End of an Era with Cy Young

A younger Cy in his famous and frenzied "Beat the Wahoos" battle-cry.

FOR MANY AN alumnus in the far reaches, the primary contact with Washington and Lee after graduation has been a cordial gentleman named Harry Killinger Young. For twenty-nine years, he has been alumni secretary, and as such, has endeared himself to literally hundreds of former students at the Lexington school.

His retirement on June 30, 1958, ended thirty-three years of illustrious service to his alma mater. For Cy, there never was any job that could have measured up to the one he held, because of his everlasting affection for Washington and Lee.

He might have made a larger salary elsewhere, he might have held an executive position in industry, but he chose to spend his years at the University. And—who knows?—he may have touched more lives as alumni secretary than he ever could have as a tycoon of business. Certainly his influence has been felt afar, and Washington and Lee has benefitted exceedingly by his presence.

One alumnus wrote President Francis P. Gaines in 1954, "From behind the scenes, I have watched with interest the careers of many Washington and Lee men, but the most true-to-life Gentleman from the University, both in sports and graduate life, is that man we all love and admire—the man that impressed me most as a freshman, and who has done more than most Washington and Lee men have ever realized to preserve those traditions of freedom that we all hold dear—Cy Young."

That letter is probably typical of the feelings of a good many more alumni, for honors galore have been heaped upon Cy during the past year. He has been feted at a dozen alumni chapter meetings, and has been presented handsome

Mr. Young has given his Alma Mater the finest quality of service, and in the largest possible dimension. His devotion and his energy, together with his warm sympathy, have enabled him to become greatly influential in building a better Washington and Lee.

The love and the prayers of their innumerable friends will always follow Mr. and Mrs. Young.

gifts. He was elected to Lifetime Membership by the American Alumni Council, at its national meeting at Lake Placid in June. He was elected to the All-American basketball team for 1917 by the Helms Athletic Foundation. And word comes that Cy is to be named on the National Football Hall of Fame on a coast-to-coast television program September 23. On July 2, he was medalist in the Virginia State Golf Association Seniors tournament with a three over par 74 at the Homestead course in Hot Springs.

Cy's athletic records will stand for a long time at Washington and Lee. As a student from 1913 until 1917, he won four letters each in football, basketball, track, and baseball, and he was team captain in each sport. As a football star, he was an all-Southern Conference selection three years and the team's leading scorer each season except his junior year, when a broken collarbone sidelined him midway in the season. He twice won all-Southern recognition in basketball, led the team in scoring, and played on the only unbeaten Washington and Lee basketball team, in 1917. In baseball, Cy was the team's leading hitter, scorer and base stealer for three years. His school track record of 9.8 seconds for the 100-yard dash has been equalled, but not broken. And to top it off, he was popular with students and faculty alike. He was president of his senior class and president of Finals.

While head basketball coach from 1933 'til 1939, his teams won the Southern Conference championship in 1934 and 1937, and were runnersup in 1935 and 1936.

Cy, a native of Charleston, West Virginia, was married to Ruth Neely in 1918. He is the father of a son, Neely, '43, and the grandfather of two left-handed boys who may yet learn to play golf right-handed like Cy.

Looking back over his long association with the University, Cy enumerated these events as highlights of his career as coach and alumni secretary:

His first Southern Conference championship ball team in 1934.

The Generals' smashing victory over the University of Virginia in 1951 by a 42-12 margin, the only loss suffered by the "Wahoos" that season.

And in 1956, the success of the Alumni Fund when it exceeded the $100,000 mark for the first time, a $40,000 increase over contributions during the previous year.

Cy and Ruth plan to live in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, so Cy can play golf often—during the intervals he's not zipping back up to Lexington for some event. And with the Youngs go the best wishes and love from myriads of friends who will never forget what Cy has meant to Washington and Lee.

At any Washington and Lee party, Cy was the life of the party. Here he does a fancy dance step at the reunion jamboree this year, while other guests cheer him on.

Alumni Give Scholarship Fund in Cy's Honor

WASHINGTON AND LEE alumni honored Cy with the establishment of a $15,000 scholarship in his name, made up of contributions from hundreds of alumni, and announced to him at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association on June 5.

Stuard A. Wurzburger, '28, of New York, described the fund, and served up in traditional "banquet fare" other gifts for each course of the meal. The entree was the scholarship fund. Under its provisions, Cy will receive for the rest of his life the income from the endowment fund, and upon his death, the fund will support a scholarship for a student whose qualifications will include "particular emphasis on athletic ability."

Among his remarks, Mr. Wurzburger said, "If any retirement of a beloved figure can be called a happy occasion, I would say that to date, Cy's retirement has been the happiest on record, and what follows should make it even happier. . . . Like the banquet menus Cy knows so well, we shall serve these to him course by course, with this exception. Cy does not have to eat his banquet, he can take it home and digest it at his leisure in the years to come."

The appetizer was a calling card for a retired man, reading, "H. K. Young, Retired, No Business, No Phone, No Address, No Money."

The soup course was an album of messages from alumni of 61 different classes, as far back as 1890. The bread and butter was a resolution by the Alumni Board of Trustees that Cy be retained as a consultant in alumni affairs for the university "for as long as his services may be available."

As the chicken, gravy, and trimmings, Mr. Wurzburger said, "In presenting the album to Cy, I mentioned that messages had come from friends all over the world. These friends, and also many others, wishing to perpetuate Cy's memory in the annals of Washington and Lee University, also sent in money, and it gives me both pleasure and pride to announce approximately $15,000 has been turned over to the University for the creation of what will be known as the H. K. Young scholarship fund."

James R. Caskie, rector of the University of the University board of trustees, gave the ice cream and cake portion—the details of how the scholarship will function. He said he could think of no better tribute to Cy's athletic feats than the scholarship.

In words that came difficult, and with streaming eyes, Cy declared his thanks, and said, "I only hope my grandson can qualify for this scholarship."

That warm, wonderful YOUNG smile and hearty handshake will not soon be forgotten.

ANOTHER SCHOOL YEAR came to a close on June 6, as Washington and Lee graduated 193 men in exercises held on the lawn in front of the president's home. President Francis P. Gaines awarded degrees, and made the commencement address. He cited the urgent need to "establish the world spiritually."

"If we can sacrifice our own pocketbooks so that other people may not starve, then we're on our way," he declared. "If we sit back in our selfcenteredness, we are signing our death warrants."

Honorary degrees were awarded to three well-known alumni, and to a Virginia college president. Doctor of laws degrees were conferred upon John Hellums Tucker, '10, of Shreveport, Louisiana, founder and longtime president of the Louisiana Bar Institute, and an authority on the Napoleonic code; and to Ross L. Malone, '32, of Roswell, New Mexico, president-elect of the American Bar Association. The doctor of science degree was awarded to Dr. Robert Glenn Craig, '17, of San Francisco, California, president of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology. Dr. Joseph C. Robert of Hampden-Sydney College received a doctor of letters degree, in recognition of his "vigorous leadership as a young president of an old college."

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of New York's Marble Collegiate church, and a well-known author, delivered the Baccalaureate sermon on Thursday morning, June 5, in Lee Chapel. Dr. Peale's son, John, a philosophy major, was among the Washington and Lee graduates this year.

Finals began on Tuesday night, June 3, with the first of the graduation dances. On Wednesday, the trustees met for the end-of-the-year business, and that night, the Count Basie orchestra played for the second dance, followed by a concert on the footbridge to Wilson field 'til the wee small hours. On Thursday, alumni held their general meeting, at which the retiring alumni secretary, H. K. Young, was honored. Other events of the day included the annual alumni luncheon on the lawn, a meeting of the alumni board of trustees, and the annual President's reception for seniors and parents that night.

Representatives of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps presented reserve officer commissions to 71 R.O.T.C. seniors Friday morning. Commencement exercises followed.

FACULTY

■ SIX MEN WILL JOIN the Washington and Lee faculty during the coming year. They are: Dr. Kenneth F. Bick, assistant professor of geology; William S. Carter, instructor in biology; Norris Eastman, instructor in physical education; Dr. Walter A. Bass, assistant professor of philosophy; John S. Ellett, II, instructor in accounting; and Thomas O. Sloan, instructor in public speaking.

Dr. Bick received his doctorate at Yale this summer. Mr. Carter is replacing J. J. Murray, Jr., who will study for his doctorate at Oxford during the next year. Dr. Bass is replacing Dr. Edward D. Myers, professor of philosophy, who will be abroad for a year. Mr. Ellett replaces Thomas E. Ennis, Jr. assistant professor of accounting, who will continue study for his Ph.D. degree. Dr. Sloan is receiving his Ph.D. degree this summer at Northwestern University. In addition to teaching public speaking, he will supervise the debate team, and teach two courses in freshman English.

■ TWO MEMBERS OF the faculty have been honored by being chosen to head state associations in their fields.

Dr. Ollinger Crenshaw, professor of history, is president of the Virginia Social Science Association. He has also served as vice-president of the group. Dr. Crenshaw, '25, has been a member of the Washington and Lee faculty since 1926. He is the author of a book, The Slave States in the Presidential Election of 1860, published in 1945.

Dr. William M. Hinton, '29, has been named president-elect of the Virginia Academy of Science, and will take office in the spring. Dr.

JOHN M. LARSON of Washington, D. C., delivered the valedictory address.

Hinton has been at Washington and Lee since 1931, and has been a full professor since 1951.

■ TWO FACULTY PROFESSORS will be in Europe for the next year on Fulbright teaching and research fellowships, and another will join the United States Information Agency in Germany, as cultural attache.

Dr. Marshall W. Fishwick, professor of American studies, will go to Denmark in March, 1959, to lecture on American civilization at the University of Copenhagen and the Peoples' International College at Elsinore. He will complete the lectureship in July, 1959.

Dr. Thomas P. Hughes, assistant professor of history, will do research at Munich, Germany, on the history of the electrical industry in Germany in the late nineteenth century. He will be associated with the Technical University in Munich during the next school year.

Dr. Edwin D. Myers left in July on a two-year leave of absence from Washington and Lee to serve in Bonn, Germany as cultural attache. He and his family will live in Bad Godesberg, a suburb of Bonn. Dr. Myers, professor of philosophy, spent the school year of 1956-57 in Germany, working on a special project for the Fund of the Advancement of Education. While in Germany, he lectured in German to a number of German schools and universities, under the joint auspices of the Office of Public Affairs of the American Embassy at Bad Godesburg and the colleges concerned.

■ DR. CHARLES TURNER, professor of history, is conducting a European tour this summer, of students and faculty members from Bates College, Lewiston, Maine. The group departed from Quebec, Canada, and is visiting six countries on the continent.

■ THE BUSIEST commencement speaker at the college level in Virginia this year was Dr. Francis Gaines, who took the podium at three schools in June and never got more than 66 miles away from home. He gave the graduation address at the University of Virginia, at Roanoke College, and made his traditional remarks at the commencement exercises at Washington and Lee.

■ KATHERINE ANNE PORTER, short story author and essayist, will become "Glasgow Professor for 1959" at the University, the first person to hold a special professorship established by the late Arthur C. Glasgow "to promote the art of expression by pen and tongue."

The Glasgow visiting professorship will bring to the campus for one term every other school year a man or woman "of acknowledged distinction" in poetry, fiction, drama, or expository writing. The donor was a brother of Ellen Glasgow, Virginia novelist, and son of Francis T. Glasgow, an alumnus of Washington College in 1849.

Miss Porter will teach a course in creative writing and give occasional lectures during the spring semester next year. She has been writer-in-residence and lecturer at Stanford University, the University of Chicago, and other colleges. Among her chief works are "Flowering Judas," "Hacienda," "Noon Wine," "The Leaning Tower," "The Days Before," and "Pale Horse, Pale Rider."

■ THE REVEREND Richard L. Gelwick, director of religious activities and chaplain of the university, has resigned to become director of religious activities and YMCA secretary at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio. He joined the Washington and Lee staff in 1956.

In a final press conference on June 2, Dr. Toynbee declared he had enjoyed his stay in the United States and "loved Lexington and Washington and Lee." He said Washington and Lee today is like Oxford of 1907-11, when he was a student there. Since then, a social revolution has taken place in England, and today it is not class, but ability, that gains one entrance to the better universities, he declared.

The distinguished historian said he was not able to make a comparative judgment on the scholarship of American and British students. He said his only real contact with American students has been in "bull sessions," which he called "an excellent way to learn," and opined that students seem much interested in world affairs. On the whole, however, he said, he did not feel there is enough emphasis placed on the importance of world history in the United States.

His fifteen lectures were filmed and taped by Encyclopaedia Britannica Films, Incorporated, along with some scenes and data on the college itself, and will be available to all future Washington and Lee students.

In a statement of appreciation to Dr. Toynbee, President Francis P. Gaines said, "He has enlarged our vision, deepened our understanding, and stimulated enormously our thinking."

TRUSTEES

■ ANOTHER GENERAL SALARY increase for members of the University faculty and staff was approved by the board of trustees at its June meeting.

The raise becomes effective September first, and will be five per cent more than the individual 1957-58 salaries. Special adjustments in pay for some employees will be allowed.

UNDERGRADUATES

■ A LARGE NUMBER of graduating students won fellowships and scholarships for advanced study, in nationwide competition with other college students. At least thirteen outstanding awards were garnered by Washington and Lee seniors, among which were: one Fulbright scholarship for graduate study abroad; five Woodrow Wilson National Fellowships, valued at more than $1400 each; five Southern Fellowships, valued at $1000 the first year of graduate study, $15000 the second year, and $2000 the third year, in addition to tuition; an A.E.C. physics fellowship worth more than $3,500; and a national award from Delta Upsilon fraternity for graduate study.

■ A YOUNG GEOLOGY PROFESSOR and three of his students are tramping around in the Montana uplands this summer, trying to find out how the Rocky mountains got there. Dr. Edgar W. Spencer, '53, assistant professor of geology, plans to spend the next two summers as well, seeking the answer in the Madison Range of southwest Montana, just north of Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming. He has received a $16,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to conduct the research project.

Helping him this summer are three 1958 graduates, who plan to continue geologic study in graduate school next year: Andrew W. McThenia, Jr., Alderson West Virginia; Walter E. Henes, Menominee, Michigan; and Maynard Blair Ogden, Jr., Buena Vista, Virginia.

Dr. Spencer has worked five summers in Montana on similar projects in the nearby Beartooth Range. He also worked with the Lamont Geological Observatory in oceanographic research and ocean-floor mapping.

■ TWO BRITISH EXCHANGE students, who spent the past year on the Washington and Lee campus, think American students have it too easy, and that American colleges are not nearly as demanding upon their students as British schools.

Alfred Harrison, 20, of Nottingham, England, and Leslie Holyoak, 20, of Hertfordshire, defend their stand on the fact that they will not become freshmen in British colleges until next year. Right out of English secondary schools, they took on sophomore and junior work at Washington and Lee, and passed it with better than Dean's List averages.

"American students do not have to really strive," Holyoak pointed out. "The standard required of a person to stay in school is not high enough."

JAMES W. WHITEHEAD, new Director of University Relations, will help direct the two million dollar capital fund campaign for the University. He came to the University May 1, after serving as executive director of the Empire State Foundation of Independent Liberal Arts Colleges.

Harrison recommended that attendance at classes be compulsory, and that students be required to audit at least two classes, in addition to the ones they are taking for credit. He added, "Students here seem to go to college for a degree, while British young men go for an education."

The two students, who came to Lexington on special scholarships offered in conjunction with the Jamestown 350th Anniversary celebration, praised Washington and Lee as having an excellent faculty, "and the facilities, though often criticized by the students, are quite adequate." Holyoak declared, "American students tend to grumble just for the sake of grumbling," pointing out that British students are too grateful to get in a college to do much complaining after they're there. They have been impressed by the generosity of the American people and the country's high standard of living. They both say the highlight of their year were the fifteen lectures by British historian Arnold J. Toynbee, a man they probably wouldn't have been able to hear even in London.

■ SOCIAL EXCESSES by fraternities and students brought forth special action by the faculty in May, and President Gaines named a committee to make recommendations on problems. The faculty reaffirmed unanimously its regulatory powers of off-campus activities, after a two-year experiment with student controls brought complaints of prolonged social gatherings, excessive noise, and conduct in bad taste, especially on Sundays. Dr. Gaines said he planned to write to all parents of students about the problem.

R.O.T.C.

■ RESERVE OFFICER commissions were presented to 71 senior students on June 6, in ceremonies at Lee Chapel. Representatives of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps were on hand to make the presentations.

Sixty-two cadets in Washington and Lee's R.O.T.C. groups received the gold bars of second lieutenants in the Army; seven men became Marine second lieutenants; and two chose commissions as ensigns in the Naval Reserve.

In May, at the annual President's Day review, held in honor of President Gaines, twenty-four cadets won medals for outstanding leadership and academic excellence during the year.

Among the awards were: Department of the Army Superior Cadet Ribbon to George Sage Lyons, Mobile, Alabama, regimental commander; James M. Crews, Jr., Memphis, Tennessee; Rardon D. Bevill, III, Winfield, Louisiana; and Edward A. Corcoran, South Richmond Hill, New York.

ALUMNI

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE welcomed back to the campus for Finals a large number of alumni, many of whom had come especially to say good-bye to retiring alumni secretary H. K. Young, '17.

At the general meeting of the Alumni Association, most of the time was spent in eulogizing "Cy," and in presenting him with several gifts, including the lifetime income from a $15,000 fund contributed by alumni for a scholarship in his honor.

However, the association did take time out for several elections. For three-year terms on the Alumni Board of Trustees, the group chose Clark B. Winter, '37, New York City; Bernard Levin, '42, Norfolk, Virginia; and Paul M. Shuford, '43, Richmond, Virginia. For two-year terms on the University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics, the group elected Preston Brown, '42, of Lexington, Virginia; and John L. Crist, Jr., '45, of Charlotte, North Carolina.

The Alumni Board of Trustees chose David D. Johnson, '21, of Bridgeport, West Virginia, as president for the coming year; Frank C. Brooks, '46, Baltimore, Maryland, vice-president; and Ben Ditto, '42, of Houston, Texas, as treasurer.

Mr. Johnson was vice-president the past year, and Mr. Brooks was treasurer.

■ A SPECIAL TRIBUTE from the Washington and Lee Alumni Association to thirty-three members of the faculty and administration who have served the University for twenty-five years or more was presented at Commencement exercises this year.

The handsome scrolls contained the University seal in blue at the top, and a message of appreciation below. The recipients were:

ATHLETICS

■ ATHLETIC NEWS BROKE fast at the end of the school year and during the early summer. Washington and Lee came up with a series of honors in lacrosse; the school lost its basketball coach, appointed another, then lost him, too. But the event of greatest importance was the announcement by the university on June 13 that it was withdrawing from the Southern Conference, effective July 1.

Washington and Lee helped organize the conference back in 1922, and the decision to leave the fold seemed to many persons unfortunate if only for sentimental reasons. But the University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics in its letter of recommendation to the Board of Trustees listed a number of compelling reasons why Washington and Lee should drop out. Among them were these:

The rule adopted by the conference this year which makes freshmen eligible for varsity competition "more than offsets the advantages of conference membership" for Washington and Lee. The university needs freshmen for its varsity teams, and the committee reasoned that no student should be denied the opportunity to compete in intercollegiate sports, no matter what his class might be.

As an independent, Washington and Lee "should be in a better position to promote a new and more homogeneous alignment if and when such an opportunity presents itself." This means Washington and Lee may find it advantageous to join another conference in the future, one composed of schools of similar athletic purpose. But, it was pointed out in the announcement to the press, no such alignment is under consideration at the present or seems likely in the near future.

trustees, but a valid reason nonetheless, was one expressed by Dr. William Hinton, chairman of the athletic committee. He pointed out that all other schools in the Southern Conference except Washington and Lee engage in athletic subsidization, making the university something of an outsider although a member. "We were operating at two different levels," he said.

In President Gaines' letter to conference officials, notifying them officially of the withdrawal, he said: "The entire university family regrets the necessity for this step. We have enjoyed through long years our association with sister colleges in this conference, and for each one of them we have high respect. It has seemed to our authorities, however, that under our athletic policy the conference membership does not help us achieve the purpose."

In the matter of coaches, Louis F. "Weenie" Miller resigned as basketball coach to move next door to Virginia Military Institute in the same job. In his one year with the Generals, his basketball team had a 9-16 record and his baseball team finished 5-9. At VMI, he steps into a basketball revitalization program under which a number of athletic grants-in-aid will be at his disposal.

Named to succeed him in basketball at Washington and Lee was Gene Corrigan, the popular lacrosse and soccer coach of the past three years. But Corrigan's tenure lasted little more than a month, for in July he resigned to accept the job of head lacrosse coach and assistant basketball coach at the University of Virginia.

■ ROBERT R. HUNTLEY, a 1957 graduate of Washington and Lee, will join the law school faculty in September as an assistant professor of law. For the past year, he has worked in Alexandria, Virginia, with the firm of Boothe, Dudley, Koontz, and Boothe. He will fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Dr. T. A. Smedley.

Mr. Huntley, '54, was student editor of the Law Review, vice-president of the student body, and the recipient of the Washington Award his senior year. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa, and the Order of the Coif. He is a native of Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

■ DR. THEODORE A. SMEDLEY has resigned his position at the Washington and Lee Law School to become professor of law at Vanderbilt Law School. He will also serve as director of the Race Relations Law Reporter, published at Vanderbilt, Dr. Smedley, a member of the law faculty here since 1939, was on leave of absence during the past year to serve at Vanderbilt. He acted as faculty editor of the Washington and Lee Law Review for a number of years. Professor Wilfred J. Ritz is now faculty editor of the book.

■ PHI ALPHA DELTA fraternity has elected Charles E. Swope of West Chester, Pennsylvania, justice for the next school year.

A Quarter Century in Review

By HARRY K. YOUNG, '17

IN THIS, MY FINAL REPORT as Secretary of the Alumni Association, I should like to review briefly a few of our major accomplishments of the last quarter-century. The original purpose of our Alumni Society was stated as "the promotion of mutual good feeling among the alumni, the election of alumni trustees, and the advancement of the interest of Washington and Lee University." I believe we have gone along with that directive. Certainly alumni interest in University affairs has notably increased over the year. This interest shows itself in the contributions to the Alumni Fund, attendance at Reunions, visits to the campus, letters to administrative officers and faculty (often with constructive suggestions), and meetings of alumni groups.

Alumni Chapters

The past year has been a most active one, and especially does this apply to meetings of our local alumni chapters. These groups showed me many courtesies on this my "last round-up"; I personally visited twelve during the year. In my first year as your secretary there were seven active alumni chapters throughout the country; today there are thirty-seven.

From the June, 1840, minutes of an Alumni Association meeting we learn that alumni clubs are to be organized as follows: "Where-ever there are five or more alumni residing in the same city or neighborhood, these shall meet and organize an Alumni Club of Washington College. These Clubs shall hold semi-annual meetings, one in the spring and one in the autumn, where around the festive board they may throw off for a time the cares and toils of active business, and recall the bright days and joyous incidents of college life." So it appears that times actually change very little and yet the alumni chapters of today seem charged with a far greater seriousness of purpose. They have assumed a vital role in the development of our University; they are particularly helpful in their appraisal of boys who make application to Washington and Lee.

The Fund

I am sorry I cannot tell you that our Alumni Fund is having its best year. Perhaps we can credit to the recession the fact that, dollar-wise, we are dragging a little at this point. As of today, the record stands at $90,101.31 received from 2,924 contributors. On the same day last year we had received $94,209 from 2,978 contributors. I am hopeful the 25 days yet remaining until we close our books will remedy this situation. The first year of our Fund, 1933, we received a total of $3,700 from 506 alumni. By 1946 we had brought this up to $23,000 and, a quarter of a century since the beginning, we have arrived at a goal of $100,000.

In all, 7,072 alumni have contributed at one time or another to the Fund.

Reunions

As for other phases of your Association's activities during the 1957-58 year, I comment on just two. This group will remember how we have tried through the years to establish some sort of definite and compelling Class Reunion program. It is finally gaining form. In May we had our fourth Annual Reunion of the 25, 40, and 50-year Classes. The number of alumni in attendance broke all previous records. Plans are already in the making for a Reunion of all classes in June, 1959. This will follow the pattern of our successful Bicentennial Reunion in 1949, repeated in 1954, which was voted to become a five-year occasion.

The Magazine

Following the trend in alumni publications across the country, we are trying faithfully to bring our Alumni more information, through The Alumni Magazine, about our present-day University and higher education in general. By now we are all aware of the crisis in education. Our Winter magazine featured a lead article on science education at Washington and Lee; our Spring issue, as you doubtless recall, is devoted largely to an article entitled, "American Higher Education in 1958."

We feel that we are publishing an improved magazine, and we like to credit much of this "new look" to our able managing editor, Mrs. Robert Jeffrey.

* * *

Of course I cannot close a report for the year without commenting on the improved administrative facilities in the Alumni Office. Our so-called "machine room," containing addressograph and mailing equipment, plus the vastly improved file and work space in our general office have increased the efficiency and comfort of us all.

* * *

And now to grow personal for a moment. The years go fast at Washington and Lee. It hardly seems possible that it is now more than forty-four years, almost half a century, since I first came to Lexington as a freshman, wearing a derby hat and a Norfolk jacket. (By the way, I soon learned that those two accessories of my very modest wardrobe were not conventional dress!) Forty-four years is a long period in the life of any individual and, with the exception of short tours in World Wars I and II and a brief career in the business world, I have spent most of that time on the campus of Washington and Lee.

But there comes a time in every man's life when he must consult the calendar, and that time has arrived for me. As you know, I am convinced it is time for me to step down.

I am full of gratitude for all the help I have received during my long term of office. I want to thank the University's administrative officers for their wonderful cooperation: Dr. Gaines, Dean Gilliam, Dean Sensabaugh, Mr. Mattingly, Dean Williams, Dean Adams, and Dr. Leyburn. I am under eternal obligation to the members of the Faculty-Alumni Committee, the Alumni Board of Trustees, the Alumni Fund Council, the Class Agents, the Regional Agents, and the local chapter officers. (I am reminded that since 1933, our first Fund year, over 800 alumni have served as Class and Regional Agents). In short, I thank each and every alumnus for tireless effort, for generous cooperation, and for devoted loyalty.

It has been my privilege to serve you during a period of the University's greatest development. I believe I can say our Alumni Association is healthier and stronger in every way than at any time in its history. To William Washburn, who now assumes this office of Alumni Secretary, I express my congratulations and best wishes. I am sure he will find in this position the same satisfaction that comes to everyone who gives his best efforts to Washington and Lee, for I, myself, can think of nothing finer than a life-time association with our school. We may change our residence, our church, and our clubs. But nothing will ever change our status as alumni of Washington and Lee.

As for my office staff, and there have been many members on it over the long years, I can say only that I feel they are actually a part of my family. I appreciate their enthusiasm and their loyalty and their help more than I can ever let them know. In particular, I shall always be grateful for the devoted service of Miss Mary Barclay, Mrs. Harold Lauck and Dr. Gaines' secretary, Miss Albertina Ravenhorst, a former member of our staff.

* * *

In closing, may I add, I am conscious that I have made mistakes along the way but I hope not many major ones. I have spared no effort, considered no personal gain or comfort in the performance of my duties as I saw them. It is a period of my life, extended both in time and labor, that in retrospect will always be warming and thrilling and mostly because you have helped make it so.

A Tribute to the "Best Alumnus"

By ERNEST WOODWARD, II, '40

MY NEXT OFFICIAL duty, as your President, is to recognize the retiring Secretary. This is Cy's last alumni meeting as your secretary, and despite the fact that Cy knows how we feel about him, somebody has to say it officially.

When I realized that this was included in my job, my first thought was that it wasn't really fair to Cy. I thought of the great athletes that he had coached, of his teammates. When we think of Cy we immediately call to mind his 16 varsity letters, his captaincy of all four major sports, the All-American recognition that has finally come to him. We then think of his long years of turning out outstanding teams and outstanding athletes.

And yet, as I thought of it, it seemed perhaps even more appropriate for some one like myself to salute Cy. For we are not now paying tribute to Cy Young, the athlete. We appreciate his contribution to W&L as a player, and later as a coach, of course. But that we appreciate (although perhaps in a greater degree) as we do other players and other coaches. They come, they play, we cheer, and their records are neatly put away in the record books.

So it's singularly appropriate for somebody like myself to pay tribute to Cy: representing as I do the great bulk of alumni who never made a letter, who were never outstanding scholars, who never made any significant contributions to Washington and Lee.

But I have one qualification for this job: I love Washington and Lee very much. And that's all Cy has ever asked. Any person who loves W&L, who will serve her even a little, and (if you will) help support her, can have all of Cy's time, energy, and a real friendship. The lesson I at least have learned from Cy is that W&L is more than banners and goal posts, more than books and laboratories, more even than students and faculty and alumni: it is Washington and Lee. It's a unity: not a lot of little parts.

Last fall, on a cold rainy day, I went into the Alumni Office to see Cy. He wasn't in.

I have received letters by the dozens and talked with hundreds of alumni about the University's athletic policy. If any man had a legitimate right to complain, and experience upon which to base a complaint, it's the greatest athlete the school ever produced, as well as its finest coach. But where was Cy on that cold, dreary November day? He was watching football practice.

The team wasn't very good, as measured by Cy's All-American standards, and they didn't have a very good record: but they were the Washington and Lee Generals, and that was enough for Cy.

But I'm getting off into athletics again. Cy is enthusiastic about anything that is connected with W&L, whether it's debating, art, journalism, or just someone that loves the University.

Many people do not imagine the tremendous work load this has put on Cy nor how many fields it embraces. For example, it was Cy who saw the need for a Director of Development. It was primarily he who was able to procure Don Smith for that job. You may not realize that Don was then brought in—a non-alumnus, at considerably more compensation than Cy was getting. You would imagine a conflict developing between the two. But when Don had to leave to take a much finer situation, it was his keen friendship with Cy Young that made him reluctant to leave. There could never have been any conflict between Cy and anyone who would help W&L—in any respect.

In my three years as a Trustee, working closely with Cy, I have been greatly impressed with his ability and efficiency. Few people really understand the tremendous job of running that "business." For example, the Alumni Fund collects over $100,000 a year. The Office maintains over 13,000 files—and maintains them, too. In addition to traveling the banquet circuit, and other day-by-day routines, there are such things as Homecomings, the class reunions, the Board of Trustees meeting, the alumni luncheons, smokers, and this annual meeting. In all of these years, Cy has been "open for business," 24 hours a day. And, as Cy and all of us know, he's been able to do it only because Ruth also has been a true and devoted friend of W&L, putting its welfare above her own. We'll all miss her, too.

We salute Cy Young, then, not because of his 16 letters, or his fine teams he has coached, or even his wonderful shining years as Alumni Secretary. We do pay tribute and respect to just about the best alumnus that Washington and Lee could ever hope to have:

CY YOUNG!

Cy Young Commended By Sports Columnist

"In the Katzenjammerish world of sports, wherein we work, one counts his blessings rather than the passing years," wrote Chauncey Durden, sports editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch recently. "So, it always comes as something of a shock when old friends, whom you'd never thought of as being subject to Time's relentless pressure and wear, reach the age of retirement.

... "The Washington and Lee alumni heaped their praise and largess on W&L's retiring alumni secretary, Harry K. "Cy" Young. A Cy Young Scholarship was established. . . . During his lifetime, Young will receive the income from the endowment fund. Upon his death—and The Dark Angel won't even be checking Cy as a possibility for many years to come—the fund will support a scholarship for a student whose qualifications will include 'particular emphasis on athletic ability.'

"... We've heard that Young will become a Floridian, and play golf 12 months a year, but Cy could no more stay away from Lexington and W&L for any length of time than he could pass up a good cutting up of memories with old friends. Why—who knows?—the time may come again when Cy will deliver his famed 'Beat the Wahoos' oration to a frenzied W&L student body the night before a Virginia-W&L game.

"... Young, the greatest athlete in W&L's history, still retains much of the athlete's appearance. Full of nervous energy, he can still beat most 30-year-oldsters on the golf links. He dresses in the fashion of a conservative undergraduate, and 'does things' for a tweed sports jacket and a pair of grey flannel slacks. . . . We once heard Cap'n

Trustee BERNARD LEVIN, '42

Dick Smith, W&L's retired athletic director, say that Young was the finest college athlete he'd seen, and by far the 'most debonair' athlete he recalled. Cy remains the debonair man.

"... Young professed a great hatred for the University, or 'Wahooland,' as he called it. 'I always pull the shades down on the train when I go through Charlottesville,' Cy bragged, 'and until they built that Route 259 bypass round Charlottesville, I drove from Lexington to Richmond on Route 60 to avoid Wahooland.'

Trustee PAUL M. SHUFORD, '43

"Yet on the night of May 24, 1955, Young was the speaker at Virginia's annual sports award banquet. . . . Dick Turner says Cy brought a couple of old pistols with him and, upon being introduced as speaker of the evening, carefully placed the pistols on the table in front of him. He closed his speech with excerpts from his 'Beat the Wahoos' exhortation. Turner says the Wahoos loved it."

IT WAS ALL OUT for a good time on the weekend of May 9-10, when 175 alumni and wives descended upon Lexington for the reunions of law and academic classes of 1908, 1918, and 1933.

Of the three classes, the men of 1908 made the most impressive attendance record. Out of 58 living members, twenty-one attended the reunion, some from as far away as California and New Mexico. Sixteen wives attended. There were sixteen alumni and wives of the class of 1918, with youngsters of 1933 making up the rest of the group.

Headquarters for the fiftieth, fortieth, and twenty-fifth reunion celebrants were both the Robert E. Lee and Mayflower Hotels.

Reunion Time Is Fun For All!

In addition to renewing old acquaintances, checking hairlines, waistlines, and number of children and grandchildren, the returnees got a comprehensive appraisal of the "state of the university" from administration, faculty, and student spokesmen. University Dean L. F. Sensabaugh, law school Dean Clayton E. Williams, commerce school Dean Lewis W. Adams, Dean of Students Frank J. Gilliam, and student body president J. Arnold Groobey were among the speakers. These sessions prompted much inquiry and discussion, and demonstrated the avid interest of the alumni present.

Individual class banquets were held, and among the scheduled entertainment was music by the college vocal group, the Sazeracs. They sang college songs, and as a special feature, included popular tunes of the years 1908, 1918, and 1933. A jamboree for the combined classes followed the banquet. Wives went on a tour of Lexington gardens, as alumni visited with former professors.

One of the highlights of the reunion weekend was a lecture by Dr. Arnold J. Toynbee, visiting scholar in residence at Washington and Lee, who spoke in Lee Chapel on "The Rise of Technology and the Flight from the Land Into the Cities."

Following Dr. Toynbee's address, reunion classes were entertained at a university reception. Dr. Gaines addressed the final luncheon meeting on Saturday.

Washington and Lee and Student Life in the 1890's

By TRUMAN S. VANCE, '99

I ENTERED Washington and Lee in September, 1895. My coming was partly because of what we may call an ancestral accident, for my great-grandfather had come to Liberty Hall Academy 103 years earlier. My oldest brother went to the University of Virginia for Academ and Law, but the others of us were sent to Washington and Lee. Father almost worshipped General Lee and Stonewall Jackson. He felt that boys breathing the atmosphere of such a shrine would be the better for such hallowed surroundings during their formative college days. I think he was right.

I boarded with my younger brother and a Texas boy at Prof. Humphreys', then head of the engineering department. Our board and room was $20 per month. I came on a Charleston, West Virginia, Alumni Scholarship, and my total of other expenses for the year were $285. Others lived even cheaper. At Old Blue, a tavern with nearly a hundred years even then to its credit, board and room was $13, and even cheaper, if four were in a room.

We had athletics, too, sixty-odd years ago. We always knew when the ball season was almost upon us by some good sports that came around with papers begging, imploring, even coercing us to subscribe $1.50, if financially able, to buy baseball or football uniforms, a bat or two, and some balls. They had no helmets, a shock of hair and a tough skull being the only brain protection against the shock of head-on collision. A nose protector of rubber, the upper end held by a strap around the head and the lower held firm in the teeth, helped the player to save his good looks. As well as I remember, I was able to give only 50 cents one season, but I made it up on the ballfield and gridiron.

We had a gymnasium, too. It was down in an unsavory part of the campus. It was in Egypt, the name derived from the fact that the Nile was just at the bottom of the bluff whereon were perched the toilets of Washington College days. The gym was a little frame building big enough for some 15 or 20 of us to trot around in a circle with Harry Pratt as ringmaster, yelling corrections of our carriage and pace.

Our physical equipment was not so good by present-day standards, but in faculty and the excellent courses they taught, I'll set them against the world of instructors for getting math and languages and literature through some pretty thick adolescent skulls. We had only about 225 students in Academ and Law, classes were small, and professors took a deep interest in us all.

Every year since the college has had boat crews, it has been the ambition of each to make the statue of George Washington wear its colors, red for the Harry Lees and blue for the Albert Sidney crew—and still another coat of white by the college authorities to restore the Father of His Country to his pristine appearance. I never took part in but one of these paintings, but somehow the Albert Sidneys got wind of the Harry Lees' intentions and had barricaded themselves in the third story of the building, and with lumps of anthracite coal then burned in the classrooms, gave us quite a fight before we ousted them. Then two young daredevils scrambled to the roof and cupola to give Father George the works. College legend says that when the noble image was at last scraped, 83 successive layers of red, white, and blue were removed.

To me, Lexington of that day was socially delightful. And gallant, too. Whenever a lady, be she 16 or 60, entered the room, each man was expected to rise and stand beside his seat, as though hoping the fair female would honor him by accepting his chair. And smoking in the presence of a lady, even on the street, was an act so rude that it was not even entered in the unwritten rules of that day. Cigarettes, smoked by only a few, were considered too effeminate for a real grownup man. A pipe was the proper thing, and the stronger it was, the more manly its use.

Although there were only 225 students in all, there were still not enough girls to go around, and popular girls especially had a grand rush. At homes where Sunday calls were permitted, the competition was really intense. To prevent crowding, there was a rule that when new callers came, those present left. This was known as "chasing," and added much to the zest of all. Often we would see some callers enter a house only a few minutes before ten o'clock, the curfew hour, and just a minute before the town clock struck the hour, we would march in to chase the luckless callers away. This entitled us to stay, uninterrupted, until half past ten, or even at some homes, 'til eleven.

At one home with three girls, there were no Sunday calls allowed, but we could take the girls to church. Miss Janet, especially, was dated ahead for months for her Sunday night church-going. Mine, made in October, came due one lovely moonlight night in April. Her home was only three blocks from the church, but by hurrying, we made it in fifteen minutes. Coming home, her pace was so very slow that I could not weigh the time of each step. I asked, "Don't you think we could walk around the block, and go a little faster?" "Oh, no," she replied, "Mother says that we must come straight home."

Strangely enough, it would seem to you younger men, I do not sadden at the thought that, of all the boys and girls of that happy period, not a dozen are alive today. I think happily of the good times we had together, and look forward to reminiscing with them again, with plenty of time to recall many pleasant hours of our college days together. May none of them be missing among the myriads of the saved, is my final wish and prayer!

ington University and American University, was named to coach baseball and soccer, but the lacrosse and basketball jobs remained unfilled as this issue went to press.

Although the lacrosse team's 1958 record was a seemingly unimpressive 5-6, the season was a successful one. Captain Jim Lewis, the General's veteran goalie, climaxed four years of varsity play by being named to the first team All-American squad selected by the United States Lacrosse Coaches' Association. Four other Generals—midfielders Henry LeBrun and Bill Caspari and attackmen Dave Nichols and Ned Pendleton—were honorable mention All-American selections.

Lewis also was honored by the nine college lacrosse coaches in Maryland who unanimously voted him the outstanding goalie to play on Maryland soil during the 1958 season. He received the Kelly Memorial Trophy, symbolic of the honor, at halftime ceremonies of the Johns-Hopkins-Mt. Washington game in Baltimore.

He and LeBrun were named to the allstar team of the Laurie Cox "B" Division in college lacrosse. Lewis became Washington and Lee's second first team All-American. Another goalie, Bill Clements, won the honor—and the Kelley trophy in 1950.

The Generals played the toughest schedule of any team in the country. They dropped 9-4 and 14-11 decisions to Maryland and Johns Hopkins, and were edged by Mt. Washington, 8-7, all three teams among the top four in the nation. The Generals climaxed the season by defeating Virginia, 12-5, to end a 10-year victory drought with the Cavaliers.

In baseball, the Generals had rough going most of the way, but with freshman righthander Roy Carpenter winning four games, they managed to finish strong with victories over Richmond and Virginia for a season mark of 5-9.

The track team won four, lost three, and Skip Rohnke, ace javelin man, won the Big Six title. The tennis squad had a fine year, winning six, losing three and finishing third in the conference tournament. The golfers also had a fine dual match record of 7-3, but they fared poorly in tournament competition.

More honors continued to come to Dom Flora, the most prolific basketball scorer ever to play at Washington and Lee. He was named to the Helms Athletic Foundation first team All-American squad, and he was selected both basketball player of the year and athlete of the year by the Southern Conference Sportswriters Association.

Many folks felt if Washington and Lee had to leave the conference, it was nice to bow out with one of the Generals' finest players ranked as best in the league.

WASHINGTON

H. K. "Cy" Young, who retired June 30 as alumni secretary, was honored on Saturday, May 17, with a dinner-dance by the Washington alumni chapter. The party, preceded by a cocktail hour, was held at the Army-Navy Country Club. Fred Vinson, Jr., '48, spoke of Cy's outstanding service in twenty-nine years of alumni work at Washington and Lee. He also described Cy's wonderful athletic record, climaxed by his unequalled feat of captaining all four major sports at the University during his senior year, 1917. The chapter presented Cy with a handsome portable television set.

Chapter members also had an opportunity to meet James W. Whitehead, new Director of University Relations, and William C. Washburn, '40, successor to Cy.

PHILADELPHIA

A luncheon meeting of the Philadelphia chapter was held on June 4. The guest speaker was Francis Ploman, '24, Swarthmore, Pennsylvania, who talked on the subject of loyalty as it pertains to a Washington and Lee alumnus. The meeting was well-attended.

AUGUSTA-ROCKINGHAM

Retiring alumni secretary H. K. Young was honored May 23, 1958, at the annual meeting of the chapter, held in Staunton, Virginia. Presiding was R. W. Smith, '41, president.

Mr. Young told the group that "it has been my privilege to serve you in a time that I think to be a period of the University's greatest transition. It has been heartwarming to have been associated with the tireless efforts of hundreds of alumni who have worked diligently and unselfishly so that Washington and Lee will be prepared physically and academically to meet her fair share of the national problem of higher education. This is a goal that I am sure we will want to achieve, not just because of our pride in the University, but because we want to provide these facilities for future generations."

Introduced were William C. Washburn, '40, new alumni secretary, and James Whitehead, director of University Relations.

The alumni presented Mr. Young with an electric razor as a parting gift.

New officers elected are: president J. B. Stombeck, '41, Waynesboro; first vice-president, Richard T. Sloan, '42, Harrisonburg; second vice-president, Frank L. Summers, Jr., '52; Staunton; secretary, Raymond E. Freed, '48, Waynesboro; and treasurer, J. Forester Taylor, '49, Staunton.

Washington and Lee alumni presented this portable television set to CY YOUNG at the May dinner-dance in honor of the retiring alumni secretary. Left to right, CY, FRED VINSON, JR., '46; ARTHUR C. SMITH, JR., '41; JOHN A. MCWHORTER, '47; and LOUIS MARTIN, '47.

The judge's avocation now is Confederate history, since judicial duties and illness have caused him to give up his extensive archeological work. He is the only judge in the federal judiciary who is quoted in journals and books on American archeology, and in 1936, he unearthed burials of an Indian culture known as Coles Creek. This discovery, and later excavations which revealed even older remains, were of prime importance in establishing an archeological chronology for the Lower Mississippi Valley.

J. DR. ROBERT L. PINCK, '42, left, head of the X-ray department of Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, New York, explains the new Cobalt Therapy unit, which develops the equivalent of 3,000,000 volts, to the hospital's president, Edward M. Fuller.

■ A FORMER STAR ATHLETE in New Jersey is now head of one of the most modern X-Ray departments in any hospital in the East. He is Dr. Robert L. Pinck, '42, who came to Long Island College Hospital just two years ago from Roosevelt Hospital.

Dr. Pinck made two trips to Stockholm, Sweden, to study the latest x-ray equipment before assisting in completing plans for a brand new, $450,000 x-ray department at the hospital. Only twenty years ago, the hospital opened what was then the most modern x-ray department in the borough of Brooklyn, but that equipment has now become obsolete. Not a single piece of the 1938 equipment could be used efficiently in the new unit.

The new department occupies 5,500 square feet of floor space. Among its special features are a Cobalt Therapy room; an "automater" x-ray processing system which delivers top quality radiographs in six minutes; and a rapid bi-plane film changer which allows two tubes simultaneously to take up to twelve films per second in two directions. There are also conventional therapy units for superficial and deep therapy. The department has seven diagnostic rooms, three with a combination of radiographic and fluoroscopic facilities, one with special facilities for doing magnification work, two straight radiographic rooms, and two cytosopic units.

ROBERT W. POWERS and ERVIN T. POWERS, brothers of Bennettsville, South Carolina, were killed March 28, 1958, when their private plane crashed into a mountainside near Asheville, North Carolina, only a few miles from their destination. The plane was piloted by Ervin, a former Delta Air Lines pilot with more than 3500 air hours. The two were on their way to Asheville to sign contracts they had been awarded for a housing project. Both men were connected with their father's firm, one of the largest mechanical contracting firms in the Southeast. Ervin was a deacon, and Sunday School superintendent at Thomas Memorial Baptist church. He is survived by his widow and three children. Robert, immediate past mayor of Bennettsville, was also a deacon at Thomas Memorial Baptist church, and chairman of the building committee. He was a director of the South Carolina Heating and Air Conditioning Contractors. Surviving him are his widow and five children. Other survivors of the two are Ervin's twin brother, Edgar, their parents, two sisters, and another brother.
