

'Epic' May Cut Record Of Lester Lanin Band At Fancy Dress Ball

Lester Lanin, whose album, "Lester Lanin at the Tiffany Ball," has been nationally popular, may record a sequel "Lester Lanin at the Fancy Dress Ball," here on Jan. 29.

Lanin, who contacted dance board president Merv Silverman last week and indicated his desire to make the recording, is playing for the costume ball on Friday night of the dance.

Silverman expressed his approval for the project, and the final decision will be made after notification by Lanin's recording company, Epic Records, a subsidiary of Columbia.

The company is now considering the financial investment which must be made in connection with the recording.

If Epic approves, the company will record the entire four-hour session played at the Fancy Dress Ball. They will also take the cover picture at the dance and include a brief sketch of the school on the back of the album.

Included in the album, if it is approved, will be a recording of the "Washington and Lee Swing."

Silverman will receive word from Epic Records on Monday night as to whether or not the album will be recorded.

Silverman first discussed the project with Lanin at Virginia Beach last summer, but the idea did not begin to crystallize until Lanin expressed his intention to make the record last week.

Lanin is making a return visit to Washington and Lee for Fancy Dress after playing for last year's Ball also. Lionel Hampton will play for the Saturday afternoon concert and Saturday night dance.

Jon McLin

Jon B. McLin Is Appointed Rhodes Scholar

Jon B. McLin, a senior from Earle, Arkansas, was awarded a coveted Rhodes Scholarship on December 19 by the Gulf District Committee of the Rhodes Trust.

McLin will enter Oxford University in October and continue in residence there until 1962. He plans to continue his studies in physics during his residency.

The last Rhodes Scholar from Washington and Lee was Robert O. Paxton in 1955, who was secretary of the student body and a member of the same social fraternity as McLin, Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

McLin was one of two nominated by the State Selection Committee of Arkansas, and competed with ten other nominees from the states of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma.

Rhodes Scholars are selected on the basis of literary and scholastic ability and attainments; qualities of character such as truthfulness, courage, and fellowship; exhibition of moral force of character and of instincts to lead and to take an interest in his fellows; and physical vigor.

Among the qualifications that were submitted for McLin were: President of the senior class, fraternity president, Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, Executive Committee, General Motors Scholarship, Editor of Ring-tum Phi, and varsity football in high school.

Hoffman To Speak Here On International Affairs

By STEVE GUILD

The Honorable Paul Hoffman, Managing Director of the United Nations Special Fund and formerly chairman of the Studebaker Corporation, will open the Sixth Annual International Relations Week at Washington and Lee. The dates for this year's series of talks on world conditions are the 9th, 10th, and 11th of February.

Mr. Hoffman's address will be on Tuesday, the opening day, and will concern one of the serious problems of the world today. The title of the speech, however, has not been released yet. The speakers for Wednesday and Thursday are both noted authorities on the subject of world population and international aspects of military conditions.

The week has always been the second week in February and the quality of the programs in the series is rapidly establishing itself as one of the campus traditions. In five previous years the event has brought to Lexington a number of eminent leaders in the field of international relations.

The purpose of the week is to stimulate the students' interest in international affairs and particularly to sharpen their awareness of the importance of international issues to the well-being of the American nation.

Last year's program consisted of talks given by Mr. Walter Willis, Consultant to the Fund for the Republic; Mr. Michael M. Mora, General Manager The Norfolk Port Authority; and Mr. Philip C. Jessup, Professor of International Law and Diplomacy, Columbia University.

International Relations Week reached a high level of student interest, combined with excellence of discussion, in 1958 when Arnold J. Toynbee, Visiting Professor of History at Washington and Lee, Arthur Larson, and Dr. Edward Katzenbach conducted a joint discussion on the outstanding features of American diplomacy in 1958. Mr. Larson's lecture was used as a sounding board to try out ideas appearing in his book, What We Are For.

International Relations Week is jointly sponsored by the School of Commerce and Administration and the International Relations Club. It is financed by funds made available through the Lectures Committee of the University, Dr. Marvin Perry, Chairman.

The program is arranged primarily through the efforts of Professor John M. Gunn and Dr. Harvey Wheeler, who was the principal developer of IR Week at W&L and its director for the first four years.

In conjunction with these members of the faculty and students handling arrangements are members of the International Relations Club, Sandy Larson, president; and Chuck Springer, treasurer.

Houses Elect New Officers For Semester

By ROGER PAINE

Out of fifteen fraternities which were contacted as of last night, seven have elected new officers for the coming semester. The remaining houses will hold their elections during a period of time extending from early next week all the way to the month of April.

Phi Delta Theta elected Bob Wilbur, a senior honor student, as president, junior Roy Bowen as secretary, and John Farmer, another junior, as treasurer.

Phi Kappa Psi elected senior Dan Bridges as president, Jimmy Vann, as their veep, John Poyner, a sophomore as corresponding secretary, and Larry Kingsbury as recording secretary.

Owen Wise is the new president of Phi Kappa Sigma, with Jon Peterson and Bill Hickam serving as vice presidents, Bob Sykes as secretary, Henry Billee as treasurer, and sophomore Bill Hamner as corresponding secretary.

Phi Kappa Phi elected their officers the week before Thanksgiving. Cliff Mitchell is their new president, Walt Crater their veep, Charles Niemeyer, secretary, John Miles, house manager, and Roger Holdman, chaplain.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon held elections Wednesday night. They have put Billy Schaefer in as president, who is also second-in-command of the ROTC. Bill Buice is their vice president, Huntley Biggs, is treasurer, Ned Olds is the new secretary.

Sigma Chi elected senior Chris Hutchins as president, Gregg Hallaron, as veep, and Darracott Vaughn as secretary.

Kappa Sigma also had elections on Wednesday, and put Rardon Beville into office as president, Rick Frisbie is new veep, and Harvey Allen was elected master of ceremonies.

Hollins Vacation During Springs

Hollins has done it again! Not being content to merely prevent most of the girls from attending Fancy Dress, Hollins has managed to arrange the school's spring vacation so that it conflicts with Spring Dances.

W&L's Spring Dance Weekend, which also includes the added attraction of the SWMSFC musical, comes on the 8th and 9th of April, but the young ladies from Hollins don't get back from their spring vacation until April 11.

the DATE BOOK

Notice to State Chairmen—official Mock Convention stationery and lists of state Democratic officials are available and may be obtained from Bill Ling.

The last Ring-tum Phi before exams will appear Thursday, Jan. 14.

Anyone still desiring Fancy Dress costumes may order them by contacting Jimmy Vann at the Phi Kappa Psi house.

All entries for the Beauty Section of the 1960 Calyx must be turned in to Ed Ladd at the Beta Theta Pi house on or before January 14. All pictures must be 8x10 black and white glossy prints, and they will be returned. Pictures should be accompanied by the girl's name and school, and the name of the person making the entry.

On Thursday, Jan. 14, 1960, Mr. O. J. Skelton, Personnel Manager of the Shell Oil Company will be on this campus to interview seniors interested in the Marketing Division of Shell Oil.

IFC Sentiment Grows Favoring Later Rush

Sentiment favoring an extended rush program for the next year was expressed at last Monday night's meeting of the Interfraternity Council.

An informal vote, taken without approval of the houses themselves, indicated that opinion was virtually split over the issue. The poll of the voting members revealed that only eight representatives remained in favor of the current immediate rush program.

The vote was of a highly informal nature, however, and was called only as a sample of opinion.

In addition to the previous semester rush plan as presented by the IFC Rush Committee, Mac Patrick, Delt president, offered a tentative, half-semester, rushing program which was received favorably by several houses.

The plan called for the shortening of the rush period by one-half semester, so that the final rush period will fall just after mid-semester exams.

Rich Aberson, chairman of the IFC Rush Committee, expressed his hope that other houses will undertake to present alternate plans so that the final draft of the committee may embody the best features of each.

No action will be taken by the IFC on the issue, however, until second semester and only after consultation and vote by each house on the proposed plan is reached.

Aberson's original plan, presented before Christmas for discussion, called for the rush period to be extended over the first semester, with intensive rush periods at the beginning and end of the semester, and rush dates also on each Saturday night and during dance weekends.

Board Accepts Resignation of Student Member Jerry Susskind

Jerry Susskind, Editor of the Southern Collegian, has resigned from his post, effective next semester. Susskind had thought that he would be here for the second semester, but due to the fact that he will be going into the Army in April, he will have to vacate his post.

Susskind, who will graduate from Law School in February, has accepted a job with the law firm of McKone, Badgley, Domke, and Kline in Jackson, Michigan, for the time between his graduation and his induction.

He will take the Michigan Bar Exam just before he enters the Army.

There has been no word from the Publications Board as to when a new editor will be chosen, but a decision will probably be made at the Board's regular meeting on Monday.

Susskind said, "I wish to thank my entire staff for their cooperation in putting out the first three (sic) issues, especially Hugo Hoogenboom, Chris Harrell, Steve Northup, and Walt Cremin."

He is a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity and has served as president of that group. He served in various capacities on the Southern Collegian before becoming editor, and is treasurer of the SBA.

Charles B. Rich Killed in Wreck

Charles Basset Rich, a sophomore from Danville, Virginia, was killed instantly when a car driven by another boy collided with his own on Christmas eve.

Rich had attended a midnight church service and was driving home alone when he spotted another car approaching from the opposite direction. The automobile was weaving across the highway, and Rich apparently pulled his car off the road and stopped to let the other car by.

The other automobile ran directly into the side of Rich's car killing both drivers. The car was driven by a sixteen year old youth who had been drinking.

Rich was a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. He was pledge-master of the fraternity, and was also a member of the swimming team.

His death marked the first student fatality at W&L this year. Last year, three W&L students lost their lives in automobile accidents.

Editorially Speaking:

Extended Rushing Headaches Outweigh Program's Benefits

At the Monday night meeting of the Interfraternity Council, an informal vote indicated that sentiment, at least among the members of the IFC, was growing in favor of some sort of delayed rush plan.

The reasons brought forth, though generally vague, were of the belief that a delayed program gave both fraternity and freshman a "better chance to look each other over." The wisdom of this logic is perhaps valid. It is true that under our present program there is an element of "blind stabbing" on the part of both fraternity and freshman brought on by the haste with which the decision must be made.

It is our contention, however, that any improvement in this situation would be vastly offset by other factors which would enter the picture by virtue of an extended rush program. It has been proven at schools where such programs exist that the amount of friction between fraternities as a result of extended rushing is a very real problem. At one large southern university this year, four fraternities have already encountered serious trouble resulting from unethical rushing tactics during the prolonged period.

Such a program, in our estimation, only tempts "dirty rushing" and makes the penalties all the more serious and inevitable.

Another prime factor which must be considered in light of extended rush would be the matter of social life for freshmen. The rush program as is now being discussed allows for Saturday night rush dates for freshmen so that they may get dates at women's colleges, and for brief periods of partying at the fraternities on dance weekends. But other than that allowance, the freshmen are isolated as far as social activities are concerned. By accepting the proposed plan, next year's Washington and Lee freshmen would enjoy about as much social life as a VMI cadet.

Washington and Lee University is not equipped to provide recreation and social facilities for its freshmen outside of fraternities. Unlike many schools, W&L has no large student union, or recreation center which would compensate for lack of fraternities. By depriving freshmen of fraternity privileges, IFC would be creating a situation in which there would be literally no place for freshmen to entertain guests at any time besides those brief periods provided on Saturday night and during dance weekend evenings.

Washington and Lee has long functioned under an immediate rush program, and its entire social set-up is keyed to such a plan. To alter the program now would have the effect of disrupting the entire social life of the University and creating a whole new set of problems, which in our opinion, would produce far greater consequences than those which the immediate plan creates. The record of depledging in the past gives at least a surface indication that there is no great displeasure in the present plan. At least none so great as would warrant a complete upheaval of the rushing program.

Thanks, Cousins

You who are students of the basketball fortunes of our University may have noticed the increasingly happy relations we maintain with Randolph-Macon College. Through thick and through thin over the last two years, the Yellow Jackets have always been our friends.

It was over R-MC in 1958-59 that we registered our only wins in both basketball and football. This year we pulled off a "miracle" tie, 33-33, and now only last Wednesday night, the practice got a happy revival with a 70-61 basketball triumph. Subsidization or no, we've got to keep this school on our schedule for some time to come.

W&L Rhodes Scholar

It is a rare and singularly outstanding tribute to an individual to be selected to receive a Rhodes Scholarship, perhaps the greatest academic achievement this country bestows. And to the institution which produces such a scholar, the tribute is similarly significant.

On the occasion of Jon B. McLin's selection for this highest of honors we extend sincere congratulations to him. And as a member of the Washington and Lee student body, we recognize his honor as a most favorable reflection on Washington and Lee University as a whole.

A Tragic Loss

The Christmas Eve tragedy which took the life of a Washington and Lee student comes as a solemn blow to members of this community.

Whenever such a young and promising life is snuffed out by a swift and seemingly needless turn of events, the loss is made all the more distressing. In Charles Rich, Washington and Lee has lost a respected friend and an esteemed individual. We join his family and friends in mourning his most untimely death.

Significant Decade of 50's Ends

With the arrival of 1960, Washington and Lee University closed out one of the most significant decades of its 211-year history.

For Washington and Lee, the 1950's were years of change, growth, and progress.

Change largely involved individuals, as men of long service in important positions stepped down and were replaced by new leaders.

Growth was recorded in the university's physical plant with the addition of new buildings. And Washington and Lee's resources grew from generous support of alumni, parents, foundations, industry, and friends.

Progress was noted in the university's increased stature as an educational institution, in its efforts to lift the level of faculty salaries and scholarship assistance to students, and in its comprehensive planning for the future.

A new president, Dr. Fred Carrington Cole, took over in September, 1959, from Dr. Francis P. Gaines, who retired after directing the university for 29 years.

In 1955, Washington and Lee named Dr. Leon F. Sensabaugh as Dean of the University, succeeding Dr. James G. Leyburn, who had held the job since 1947. And in 1958, one of Washington and Lee's most beloved figures, alumni secretary Harry K. "Cy" Young, retired after 29 years of service. He was succeeded by William C. Washburn, a 1940 graduate of the university.

Change came to the campus through the addition of new buildings. In 1955, Jessie Ball duPont Hall, a new classroom building with a special Fine Arts wing, was placed in service. And in 1959, Washington and Lee completed a $1,500,000 project which included Letitia Pate Evans Dining Hall, John W. Davis Dormitory for law students, Newton D. Baker Dormitory for upperclassmen, and a new supply store and snack bar.

Washington and Lee's endowment increased greatly during the 1958-59 period. When the decade opened, the university's total assets were $8,590,500; when the fiscal year ended in June, 1959, assets totalled $14,822,000.

Throughout the 1950's, Washington and Lee maintained its enrollment at the 1,000 to 1,100 level, although applications for admission, showed steady increases each year. No significant increase in enrollment is anticipated by officials.

During the 10-year period, Washington and Lee drew growing support from the alumni, parents, industry, and friends. The Alumni Fund went from $28,610 in 1950 to a record high of $113,681 in 1958. A newly-established Parents' Fund realized $111,893 in its first three years of operation.

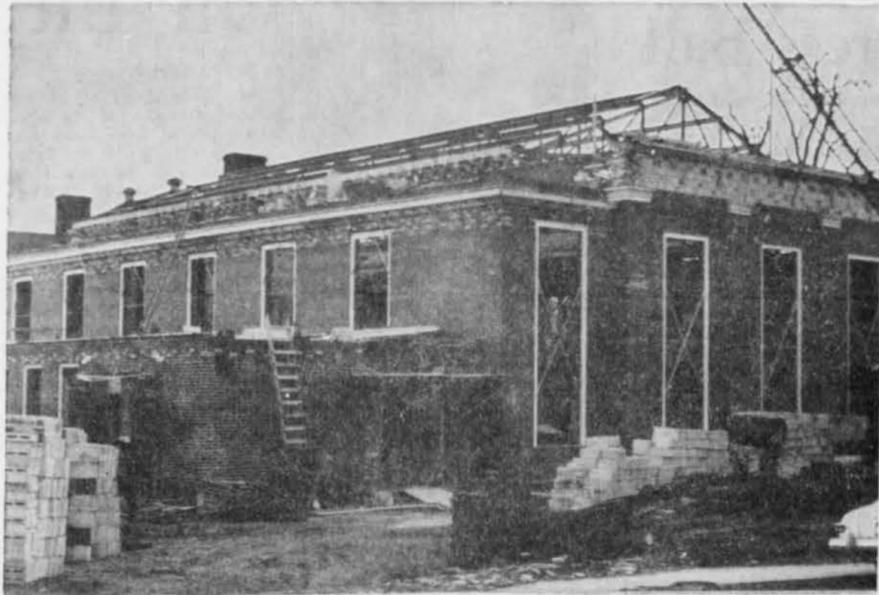

The university was among many American colleges whose faculty salary level was helped by the Ford Foundation's large grants in 1955. Various other foundations, many established by American business and industry, aided Washington and Lee during the 1950's, and the University has received continuing and increasing support from the gifts of Virginia business and industry to the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges, organized in 1953. Large benefactions for Washington and Lee have come from individuals.

One of the largest single gifts, from an anonymous donor, founded the Robert E. Lee Scholarships for exceptionally qualified young men.

Progress as an educational institution was reflected in a nationwide survey among educators conducted by the Chicago Tribune in 1957 which listed Washington and Lee among the ten best men's colleges in America.

Through the 1950's Washington and Lee recorded almost yearly in-

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

W&L is on the Decline

By STEVE DANZANSKY

Looking back over the past year at W&L, I am greeted with nothing more than a blanket of grey fog. There have been few outstanding events and even fewer of those memorial moments which our parents refer to so often when, with a gleam in their eyes, they begin a story, "I remember the time..."

Neither is this just a matter of more journalistic conjecture. Numerous talks with recent graduates, upperclassmen, professors and even townspeople have revealed one outstanding fact: "W&L ain't what it used to be." In fact, it is a mere shadow, a pretense of its former greatness. A good look around will reveal some rather startling facts:

1.) The athletic situation. There are fewer students going out for varsity sports; intramural activity is slowing down progressively.

2.) Dance Sets. The minority of students who, in past years, didn't attend the dances has now been transferred into an awful majority. Many people don't even buy dance plans.

3.) Publications. Whereas the editors of publications used to have to reject hundreds of contributions, for lack of room, now they are having a tough time scraping together even a weekly newspaper. Advertisements, of necessity, are taking up about one-third of the space in the Ring-tum Phi.

4.) Activities. The cry from the presidents and directors of organizations is the same: People just aren't coming out for anything any more.

5.) Scholastics. The freshman class at mid-semester had lower grades than any of the freshman classes in the past four or five years. Many theories have been propounded as to the reason for this student apathy. The majority of them fall into the following categories:

1.) The old, old story that de-subsidization of athletics has caused a general decline in interest. While I will concede that the morale of the student body was definitely damaged by this blow, I don't think it should have degenerated into the depths that it has.

We have had a respectable football team this year, yet games were still not nearly as well attended as they could have been. There are still too many men sitting around the fraternity houses, drinking beer, who should be out making W&L an athletic power among small colleges.

A professor of music at West Virginia University was arrested on a charge of intoxication on December 16 after the car which he was driving struck the rear of another car, then ran across the street and sheared off a utility pole, barely missing a woman pedestrian in the process. The professor, who suffered a slight concussion, was released from custody on bond pending his court hearing this month.

At Duke, Beta Theta Pi fraternity appealed to the executive committee of the IFC following an IFC decision to limit the Beta Pledge class to 14 members. The restriction resulted because of an alleged infraction of the rushing rules by the Betas.

George Washington University fired one of its professors after he pled the fifth amendment during a congressional hearing concerning whether he had been a member of a Communist organization at Harvard. The professor plans to appeal his case.

VMI published a preview of its annual "spring hike," a military training exercise in which the entire corps participates. The weekend expedition, which is held on several farms near Goshen, will include survival training, escape and evasion problems, troop delivery by helicopters, and possibly an overnight trek. Also planned is a sky diving exhibition on the VMI parade ground on the afternoon preceding departure on the hike.

2.) The faculty and administrative policy in the past few years has been accused by many of stymieing student interest in outside activities. Supporters of this theory cite the strengthening of the cut system, the abolition of the minstrel show, the regulation of social fraternities, restriction of party activities, etc.

I think, however, that we are failing to look below the surface in many of these instances. It is certainly much easier to just out and out condemn the administration than to examine its motives for making such restrictions and perhaps look to ourselves for the causes. I don't mean to sound puritanical in my analysis of this situation.

In many instances the faculty has gone too far, been too pedantic in their decisions. Yet the basic fact remains that their actions must have been precipitated by some immature action on our part. I can't believe that the faculty enjoys regulating our activities and assuming the role of father to a body of 1,000 "men." In almost every case the discipline imposed by the administration has been necessitated by our abuse of privileges.

And why was it abused? Simply because we had nothing else to do. Instead of participating in a sport or becoming an active party of the University, the student in the last few years has been satisfied to get drunk and parade around with his pants off all evening. People with nothing to do usually get into trouble.

3.) The third theory, rather popular this year, is the fact that the admissions office in an effort to raise the scholastic rating of the University has filled the campus with droves of "eggheads" who are interested in

Dear Sir:

I read with interest in the last issue of the Ring-tum Phi the article concerning Christmas parties given for Lexington's underprivileged kids by various fraternities.

However, I was disappointed that the annual party sponsored by Pi Kappa Phi went unmentioned because, as far as I know, it is the only one given for colored children.

I hope in years to come other houses will follow our example as many fine kids get short-changed come Christmas-time.

Sincerely

Generals Defeat R-M C; Face Catholic Here Sat.

W&L Nabs Second Win, 70-61 Plays Catholic Here in Rematch

Washington and Lee's basketball team, using a very effective fast break and some hot shooting in the first half, defeated Randolph-Macon College, 70-61, Wednesday night.

Senior guard Frank Surface paced the Generals' scoring attack with 18 points. W&L had five players in double figures with Lassman and Gaut scoring 13 apiece, Fauber 12 and Daughtrey 11.

The Generals jumped into an early lead, and for the first fourteen minutes of the game played some of the finest ball yet seen under the non-subsidized policy. At their highest point the Generals led the Yellow Jackets by a 35-15 score.

Toward the end of the half Randolph-Macon's Carl Koenig, the game's high scorer with 19 points, began to find the range. However, the Generals left the floor at the end of the first half with a comfortable 43-29 lead. W&L hit for a 55 per cent scoring average in the first half as compared with Macon's 29 per cent.

The Yellow Jackets opened the second half with a tight, ball-hawking defense and some sharp-shooting of their own. Lead by Buddy Allen's long set shots and Koenig's corner shots. Macon began to close the gap. At one point in the second half Macon was able to hold the Generals without a field goal for eight minutes.

With two minutes forty seconds left to play in the game, Macon had managed to cut the Generals' lead to three points, 62-59. However, four of the Yellow Jackets' starters had fouled out of the game, and the Macon bench reserves were not enough to hold the Generals.

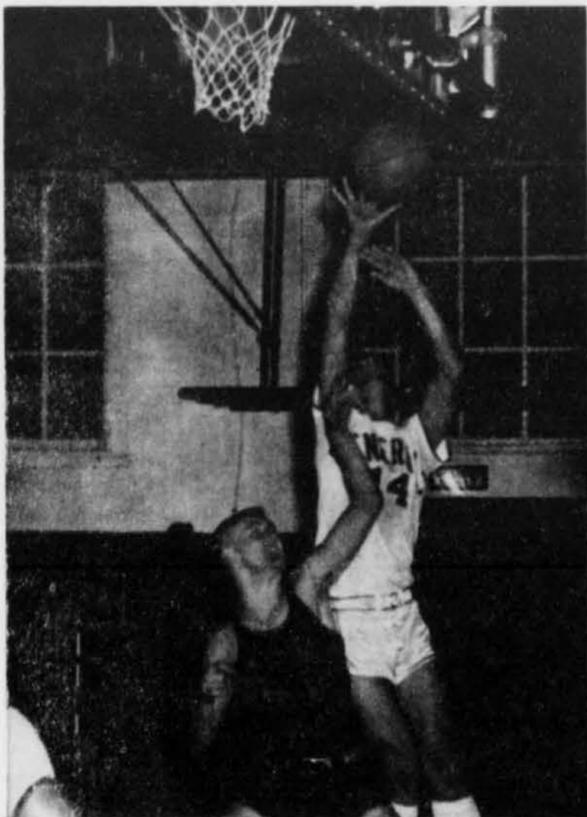

At this point Mal Lassman took charge. With only two minutes remaining in the game, Lassman stole the ball and made good with a lay-up. Seconds later he again scored, making two foul shots.

The game ended with Surface sinking two free throws, and the Generals registering their second victory of the season against six defeats.

Tomorrow night, following the wrestling match with NYU, the Washington and Lee basketball team will play Catholic University of Washington, D.C.

This is the second meeting between the two teams this season as the Generals lost to Catholic 72-62 in Washington on December 18. In that game it was Freshman John Horin who led the Cardinals to victory by scoring 21 points which was high for the game.

W&L Matmen Meet NYU Try To Better 2-1 Record

Perceding tomorrow night's basketball game, the Washington and Lee matmen, boasting a 2-1 record to date, take on New York University at 7 o'clock in Doremus Gymnasium. This will be the first time in history that the two schools have met in a wrestling match.

Danny Dyer, who wrestles at 137 pounds and who is undefeated so far this season, will miss the NYU match because of a back injury. Coach Miller has announced that he will have either Tom Andrew or Dick Roberts at the 123 pound slot.

Dave Montgomery and Steve Cook will each move up one notch and wrestle at 130 and 137 respectively. With these exceptions the lineup will remain the same as in previous matches with Sandy Mersereau at 147, Tony Brennan at 157, Kent Frazier at 167, Drew Danko at 177, and Graham Fulton, heavyweight.

The Blue and White will have a layoff for exams and will resume action when they take on Duke on February 9 in an away contest.

Coach Miller is now trying to arrange two matches with Hampden-Sydney in February in addition to the scheduled contests with Duke, Wake Forest, West Virginia, and U.Va.

Tankmen Host Wake Forest

The Washington and Lee swimming team will meet Wake Forest here in Doremus Gymnasium on Monday afternoon at 2:30. With an undefeated record, the team will meet one of their toughest opponents of the season.

Coach Twombly said that Wake Forest had a great number of swimmers to draw from, due to its size, and that this would give them an advantage; but that W&L's depth may prove the deciding factor. He feels that there will be a good chance of winning Monday's meet.

The team has already had victories over Roanoke College, University of Virginia, and Catholic University. The CU meet was held in Washington, D.C., just before the Christmas vacation. Washington and Lee defeated CU, 98 to 73.

Of the twenty members on the team, which Twombly said was an unusually high number, Maynard, Benn, Weimer, Dunlap, Springer, and Rohnke were outstanding. The number of freshman swimmers is also high with good prospects for the future. Among those are Hart, Jahnke, Gumme, Monsarrat, and Stevenson.

Coach Twombly also mentioned that both West Virginia, which has strengthened its team greatly in the past year, and American University will be tough opponents.

Danzansky Demonstrates Theories of W&L Decline

nothing but books. The freshman grades at mid-semester destroy this theory. Not only are the freshmen not studying—they aren't doing anything.

I think a change in our thinking is due and here is my new year's proposal for W&L.

A.) Let's all come out of hibernation and contribute something to our University.

B.) Less complaining and more doing.

C.) Rather than sit around and find fault in others—let's do something ourselves.

D.) Instead of condemning those who participate, let's give them a hand, support them, join them.

E.) Less "I'm a Phi Delt, Sigma Chi, SAE, Beta," and more "I'm a W&L man."

F.) Let's all learn the words to the W&L Swing. (It's a damn good start.)

In 1953, Washington and Lee undertook a comprehensive development program, aimed at defining the university's short and long-range needs, establishing priorities, and recommending ways of achieving its goals.

There were other significant events of the 1950's. Among them were:

The establishment in 1951 of a United States Army Reserve Officers Training corps program at Washington and Lee.

A change in the university's athletic program from one of subsidization to non-subsidization in 1954, was just three years after Washington and Lee's football team played in the Gator Bowl on January 1, 1951. In abandoning so-called "big time" athletics, Washington and Lee sought to establish a more harmonious relationship between intercollegiate sports and its academic aspirations.

Generals To Play Catholic In Basketball on Saturday

The Generals will use a 1-2-2 defense against the Cardinals. This is the same type zone defense which W&L used Wednesday night to defeat Randolph-Macon.

Coach McHenry said that he is changing from man-to-man defense which he used earlier in the season against Catholic to a zone defense because it will tend to cut down on fouling which has previously hurt the Generals. Also, Lynchburg College beat Catholic recently by using a zone defense.

Catholic will use a man-to-man defense as they have all season. Besides Horin, W&L will have to stop Gene Jasper who has been the Cardinals' big scorer all season. McHenry will have Roger Fauber, whom he calls his best defensive player, give particular attention to guarding Jasper.

W&L Fouth in Little Nine added W&L to the conference standings and are now calling it the Little Nine.

	Won	Lost	%
Hampden-Sydney	4	1	.800
Bridgewater	4	1	.800
Norfolk W&M	3	1	.750
W&L	2	2	.500
Randolph-Macon	2	3	.400
Lynchburg	1	2	.333

the cello, Bill Lowry on clarinet, and Barry Epperson on alto sax.

Other members of the band are John Turner playing French horn, Gene Johnson and Sandy Smith playing trumpets, and Gene O'Dell on trombone. The pianist will be freshman Melvin Marvin.

Kansas University's newspaper staff voted on the biggest campus news stories of the past years. Number one on the list: an article in last February's "Daily Kansan" which quoted the state governor as saying that KU was a "trouble spot." The governor, a Kansas alumnus, suggested that it was time for a "clean-up" campaign at his alma mater.
