, "Can't we just be friends?"

Dun: Doesn't Mary look cute in that bathing suit?
Hill: As far as I can see.

"Oh, Horace, I cannot bear French."
"And why not, Gwendolyn?"
"Because the verbs are so radical."

"If his birthday were on January 1, what would his father be?"
"April fool."

"Are the Siamese twins Baptists?"
"Why, no. They're United Brethren."

Why do you think Pansy's so dumb? She thinks that a mortgage is a thing to tell how many are in the morgue.

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS
Crazy as hell—no plot. Dedicated to the editor-in-chief

TITLE: "WHAT PRICE COTTONY"

Scene of Act One: Laid undernath Journalism Building
Scene of Act Two: Laid in Willie Brown's bathroom
Scene of Act Three: Laid on soft ground and lime sprinkled on it

Characters: Venus at the Pump, Psyche at the Fountain, Ten Knights in a Bar Room, and the Chorus from Puck's Revue

ACT ONE
SEEN NUTHIN' YET

(Enter two suspicious characters who advance to the middle of the scene and start digging a hole. They have mystified expressions on their faces because they can't place each other. One of them can't place his feet because they are number twelve.)

First Misty Character—"Are you digging a hole?"
Second Misty Character—"No; I'm digging the dirt and leaving the hole.
First Misty Character—"You would pull that stale wheeze! Have at thee, varlet!
(He draws a blade of grass from his bosom and advances uncertainly, brandishing a page of cutting remarks.)

Second Misty Character—"Piggly-Wiggly, thyself!" (He produces a small pony from the lining of his silk hat; it devours the blade of grass, and all three exit dancing a clog-shuffle Charleston and singing 'There He Sits Without Any Paper—Pity the Cub Reporter.' (A man, who denies that he is either Chas. G. Dawes or Karl Zerloss, enters, cussing a blue streak. The streak is caught as it comes out by a stagehand who is politickin' for ODK, and is evenly spread over the blue background. Vera, Countess of Cathcart, enters from the left wing leading a donkey with a yellow ribbon around its neck.)

"Won't Tom be all unstrung when he hears you are to be married?"
"No. I wired him yesterday."

Profanity Plus—"Say, Sugar, you sure have a cute little assistant."
Vera—"One more crack like that, and you know where to head in!"
(She exits. One of the wind-jammers in the orchestra rises up in the pit and flourishes his blunderbus. He is not Steam Gage. He is a trumpet player.)

Music-Maiser—"Who was that lady I just seen you with?"

Profanity Plus—"That was no lady; that was a moral turpitude.
(Stage manager comes rushing in with an old-style open razor held aloft.)

Profanity Plus—"What in the * * * * * * are you doing with that * * * & razor?"

Operahouse Deck Hand—"I am either going to shave the whiskers off that ancient gog cut your esophagus out of your life Frer."

ACT TWO

(ENTER four heralds, a gazette, and a Rin-Tin-Fie. Heralds blow loud blasts on their culinary implements, and Willie Brown comes running in, dressed as King Cole.)

King Cole—"Pipe down, fools. When I play king, how dare you trumpet?"
As soon as Asst. Chief Swink's Riot Squad, has beaten the leaders of the mob into servility, and tear gas has been administered to the rest, Sheriff Morrison appears and asks that the play be stopped, as it contains a bathroom scene. Upon being assured that this is just to keep it clean, he retires through the drainpipe and the show goes on.)

Three Hundred Twenty-five
The curtain rises. Doc Glasgow tries the chair. The fumes do not agree with him.

Elise: Who was that shotgun shell I saw you with last night?

Archy: Why shotgun shell?

Elise: Half powder, half shot.

King Cole: "Why is a sack of burnt peanuts like a tube of Pecto toothpaste?" (Adv. — Check payable to CALYX Humor, Inc.)

Court Jester: (ably portrayed by Woodhead Dickson) — "Because neither one can play a flute."

King Cole: "Let joy be unwashed! Bring on the chorus!"

Court Jester: "What chorus?"

King Cole: "The course chorus from Puck’s Revue, of course."

(The chorus comes in. One of the invalids breaks down on the way and the procession is halted while Doc Glasgow tries the heart action of the other two.)

Chorus: — "The only time that can beat my time is Father Time, himself. I was good to the boys in the Civil War, but now I ain’t nobody’s elf."

(Chorus exits, singing “Red or Blue.” The bust is complete and very evident.)

Elise: (There is a strange odor in the air. It’s long after Easter, but the Bunny Rabbit seems to have saved a few stale placecards which are now being handled indiscriminately. Curtain is forced down through a haze of sulphur dioxide fumes.)

ACT THREE

(Stage manager runs up the curtain and sits astride the top, balancing a long word on his tongue.)

Anonymous: "Do you know what made Cleopatra go to her date with Antonio Moreno clad only in a string of shirt studs?"

Unknown: "Sex appeal?"

Anonymous: "No. Do you know why George Washington didn’t have his lights on when he crossed the Delaware?"

Unknown: "Traffic ordinance?"

Anonymous: "Because he had to wear his heavy. Know why? Know why Pres. Sniff’s house has big wooden storm doors?"

Unknown: "Ahhhhhh! I know it all now! The weather!"

Anonymous (in a voice like that of a loud-mouthed bass calling its mate) — "Hell, no! The price of cotton."

(Curtain — most any one with asbestos inscribed on it.)

Little Willie Cekpawm, aged six and seventeeth, sat on his father’s lap, cutting the latter’s handsome four-in-hand from its mooring place around the paternal Adam’s apple, meanwhile shedding numerous tears in extravagant quantities.

"Why do you cry?" inquired a benevolent old gent who happened to be passing through the bathroom at the time.

"I always cry whenever I never home ties," was the style of Willie’s saddest comeback, as he folded his barlow knife and slipped it into a vest pocket.

AESOT’S FABLES

There was once a boy who came to Washington and Lee who did not:

Take Geology or Political Science.
Buy a Finchley suit.
Go to Southern Sem at least once.
Write home on “W and L’ stationary during his first three weeks at school.
Take a drink.
Know where the museum is, and what for.
Buy a yellow slicker.

FRAT TALK

Let’s don’t be pikers. Let’s make this game a ten-dollar limit.

"I don’t care how much this liquor costs. A fellow’s got to have a good time."

"I will take both those suits, and also that pair of shoes."

"Think I’ll run up to New York this weekend. Yes, you can reach me at the Pennsylvania."

"Hell, no! I can’t pay this month’s fraternity dues. I’m having a hard time getting by this year."

He seized the cup and glanced shudderingly at its contents. It seemed that a heart of stone would have melted in pity for the sufferer, but the circle of faces around him were not stirred by his emotion. They closed in upon him, mercilessly. It seemed that flesh and blood could bear up no longer.

Beads of perspiration burst out upon his brow; his breath came in quick, short gasps. He raised the cup to his lips, spurred on by his tormentors. Yet he could not force it down his throat. His face was contorted with pain and his lips quivered.

The cup was forced upon him again. He seized it as if it had been a vial. He could hold back no longer. With one bold stroke he dashed the contents of the cup down his throat. For a moment he stands as one petrified, then mutters, "Damn! that’s the rottenest liquor I ever drank!"

Three Hundred Twenty-six
MOO! MOO!

To many of the admirers of our fair campus who are prone to come and gaze with spellbound admiration at the beautiful rolling mesas forming the immediate foreground for Washington and Lee, there is one outstanding evil which shows a needless tendency to ignore Mother Nature's proffered favors. The campus is too hard-hearted, too cosmopolitan. Somehow or other, it lacks the rustic and agrarian savor which its geographical location demands. There is a ready solution for this, however. Why not inaugurate a “Buy a Cow” campaign? What could be a more appealing sight than a flock of kine gently mowing the onion-flavored herbaceous growth, with an occasional bit of blarney stone from Reid Hall thrown in for a side dish—a sort of “hors d'oeuvre” or “piece de resistance”? What could be more refreshing to a throat parched by a weary hour of verbal sparring with some flat-headed but well-meaning exponent of the pedagogical art than a brimming schooner of (no, Oswald, not lager) heifer-highball, 150-proof? What could be a more melodious, plaintive, haunting melody than the enraptured mooing of a Carnation-type bovine as she tranquilly contemplates the endless expanse of sod-coated, undulating prairie which unexpectedly terminates in the vicinity of Shyster Seminary at such sessions of the year as her youthful and pestilential rivals, the professors' children, allow it a fighting chance to grow?

A well-bred cow is an asset to any college campus; any cow who gets her educational foundation at Washington and Lee will be an unqualified criterion of social correctness on all occasions, and can feel equally at home in saloon or salon. May each sunrise that wastes itself on Lexington be enhanced and glorified by that incomparable and indispensable requisite of all truly aesthetic landscapes—a drove of kind-faced, lowing female cattle wending their way across the emerald-carpeted threshold of our glorious throne of intellectual and monetary enlightenment! Let them be what breed they may, for isn't one cow as good as an udder?

Once upon a midnight dreary, I was weak and I was weary,
I had drunk a pint of whisky and sat wishing there were more.
When suddenly there came a tapping as if some female gently rapping,
Rapping—on my chamber door.
Only this and nothing more.

Open wide I threw the portal, and there before me stood a mortal
That in my wildest dreams I'd never seen before.
Her face was gently smiling, and her form was so beguiling
That my spirits rose within me, and I strove to shut the door.
Only this and nothing more.

As she started in to speaking, then my mind began to seeking
The reason for her visit—and my thoughts began to soar;
But she was the landlord's daughter, and she said she thought she oughter
Pay my back room rent I owed her for those weeks that had gone before.
—Only this and nothing more.
He: What is the shortest bedtime story?
She: "No."

STATISTICIAN LOVE

It was a night built for lovers. The old moon smiled down—all golden. A couple sat close together like two marble statues turned to bronze by the moonlight. Suddenly he drew her near him and said softly, "Did you know that the amount of electricity generated in a direct current generator can be found from the relation $\Phi \equiv N e P$?"

She stirred restlessly in his arms and turned her large brown eyes toward his—
"Yes, dear; and did you know that if all the last year’s straw hats were placed on top of each other they would reach to the top of the Masonic building in Elmyra?"

Something in her soft, amorous voice stirred him to the depths of his being. He answered, rapturously,
"And I Mackensack in the year 1907 produced more ear muffs than any other city in the world."

These lovers were in perfect accord with each other— with the infinite. She snuggled closer in his arms, the age-old look was in her eyes as she cooed.
"The largest book in the world was published in China in 1805 and had 150,078 pages."

He answered her with a kiss, whispering—
"Yes, dear; and one gram calorie is equal to 41,870,000 ergs."

MU RDER MOTIVES

"I’m having my sister up and I want you to show her around. She’s one of those old-fashioned girls, but she’s a peach."

"Say, do you mind if my three friends have a little drink? They’re fine fellows."

"George, I’m sure you won’t mind our taking my chaperone to the dance with us? She’s such a dear."

"Come on with us, Henry. I know Bill won’t mind. It’s more fun to have a crowd you know."

"I want you to meet my girl; she’s a trifle large, but she can dance fine."

"Now dear, you really didn’t think I would let you kiss me. We’re not engaged or anything."

"Now, after the dance you and Louise come straight home. I don’t believe in riding around half the night."

"Let me have a pint of your liquor, Bill, I’ll pay you back right after the dance."

We Nominate for the Hall of Ill-Fame

Dr. “Al’ Levitt

Because of the masterful way in which he dodged the question when challenged by Clarence Darrow on Prohibition; because, although necessity knows no law, he knows Newton’s Law and the Law of Supply and Demand; and because if his idea of racial equality blossoms forth into full manhood, we can find some wonderful Freshman football material racking pool balls down at Uncle Charlie Higgins’ Billiard Saloon.
The Fancy Dress Brawl has come and gone for another year. The cheesecloth and tissue paper has been torn from its mooring, and the ladies who attended are exaggerating the splendor of the fete for the benefit of their jealous and less fortunate sisters, little realizing that in thus press-agenter the school, they are doing just what they were invited for and are being royally sucked in.

This year's ball was exceptional in many ways. Never before have we enjoyed the presence of so many soused Alumni. Never before have the members of the Faculty looked on with such a sober eye. Never before have we had a code of Dance Regulations that rivaled the Einstein Theory in complexity and were as binding as a fly-paper straight-jacket.

Fancy Dress is more and more getting to be a nationally-known institution. Georgia has its Peach Blossom Festival; Los Angeles has its Orange Blossom Festival; and Winchester has its Apple Blossom Festival. But we predict that the celebrated Apple-jack Festival of Washington and Lee will eclipse them all in the future.

The most entertaining feature of the ordeal, next to Bill Owen's cultivated bay window, was the appearance of "Bugs" Hoyt, sober.

Hi-hat: I know you're in love with the girl, but what do you know about her family tree?

Not-so-hi: Nuthin', but man, her limbs are sure worth braggin' about!

"Why can't Nita Naldi marry Santa Claus?"

"Dono—why?"

"There ain't no Santa Claus."

"This beats me," sighed the Freshman as he grabbed his ankles.

"Joe Below was taking a drink in the gym and was thrown out."

"What for?"

"Flat: Did you know that one hundred and fifty thousand coons were needed to make fur coats for those dashing Princeton lads last year?"

"Broke: Oh, isn't it marvelous that such little beasts can be taught to do such difficult work!"

"How do you call a doctor?"

"Just squeeze a duck until the quack comes."

"I hear that President Smith has decided to stop Charlestoning."

"That's all right—s'long as he doesn't stop the students."

Three Hundred Twenty-nine
IMPRESSIONS OF FINALS BY ONE WHO HAS NEVER BEEN THERE
How I Gained Success

An Interview With a Prominent Professor

By W. Botcherout Dottlewick

Since I have achieved fame in the marked degree that I have, locally, I have been approached by literally thousands of persons wanting to know if they could not obtain the formula from me. No doubt, perhaps these people would be interested to know that I attribute my success to three things, to wit, i.e., viz:

1. Being born in Podunk, S. C.
2. Not encouraging the legalized larceny of the Students' Pressing Shop.
3. Being able to call all my acquaintances by name when I meet them.

My steady and unswerving march to the seats of the mighty began one November morning in Podunk, S. C. I first became the cynosure of all eyes when on my eighth birthday I addressed a meeting of the bored of directors of the Perpetual Motion Oil Company. They were so irritated by my scathing discourse on "The Wherefore of the Why" that they presented me with 3648 shares of non-preferred voting stock. No doubt, perhaps I can some day get a majority of this stock and vote myself into the now vacant position of Vice-President in Charge of Feeding the Wildcats.

The added responsibility of watching the markets caused me to age so rapidly that in four years more I was eighteen, and my grasp on things at college was so embarrassing to the faculty there that they put me on the block, believing that I would make a good college professor. As soon as the swelling on my block had receded, I set out to complete my education by spending several weeks in Buena Vista.

Three years I wandered without food, drink, shave or newspaper. (At this point, the professor deftly shifted his quid to the other side of his mouth with a movement highly suggestive of a gnat beheading a 12-penny nail with a set of number eight rubber gums).

It was during my wanderings that I invented the diffindin' lead device by means of which a sleeper may keep his feet warm by breathing, at regular intervals, into a long glass tube running from head to foot, and vice-versa.

While at Peavine Hollow Normal, I took a conspicuous part in athletics. I broke my own record in jumping at conclusions.

"Be economical," is my warning to college students. When my Ford breaks down, I don't hire an expensive mechanic. I send it to Washington where they investigate it for nothing. (Professor Dottlewick smiled reminiscently here, as he recalled one bleak day in December, 1935, when his Detroit "8" came back from the open spaces groaning under an unwonted load of two passengers.)

"A number of people say that I was taking a course in domestic culture at the stockyards, while supposedly getting my third degree at the University of Chicago. This is a lot of bull."

(Dr. Dottlewick always writes his best exams while barefooted and while listening to the croaking of the frogs. He is also noted for the use of his famous endless fountain pen, which produces exams of only one length—endless.)

"Only read clean literature" is another bit of timely advice I would like to impart. (The instructor who gave this interview may be seen almost every afternoon reading some of the current literary skimmings, with a pair of rubber gloves affording protection for his hands and a large-size bottle of Lysol near at hand.

"Just obey these simple rules that I have laid down and success is bound to come to you. It may not reach you before you die, but just remember that it is on the way, and pay no attention to that.

Three Hundred Thirty-one
Prince Wilbur Saves the University

Affairs at Wassail-Lea were in an awful bind. Nickels were being stretched so far that the Indian was straddling the buffalo. There was no such thing as income—all was outgo. The only place on the lot where profit was netted was Maben's Daylight Robbery. The relation of imports to exports had even ceased to have a reciprocal influence on the marginalentrepreneurial ability of mercantilist bimetallism.

"Ho, now!" cried the muchly-aggravated King Earl, "My precious ducats—the light of my eyes, and liver of my soul—have ceased to roll hither. Bring on Prince Wilbur, sage of the sagebrush, wizard of the windbag, and philosopher of the piccolo, to whom such a trailing tie-up is as a flat tire to the Leviathan.

"And now!" went on in the Repairing Room is a secret which few people know, outside of the Chief of Police, Old Man Dold, Ike Weinberg, the respectable citizenry of Lexington, and the non-studying element of the Student Body. All stories, however, like the longest string of spaghetti ever served in the Eatwell Bean Mill, must end. The daring strategy of Prince Wilbur was an unqualified, unwanted, unbelievable, and unmanageable success. The king has erected a subsidiary throne for him in an unoccupied corner of his dollar-haven, where he may sit and, with critical eye, watch the rate of exchange ebb and flow.

The Women

I was a young one at college,
Shy and abashed at the first.
The first thing the old men had taught me
Was to acquire a terrible thirst.
They taught me the essentials of poker—
Symbolic of Satan they were—
But this was not all,
In that very first Fall,
For I learned about women from Fletcher.

And now that I'm gone from my college,
My learning has not been in vain.
Part of it surely caused failure,
But part of it's netted me gain.
At times I've mixed drinks when I shouldn't,
I've gambled—and that isn't all—
But I've married at last,
With no fear of the past.
For I learned about women from Fletcher.

Dance Regulations

1. The name of this spray of prune juice shall be "The Hearse-Drivers' Creed.
   (a) The committee to enforce these rules shall be called the Sloppy Soaks, and shall be picked from the Membership Committee of the Firefly Fifteen.
   (b) The regulation costume shall consist of a clawhammer evening suit, a waterproof shirt-front, a size sixteen celluloid collar, socks of some sort, basketball sneakers, rubber gloves, and red flannel underwear.
   (c) The costume shall be worn as follows: The undergarment should be worn out as soon as possible, preferably after dark. The collar should be worn about one inch below the tops of the ears. The sneakers should be worn on the outside of the socks, about two joints below the belt. The whole should be topped off with a trustee-like expression, which can be gotten by watching a goat eat corn.
   (d) Each student, alumnus, visitor, gentle- man, dog-catcher, stable boy, or booze-monger attending a Wand L dog hanging shall we a r a club hammer evening suit, a waterproof outside of the socks, about two joints below the belt. The whole should be topped off with a trustee-like expression, which can be gotten by watching a goat eat corn.
   (e) The regulation costume shall consist of a clawhammer evening suit, a waterproof shirt-front, a size sixteen celluloid collar, socks of some sort, basketball sneakers, rubber gloves, and red flannel underwear.
   (f) The regulation costume shall consist of a clawhammer evening suit, a waterproof shirt-front, a size sixteen celluloid collar, socks of some sort, basketball sneakers, rubber gloves, and red flannel underwear.
   (g) Dance only with your wife. If you have- n't one, use someone else's. He will admire your good taste, if that Rockbridge County lye solution has left you any.
   (h) If you must pass out, pass out the rear door and take your partner along to hold your bottle, or your head, or what have you?
   (i) Following are rules of conduct to be followed by all, whether conductors or not:
      (a) Each student, alumnus, visitor, gentle- man, dog-catcher, stable boy, or booze-monger attending a Wand L dog hanging shall we a r a club hammer evening suit, a waterproof outside of the socks, about two joints below the belt. The whole should be topped off with a trustee-like expression, which can be gotten by watching a goat eat corn.
      (b) The regulation costume shall consist of a clawhammer evening suit, a waterproof shirt-front, a size sixteen celluloid collar, socks of some sort, basketball sneakers, rubber gloves, and red flannel underwear.
      (c) The regulation costume shall consist of a clawhammer evening suit, a waterproof shirt-front, a size sixteen celluloid collar, socks of some sort, basketball sneakers, rubber gloves, and red flannel underwear.
      (d) For attempting to enter Mr. Doremus' Gymnasium while so ggy drunk: If you succeed, the penalty is being compelled to give each one of the floor committee a long snort of your drinking woskey. If you fail, you suffer the disgrace of being the first soak that has yet.
      (e) For trying any dance other than the Buck and Wing, Snake, Apache, St. Vitus, or Blind Stagger: If a student, you must change bootleggers, hide the stopper, and then I'm "it" for a while. If an alumnus, you must go to the Dean and let him wash your mouth out with Lux. If just some other type of horse's chambermaid, you are automatically barred from the Beany for the period of three servings of goat meat.
      (f) For taking a drink on the floor: The danger of getting your tongue filled with splinters, and having your eye teeth kicked out through your ears by some irresponsible instructor who is trying to teach his old dogs new tricks.
      (g) For having liquor stored in the gym while there are no dances going on: The damnedest disappointment of your dumb career, if you don't get back till after a member of the committee has viti, vici-ed (came, swiggled, and contoured).
      (h) Following are the pointers to be ob- served by the committee in carrying out these regulations and their violators.

THE MYTHICAL PROF

Once there was a College Professor who:

Never began his lecture with these words:

"Today's assignment is the most important of the course.

Never bawled out a late student.

Never bored students.

Never repeated a pet joke more than once.

Let you put your feet up on the seats in the row ahead of you in the physics lecture room.

They fired him, of course.

A Glimpse into a Students' Mind

"He'll just about slip us a quiz today.

"This damn pen won't write.

"Let's see, if Rose comes down for Finals I'll have to begin saving up.

"Hell! A quiz next Thursday. What's the use.

"That last liquor I got must have had iodine in it.

"I might ask Julia down, though, she's much more economical than Rose. But Rose.

"I really ought to take some notes.

"That girl can certainly kiss.

"It's about time for that bell to ring.

"Must get some new spark plugs today, the bus runs terribly.

"What loud ties Roger wears; he must get them from Sears-Roebuck.

"What makes this class so long?

"That was a hell of a pretty suit at Finchley. I like the cut. How much was it?

"Wish I could smoke.

"Thank God! There's the bell.

"There's nothing like thinking things over to make the time pass quickly.

What the Well Dressed Fraternity Man is Wearing

Breakfast wear—A glance around any fraternity breakfast table will show that many new styles of apparel are rapidly gaining in favor. Orange-and-green-striped pajamas, with or without tops, are decidedly popular. Of course, it isn’t essential that orange and green be the color scheme used, and a most striking effect is given for informal wear by the omission of the pajama coat. But for formal affairs, the outfit suggested is generally worn with appropriate remarks from the house manager.

Pre-dance wear—During the preparations for any dance at the fraternity house, one should be most discriminate in his apparel. During the hour previous to the beginning of any social function, the most prominent men of our campus will be found clad in shoes, underwear, and a hat. In the choosing of one’s underwear, one cannot exercise too much care. If one’s roommate is careless in the matter, it is easy enough to try the room across the hall. Although very popular this season, a long tear across the shoulders is decidedly declassé. Many a man has been socially ostracized by merely flashing downstairs, so clad, with the remark, “Who in the hell’s got my shirt?”—to find that a dear brother is just bringing his best girl in the front door. Girls are peculiar about such matters.

Light or informal drinking—During the past few years, the mode of wearing one’s clothes on such occasions has been rapidly changing. Time was when a student could throw a drunk, clad only in evening attire, but recently it has become so that one is accepted by those “who know,” whether drunk in afternoon, morning, or night dress. But at that, a person should be most careful in the arrangement of his clothes. The hat allows ample room for the satisfaction of one’s own tastes in the matter, although it is suggested that something unique be worn in the place of the usual headpiece. If it happens that one finds he is wearing the hat he uses for street wear, an unusual effect may be obtained by turning it East and West, instead of the customary North and South. But those who might be considered authorities on the subject state that a wire wastebasket, a potted plant, or a towel wrapped around the head creates the effectiveness that a man of good taste and judgment desires for headwear.

Instead of the usual walking stick, one should carry a quart bottle of whiskey either by his right or his left hand, or both. A student seen on the streets so clad is bound to attract attention of even those of the highest rank in the University.

By following these simple rules, especially the latter, it will be found that any student can become well known overnight, have a great following, and prove immensely popular.

“Is Joe College much of a shrink?”

“You’d think it. He even writes his mash notes on sandpaper.”

I had never met her, although I had often longed to. She was of that type which is so easily made an ideal; that type which men worship from afar. Her hair was of the shade called “honey-colored” her lips seemed made for kisses. I had seen her every day for a year. My desire to know her knew no bounds. I would do anything to meet her—anything.

At last I had the opportunity. One June morning I chanced to spy her walking down the avenue in front of me. She had dropped her handkerchief—and I stooped to pick it up. She smiled her thanks.

“You are beautiful,” I said.

“So’s your old man,” was her answer.

After the murder I never looked at another girl again.

Judgin’ Life offers a reward for the Capture. Dead or Alive, of:

The bird that wears his hat turned down on all sides.

The girl who waves frantically to every man she sees.

The boy who thinks up such clever take-offs on “So’s your old man.”

The girl who reads you his girl’s letters.

The bum who sends the following telegram the day before the Final dances—“Terribly sorry. Can’t come. Letter follows.”

The first alumnus back for the dances who says “Now, when I was in school...”

Cop (to student trying to hoist a manhole cover): “What’s going on?”

Stude: Oh, mashing’ just’ playin’ a game...tiddliewinksh.

BEDTIME STORY

Once upon a time there was a vacancy in the faculty that was not a mental one; it was a vacancy caused by a teacher's deciding to go out and earn a living wage, and also get it.

The loss of the prof was a big blow to the faculty, naturally, because he had always been a big blow himself. His school had always been confined to the writing of E's and F's and he had been confined to the State Reformatory.

In order to recoup their loss, the administration decided to advertise in some paper of nationwide distribution. Wax paper was chosen because it will not show the dirt.

The advertising campaign was successful, and was read by two Is and a But, who mistook it for a Union Suit ad.

All three hurried to the Eastern Open Shop Telegraph Co. and wired the school, "Old Man Dold. They wired because they had read a sign on the window of the Telegraph Co. saying, "Don't write. Tiltaglass."

When they arrived in the premier educational city of Virginia, they were met by the customary symptoms of Virginia hospitality, consisting of a spell of rainy weather that would have made Noah's Flood look like a morning dew, a motion-picture proprietor whose only redeeming feature were displayed after school was out, and a police chief who felt that restaurant proprietors ought not to go home alone after 12:00 P.M., but who couldn't stay up to escort them.

They reported to the president's office boy, because he had the earmarks of a Manly Character and because he was not teaching a Commerce class just at that moment. He gave them the East and West, just to satisfy himself that none of them gave signs of having any more brains than the average College Football captain.

Each one was then given a copy of a simple but rigid questionnaire. It had to be simple, in order to be representative of the position, and the most rigid part of it was the cardboard back.

The answers were original, if wit begets wit, because it was a case of two Nitwits and a Halfwit. The box score of the day's intelligence research follows:

But—Yes, but I'd use boxing gloves.

The papers were graded on a fair and impartial basis. Passing grades had to be used because all the others were being saved for hour tests. The two Is were disqualified; one because he was shot and killed when he failed to hold his hands above his head while paying for a fried banana sandwich at Shylock Willie Dorsey's Subtreasury Kitchen, the other because he thought that the reason no mail was boxed on Sunday was so that McCling Patton and his Postoffice Speed Demons could go to church.

But was then issued a special uniform similar to that worn by Snaggletooth Sam, the Lexington white-wing, so no one would mistake him for a Freshman or a Finchley representative, and was turned loose on the campus armed with a grade book, a vacant stare, and a desire to do something big and clean.

The first thing he met was a Law Prof.

"High, gentlemen," said the But. "If you are talking about the price of textbooks, that's my affair and Snake's," tartly remarked the hired hand from Levitt's Home for the Dumb.

But had a skin as thick as the town traffic cop's head and he went blithely on to his next adventure.

He soon met a studious-looking boy carrying a brief case and a walking stick. His toes were sticking out from the front end of his socks—the student's.

"How do you do, today?" queried the But, in a voice laden with vodka and other foreign emotions.

"I do like this," replied the He-Pollyanna, climbing up a nearby paraffin fire escape, trying to reach a high note on his piccolo.

By this time the prospective Prof was on the verge of insanity. As he reached down to open his notebook and wrap up the cold check he had gotten for his first week's salary in a strip of red flannel from Maggie's old red shawl, the edge of the verge gave way. The But fell, as many another instructor has fallen. His only consolation was that he didn't fall from Grace, as this dear old maid aunt was waiting down below.

He didn't last longer on the campus because he tried to start in with a bad set.

Three Hundred Thirty-five
The Roamer Boys at Finals

"Clickety click, click-ety click," said the rails as our three heroes swept onward to Lexington. And with each "click" the train seemed to increase its speed as if anxious to quiet the impatience of the waiting throngs at the Lexington Union Station.

"Ha, ha, ha," laughed Tom, the fun-loving Roamer, as you will remember in the last of this series—"Seeing Colorado Through a Beer Bottle, or The Search for the Rocky Mountain Triple-easy.

"Why such ribaldry?" queried Sam, his younger brother, "there is nothing funny about going to Lexington..."

"Dick just got up on the wrong side of the bed," Tom answered, shaking with laughter.

"There's nothing in that," remarked Sam, "he's not superstitious.

"Well, he will be now," replied his brother, "he slept in the lower berth last night.

Sam rushed to the window and looked out.

"Look out!" cried Tom.

"I am," answered Sam with a titter, "but how will Dick ever find us?"

"Oh, that's all right," Tom said, "We'll be in the next chapter.

And the nearby passengers chuckled loudly at this sally of the playful Roamer boy.

CHAPTER 108

"Rah rah rah," the crows shouted as the train pulled into the station.

"Rah meat served at Fox's," was Tom's quick retort, convulsing the crowd with laughter.

But little did the merry Roamer boys reckon with the cunning of Dan Blackster—the big bully. While the crowds were hilariously waving blue-and-white banners and singing the W and L Swing, Dan slipped out of the rear coach and sight.

"I'll get you ere this chapter's over, Dick Roamer," mumbled Dan Blackster to himself as he turned himself loose on Main Street.

Dan moodily wended his way through the festival crowds. Suddenly he saw a graceful figure standing on the street corner.

"Hello, you little witch," smirked the wayward lad as he edged closer.

"I'll not speak to you, Dan Blackster," said Dora Standup, for it was she, "I'll not forget the way you treated the Roamer Boys in the eighth volume of this series—Up Before the V. C., or What Tom Roamer Got For Putting Indelible Ink in President Smith's Shaving Cream, on sale at all newstands (adv.)."

"Speak or not, my proud beauty," leered the contemptible sneak, as he lighted a cigarette, "you are coming with me.

Hailing a passing taxi, he threw the frightened girl into the back seat and sped away.

CHAPTER 109

"Aha! Now I have you in my clutches!" gloated the bully, as he looked at her with a dissipated grin.

"But I'll slip the clutch," retorted Dora, and how she did and the experiences encountered by the Roamer Boys will be told in the next volume—"A Dollar a Drop, or How Sam Roamer Learned To Gargle His Whiskey.

And now let us say good-bye. Goodbye.

SOME GIRLS WE KNOW

Main 2063—Mary

Knows what it's all about; has more than one book; does not reply to every question, "Now isn't that naive?" knows how to wear an evening dress; knows all the technique of the great American indoor sports—but she's too damned expensive.

Juniper 2009—Louise

Just like her telephone number—a blank. But she knows how to read parallels; makes good candy. The type of girl a man forgets.

Hermajde 2853—Hazel

Some baby. Can do anything from the St. Vitus to the Charleston; the type of girl that made the taxi cab "The Yellow Peril"; can dance all night and into the morning without

We wish to announce that, for the benefit of our readers, we have secured the services of Mr. Curtis Longhand, A.B., etc., an eminent educator, who will answer in this section all questions pertaining to love, railroad schedules, football, etiquette, photography, and Anglo Saxon. Address all correspondence to Uncle Curtis, care of the CALYX. All queries in regard to Anglo Saxon will be regarded as strictly confidential.

Dear Uncle Curtis:
Last week I sent some shirts out to be washed and got one back marked W. E. Tilson. What do you think about this?

Dear Excited:
Tex must have his clothes washed, too.

Dear Uncle Curtis:
I am an alumnus and am planning to come down for the Maryland game next fall and stay all night. Could you tell me a good place to sleep where I would be with a lot of Alumni?

Dear Departed:
Sure—Under the Stadium.

Dear Uncle Curtis:
One of our legislators once remarked that what this country most needed was a good five-cent cigar. What Washington and Lee needs more than anything else is a good fifty-cent textbook. We can't see why we should pay seven dollars for a text when you can get such nice magazines at McCrum's for a quarter. Is Charlie Harlow to blame for this?

Dear Expectant:
No. Ma Pettigrew

Dear Uncle Curtis:
I room at Mrs. Swink's and am bothered a lot by having my nice new cakes of Cuticura soap stolen. Now I wonder if anyone down here could have started using—well, anyway, what should I do?

Dear Dumb Egg:
Mark your name on each cake with indelible ink.

Dear Uncle Curtis:
I am afraid that I am a "box car," instead of a "locomotive." What can I do to get more out of school?

Dear Lifeey:
Sleep through about two more classes and you'll get out entirely.

Dear Uncle Curtis:
For almost a year I have been going with a local girl who is of Turkish extraction, I suppose, as her complexion is a little sunburned. What could I give her that would help her social standing, as she seems to be looked down upon here?

Dear Askew:
Another bottle of anti-kink.

Dear Uncle Curtis:
My frat brothers refuse to allow me to come to meetings because they doubt that I am a brother. How can I convince them?

Dear Oswald:
Sleep with your feet out the window and you'll get the grippe.
JUDGIN' LIFE

TO THE LOYAL KAPPA STIGMAS

Burbank revolutionized the vegetable industry; Edison retired the old kerosene lamp idea on a pension; Maxim put a silencer on the blowgun fad; Marathon damned posterity forever with the wireless; Fulton showed the world that water runs uphill if you just know your albumen; Franklin wasn’t a chronic so, but he flew the first kite that rated very much newspaper space; Newton found out that if you get between a rotten apple and gravitation, you’ll get it where the turkey got the axe; Archimedes lived and learned that you must stop up the drainpipe in your bathtub if you don’t want visitors to enter by the way of the drain; Socrates didn’t exactly approve the “Say It With Flowers” slogan—he said it with poison hemlock, and the flowers followed; Darwin made a monkey of the human race; Einstein went on a bet and concocted a lie that only four men so far have had the brass to say they believed; Diogenes spent the best years of his life looking for a Godly Beta; Delilah ushered in the bovish bob—well, anyway, you get the plot: that man has been going clever places and doing clever things ever since Adam smoked his first corn-silk cigarette.

But there are some dwellers on this good green footstool who learn to live instead of living to learn. The goodly brotherhood of the Kappa Stigmas Country Club have long suffered from bunions, ingrown toenails, muscular rheumatism, excessive sole-leather bills, touchy tempers, and used-up cuts ever since the hegira to the open spaces.

And yet the answer to their need is simplicity plus. There is one loophole left open to them which is more than a loophole—it is a yawning abyss. An implement has been devised which can do away with all these needless pains and aches. It is the BICYCLE! Their Chapter Magazine need no longer be “Farm and Fireside” if they will but heed this timely word of admonition, and be really uptown by allowing opportunity to thrust itself upon them in the form of this convenient little device which will enable them to come in once a month and pick up some of the cultural ways of their city cousins.

We are indeed proud to print the following verse from the pen of F. S. Jessop, poet laureate of Washington and Lee. The poem is very moving and poigniant. Its very title is suggestive of deep emotion:

THE YELLOW MUSTACHE

I saw you had no motive
Leaning there so piteously:
You were a romance;
I, a rose.
But how I remember
The day we met!
Sweet shade of Dold’s—
So’s your Aunt Ella, too.
Either that or a motorcycle.
I met you when the dizzy haze
Of night slunk forgotten
To the Subway Kitchen—
There to eat a ham sandwich.
Oh, dreggs, dreggs, dreggs—
At five a pint.

butting an eye; her training table is at the Ritz; she likes to order a big dinner and then say, "Oh, I’m not the least bit hungry!" will drink all your gin, and has an intense craving for Fatimas. But she has never learned to inhale gracefully in public.

Galsnap 814—Josephine

Very beautiful. Dark brown eyes and a voice as soft as a guitar. When you are with her she makes you think of spring nights—of waitzels and colonial times. There is sunset in her hair—and a magic about her that seems to envelope you like a spell. Her Southern drawl is expressive of her personality. She will tell you by the hour—"now in foreign—". But be careful. She comes from the Bronx.

HOW TO PREPARE FOR AN EXAM

On the eve of the Big Exam it is important above all things to put yourself in a proper frame of mind. This can be done no easier than by dropping in at the pool hall and indulging in a game or so of "Crash." In all probability, Johnny Lancaster will be on hand, and if possible choose him for a partner. His carefree attitude regarding Final Exams is so evident that you will no doubt become infected with this spirit.

Then return to your room, sit down at your desk and open your textbook. (If the course happens to be one of "Granny" Campbell's you should sit down at your desk and try to think of who might own a textbook.) Look around the room a couple of times and scratch your head.

Decide to undress. As you slip into your bathrobe, engage your roommate in conversation regarding his date coming down for the dances. Try to lead him into telling you if she has a tendency to neck at times. Always add to your store of information. You will probably find that she does; else he wouldn't be having her down.

Return to your desk and grasp your text firmly in one hand and rest your head on the other. The chances are that your elbow will land in the ash tray, which will remind you that it has been some time since you have had a cigarette. Rise from your chair, and go dig one out of your pocket, saunter over to your roommate's desk and peer over his shoulder to see what he is doing.

Hatched with your firm resolve, again return to your desk and gaze at the text. Decide that much more can be accomplished if the desk is in a neat and orderly fashion. Arrange the papers, books, and stray letters in individual piles, and prop the text against the study lamp. Gaze abstractedly at the ceiling for a few minutes. Then yawn and go to bed.

"If you were my husband, I'd kill you."
"If you were my wife, I'd want you to.

Exotic . . . yet wistful . . .
Will I ever forget that Easter night
When we danced . . . slowly . . . rhythmically . . .
Our very souls stirred by the enchanting strains of
The Adoration Waltz?

And later . . . under the spell of the white moon
. . . Drifting over the campus,
We strolled. Her soft azure eyes spoke volumes
And I answered her only with kisses.
That night we pledged our love . . .
A love of youth . . . and hope . . . and happiness.

I have not forgotten her. But I wonder, yet,
What the hell was her name?

YOU WON'T BELIEVE THIS

They sat alone in the moonlight. Finally she spoke:
"Oh, I'm tired of sitting out here. I'm going in to dance."
Said the other:
"That's all right. I'll just sit here for a while. Go ahead."
You see, they were both girls.

NOW YOU TELL ONE

She was the type of a young girl who was demureness personified. She thought a highball was a baseball term. She would no more have thought of smoking a cigarette than of flying to the moon. In all, she was the sort of girl every boy expects his sister to be.

She went away to boarding school for four years, and when she came back—
She was still the same sort of girl she was before she left! * * *

She: How long have you been on this houseparty?
More she: Oh, about five fraternity pins.

Three Hundred Thirty-nine
OUR KINDNESS TO DUMB EGGS' CAMPAIGN

We wish to notify all concerned that we heartily subscribe to the policy of aiding the Boy Scout movement which "Bugs" Hoyt, H.Q.S., B.P.O.E., K.O.B., H.R.H., B.B., 22, and trench mortar, has so courageously endorsed all year. He has called to our attention a number of acts of our campus notables which we didn't even know were good deeds in fact, some of them still have a little tang of the Great Unwashed about them.

Guess we'll name a few of the most rabid symptoms of the "Be Prepared" complex:

"Pugilistic" Lancaster heard that a Washington Street candy-monger was being bothered by students who came in and leaned on her showcase. He walked in at three o'clock on one sunny morning and kicked old Joe in the slats after borrowing a chew of Apple Sun Cured. She declares that she now can rest her jaws for hours at a time on a convenient rack made of Joe's golf clubs.

Dick Flox used to be unable to sleep in the daytime on account of listening to the crunching of starved students gnawing their fingernails. He has installed a sauerkraut factory in the rear of his tripe foundry, and now his frankfurters are going from bad to worse.

Charlie Lowry helps the janitor light fires all through the spring months. He gets up early and lifts all the "Lexington Gazettes" from the front porches for this purpose. It's all right, because the folks get all their dirt from the first chair in Jackson's Barber Shop anyway.

"Little Doc" Mayhew met a weeping old lady on Main Street who was suffering from bleeding and protruding barber's itch. He gave her some of his Therapeutic Tumor Tablets, and now she can play a saxophone, grow a mustache, eat whale hash, and otherwise be the life of the party.

Mrs. Tongue, who runs a North Main Street hash laboratory, found out that her boarders didn't like flies at their meals. She now allows them to pick out the ones they dislike most, and she then kills them (the flies).

"Buck" Jordon recently saw one of those pie-eyed Rockbridge farmers out in the middle of Reed's Pond, going down for the third time. He generously volunteered to swim out and help look for what he was after if he didn't find it after a couple more tries.

"Duke" Boyer, said to be on the History Department payroll, recently rode all the way from Independence, Va., to Leaping Springs, Ind., without stealing a Pullman "Quiet" sign. He rode in the day coach, and can't read, of course, but this shouldn't be allowed to detract from the magnanimity of such clear outward manifestation of the triumph of sterling integrity over desire for fame.

Son: Father, is that a tourist camp?
Father: No, my son, W. and L. are having their Easter dances.

YE GODS! HOW THE MONEY ROLLS IN
To the Tune of "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean"
My father is a missionary,
He saves young girls from sin,
He'll save you a blonde for a dollar.
Ye gods! How the money rolls in!

My uncle is a gambler,
He handles the dice with a grin,
He'll fade you three times for a dollar.
Ye gods! How the money rolls in!

My brother is a bootlegger,
He peddles synthetic gin,
He'll sell you a quart for a dollar.
Ye gods! How the money rolls in!

Impatience. Hope. The sorry-can't-come-letter-follows-love telegram. Realization. Getting into that damned tux again. The music. That whiskey without a chaser. The girl with the air-cooled teeth. Hide and seek with the Floor Committee. The late dates. More whiskey with chasers. The hangover

 Impressions of Finals by One Who Has Been There **

There was a study from Lexington.
And he was wondrous dumb.
He asked four girls to Finals,
And all of them did come.

But when he saw the deed was done:
With all his might and main,
He hopped a train to the Fiji Isles,
And didn’t come back again.

Absinthe makes the world grow stranger

Mrs. Notal: When you were abroad, I suppose you visited the Greek temples.

Mrs. Neurich: I should say so. They are the nicest family in Greece.

- Jobs We Wouldn’t Like to Have

Shoveling the snow off the third rail of an electrified railway.

- The biology class found out today what is the lowest form of animal life.

- Amoeba or a protoplasm.

- Neither. A prof who gives an hour quiz on the day before a holiday.

- Found today a place where you can run around in circles and still get somewhere.

- Well, sift your ashes.

- Climbing a spiral staircase.

- Be careful with that club,” said the gambler as he pulled the ace out of his partner’s sleeve.

He: Here’s a picture of my girl—what do you think of her?

Also he: Hmmm—the must have lots of money.

- I didn’t get that job today.

- How come?

- Boss said to come around between 7 and 8, and 5 foot 9 was the best I could do.

- Oh, Genevieve, there are only two things that keep us from being in love.

- What are they, Armentrout?

- You and I.

- That woman looks like thirty cents.

- Oh, easy to make?

Ask Dad—He Knows

(What they laughed at in the good old days)

Tell me, just why you shake so,
Where'er you dance with me,
You tell me things so sweet and low,
Just vamping me deliberately.

Tell me, just why you tease me,
Then always do refuse
To have a late date with me,
And let me show you what style I use?

"So I'm the first you ever loved?"
"Yes," he said, intense,
"Then go away, and don't come back
Till you've had experience."

"Love may be blind, but it knows when the gas is too high.

One of the greatest catastrophes of the year was the collapse of the balcony in the chapel under the weight of the huge throng assembled to hear the intercollegiate debate.

Cannibal Prince (rushing in): "Am I late to dinner?"
Cannibal King: "Yep, everybody's eaten."

Dr. Smith maintains that the class of graduates that W. and L. is turning out is the class of men that will be sure to push to the top in whatever branch of lifework they might choose. Cream is bound to rise!

"Who was that lady I saw you with last night?"
"That was no lady, that . . . . Blah!"

Ich bin Herr Tommy Farrar.
Ein Freund von dem deutschen Kaiser.
Ich lehre German grammar,
And after the damsel
I go for a ride in my car.

I care not a rap for the sot.
Who says that my teaching is rot,
For why should I care,
When none can compare
Mit mir und der Kaiser, und Gott?

They stood on the porch at midnight,
His head was in a whirl,
His eyes and mouth were full of hair,
And his arms were full of girl.

He put his arms around her waist:
The color left her cheek—
Upon the lapel of his coat
It stayed about a week!

Passenger—Is that Pennsylvania?
Butch—Only a part of it, sir.

Grandson: Grammy, please give me a drink of your liquor.
Olde Ladye: Naughty, naughty! Pretty soon you'll be learning the Charleston.

Three Hundred Forty-three
It was a gala night for all Lexington. The upper Four Hundred of the town and crowds of notables from surrounding towns and cities were there, dressed in their finest and most resplendent manner. The Student Body had turned out en masse; in fact, the audience was composed of the elect and select of the Shenandoah Valley. The place was the New Theatre and the occasion was the premiere showing of that great and unsurpassed triumph of the cinema art—Pearl Handel, in "Ain’t Love Gland!"

A tense, awed hush fell on the crowd as the opening scenes of this immortal love story were flashed on the silver sheet. There was a pause—weird, almost eerie-like—as each soul almost ceased to be; lost in admiration of this gripping tale of a girl who wanted to do something bigger and better.

Then, in an instant, all was pandemonium. Men and women, sane, civilized people, leaped from their seats and shrieking like fiends, rushed for the "USE IN CASE OF FIRE ONLY, RUN, DO NOT WALK" signs. Scenes of sickening brutality were enacted. While the uproar was at its height and flames were licking the ceiling like a starved cow licking a medicated salt brick, gentle music was heard in the air. Order was restored and the people returned to their seats while the Fire Department Laddies deftly twisted the tail of the fire-fiend. It was another triumph for dear old Washington and Lee—a rosy-cheeked Freshman had quietly walked out on the stage and played the W. & L. Swing, on a mouth organ.

He was a student in a room on the first floor of historic old Lees Dormitory, and his door was one of those pesky affairs that always stands ajar. He woke up one morning, as was his custom, looked in the mirror with an annoyed, hopeless expression, picked up a bar of laundry soap and walked to the bathroom, where he spent twenty-five minutes washing the dog tracks off his face.

"Well," he finally sighed, "I guess I’ll have to quit eating that hash. You can’t blame them for being inquisitive about where their kinfolks have gone."

KIDDIE KUT-OUT KONTESTS

(Cut out the unnecessary word)

1. A crowded Elinor Glyn movie.
3. Rare old whiskey.
4. An expensive textbook.
5. A dangerous suicide game.
6. Welcome holidays.
8. Rainy weather for dances.
10. Bad hangovers.

And now, gentle reader, when you think you have finished this intricate and perplexing task, just mail the result to the CALYX, care of Kum Wat May, the Chinese puzzle expert, and he will send you by radio (all freight charges prepaid) a copy of that racy jungle story, "How Bertie the Bulldog Chased Katy the Kat Down the Cool, Shady Lane."

"You go to hell" said St. Peter as a lost soul knocked on the Pearly Gates by mistake.

First: What’s the difference between a chorus girl and a leading lady?
Second: Conscience.

Three Hundred Forty-four
Clarabel at Finals

Clarabel and Swamproot enter the front door of Doressus Gym at 11:15—Swamproot wanted to be on hand at 9:00, sharp, but then you know how girls are. He is wondering to himself why in hell he ever asked Clarabel down, anyway. Somehow, she doesn't seem quite as hot as she did at Hollins that day.

But Swamproot decides to make the best of it and they enter the dance floor.

Clarabel: Oh, isn't it just gorgeous? I remember the last time I was down here—we had so much fun!

Swamproot (wondering to himself who was the goof that got sucked in before): Uh-huh.

Clarabel: Come on, let's dance. (she starts off with a cross between a Highland fling and a spasm of St. Vitus. Swamproot responds valiantly, but fails miserably.)

Swamproot (sarcastically): Having a good time?

Clarabel (enthusiastically): I should say so! (With which remark she seems to have become imbued with new vigor. She unleashes a couple of new steps that would have amazed Houdini.)

Swamproot: I'll never say that again.

Clarabel (overhearing): What's that you said?

Swamproot: I say, you'll have to come back again.

Bystander: Hic.

Swamproot capers back and forth in front of the stag line several times, then resigns himself to his fate.

Clarabel: You know, I think that this is the best dance you all have had in the past two years. Don't you think so?

Swamproot: Uh-huh. (To himself: For the past two years! How did she do it! His faith in Barnum increases.)

Every one stops dancing, so they take it for granted that the music has ceased.

Clarabel: Oh, I'm afraid that's the end of the dance.

Swamproot (with a sigh): Thank God! That is, I'm afraid so, too. Let's go for a ride.

His arm linked in hers, they stroll off the floor in the direction of the girls' dressing room. He leaves her there, and proceeds to wait for her return. Clarabel has spent some time in the dressing room, and Swamproot is just finishing his last cigarette. Clarabel comes out, smiling sweetly.

Swamproot: Oh, hello.

Clarabel: Did I keep you waiting long?

Swamproot: No, indeed! What took you so long? Let's go.

They go outside to Swamproot's car, and start off down the darkened street. The car is seen to go slower and slower until finally it reaches a particularly dark place where it stops.

. . . . . . . . . .

Three hours have passed. We steal up behind Swamproot's car and listen to what they are saying.

Swamproot: . . . and say, Beautiful, remember that you are coming down to all the dances next year on my bid.

Three Hundred Forty-five
FINALS ETIQUETTE

Your success at Finals will depend greatly upon your having read these simple directions before arriving. You must "know the ropes" (pardon this vulgar expression) if one is to "be in the swim." You will be a great success and joy to your boy friend if you will peruse and learn these few simple instructions (only fifteen minutes a day) before arriving in the quaint metropolis of Lexington.

ARRIVAL IN LEXINGTON

Much depends upon your securing a nice, refined boarding place while in our fair city. Judgin' Life recommends the following hostleries:

1. Sheridan Hotel
2. Central Hotel
3. Old Blue Tavern

Either of the above will do. They are all hotels of the first rank. Every mother would be perfectly at ease if she knew that her daughter was putting up at either. Nice, bland, mute chaperones can be furnished at a nominal cost.

RECEIVING YOUR ESCORT

It is a good idea to start the evening right. When your boy friend calls, gaily knock on his head the flower pot which you will find upon your window ledge (it was put there specially for occasions such as these). The warmth and spirit of his greeting will surprise you. As he comes forward to embrace you, whisper softly in his ear, "Listerine applied to the hair quickly removes greasiness." He will be amazed at your knowledge and depth of soul. As you leave the house, whisper gaily to the ceiling, "esta prohibito fumar." This will establish you as a woman of deep learning.

AT DINNER

When your escort mentions the fact that delightful meals are served at his frat house, cooly say, "I much prefer Dold's Lunch Room." He will be struck with your knowledge of the Lexington Night Clubs.

After you have finished dinner, laughingly turn the leftover soup upon his Jacob Reed. This will amuse him very much. It will stamp you as a woman of versatility and individuality. As you leave, fling at the proprietor this blasé remark, "So's your old mandolin!"

AT THE DANCE

Here is the point at which most girls fail. This is the supreme test of a person's ability. You must be popular. Exert all your energy to gain this popularity. Be sure to have plenty of liquor handy. You must speak to every chaperone you see, using names such as the following for those you don't know:

(1) "Cutie"
(2) "Bugs"
(3) "Leaty"
(4) "Boss"
(5) "Puss"
(6) "Wally"

You will find that this procedure will gain you an immense following.

Now as to the exact method of dancing—When you near the place where the chaperones are stationed, offer your partner a drink of your liquor, and then go through all your favorite Charleston steps with a bit of hari-kari and judo jumps thrown in. The chaperones (and your partner) will think you immensely clever.

Steer your partner towards the stag line, meanwhile winking desperately at the stags. As someone cuts in, give your partner a cute parting blow neatly between the shoulders.

GOING HOME

Here is the supreme test of your ability. Remember that men like the demure, shrinking type of girl. The spiritus frumenti type. Do not be forward. As you carry your escort into the house, whisper beautiful words into his ear. Make him stay all night. By morning he will either be hopelessly in love or compromised. Either condition should be received with favor. If you follow these directions, you will easily obtain another bid.

MR. PEPS DIARY

APRIL 13: Up betimes (11 o'clock) to attend lecture. Worked very hard in this class room today. Bussed myself with countless world problems, such as: how to run the rest of the month on the two dollars I have in the deposit box; how to pay my bill with the Finchley haberdasher (said bill incurred for Easter rags); how to obtain an extra quart of spirit for the week-end. Alas and alack, the bell sounded all too soon. I had not solved a single one of my problems! What's tomorrow's assignment? Then to post office and found usual empty box; fell to wondering why no one will write to me. Terrible dinner at house today. Thin strips of beef with Irish potatoes. Rice pudding for dessert. Very busy day, ending with a little set-to at the Sigma Rye house where I lost my remaining dollar in an infamous dice game. Thence wearily to bed after a hard day's work.

APRIL 14: After my hard day's work of the day before I arose little fit for the day's work. After the day's classes (which I decided to miss) I went to view the wares of the numerous clothes hucksters who are today in town. Selected a charming blue sweater to wear this coming summer. Not having any cash I added this to my already large charge account. In the show this afternoon a very terrible spectacle. Indeed: the usual story of the hero, heroine, and mustached villain. After supper to the library to study. However, becoming interested in the rotogravure section of the Sunday papers I promptly forgot what I came there to do. As my watch showed the late hour of nine, I decided to go home. Thence to "The Corner" to partake of a milk shake. There fell in with a jolly group who would take me with them to their rooms. There we talked of diverse subjects, one subject however, being talked of most. Only when the clock struck one did I realize how late the hour was. Home and bed. Ah, another hard day!

"What's the game warden doing in the gym?"
"Just keeping the boys from shooting their lunches."

An Appreciation

We cannot finish without a word of appreciation to those who have made possible this thirty-second volume of the CALYX. We cannot submit this last page to the press without recognizing the invaluable assistance of those who have aided in compiling the pages between these covers.

We express our sincere appreciation of the hard-working members of the staff who have unselfishly given many hours from their studies that you may have this book. We also appreciate the contributions and suggestions of a host of others whose assistance was invaluable.

To the publishers—Baker-Jones-Hausauer, Inc.—the photographers—White Studio—and Art Editor—M. M. Junkin—the CALYX owes grateful thanks for their services, generosity, and skill.

We have ever kept in mind the purpose of the CALYX, believing that Washington and Lee should have an Annual that is worthy of the institution and its traditions. It has been a labor of love, and we present to you the CALYX of 1926. May it mean to you—Washington and Lee.

STETSON "D" CLOTHES
A CLOTHING ADVERTISEMENT WITHOUT A PICTURE

There is much more to STETSON "D" Clothes than any picture could convey. The usual phrases about assortments, styles, colors, etc., do not adequately carry the message. We make all the clothes we sell, and we sell all the clothes we make—a condition which permits us to produce fine garments for the college man.

Who is the frankest man in the world?

Yes; who?

The butcher. He sometimes admits he has no brains?

Abie Wooten—Give me an example of how nature abhors a vacuum.

"Sousa" Funk—It's a lie. I've had one in my mailbox for nine months.

Inquisitive Prof—Well, Mr. Brooke, what did you get out of the lesson today?

"Louise" Brooke—Probably a whole lot more than I'll get out of the lecture.

IT KEEPS US YOUNG

There’s contagion in laughter, in cheerfulness, in enthusiasm — yes, and in youth.

When we were given the contract to print the 1926 CALYX, we looked with expectant anticipation to the share of enjoyment, enthusiasm and pride of production that would be ours through contact with the CALYX staff.

We have enjoyed it; we have shared the enthusiasm, and we do take pride in the result for which we, in our modest way, have shared the responsibility.

It is such contacts as this that keep us young.

When the 1926 CALYX staff go out into the world to win their way, when the fast-fleeting years have brought to them greater age and experience, when College Annual production has become to them a memory of the past, we shall still be printing Annuals — and keeping young.

Good luck to you, Class of ’26, may we somehow, sometime, meet again.
