Minking out at Homecoming

Homecoming was a roaring success with the Dregs' Friday night concert behind the library (above) and with Eleanor Ponder, of Hollins taking the Homecoming Queen's crown at halftime. The Generals edged out the Yellowjackets of Randolph-Macon, 20-19, for the first time since 1976 (see page 7). (Phi photos by David Sprunt)

EC doubles budget hearings

By RICK SWAGLER
Phi EC Correspondent

Rather than have one budget hearing reach into the wee hours of the morning, the EC decided Monday to split that hearing into two separate sessions.

One session was held Wednesday night. The second begins tonight at 6:30 p.m.

Junior representative Scott Mason explained his reasoning for voting in favor of the motion, saying "it looks better to do it in two nights."

Vice President Morgan Griffith also emphasized this point, but defended last year's method with the comment that "we didn't make any wrong decisions last year."

Most of the requests were heard Wednesday night, with the remainder to be heard tonight.

President Bennett Ross cited larger budget requests from some clubs as one reason for the move. For example, Ross said, the Student Association for Black Unity is requesting $19,000 this year.

Steve Metrazzo appeared on behalf of the Mock Convention committee to explain that the committee did not want to request money now, but wished the E.C. to bear in mind their sizeable budget. The committee had wanted an increase in the amount of student taxes set aside for it. Last week, the E.C. set aside $5 per student.

"I question the rationale of setting aside $7.50 when we really don't have any idea of what things cost," Ross said.

The Mock Convention committee budget "liberalized" expenses and listed incomes conservatively, Mock Convention officers said.

Newly-elected freshman law representative John Sicilian brought up the subject of the Fancy Dress Weekend date again, particularly the method of choosing the date. He called it "ass-backwards to check other schools' schedules," before checking the schedule at the law school.

Ross reminded him that the College is all-male and that Fancy Dress depends on W&L men getting dates from area women's colleges for the most part.

The EC also announced that it is welcoming students to submit proposals for revising the White Book and/or the Constitution. Copies of both are available in Carole Chapell's office in the Student Center.

Two held for beating, stabbing of local man

By MIKE ALLEN
Phi Staff Writer

Jack Roberson, a life-long resident of Lexington who was beaten and stabbed in his home Sunday night, is in stable condition at Stonewall Jackson Hospital. Two juvenile suspects are in custody awaiting trial.

L.E. Richardson, Executive Vice President of the hospital, said Mr. Roberson was brought to the emergency room with a stab wound and was put in intensive care for treatment. Citing hospital policy, he refused to provide any additional details.

A member of the hospital staff who asked not to be identified said of Mr. Roberson, "He has suffered multiple injuries and at present his condition is satisfactory." The man confirmed that Mr. Roberson had been removed from the intensive care unit Tuesday morning. He said there is no indication as to how long Mr. Roberson will need to remain hospitalized.

Acting Chief of Police for Lexington Lieutenant Bruce M. Beard said that two young white males came to Mr. Roberson's door at about 5:30 p.m. Sunday and asked for a glass of water. As he went to get the water, the two followed him into the house, where the assault took place.

Hospital records show that Mr. Roberson was admitted at 5:55 p.m. Lieutenant Beard said Roberson was treated for stab wounds to the left side of his chest, lacerations to his throat and the palm of his left hand, and lacerations to his left ear.

According to Beard, a fifteen- and a sixteen-year-old youth, both residents of Lexington, are being held as suspects in the case at the Shenandoah Valley Detention Home. Because they are minors, their names have not been released.

One of the suspects cut himself in the alleged attack on Roberson and was taken to Stonewall Jackson Hospital for treatment by a passerby in an automobile. There he was taken into custody. Beard says that led them to the second suspect, who was arrested at his home.

The state police mobile crime lab was immediately called to the scene of the crime. Lexington police officers Charles Carpenter and David Rhodenz are investigating the attack, and Beard says he expects the investigation will continue for about another week. He said the resources of the police department have been fully utilized in the wake of the stabbing because "this is a major event for a community this size."

Beard added that charges have not yet been filed against the youths, but will be very shortly.

A hearing regarding the case was held Tuesday morning at the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court. Because the suspects are juveniles, the hearing was closed.

Officer Carpenter, who represented the police department at the hearing, said that "we proved there is probable cause for detention based on what they were alleged to have done and on their prior criminal records."

Carpenter said a hearing will be held Monday to determine whether the suspects will be tried as adults or stand trial with juvenile status. The trial will take place at the Rockbridge County Courthouse in Lexington.

Mr. Roberson, 66, is well-known in town for his interest in antiques. He lives alone in Middleton House, one of the oldest homes in the city, across the street from the fire department at 111 South Jefferson.

His sister, Elizabeth P. Keewan of Alexandria, was called into town Monday. She called the attackers "two young hoodlums" and "vicious monsters."

"I certainly hope that these people are taken proper care of in regard to being taken off the street.... I hope they're prosecuted and put away," she said.

After visiting Roberson Tuesday she said that he is in "excellent spirits.... He is lucid and clear as a bell." Mrs. Keewan said "his improvement from yesterday is amazing." She continued, "I can't believe he's been hit over the head and beaten and everything else."

She said that his ear is partially cut off, and that apparently the attackers tried to sever it completely. Mrs. Keewan says Roberson had seen one of the assailants before, but did not know the other. One of them had come to the door earlier because he was "willing to do work." Mr. Roberson apparently declined the offer.

Mrs. Keewan said her brother "was a gentle, kind person who never would harm a soul." She said Roberson was a small man, and that the attackers "just took advantage of an elderly person."

"He was not in the best of health," she said. "He had a stroke several years ago and lost the full use of his left side."

She said she's gotten "dozens and dozens" of calls from well-

It could happen to anyone

By B. SCOTT TILLEY
Phi Features Editor

A shock wave ripped across a complex web of friends and family when a car carrying three VMI cadets and two Randolph-Macon women crashed Saturday morning, Sept. 25.

Part of the web was the younger brother of Danny Lawless. He looked up to his Cadet brother with pride. Danny was an Electrical Engineering major on a Navy Scholarship. A second classman, he had become a member of the VMI wrestling team as a rat. He enjoyed shagging. On Saturday morning, Sept. 22, the younger brother learned that his big brother was dead.

Jim Bogosian was affectionately called Bogo by his Brother Rats. Like Lawless, he was on the Dean's Honor List at VMI. A Navy ROTC scholar and a German major, Jim was a Cadet Sergeant and member of the tennis team. He loved horses, spending his free time training them. His sister, was traveling in Europe when the shock came from her parents in Michigan. Her brother was dead.

On Tuesday night, Sept. 28, Stan Ross became the third cadet and fourth person to die from the catastrophic accident. He lived in room 265 at VMI with Jim and Danny; indeed, they were not only roommates but Brother Rats in the true sense of the words. Enrolled in Air Force ROTC, Stan was president of the International Relations Club and a member of the Hop Committee (like W&L's SAB). Stan's parents received the tragic news only months after adopting a two and one-half year old child.

The fourth victim was Margaret N. Abbutt of Randolph-Macon Woman's College. She was from Newport News, Va. Also in the car was Diane Ellain Doggett, whose injuries were not fatal.

Analysis

By now, all W&L students have heard about the accident on Route 11 just north of Lexington. But for many of us the shock wave never really hit. The cadets remain faceless strangers in uniforms. They died, some might casually think, because it was "their time."

But these were students like us — our peers and our brothers. It might have well been us and not them in that car.

Virginia Military Institute's chaplain, Col. Charles Caudill, hopes both VMI and W&L students will realize that. The human web of caring should entwine both campuses.

No Washington & Lee student was present at either of the two memorial services held at VMI, Caudill said.

"W&L and VMI are so close, we need to get to know each other more," said Chaplain Caudill. "Everybody who travels on that highway needed to have come, just because they care. We're not talking about 'others,' we're talking about ourselves. It would have been meaningful to us if some W&L students would have been there."

"We need to develop a feeling of caring. If W&L had been the one holding a memorial service for students, I hope VMI would care. If two students, one from VMI and one from W&L, had been in the car, I don't know if there would have been a joint service. It would be interesting to see what would happen. I don't know," Chaplain Caudill continued.

He compared W&L and VMI to two families living next door to each other. If two brothers in one family died, he said, the other family would be concerned.

"Let's suffer together and rejoice together," he continued, quoting scripture. He explained that in his four years at VMI, there have been "no social events or cultural events to recognize we even exist side by side."

Chaplain Caudill explained that he has seen growth between the Christian communities on the two campuses — even though he would like to see more. He was instrumental in founding the Lampost at W&L, and in sponsoring a joint Easter service which was held in Lee Chapel last spring.

After spending most of Saturday telephoning parents to inform them of the deaths, he still mustered enough strength to speak at W&L's Inter-Varsity meeting that night.

"One reason I was able to speak that Saturday night despite my own pain and mourning, is that I knew I could find someone that cared, and I did. Afterwards, I was able to come back ... knowing that whichever way we walked, someone would be there caring. If we all had that feeling, that VMI's pain is W&L's pain, and W&L's pain is VMI's pain."

"Many of you guys were high school buddies and neighbors. Let's recognize it," he said.

Steve Hupp, a second classman and a classmate of the three victims, said that the concern expressed by W&L has been an inspiration.

"Many guys here didn't feel any W&L guys cared, but I know some guys over there and it has amazed me how they cared. I was sorry to see they weren't at the service, but I think it was more a feeling of friction than not caring ... It's great to walk into our chapel on Sunday morning and see W&L guys. They know they're welcome and that school friction won't get in the way," Steve said.

W&L Dean of Students Lewis John, said that Washington & Lee "has been fortunate that it hasn't had more serious accidents."

There have been several accidents during Dean John's time here, but he indicated that several steps have been taken to educate students about the dangers of speeding and/or drunk driving. They include remarks he makes during freshmen orientation, a dorm counselor alcohol awareness program, and the possible purchase in the near future of a Breathalyzer to help educate students about alcohol intake levels.

Dean John also expressed the desire for W&L and VMI to become closer, despite the nature of the student life, which tends to prevent it.

Chaplain Caudill, reflecting back on the accident, said that the corps of cadets and the families of the victims were inspirations to him.

"One thing is vivid, and that is that (the three cadets) were deeply loved by their families ... they were diverse families, but similar in their love."

"I couldn't be prouder than being the chaplain to this corps right now, the way they handled themselves. There were Cadets who wanted to go to the funerals, and we sent them to New York, New Jersey, and Michigan, as well as the memorial service at Randolph-Macon. I think we missed something by not having a service with Randolph-Macon, VMI, and W&L."

Through it all, Chaplain Caudill has also remained strong, a hard task since he was friends with the three cadets. He remembers them as freshmen when they came to him with problems in the rat line.

"We impersonalize it fast, saying it can't happen to us. We knew they were human beings, but too fast we put it behind us as if it didn't happen. We avoid pain at any cost, and end up blocking out the reasons behind the tragedy," he said.

Letters

SAB tightens up

Editor:

I wish to clarify several points concerning the September 30th article ("Sloppiness cost FD $15,000, director says") in which I and other SAB members were quoted.

First, the reason why we are studying the 75th Fancy Dress Ball is to learn where we can cut losses while maintaining a high quality production. We are not personally attacking former SAB Chairmen.

Second, it is important to remember the hard work and long hours which John Martin, Blake Witherington and Bobby Schmidt gave to the committee. The success of the 75th Fancy Dress reflects their efforts.

Finally, I wish to bring out a point which the article only briefly mentioned. The Executive Committee has concluded a major reorganization of the SAB. This should enable the committee to meet its goal of a high quality Fancy Dress with reasonable losses.

W&L reacts to draft sign-up

By BILL ROBERTS
Phi Staff Writer

There was mixed student reaction at Washington and Lee University to the sentencing Monday in San Diego, Calif., of Benjamin H. Sasway to two-and-one-half years in prison for not registering with the Selective Service System.

Sasway was released on $10,000 bail pending appeal of his case to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals. According to recent news reports, Sasway's legal grounds for appeal include arguments that the Selective Service Act is unconstitutional, that prosecutors illegally singled out him and other outspoken resisters for prosecution, and that because he had no criminal intent, his felony conviction is improper.

Enton Eller, a student at Bridgewater College near Harrisonburg, Va., has been given until mid-November to register or face a prison sentence. Eller told the Associated Press in August that to register under threat "would make a farce out of his efforts to obey the authority of God," "a higher judge," whom he says led him to resist registration.

Meanwhile there are more than 10 other men who have been indicted for allegedly resisting the registration law and government officials estimate that about 500,000 Americans have failed to register.

The maximum penalty is five years in prison and a $10,000 fine for refusing to register.

An informal survey by the Ring-tum Phi soliciting student comments on this general trend of events yielded a variety of opinions.

"I registered more out of convenience than belief. Now I have come to regret that, having seen what happened to Enton Eller," the News Director for the college's WLUR-FM, Steve Warren, said.

"It is really a shame that we can't allow some portion of our society to be active pacifists and that everybody has to conform to some belief," Warren said.

"I really respect Eller, the guy from Bridgewater," Mike Sokolowski said. "It is hollow to be against the draft and Carter's whole gaffe, and then to go register because you are afraid of the repercussions."

"You have to be able to place your ideals above those of the state without questioning the state's authority, and I think that can be done legitimately," Sokolowski said.

Top students in jail?

Keith Goretzka who is both an ROTC scholarship student and a senior religion major came out clearly against the registration law.

"The law, in general, I have negative feelings towards," Goretzka said. "What we are doing as a nation is imprisoning our moral leaders, and that is a very serious problem."

"If it were not for the registration, these guys would be tops in their communities, but we are putting them in jail," Goretzka said.

"What does that say about the law?" he asked.

"I could not stand behind the law as it now is," Goretzka said.

But while some students expressed opposition to the law or the idea of a draft, others had favorable opinions.

"If there were not a tough law like that, then people would have ignored registration altogether," John Delehanty, a senior economics major said.

"I think everybody should register, there is no harm in it," Delehanty said. "It just makes the government aware of who they have available if they decide they want to institute the draft," he said.

Registration doesn't equal draft

"Registration does not mean that there is going to be a draft," said Morris Lewis, a senior business administration major who had been involved in ROTC but dropped out because he said he does not want to go into the army.

"I think that he (Sasway) should have registered," said Robert Kurek, who is a sophomore journalism major and a ROTC scholarship student. "If there were a draft, I could see it, but there is no draft and (registration) is the law."

"I do sympathize with them, but I do not condone their means to an end," Kurek said. "There are other, more legal ways to go about showing disagreement," he said.

"Registration does not necessarily mean they are going to go to war, the government only wants to know who is around just in case," said Lee Hollis, a Sigma Alpha Epsilon pledge.

"It is a law and they should obey it," he said.

"It seems like a stiff jail sentence, but I think they deserve to pay for their national insubordination," said Phi Delta Theta pledge Rob McCulloch.

"I think the jail sentence is pretty fitting because I think it will serve as an example to others," said freshman Leslie Hall.

"If it were me..."

In expressing his opinion, Senior Executive Committee Representative John Vlahoplus acknowledged the difficult position of both the government in having to enforce registration and the resister in having to disobey the law.

"Eller is between a rock and a hard place," Vlahoplus said. "I would probably do the same thing if I were in his position."

Police chief investigated

by JOHN CLEGHORN
Phi News Editor

The Lexington City Council has named a former FBI agent to conduct the investigation into the Office of the Chief of Police, Mayor Charles Phillips announced in last week's council meeting.

Kirby holds that post presently but has requested and received administrative leave while the investigation is underway.

Several vague references at this summer's police trials to Kirby have raised questions about Kirby's knowledge of the thefts. Kirby has maintained that he had no knowledge of the theft ring's operation during his six years as chief.

Statements of other officers made in the initial probe into the theft ring suggest that Chief Kirby ran the department in a loosely organized fashion and did not concern himself sufficiently with the day to day activities of the patrolmen, some of whom were convicted for larcenies they committed while on duty.

The investigation will be concerned with the extent of Chief Kirby's knowledge of these thefts and any evidence brought up in the initial trials that might suggest Kirby's involvement to any degree.

Leonard M. "Bucky" Walters, who worked for the FBI as a special investigator from 1942-73 and later for the House of Representatives also as an investigator, was the city's choice to perform the probe.

Walters has already conducted an investigation of this nature, and was determined to be the most qualified of several men looked at by the city, according to Mayor Phillips.

But the Shenandoah Intelligence Agency, a firm which conducts similar investigations, claims Walters is not qualified for the position. Although Walters has worked as a federal agent, the Shenandoah Intelligence Agency maintains he may not be familiar with Virginia law and therefore is complaining on those grounds, the Ring-tum Phi has learned.

Walters' appointment is a result of a motion made by the city council in September to investigate the office of Police Chief James A. Kirby. This investigation follows a previous exposure of a police theft ring that operated in Lexington throughout the 1970s. The probe of that theft ring left many unanswered questions in relation to Chief Kirby's knowledge of the thefts.

Films: The Tin Drum

By DICK GREFE
W&L Film Society

The Washington and Lee Film Society's first presentation of the 1982-83 season will be the 1979 German film "The Tin Drum" directed by Volker Schlöndorff. The film will be shown at 8:30 p.m. (note time change) on Friday, Oct. 8 and Saturday, Oct. 9 in Classroom A of Lewis Hall. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Each night's showing will be preceded at 7:30 by a coffee-and-cake reception, providing an opportunity to meet past supporters of the Society and make new friends. The W&L Film Society, which brings to Lexington recent films of quality that have not appeared in local theatres, invites interested persons to attend this get-acquainted reception.

"The Tin Drum" won the Academy Award in 1981 for best foreign film and is based on Gunter Grass's highly popular novel, first published in 1959. "The Tin Drum" is one of a number of recent German artistic efforts dealing with the notorious traumas of the twentieth century. In this case, we view the world through the eyes of insane asylum inmate Oskar Matzerath, born in Danzig in 1924 and so revolted — at the age of three — by the world around him that he decides to stop growing. Thereafter, Oskar becomes an observer of life, battling its absurdities with his tin drum and his glass-shattering shrieks; one critic calls Oskar a sort of "moral Geiger counter."

Bringing to the screen a picturesque novel of metaphor and allegory is no easy task and Schlöndorff's film version of "The Tin Drum" has been criticized by some for failing to do justice to the book. It has been noted that the novel assaults the intellect, while the film attacks the senses. Schlöndorff fills the screen with startling images, a number of which may be overpowering for the sensitive viewer. (Ironically, this film is not for children of any age.)

"The Tin Drum" is an ambitious and thought-provoking film, one that is certain to be among the most memorable presentations in Lexington this year.

Tomorrow is the final day. There will not be a make-up day.

Sigma Chi gets 2-wk social pro

Sigma Chi was fined $150 and placed on social probation for two weeks by the Judicial Board of the Interfraternity Council.

The decision was made after it was learned that the house exceeded the IFC limit on the number of bands per week of Rush.

Bill Tommins, Sigma Chi social chairman, said the band had been booked last spring and had been paid for before it performed at the house.

"We had no control over it," Tommins explained. "We had the choice of either losing $500 by canceling the band or going ahead with it and expecting some kind of action by the IFC."

Sigma Chi plans to appeal the board's judgement.

SAB wins with Dregs

T. Oast, Student Activities Board Co-Chairman and entertainment coordinator, announced that the board's Homecoming presentation of The Dregs and the Offenders last Friday was "a complete success. We feel like everything went real smoothly with the two bands." A crowd estimated at 1000 attended the concert held on the back campus of the W&L Law School. The production cost the SAB $3,900.

Oast reminded students that on Nov. 6, the SAB will present The Nighthawks at Zollman's Pavilion. The SAB-sponsored "Tuesdays in the Pit" program will also continue with the Deal performing this Saturday and The White Animals following on Tuesday in the W&L Cockpit.

Oast commented, "Since rush has ended and Homecoming is over, the campus may seem dead to a lot of people over the next couple of weeks."

"But SAB productions are spaced evenly and remain constant throughout the year." Oast urged all W&L students to support SAB productions "so we can maintain a high quality of entertainment."

Pianist tonight

A performance by Canadian pianist Robert Silverman will open the 1982-83 season of the Washington and Lee University Concert Guild on Thursday, Oct. 7, at 8 p.m. in Lee Chapel.

Tickets for the concert will be available at the door and are $4 for adults and $2 for non-Washington and Lee students.

Silverman's concert will consist of "Six Pieces, Op. 118" by Brahms, "Sonata in C-sharp minor, Op. 27 No. 2" by Beethoven, and "Sonata No. 1 in D minor, Op. 28" by Rachmaninoff.

A native of Montreal, Silverman has been a soloist with several important North American orchestras and has earned critical acclaim for his performances.

In its review of his appearance with the Milwaukee Symphony, the Milwaukee Sentinel called Silverman "a first-rate pianist by any standard ... great sensitivity and formidable technical power. He also exudes a warm friendly personality which gives depth and audience appeal to his recitals."

Silverman, who is making his third visit to the Washington and Lee campus, is currently on the piano faculty of the University of British Columbia. He is well known to radio and television audiences in Canada through his frequent appearances as a performer and broadcaster. In addition, he is a first-rate teacher whose students have distinguished themselves internationally.

Silverman's performance is the first of four concerts sponsored this academic year by the Washington and Lee Concert Guild.

wishers. The police department, she says, "has been very good," and she said Lieutenant Beard "was very nice" when she went to talk with him on Monday.

Roberson and Mrs. Keenan grew up in the house, which she said was built around 1792 and has been in the family since the 1920's. She said he used to have an antique shop in town where he repaired and decorated furniture. It was closed after his stroke, but he remained active in his collecting.

Henry Simpson, owner of Lexington Antiques on Washington Street, called the incident "shocking." He said he and Mr. Roberson were "friends" and that he saw him every day.

"He's had a routine since his stroke," Simpson said. "He needed exercising, so he'd walk by every day."

Simpson said Roberson was "knowledgeable" and "knew the finer points" about antiques. He said Roberson was "an original character ... he had strong beliefs and he'd say what he thought."

He said he was confident of Mr. Roberson's strength. "I knew he'd be all right."

Water polo 'improving,' ups record to 10-4

By MIKE STACHURA
Phi Staff Writer

It was another weekend of improvement for water polo, Generals' style. Despite a 2-2 record that put W&L at 10-4 for the season and a third place finish at the Slippery Rock State Invitational, it was a relatively pleased Coach Page Remillard that returned to Lexington.

Taking top honors in Pennsylvania was host Slippery Rock, followed by Bucknell, with Ohio State, Indiana University of Pennsylvania, and Cleveland State rounding out the bottom three slots.

W&L began the tournament Friday evening with a 20-9 thumping of Cleveland State. But later that night they fell to the Bisons from Bucknell, 12-10, although the scoring was even in the second half.

Saturday the Generals met nemesis Slippery Rock but fell short of the mark again despite outscoring Slippery Rock 11-8 in the second half. W&L lost by one goal, 19-18. They closed out the invitational by taking out their frustrations on Ohio State with a 21-10 victory.

"We played very well and we are improving more than other teams are," commented Coach Remillard. He was quite pleased with the offensive performance as the Generals amassed 69 goals in four contests. "We're pleased with our offensive pressure and intensity," continued Remillard.

On the negative side, however, the fourth-year mentor finds his squad vexed by its own defense, specifically the goaltending. As a matter of fact, the Generals stopped only a third of the attempted shots in the deep end of the pool.

"Something has to happen there if we're to beat these good teams," Remillard admitted. The team will be working on team defense this week, but one can expect some one-on-one meetings with Remillard and his goalies.

This weekend W&L begins conference play by hosting Zone I play in the Southern League Tournament, featuring teams from Lynchburg, James Madison, VMI, and George Washington. Remillard feels with deserved confidence that the Generals should be the favored team both for the conference and state titles and sees the upcoming competition as a "weekend of execution." Play begins Friday afternoon and will continue at Cy Twombly Pool through Saturday afternoon.

Prayers unanswred

Even prayer couldn't help this Maryville goalie last Saturday on Wilson Field as Washington and Lee demolished the Scots by a 7-1 count for their third consecutive victory.

However, the Generals dropped their first game of the season to Roanoke College on Tuesday by a 3-2 count. Their record is now 3-1-1.

Senior Brad Poorman scored two of his three goals in the first half as Washington and Lee raced to a 4-0 lead at halftime.

Tom Elder, Bill Holmes, Bob Coleman and Eric Obeck each tallied one goal for W&L. Senior co-captain Mark Carduner passed out two assists.

In the loss to Roanoke, the Generals never led, despite managing to tie the Maroons at 1-1 and 2-2 on goals by Poorman. The winner for Roanoke came with just nine minutes to go in the game.

Last Wednesday, Roland Simon's header with eleven seconds on the clock gave the Generals a 2-1 road victory over Mary Washington.

Mary Washington had taken a 1-0 lead just five minutes into the game, but Poorman tied the score early in the second half with a shot from the left wing.

W&L comes from behind for 20-19 win

By ANDY HOPPE
Phi Staff Writer

Sophomore Gene Girard's one-yard touchdown plunge and a two-point conversion early in the fourth quarter capped a 20-19 come-back victory for the Washington & Lee Generals over Randolph-Macon Saturday.

Randolph-Macon had the opportunity to blow the game open in the second quarter, but tough defense by W&L inside their own twenty and a multitude of Yellow Jacket miscues left the Generals only six points down at the half.

It was W&L which opened the scoring, though, on a 25-yard field goal by Bill Devine with 54 seconds left in the opening quarter.

Randolph-Macon quickly retaliated. On the next play fullback Alan Spinney romped 52 yards to the Generals' 14-yard line. One play later Gary Richins scored from eight yards out. After a missed extra point the Yellow Jackets led 6-3.

The next time RMC touched the ball, they again demonstrated their explosive offense and their incompetent kicking game. Gary Richins sprinted 55 yards for a touchdown and a 12-3 lead. It stayed that way when the Yellow Jackets missed the extra point again.

On their next possession, W&L utilized a pair of long runs by Paradise to mount a threat. When the drive stalled, Bill Devine booted a 27-yard field goal with 5:49 left in the half to narrow the RMC lead to 12-6.

In the final five minutes the Yellow Jackets wasted two excellent scoring opportunities. After driving from their own 33-yard line, an RMC receiver dropped a sure touchdown pass and kicker Cody Dearing missed a 27-yard field goal.

It looked like the Yellow Jackets might still widen their 12-6 lead when Richins returned a punt 60 yards to the W&L 22 with 26 seconds remaining. W&L's defense stiffened and forced a field goal attempt, which was blocked by sophomore Jim Lyall.

"Anytime you take away a scoring threat it's got to really pick you up going into the locker room," noted W&L Coach Gary Fallon.

W&L capitalized on an RMC fumble to tie the game at 12-12 on Chris Cavalline's one-yard dive at 6:10 of the third quarter.

Less than six minutes later, RMC went out in front 19-12 on a 2-yard touchdown run by Richins. Richins' third touchdown of the day was set up by a 76-yard run by Alan Wright.

W&L bounced back quickly to score the winning touchdown on Girard's run with 12:32 left in the game. John Thompson hit Cavalline with a pass for the two-point conversion, which gave the Generals their margin of victory at 20-19.

"I was really pleased with John's performance. He had some confidence coming in there," stated Coach Fallon.

The rest of the game belonged to the Generals' defense, as they buried the Yellow Jackets in their own territory.

"I knew this was a good team we were going against. My kids really rose to the occasion," said Fallon proudly.

The win boosted W&L to 2-0 in the ODAC and 2-1 overall.

This Saturday the Generals travel to Maryville College to take on the Scots in an Old Dominion Athletic Conference game.

"Maryville is going to be a physical game. If we're not careful, it could be another Centre," warned Coach Fallon.

Quarterback Al Paradise's sprained ankle makes him a questionable starter for the game. Fallon thinks he probably will be able to play, though.

McBryde leads harriers to 4-1 mark

Junior Angus McBryde claimed the overall title Saturday as the Washington and Lee cross-country team defeated three other squads to up its record to 4-1. The Generals finished with 32 points to place ahead of Roanoke (41), Norfolk State University (86), and Virginia State University (no team score).

McBryde's time of 27:57 was

Alumni downs varsity, 14-11

The alumni scored two goals late in the third period to break an 8-8 tie and go on to a 14-11 victory over the varsity lacrosse squad Sunday on Wilson Field.

The win gives the alumni a 5-3 edge in the series, which highlights fall lacrosse practice.

five seconds better than that of the second-place finisher. Sophomore Frank Pittman, senior Jon Kelafant, junior Paul Chapman, and freshman Bob Glenn rounded out the W&L top five.

The Generals next home meet will be the Virginia Division II and III Championships on October 16.
