FOOTBALL.

Captain Bledsoe Talks on the Outlook.

The football season of 1900 opens with prospects that rest entirely with the students of the University. There are two ways in which every student is able to assist athletics financially and physically, and it is the duty of every man in college to assist in both to the extent of his ability. In the first place every man is able to give some money to the support of the team, no matter how small that something may be, and the man who fails to give the half dollar he is able, is as derelict in his duty as the man who fails to give ten dollars, when he spends nearly that amount every week on billiards and other luxuries. The membership of the Athletic association has recently been thrown open to every student and let us hope that there is no man in college who would vote in and belong to an organization to which he gives no support whatsoever.

The second aspect of the case is just as important, if not more so than the first. For the present we are dealing with but one branch of athletics—football—and the men who play football do good not only to their college but to themselves. But like the invited guests in the Bible, they have many excuses. Some say they cannot make the team, others that they have not time, and still others that football prevents them from studying and putting their minds on their books. The first excuse is too purile to be considered. A man should have patriotism enough to be willing to play on the second team if he cannot on the first, and if he has not he ought to be ashamed to confess it. The second excuse requires more consideration, and yet even this may be met. We have too many examples of men who with a great deal of work take part in athletics and are benefited by it. One man in '97 who took double course law played football and baseball and led his class, while another man in '98 did the same thing. Other examples could be cited, but are unnecessary. Besides these statistics it is a fact that every man should have from an hour and a half to two hours exercise per day and if he gives this to football no more would be required. As for the third excuse that reveals a weakness of character the eradication of which would do a man more good than the absorption of the whole college curriculum.

These remarks are all general in their character and their application, and may with truth be applied to every college but the acceptance and application of them by the students of Washington and Lee in particular will result in the best team in our history. A brief review of the situation will show that this is so. This year we must depend almost entirely upon new men. Of last year's team we have back only Allen, center; Booker, full-back; Bledsoe, end, and Elgin and Deacon, substitutes. This leaves both tackles and guards, both halves, one end and quarter to be filled by new men. The material that has shown up for the back field is excellent, in fact the best in several years. Foster, Robinson, Thompson, Montgomery and Boogher have all shown themselves capable of good work at half, while Hall and Allen, two new men at quarter, are learning rapidly. Schwartz, Forrester and Hairston are out for end and from them a good man can be picked. But now we come to the great weakness that is in the line. The candidates now out, while all faithful and hard working, are light and inexperienced, and it is absolutely necessary to have some nucleus of experience and weight to build on. Newman, Mundle, Sloan, Haw, Crockett, Felder, etc., all come under the above category, and while they will develop into capable men, still, as said before, it is absolutely necessary to have some heavier and more experienced men to work on.

This slight sketch will show how matters stand at present. More interest by the students in general—a slight sacrifice of their inclinations by some in particular—will result in the best team in our history. Let us hope that they will see the necessities of the case and rise to the occasion.

Mass Meeting of Students.

An enthusiastic mass meeting of students was held in the interest of athletics in the University chapel on Saturday afternoon. In spite of the inclemency of the weather quite a large number gathered to attest their interest in this important branch of college life and the liberal financial aid offered was very gratifying.

Colonel W. A. Anderson of the board of trustees, and Professor D. C. Humphreys of the athletic committee, made very interesting addresses in which they emphasized the importance of physical culture, as well as the increased advantages for the same at Washington and Lee.

The primary object of the meeting was to introduce to the students Mr. Wertenbaker, the new physical director, but owing to an injury he had received on the athletic field he was unable to be present. Therefore Mr. McNulty, president of the association, took the opportunity to make known the needs of the association and enlist the aid of the student body. He showed that it is the duty of every student to feel a personal interest in the teams which represent us on the gridiron and the diamond, as they represent not only the University as a whole, but each individual connected with it. Every one who can aid physically should come out at once and do his best to make the season a success and those who cannot, can aid in other ways. The students present responded liberally to his call for funds and about 69 season tickets were sold. The following gentlemen each contributed the sum of five dollars over and above their contributions for season tickets: H. S. Osburn, Pettet Robinson, Wm. A. Anderson, Professor Geo. H. Denny, J. S. Wy-

Graham-Lee.

The opening night of this literary society was enlivened by stirring addresses from Professor Denny and Dean Tucker, both of whom dwelt upon the importance which young men should attach to that training which is attainable only in active literary society work. Professor Denny assured his auditors that much as he cared for athletics, fraternities and the other environments which go to make up college life he would sacrifice them all should they in any way interfere with work in the literary society, and conclusively showed that a man who is not able to express himself easily upon his feet must of necessity occupy a position of secondary importance in the community of his residence. Dean Tucker, in his usual happy view, gave the young men some practical advice and encouragement as to public speaking, especially impressing them with the fact that in order to speak well on a subject, they must thoroughly know it, or as he tersely expressed it, "must be full of it."

Voluntary remarks being called for, Mr. W. W. Glass spoke briefly, after which Senor Montgomery of the Blue Hotel, favored the society with an address, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Senior Law Class Organizes.

A meeting of the law class of 1901 was held in the Tucker Memorial hall on Thursday evening for the purpose of organization. Mr. W. R. Allen having been called to the chair and stated the object of the meeting, the class proceeded to elect its officers for the coming year.

Messrs. J. M. Corbett, Fla., and C. R. Robinson, Ky., were placed in nomination for the presidency and a close fight resulted, Mr. Corbett winning by a majority of three.

After unanimously electing Mr. G. S. Hairston, Va., vice-president, and Mr. F. W. Goshorn, W. Va., secretary and treasurer, the meeting was adjourned.

The short space of time bounded by June and September has passed too quickly away; the pleasures and gaieties of vacation, are no more. The shirt waist man will soon have to jettison himself in the traditional coat and vest; perhaps even the summer girl is becoming but a lingering memory; once more, to use an expression of Billy Baxter's, we are up against "the real thing." Ten months of books and professors interspersed with football, baseball, and other athletics and diversions of college life are before us. With us it remains to make the most of the outlook, and to give such support to athletics and other college enterprises as will make the session '00-'01 a memorable one in the history of the University.

This session, which marks the passing away and the beginning of the new century, opens under flattering conditions. The matriculation books show an increased enrollment and the number of new men is far above the average sized freshman class. There has been a large influx of new football material, the prospects for baseball were never brighter, and under the supervision of the new physical director we may expect to see all forms of athletics put upon a sound and scientific basis.

Unusual interest has been manifested in the literary societies by the attendance at the opening meetings and by the enrollment of new members. Moreover, many signs of improvement and progress are noticeable in the University proper, and the completion of the Tucker Memorial Hall together with the Bradford bequest, mark a new era in the history of the law department.

After making the customary bow the RING-TUM PHI welcomes back the old students and extends a hearty greeting to the new men. With this session, it begins the fourth year of its existence, and during the coming year it will be exactly what the students make it. In it will be narrated the events of the collegiate year, and it will always be found giving hearty support to all forms of student enterprise and to everything that tends towards the upbuilding of the University. It is also intended to make it of special interest to the alumni. Its columns are open to all, and although it is not possessed of an editorial sanctum to which communications can be sent, a box has been placed in Newcomb Hall for the convenience of those who wish to contribute to its columns, and this box, like Oliver Twist, is always wanting more. It is hoped the student body will not fail to do something toward supplying its ravenous appetite. Anything of interest to the student body will be appreciated. Let our poets begin at once and sing us some football songs for the coming season.

The University is to be congratulated upon the selection of Mr. Wertenbaker as physical director, and on behalf of the student body the RING-TUM PHI welcomes him to his new field of labor. His coming, fringing with him, as he does, ideas and knowledge acquired from other institutions, supplies a long-felt need, and under his direction we may expect athletics to be placed on a higher and more modern basis. He can do nothing, however, without the assistance of the students and each man should pledge him his support in carrying out the work.

The student body should at once turn their attention toward the election of an editor and business manager for the Calyx. These offices should really be filled during the spring preceeding the session in which the annual is to be issued. The editor would thus be enabled to lay his plans carefully and secure a much better amount of material, while the business manager would be able to secure a larger number of ads., and be better prepared to uphold the financial side of the arrangement. Let the matter be attended to at once, so that the management of the Calyx for '00-'01 will not be handicapped by the lack of time, which has been a serious source of trouble to previous boards.

The many troubles which have heretofore attended us in placing a good football team on the gridiron have this year been minimized. This session the services of an experienced coach have been obtained, the students have not been lax in their financial support, and the manager has arranged for a good schedule of games. Still the old trouble which has been a thorn in the flesh for so many years, of getting men to try for the team or to play on the second team, remains with us. Although we have money, a good coach, captain, and manager, we cannot play football without men. There are a number of heavy men in college who could remedy our weakness in the line if they would stop making excuses and come out and act their part. In very few cases have they any valid excuse for not coming and it rests with them whether or not we shall have a good football team.

How does your college spirit affect you? Does it constrain you to go on the football field, or to open your purse strings for the sake of athletics? Does it move you to subscribe for the student publications? Make sure that you have a case of the real article and examine yourself carefully lest you be lacking in these, or other symptoms.

The football management informs us that the schedule for the season will be ready for publication next week. In all about ten games will be played, most of them on the home grounds. The Thanksgiving game will be played with the University of North Carolina in Raleigh, N. C.

"Neighbor" Chew, B. L. '00, went home in June and then continued his journey to the legislature of Arkansas. The constitution of Arkansas will still remain unchanged.

Washington Society.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather there was a good number of old men and freshmen in Wash. hall Saturday night.

Though no orator from the faculty was introduced, stirring speeches were heard from members of the society, as the regular program was carried out. President McNulty made an address of welcome which was replied to on behalf of the society by Ott. Graybill then favored the audience with an amusing declamation and Hamilton delivered an oration.

Several new men "signed up," making the outlook for the year year encouraging.

The first issue of the Collegian will be out about October 15th.

Mr. Hugh McIlhany and bride were Lexington visitors this week. Mr. McIlhany is now college secretary for the Student Volunteer Movement in the South.

J. McLaren McBryde was seriously injured in New York on Thursday. His father was telegraphed for, and from recent reports the condition of his son is improving.

Goats.

The fall crop of goats promises to be unusually large. During the past week the fraternities have not been inactive and a number of freshmen have been treated to a select course of head-slats, barrel staves, tree climbing and oysters, all at their own expense. The fall has not yet been told and large additions to the various flocks are expected tonight. The following men have passed through the intricate mazes of goatdom, and are now wearing the badges of their flocks:

Sigma Alpha Epsilon—Pettet Robinson, Ky.; Reese Barnett, Ga.; C. Thomas, Ga.; H. S. Osburn, Va.

Sigma Chi—J. E. Price, W. Va.; M. P. Burks, Jr., Va.; W. A. Baker, Jr., Va.

Kappa Alpha—E. K. Foster, Fla.

Phi Kappa Sigma—McRae, Ark.; D. Tucker, Ark.

Monograms.

For the information of the new men it may be well to state that a rule was passed several years ago by the students assembled in mass meeting prohibiting any man from wearing the Washington and Lee monogram, i. e. the letters W. L. U., unless he had played on some athletic team, or had been a member of one of the boat crews.

The following are the men who under this rule of the Athletic Association are entitled to wear the Washington and Lee monogram or letters W. L. U.:

- Allen, R. H., Jenkins,
- Allen, W., Keeble,
- Andrews, Hall,
- Bledsoe, T., McNulty,

Wednesday Morning Chapel.

The first Wednesday morning chapel service for the 1900-1901 session was of unusual interest. After a few words of explanation as to this service, and mention of the fact that every student is in honor bound to its regular attendance, President Wilson introduced Dr. Brown Ayres, an alumnus of Washington and Lee, now professor of physics in Tulane University. Dr. Ayres spoke of the importance of certain classes of study, and pointed out the weakness of most college training in that it is a neglect of the scientific courses of study. Especial pleasure was expressed in noticing the fact that the faculty at Washington and Lee give a point on the academic degree to those who follow out the regular course of gymnasium training. He expressed belief that the 20th century will extend physical training, and therefore we must keep in advance in that line.

Science was then spoken of as having a new and special advantage in realizing the works of the Creator. Nor should aesthetics be neglected. The hope was expressed that it be recognized by the schools. Music and art should be cultivated. No one can claim to be educated who cannot tell one tune from another. Especial emphasis was laid on the fact that an ear for music is not necessary to a knowledge of that science. In summing up the speaker warned us to avoid a one-sided culture, and to strive for that well rounded education which makes men.

Y. M. C. A. Reception.

The reception given by the Y. M. C. A. was largely attended.

The meeting was opened with a few timely remarks by President Graybill. He earnestly asked for the co-operation of the new men in the work of the organization. Rev. T. A. Hall, pastor of the Baptist church, was then introduced. Mr. Hall spoke in behalf of the pastors of the town. He spoke finally of each minister, church and congregation and concluded with a hearty welcome to the new students.

Professor Currell then addressed a few remarks as he had been requested, "To the Freshmen from the Faculty." His remarks under this head were very happy and excited universal merriment. He then turned his attention to the freshmen among the students and in his own delightful style welcomed them into our midst.

Delightful refreshments were then served, of which the freshmen partook with moderation and gratitude, whereas the less scrupulous old men wandered with ill-concealed purpose from table to table, taking all that was offered him and going after that which he did not see.
