Homecoming at Washington and Lee featured the usual imaginative fraternity house decorations. Delta Tau Delta was a winner with this huge tiger, made of chicken wire and thousands of paper handkerchiefs sprayed orange and black, with big green eyes. The Sewanee Tigers managed to nip the Generals on the football field, however.

FACULTY

■ THE UNIVERSITY HAS established the position of university chaplain, and the Reverend Milton P. Brown of Bessemer, Alabama is now serving in this capacity. He assumed duties formerly held by the Rev. Richard L. Gelwick under the title of director of religious activities. The Reverend Mr. Gelwick resigned last June to become university chaplain at Oberlin College.

The Reverend Mr. Brown, a graduate of Birmingham Southern College and the Louisville Presbyterian Seminary, is completing work on his Ph.D. degree at Duke University. He will teach one course each semester in the Department of Religion here, in addition to his work with student Christian organizations and chaplain duties.

Two other new men have been appointed to the faculty and staff. They are Dr. John R. Jones, who is assistant professor of history; and Christopher McKee, who is catalogue librarian.

Jones replaces Dr. Thomas P. Hughes who has been granted a one-year leave of absence for research work in Munich, Germany, under a Fulbright fellowship. A graduate of Sewanee and the University of North Carolina, Jones has held teaching positions at both schools. He is a native of Huntsville, Alabama.

McKee replaced Harold R. Jenkins on the McCormick Library staff. McKee is a graduate of St. Thomas of Houston and is currently working toward his master's degree in library science at the University of Michigan.

■ TWO PROFESSORS had articles published in the October issue of The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography. Dr. Charles Turner, professor of history, wrote on "The Franklin Society, 1800-1891," a political group in Rockbridge County to which many prominent men belonged, including Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson. Dr. Fitzgerald Flournoy, professor of English, was the author of "Hugh Blair Grigsby, A Virginia Boy During the War of 1812."

■ TEN YEARS OF TRAVEL and research have culminated for history professor Dr. Ollinger Crenshaw in a soon-to-be-published book on the history of Washington and Lee. Tentatively titled "General Lee's College," the one-volume book is to be published by the University of North Carolina Press.

The book covers the period from the founding of Liberty Hall Academy in 1782, to the present. In order to get background material dealing with student life in the past, changes in curriculums, customs, athletics, religious outlooks, and the like, Dr. Crenshaw has traveled to Yale, Harvard, and Tulane Universities for research. The volume will be between 500 and 550 pages long.

■ ONE OF THE University's most popular professors, Dr. Walter A. Flick, died Thanksgiving day, November 27, at University of Virginia hospital in Charlottesville. Funeral services were held in Fairfield on November 29.

Dr. Flick had been stricken on November 15 with an aneurysm of the aorta to his heart. He and Mrs. Flick and Treasurer Earl Mattingly had attended the Hampden-Sydney football game that afternoon here, and after he reached home, he was seized with the heart condition. An emergency operation at Charlottesville followed on November 16, and the damaged aorta was replaced with a plastic one. He made good progress toward recovery until the day before Thanksgiving, when he was stricken again. Another operation was performed, but he did not rally.

He had been a member of the faculty since 1924, and had been head of the psychology department since 1936. He was a member of the National Preparatory School Committee on Schools and Colleges, and former chairman of the Commission on Secondary Schools of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. He was widely in demand as a public speaker and had addressed literally thousands of persons in Virginia and surrounding states. He traveled to many alumni meetings throughout the country, and alumni and students alike knew him as "Doc Flick." He was 63 years old.

■ THE UNIVERSITY'S DEPARTMENT of student health has recommended, in the annual president's report on the university, that steps should be taken to decrease the number of automobiles owned and operated by students here.

In calling for fewer student cars, Dr. Fred A. Feddeman stated that

"each year sees an increasing number of automobile accidents, and this past year was no exception. Fortunately, none of our students was critically injured during the past year; the same cannot be said for several students from neighboring women's colleges who were riding in cars operated by Washington and Lee students."

At nearby University of Virginia, authorities decided to decrease student cars by gradual means, eliminating cars one class at the time. Freshmen this year are forbidden cars; next year, freshmen and sophomores will participate in the ban, and so forth, until by 1961, only graduate students and seniors at Virginia will be permitted automobiles. Needless to say, a mighty howl arose from the students affected, with some freshmen stating they might have attended another institution had they known in time of the ban on automobiles.

GIFTS

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE has received three gifts totaling nearly $7,000 from two corporation educational foundations and an alumnus.

Stock valued at $3,786 was turned over to Washington and Lee by an alumnus, while cash contributions of $2,000 and $1,000 were received from Burlington Industries Foundation of Greensboro, North Carolina, and the Lockheed Leadership Fund of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, Burbank, Calif.

Both corporation grants were renewals of previous gifts made to Washington and Lee, President Gaines said. Half of the Burlington gift must be applied to two upper-class scholarships, with the remaining $1,000 to be used at the university's discretion. The Lockheed grant is unrestricted, Gaines said.

The Burlington scholarships are currently held by Robert Conrad Lemon, Eagle Rock, Virginia, senior, and A. Prescott Rowe, Fredericksburg, Virginia, junior.

■ EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE Society of the United States has made grants totaling $125,000 to 125 privately supported liberal arts colleges throughout the country.

Washington and Lee received $1,000 of this money, aimed directly at improving faculty salaries. Only one other college in Virginia was selected to receive a grant.

■ A SCHOLARSHIP IN JOURNALISM has been established at Washington and Lee by the Register Foundation of Sandusky, Ohio, in memory of the late publisher of the Sandusky Register.

The award, carrying an annual stipend of $750, will be known as the Dudley A. White Memorial Journalism Scholarship. It will help cover tuition and other expenses of a qualified journalism major each year.

The scholarship had been awarded for 1958-59 to Michael D. Poole of Vancouver, a sophomore.

Dudley A. White, Jr., is a 1952 journalism graduate of Washington and Lee.

Alumni and friends of Washington and Lee may obtain a picture of the University suitable for framing by sending one dollar to the Alumni Office, Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Virginia. The photo is printed in full rich color, and shows the familiar view of the columns. Picture size is 15 by 21 inches. A limited supply of these pictures is available.

SPEAKERS

■ DR. FREDSON BOWERS, English professor at the University of Virginia, was the first of a number of outstanding speakers at Washington and Lee during the fall. Dr. Bowers, a noted bibliographer, spoke on October 3 at the first seminar in literature. He was followed by Maurice Coindreau, professor of French at Princeton University and a noted translator of American authors.

Dean Henry L. Kamphoefner of the School of Design at North Carolina State College spoke on "New Architecture of North Carolina" and showed colored slides, in a program sponsored by the department of Fine Arts.

Ross L. Malone, '32, president of the American Bar Association, was invited to make the principal address here at the annual Omicron Delta Kappa Tap Day ceremonies. His visit to the campus was his second in six months, as he was here last June to receive an honorary degree as Doctor of Laws.

On November 4, the special assistant to the publisher of Time Magazine, John Scott, spoke on "Communism and Democracy in Africa." He has recently returned from a world journey as a special fact-finder for the magazine.

ALUMNI

■ A PORTRAIT OF the late John Higgins Williams, '24, was presented to the University by a group of his friends on October 29. The ceremony took place at the Student Union building before a large assemblage of faculty and friends.

The project was initiated by Lawton M. Calhoun, '31, of Savannah, Georgia, and thirty-three alumni contributed to the fund for the portrait. Assisting the project in Lexington were Dean Frank J. Gilliam, '17, and Dr. Ollinger Crenshaw, '25. David Silvette of Richmond, portrait artist, painted the likeness of Mr. Williams. Mr. Silvette has also painted a portrait of President Francis P. Gaines.

Mr. Williams joined the Washington and Lee faculty in 1928, after receiving his master's degree at the University. At the time of his death on March 2, 1954, he was associate professor of Political Science.

Miss Mary Barclay, who was for years with the Alumni Office, unveiled the portrait. Speakers included Mr. Calhoun and Dr. Gaines. Among those attending the presentation were Dr. Keener Frazer, University of North Carolina, and Dr. Randolph T. Shields, Jr., '32, of Staunton, Virginia.

R. N. Latture, '15, head of the political science department, presided at the brief ceremonies. He described Mr. Williams as "the students' friend," well-beloved over the years by a host of students. A telegram from Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, a close friend of Mr. Williams, was read to the group.

■ SIX ALUMNI participated in the North Carolina-Virginia Regional College English Association meeting at Washington and Lee on October 25. They were William B. Guthrie, '44, University of Richmond; Edgar F. Stannon, Jr., '39, University of Virginia; Archibald B. Shepperson, '18, University of Virginia; and George H. Foster, '34; Fitzgerald Flournoy, '21; and Sidney M. B. Coulling, '46, all of Washington and Lee. Dr. Marvin B. Perry, Jr., head of the department of English here, is president of the group. More than one hundred English professors from over 50 colleges attended.

■ CONTRIBUTIONS TO Washington and Lee's annual Alumni Fund campaign totaled $99,555.78 for 1957-58, alumni secretary William C. Washburn, '40, has announced.

Washburn said the figure does not include an additional $14,126 given by alumni to establish a scholarship honoring Harry K. "Cy" Young, who retired in June after 29 years as Washington and Lee's alumni secretary.

Gifts were received from 3,378 alumni during the campaign, Washburn said. In 1956-57, 3,369 contributors gave $102,461.26.

UNDERGRADUATES

■ WHEN DANIEL BLAIN, JR., registered with the freshman class in September, he ran out of space where entrance forms asked him to list other members of his family who had been Washington and Lee students.

Starting with his great-great-great-grandfather, Daniel Blain, in 1789, all of Blain's forefathers have attended the college. The 20-year-old son of a Philadelphia doctor is the sixth in line of direct descent to enroll.

Among his other predecessors are great-great-grandfather Samuel Wilson Blain, 1825; great-grandfather Daniel Blain, 1858; grandfather John Mercer Blain, 1893; and his father, Daniel Blain, 1921. And young Blain can add a list of uncles and great-uncles who also went to Washington and Lee.

He says he feels "right at home" at Washington and Lee.

■ WORKERS HAVE COMPLETED extensive remodeling of Washington and Lee University's Troubadour Theater which provided the school's student dramatics group with a better and safer place to stage future productions.

D. E. Brady, Jr., superintendent of buildings and grounds, said $20,000 was spent last summer on the two-story brick structure on Lexington's North Main Street.

Among major projects were installation of a fire-resistant wall between stage and auditorium, a new asbestos fire curtain, and a sprinkler system. Offices and rest rooms were relocated, storage space rebuilt, and all necessary painting completed.

The Troubadours, under the direction of Professor L. J. Lanich, produce four to six plays in the 196-seat theater each year.

■ SCHOLARSHIP ASSISTANCE for undergraduates is now at its highest level in the history of the University.

This year, 185 students—representing nineteen percent of Washington and Lee's 959 undergraduates—are receiving $119,280 in financial assistance, according to figures announced by the university's Committee on Scholarships.

Of three hundred and thirteen freshmen entering this fall, fifty-three are receiving scholarship aid totaling $34,510.

Most funds are derived from endowed scholarships entirely administered and awarded by the university. Nineteen scholarships, involving a total yearly stipend of $14,500, are awarded by outside sources, including the Union Carbide Educational Fund, National Merit Scholarships, Burlington Industries Foundation, General Motors Educational Fund, and the Interfraternity Council.

Not included in the $119,280 undergraduate total is $18,000 in scholarship aid administered from endowed funds by the School of Law. Twenty-seven students are sharing in these grants this year, says Dean Clayton E. Williams. The average undergraduate annual stipend for Washington and Lee scholarships is $645. Five years ago this figure represented the maximum yearly aid extended by any Washington and Lee grant. Freshmen receive an average annual stipend of $651.

Today, Dean of Students Frank J. Gilliam points out, endowed scholarships carry annual stipends ranging up to $1,600 in value. The most coveted of awards, the Robert E. Lee Scholarships, range in value from $1,000 to $1,600, and are extended to five freshmen on a four-year basis each year. Two Letitia Pate Evans Scholarships of $1,250 and six of $650 are awarded each year to freshmen. Although some awards require special qualifications as requested by their donors, virtually all Washington and Lee four-year scholarships are extended on the basis of character, academic record, clear demonstration of financial need, and promise of leadership and future usefulness to society.

Most upperclass scholarships, endowed and otherwise, are based upon collegiate academic achievement and are given generally on an annual basis. Four-year grants are renewable each year, depending upon fulfillment of academic standards set by the scholarship committee.

R.O.T.C.

■ THE ROTC UNIT numbers 346 cadets this year, smallest since it was founded in 1951. At that time, when the Korean War was in progress, more than half the school's enrollment of 1,000 students participated.

This year's group includes 64 seniors, 61 juniors, 91 sophomores, and 130 freshmen. Last June, 59 ROTC cadets were given reserve commissions in the army.

James M. Crews, Jr., a senior from Memphis, Tennessee, is cadet colonel and regimental commander this year.

THE CAMPUS

■ THE BIGGEST Parents' Weekend in the four-year history of the event here took place October 31-November 2. Seven hundred and ninety-six fathers, mothers, and guardians of 373 students took part. Many of these fathers also attended Washington and Lee.

The program included a general assembly on Saturday morning, at which President Gaines, the deans, study body president C. Royce Hough, III, and Director of University Relations James W. Whitehead were speakers. It was followed by a luncheon for parents, students, and faculty. There were also meetings with professors, panel discussions, a soccer game, a Glee Club concert, a coffee hour, and a special exhibit by the science departments. All seventeen fraternities staged receptions.

At a Parents' Advisory Council meeting on October 31, the issue of student automobiles was discussed at length, and a special committee of parents was named to study and make recommendations to the University administration concerning student ownership and operation of automobiles. The matter was brought up by chairman W. K. Allen Ferguson, whose son was injured October 24 in an automobile mishap which took the life of another Washington and Lee student.

Parents' Weekend began here in 1955. The following year, the Alumni Council judged the University's parents' program the best in the nation.

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE'S "Home Edition" radio news program began its tenth year of service to Lexington and Rockbridge county this year.

Sponsored by the communications laboratory of the Department of Journalism and Communications, the program provides listeners with a complete summary of world, national, state, and local developments Monday through Friday each week at 10 p.m.

Programs originate from the campus studios and are aired over station WREL, NBC outlet in Lexington.

Under faculty supervision of journalism instructor Rod Gelatt, all newscasts are edited, written, and broadcast by students. A staff of nineteen, headed by news director Robert L. Elder, Nashville, Tennessee junior, is organized into five production units, one for each weekday and each under a "senior editor."

They use Associated Press wire copy for state and national news, but rely on student reporters from other journalism classes for complete local news coverage.

LAW SCHOOL

■ THE WASHINGTON AND Lee Moot Court team has earned a berth in the National Competition to be held in New York City during December. The team was runner-up in the nine-school Region IV elimination held November 8 and 9 at the University of North Carolina.

Richard Anderson, Walter Burton and Charles Swope represented Washington and Lee in the competition, with Swope serving as an alternate. The three, all senior law students, were selected in a competition held last spring.

The Washington and Lee team was defeated in the regular final round by the University of Virginia. Both teams will be eligible to compete in the Nationals at New York.

Judging was based on the oral presentation of the students, their familiarity with their case, ability to understand and answer questions propounded by the court, their demeanor before the court, and their written brief submitted to the court.

The hypothetical case argued is United States v. Akkro Corp., which involves the constitutionality of a federal statute prohibiting corporations from making any expenditure or contribution in connection with a federal election. Washington and Lee represented the government on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Washington and Lee won the regional competition in 1954 and Washington and Lee's Moot Court team again entered the national finals in New York City this year. In district competition, they came out second. 1957; the University of Virginia in 1955 and 1956.

Approximately twenty teams will be entered in the National Competition. This year marks the third time that Washington and Lee has been eligible to enter a team in the New York finals.

■ LAW PROFESSORS FROM Washington and Lee took prominent parts at the Virginia State Bar Association meeting at White Sulphur Springs at the end of the summer.

Professor Charles R. McDowell presided at a panel discussion participated in by recent graduates of Virginia law schools. The topic was legal education. Among the panel members were Robert R. Huntley, '50, a new member of the law school faculty, and Lewis R. Minter, who taught law at Washington and Lee for two years.

Professor Charles R. Light introduced one of the speakers at the convention—Professor Edward Morgan of Vanderbilt University.

ATHLETICS

■ FROM THE STANDPOINT of the won-lost ledger, it was more of the same in football this year. However, the record-book—as important a document as it is—doesn't tell the whole story of Washington and Lee's 1958 football season.

The Generals won only one game, lost seven, better than last year's 0-8 mark, but still not a successful campaign, by any means. Coach Lee McLaughlin, who has suffered about as much hard luck in two seasons as most coaches do in a lifetime, looks on his 1958 team as a successful venture in one respect. He has shown that it is possible to "recruit" talented football players, even without the inducement of athletic scholarships.

This year's Washington and Lee team was a young outfit. Only five players on a squad of 48 were seniors, only four were juniors. The rest were sophomores and freshmen, who made mistakes and learned many football lessons the hard way, but according to McLaughlin, these are the boys who will bring Washington and Lee's football out of the doldrums during the next few years.

Immediately following the final game of the 1957 season, Coach Mac began a long, difficult search for football talent. He was looking for boys with athletic ability whose parents could afford to send them to Washington and Lee, and he was looking for that relatively rare individual, the talented football player whose work in the classroom would qualify him for one of 40-some academic scholarships which Washington and Lee can offer to freshmen. Among hundreds of contacts he found some of each kind. Always emphasizing the opportunity at Washington and Lee to get a superior education while playing football without the pressures of subsidization, Coach McLaughlin Quarterback JACK GRONER lets fly a pass against Hampden-Sydney in the Generals' 12-6 loss to the Tigers on Wilson Field. The little Metairie, Louisiana, junior suffered a back injury early in the contest, but stayed in the game on offense all the way. He was ruled out of the Generals' season finale against Wittenberg the next week on doctor's orders.

interested between 40 and 50 qualified young men in coming to Washington and Lee this year. Of these, he judged 24 sufficiently well-versed in football savvy to merit invitation to early practice. The others went to make up the freshman team which played a five-game schedule, and which will be a valuable "feeder" medium for the varsity in years to come.

It was an upperclassman, however, who gave the Generals their spark in 1958. Passing master Jack Groner, 165 pound junior quarterback, was the offensive key to success. In the six games he played, the Generals were never outclassed, for his accurate aerials were always a touchdown threat. Groner completed 59 of 107 passes for 815 yards, just 38 yards shy of the eight-game mark of last year. His favorite target was senior Frank Hoss.

Game by game, the season went this way:

W&L 8, Centre 27—first-game jitters, the usual mistakes by untested freshmen and sophomores, and the absence of Groner cost W&L this one. Four pass interceptions and three lost fumbles kept the W&L attack stalled, except for a 43-yard touchdown pass from junior quarterback Rich Aberson to senior halfback Clark Lea.

W&L 13, Franklin and Marshall 14—This was one the Generals should have won. Groner's passing and stubborn team defensive play had W&L ahead 13-8 with two minutes to play. The Generals had to punt, F&M's safety man ran it back 61 yards, and four plays later the Diplomats scored with 30 seconds remaining.

W&L 13, R&M 12—This was the sweet one, where the Generals reversed the procedure of the previous week by coming from behind on their own. Trailing 6-12 in the final quarter, W&L drove deep into R-M territory twice on Groner's passing, and the second time they made it all the way on Martin's two-yard plunge. Big Bob Harrison's placement was perfect and the Generals had themselves a victory over the team that was to win the state Little Eight Crown and the Mason-Dixon Conference championship.

W&L 6, Washington 12— Coach Carl Snavely's always tough Bears found the Generals a different team from the one they roughed up 47-0 the year before. Groner sparkled again, engineering a 95-yard touch-down drive in the final quarter which forced Washington into a frantic effort at ball control to preserve the win.

W&L 7, Southern Illinois 36— The Generals led 7-6 with two minutes to go in the first half, but then mistakes began to pile up. An intercepted pitchout and a fumble deep in their own territory gave the Salukis two gift scores, and the other two were the results of the Generals' last quarter gambling to get back in the game.

W&L 0, Sewanee 12—This was the closest call the unbeaten Tigers, had, as they rolled up an average of 36 points a game over eight opponents. A Generals fourth-down thrust was halted on the Sewanee one-inch line in the third period, and on numerous other occasions the Tigers were in danger.

W&L 6, Hampden-Sydney 12— The Tigers broke a 6-6 tie in the second period with an 85-yard scoring gallop by Little All-American halfback Bill Benson, then spent the rest of the afternoon fighting off repeated W&L scoring threats. With four minutes to play, W&L was on the H-S 11, first and 10, but the General receivers just couldn't hang on to the ball on Groner's end zone passes.

W&L 0, Wittenberg 51—Just about everything that could go wrong did go wrong in the first period against the unbeaten Ohioans. Without Groner, who was injured in the Hampden-Sydney game, the Generals had no offense, and Wittenberg's power was too much.

■ IN THE PRESENCE of one of the greatest gatherings of former football stars ever brought together, Harry K. Young, '17, was inducted into the Football Hall of Fame on October 28, 1958. Among the spectators were President D. D. Eisenhower, General Douglas McArthur, and General Omar Bradley.

This was the latest of many honors which have come to Cy Young in the field of sports. He is generally acknowledged as being the finest athlete ever turned out by Washington and Lee, and the only one to captain all four major sports. The former alumni secretary, Cy is the only man in America to have been named to both the Football Hall of Fame and the Basketball Hall of Fame. His record for the 100-yard dash at Washington and Lee still stands, never equalled by later students.

At the award dinner of the National Football Foundation, nearly 2,000 persons watched the induction of the nine new members this year. As Cy received his certificate, a hearty cheer went up from a corner table occupied by a group of alumni. A reporter present declared, "Those who know Cy (and who doesn't?) and those who grieve for the Washington and Lee football teams of old would have rejoiced in Cy's moment. He was everywhere, shaking a hand here, bending an elbow there. Not even the President escaped his attentions."

The press reported that Cy had talked energetically to the President, and apparently Ike had enjoyed it for he laughed and clapped Cy on the back. What they were chatting about was the baseball game in the spring of 1915, when Cy played against General Bradley at West Point. A fellow named Bob Neyland was the pitcher and the catcher was Elmer Oliphant, one of the all-time gridiron greats of West Point. Cy managed to steal five bases against this formidable array of Army talent, a fact that Omar Bradley couldn't forget, and one that the President, also a West Point cadet at that time, smiled about.

Among the Washington and Lee alumni at the Hall of Fame dinner were: Captain Dick Smith, '13, who represented the University; C. W. Streit, '10, Birmingham, Alabama; W. L. Webster, '12, Schenectady, New York; James C. Ambler, '18, Montclair, New Jersey; the Rev. Robert B. Campbell, '24, Hickory, North Carolina; John F. Hendon, '24, Birmingham, Alabama; Stuard A. Wurzbarger, '28, Glen Ridge, New Jersey; R. P. DeVan, Jr., '34, Charleston, West Virginia; Clark B. Winter, '37, Garden City, New York; Earl B. Morgan, Jr., '40, New York City; Robert E. Steele, III, '41, Rye, New York; and Barton W. Morris, Jr., '43, Roanoke, Virginia.

A cocktail party preceding the stag dinner was given for Cy and Ruth Young by Pin and Mrs. Webster, and an after-dinner party by Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hendon.

President Francis P. Gaines

DR. FRANCIS P. GAINES, Washington and Lee's president for almost twenty-nine years, will retire from office at the end of the current school year.

President Gaines, who is sixty-seven years old, said "considerations of general health" have prompted his decision to step down from the job. The University's board of trustees, meeting in Lexington in October, granted his request for retirement with regret. The trustees also informed Dr. Gaines of their desire to continue his relationship with the college in some other capacity. Details of this future association have not yet been disclosed.

Dr. Gaines indicated the effective date of his retirement would be September 1, 1959. He and Mrs. Gaines will continue to live in Rockbridge county, at their country home, "Penrobin."

The president said that the matter of his retirement had been in his mind for some time. "Since, however," he declared, "we are entering a financial campaign of utmost importance, trying to give our boys the desperately needed science facilities, I felt that I owed the University one more year of effort."

Dr. Gaines, with other campus officials, will participate in a vigorous program during the winter and spring to raise two million dollars for Washington and Lee, and will address many groups.

To Retire Next September

James R. Caskie, '06, rector of the University, said, "There is no adequate way to measure or express what Dr. Gaines has done for and what he has meant to Washington and Lee. Only the members of the board and a few of the key men in the faculty and administration can begin to appreciate the magnitude and breadth of his service. Personally, I am of the opinion that if the accomplishments could be actually stated, it would be found that no other man has done so much for our University as has Dr. Gaines."

Dr. Gaines became Washington and Lee's head in 1930, when the University's total assets amounted to some $3,290,000. At the close of the fiscal year on June 30, the assets this year totaled more than $16,000,000.

For many years, he has been recognized as one of America's leading educators. Fourteen honorary degrees have been conferred upon him by other colleges and universities, including Columbia University, Duke University, Baylor, the University of Chattanooga, Furman University, the University of North Carolina, Hampden-Sydney College, Mercer University, the University of Richmond, Wake Forest College, William Jewell College, Waynesboro College, Rollins College, and the University of the South (Sewanee).

He has served as president of the Association of American Colleges, and the Southern University Conference. He headed the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges from its organization in 1953 until 1955, and in 1957, he served as awards jury chairman of the Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge, Pennsylvania. He was a trustee of the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace from 1931 to 1951, and for a number of years he has been chairman of the duPont Radio and Television Awards. From 1941 to 1951, he served as chairman of the Virginia State Committee for War Bonds, and was decorated by Great Britain with the King's Medal for Service in 1946. He is the author of "Lee—The Final Achievement," a summary of General Robert E. Lee's final five years of his life, spent as president of Washington College.

The board of trustees has named five of its members to a special committee which will begin the search for a successor to Dr. Gaines. Chairman is Christopher T. Chenery, '09; and members are Joseph T.

Lykes, '09; Dr. Huston St. Clair, '27; Dr. John Newton Thomas, '24; and Joseph L. Lanier, '27. The committee at times will include as associate members one representative of the alumni, one of the faculty, and one of other friends of the University. Mr. Caskie said at the board meeting on October 10 that "we have relatively few names at the present time" submitted for consideration as president. He indicated no successor would be named for a year.

Text of the board of trustees' formal acceptance of Dr. Gaines' request for retirement, and its appreciation to him is as follows:

"Resolved, that the Board of Trustees of Washington and Lee University does, with reluctance and only at his insistence, accept the resignation of Francis Pendleton Gaines as President of this University, effective as of September 1, 1959.

"Resolved further that the Board expresses to Dr. Gaines its profound appreciation of his incomparable contribution to the University and its hope that he will be available after the effective date of his resignation as president, to continue to render to this University such service as the Board may desire, and as may be acceptable to him."

Leaders in their fields, all but one of the board members are alumni of the institution.

Rector is James R. Caskie, '06, of Lynchburg, Virginia. A successful lawyer, he has been a member of the board since 1924.

Dr. Walter L. Carson, '15, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Richmond, Virginia, was named to the board in 1926.

Dr. James Morrison Hutcheson, '02, is a physician in Richmond, and a member of the board since 1935.

Dr. John Newton Thomas, '24, a board member since 1938, is a professor at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond.

Homer Adams Holt, '18, is a prominent West Virginia attorney, and a former Governor of the state. A resident of Charleston, he became a board member in 1940.

Joseph Taliaferro Lykes, '09, is chairman of the board of the Lykes Brothers Steamship Lines, and has served on the board since 1941. He lives in Tampa, Florida.

Dr. Huston St. Clair, '22, has been a board member since 1943. Now retired from the active practice of medicine, he is president of Jewell Ridge Coal Corporation, Tazewell, Virginia.

Walter A. McDonald, '10, a member of the board since 1945, is president of the McDonald Printing Company of Cincinnati.

Christopher T. Chenery, '09, has been on the board since 1950. He is a prominent utility executive and is chairman of the boards of the Offshore Gas Company and the Southern National Gas Company. He lives in Pelham Manor, New York.

Senator Harry Flood Byrd, is the only member who is not an alumnus, but his son, Richard E. Byrd, '45, attended Washington and Lee. Senator Byrd, one of the most respected members of Congress, became a board member in 1951. He lives in Berryville, Virginia.

Judge Kennon Caithness Whittle, '14, is a member of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, and makes his home in Martinsville, Virginia. He joined the board in 1952.

James Stewart Buxton, '36, of Memphis, Tennessee, is an investment broker. Youngest member of the board, he accepted appointment in 1953.

Joseph Lamar Lanier, '27, became a trustee in 1953. Among other interests, he is chairman of the board of the West Point Manufacturing Company in West Point, Georgia.

Judge John Minor Wisdom, '25, lives in New Orleans, Louisiana, and joined the board in 1957. He is judge of the United States Federal District Court in New Orleans.

Stricter Rules Are Set Up

STRICTER RULES governing student and fraternity conduct at Washington and Lee were put into effect this fall, and the office of University Proctor was approved to assist in enforcing the rules.

Last May, the faculty in a special meeting unanimously reaffirmed the policy regarding student behavior found in Article Twelve, Section Four, of the Faculty Rules and Regulations. The articles forbid intoxication, gambling and immorality as "serious offenses against the welfare, the progress, and the reputation of the institution."

In addition, President Gaines appointed a special committee to study the problems of student behavior and to suggest means whereby the responsibility of the faculty in this matter could be implemented.

The committee, composed of Dr. E. C. Griffith, chairman; and professors A. R. Borden, G. Francis Drake, George H. Foster, '34; William H. Hinton, '29; W. A. Jenks, '39; Frank J. Gilliam, '17, and James D. Farrar, '49, ex-officio, worked on the new regulations during the summer months, and the faculty approved their recommendations. The board of trustees also officially approved the new job of proctor for the University.

Text of the committee report is as follows:

I.

The conduct of a minority of the students, especially during the 1957-58 session, has done harm to the name of Washington and Lee University; it has damaged the reputation of our student body; and it has created grave concern on the part of the Faculty Administration, and responsible students.

The faculty, given the responsibility for "control of the habits and conduct of the students and their organizations" (Art. XII, sec. 4) by the Board of Trustees, desires to promote the right of student self-government. But we would emphasize that no right is given without the acceptance of an accompanying responsibility. To believe otherwise is to confuse right with license. Universities have an obligation to help students understand their responsibilities. Accordingly, we hold that students must maintain standards of acceptable conduct and ungentlemanly behavior on the part of individuals or groups will not be tolerated by this University.

We believe that recent events have shown the need to define the type of behavior that the Faculty considers to be "offenses against the welfare, the progress and the reputation of the institution" (Art. XII, sec. 4). We believe also that the growth over the last few years, of conduct that has damaged the good name of this University indicates a clear need for more effective means of developing an atmosphere in which gentlemanly behavior will be an accepted mode of life rather than one that must, unfortunately, be imposed on those few who have been guilty of creating this situation.

II.

In accord with this philosophy and in recognition of the offenses that prompted the Faculty to act on May 19, the Committee offers the following regulations and proposes they be incorporated in Article XII, section 4 of the Faculty Rules and Regulations. We offer these regulations with no thought of limiting reasonable student rights, but as an effort to develop an attitude that will permit this University to fulfill its responsibilities in the development of the minds and spirits of our students. To this end we invite the cooperation of all concerned in the effective administration of these regulations.

1. Public Drinking: This has always been considered a "grave offense." Accordingly, we reaffirm emphatically the provisions of Article XII, section 4, 2 of the Faculty Rules and Regulations.

Guests in fraternity houses: The right to entertain guests in fraternity houses involves the responsibility to preserve an atmosphere of propriety in accord with commonly accepted standards. Accordingly, a. No women guests are permitted above the first floor of a fraternity house.

b. Women guests are to leave fraternity houses by 2:00 a.m. except on weekends of University Dances when the hour shall be 3:00 a.m.

c. Fraternity members and their guests must conduct themselves in such manner as not to disturb the peace and sensibilities of the community.

3. Fraternity house parties: We recognize the existing regulations of the Interfraternity Council controlling the number and scheduling of fraternity house parties. The

Capital Fund Campaign Gets Under Way

WASHINGTON AND LEE University's largest capital fund campaign in its two hundred and ten year history is now under way.

Long-range goal of the drive is close to seven million dollars, with alumni, parents, friends of the University, and corporations being asked to participate in the two-phase campaign.

The plans call for a nine-year drive, with the majority of funds going toward furnishing modern instructional and living quarters for the campus. The first phase, to provide for immediate needs of science and journalism at the University, began in November. The goal is $2,000,000. The second phase will be undertaken at a later date, and will seek $4,917,195 to remodel existing structures, to provide another dormitory, an auditorium, better athletic facilities, an amphitheater and arboretum, and utilities.

In forty-four or more areas all over the United States, volunteer committees are working in behalf of the capital fund campaign. They are being assisted by delegations from the University, including President Francis P. Gaines, Director of University Relations James W. Whitehead, and Alumni Secretary William C. Washburn.

There is a maxim: "In an age of progress, a university that stands still is falling behind." Washington and Lee is not standing still. The past decade has seen forward strides in notable sectors, such as:

general and educational budget up 56 per cent; income from endowment funds up 178 per cent; annual giving by alumni, up 365 per cent. Such figures are the hallmarks of a forward-moving university. In terms of new buildings, however, progress has been less spectacular. Since the end of World War II, only two academic structures have been built: a temporary cinder block annex behind the chemistry building, and Jessie Ball duPont Hall, for humanities and fine arts.

Of the basic sciences, only chemistry is now reasonably well-housed. Biology, geology, physics, and pre-engineering are being taught under conditions that, in this day and age, can only be called sub-standard.

The first phase of the campaign seeks funds to build a new biology and geology building, at a cost of $870,000, and a new physics building for $450,000. Remodeling of Howe Hall for the chemistry department would cost another $135,000. Remodeling Reid Hall, to house the journalism and pre-engineering departments, has been set at $237,000, and the erection of a maintenance center would cost $158,000.

Proposed addition to the academic plant will follow the traditional architecture of the campus. The top photo shows the architect's drawing of the new biology and geology building, new physics building, and the existing chemistry building, which will receive an extensive remodeling job. The lower photo shows how Reid Hall will look when remodeled. It will then be used to house the journalism and pre-engineering departments.

Before embarking on this drive for capital improvements, the University sought to determine what people thought about it. A professional opinion survey was conducted among a representative sampling of those who would be asked to participate. The findings were gratifying. They revealed a very high degree, ninety-three percent, of approval for undertaking a fundraising program now, and an above par (ninety-one percent) willingness to make a subscription. Washington and Lee's supporters seem ready to go to work for their University.

As Dr. Francis P. Gaines says, "For its material needs the University depends now, as it has always depended, upon those who love it and who believe that the humble successors of Lee can make fruitful for time and eternity the inspiring confidence of Washington, expressed in the gifts of faith."

Homecoming

SOME OF WASHINGTON AND LEE'S best-known athletes of other years were participants in the 1958 Homecoming, held on November 8, in Lexington. H. K. "Cy" Young, '17, who was recently inducted into football's National Hall of Fame, was honored at halftime, and with him, former teammates on General grid teams, and outstanding basketball players he coached during the 1933-39 period.

Good times, good fellowship, and long talk sessions characterized the weekend, as old friends got together after long absences.

Among those present:

Edward Arthur Donahue, "Jiggs," was captain and quarterback of the 1914 team. He lives in Weston, Massachusetts now.

R. Lee Buehring, "Cannon Ball," was the powerful fullback of the unbeaten 1914 eleven. He is an attorney in Huntington, West Virginia.

Alexander Gallatin Paxton, '17, was fullback. He is from Greenville, Mississippi, and a retired general.

R. B. McDougle, '17, financial wizard as manager of the football team for two years. He now practices law in Parkersburg, West Virginia.

Harry E. Moran, '13, best pitcher in Washington and Lee history, lost only one game in four years, and played pro ball for Detroit. He lives in Beckley, West Virginia.

L. Battle Bagley, '16, of Fayetteville, Tennessee, was the biggest little man ever to play for the Generals. At 126 pounds, he was a brilliant quarterback and a fine defensive player.

How Will the New Dining

By FRANK PARSONS, '54

THE HUGE ORANGE steel skeleton of Washington and Lee's new dining hall is symbolic of both problems and challenges for a fraternity system here that began in 1855.

That is the opinion of university officials and the majority of the residents of Washington and Lee's seventeen national Greek-letter societies.

Next September, when the dining hall and several companion dormitory projects are put into use, all freshmen will be required to take meals there. Heretofore, most freshmen—around 85 percent of a class which averages slightly over 300—have eaten in fraternity dining rooms, first as pledges during the initial semester and then as full-fledged brothers after initiation at the beginning of the second semester.

The transfer of these boarders to the university dining hall or "commons" during their freshman year is expected to have both a short- and long-range impact on fraternities.

The houses will feel immediately the loss of revenue from freshmen diners. Based on the average pledge class of fifteen students who pay an average monthly board bill of $55, this loss figures to be $825 a month for the typical chapter.

Because of economies realized through wholesale purchasing, not all of a fraternity man's food bill is expended on food, but is used to pay other expenses of the chapter house. And because many of these expenses are fixed—fuel, light, water, taxes, maintenance—the absence of freshmen boarders will place an added financial burden on upperclass members of the chapter. Some house treasurers estimate it will run five to ten dollars per member per month.

Membership varies at Washington and Lee, ranging from 65 to 70 in the larger houses down to around 20 for the smallest. Houses with relatively small membership will feel the pinch more than the larger chapters.

"I think one or two fraternities will have to close down in a few years in light of the coming financial situation," says Don Morine, senior from Cleveland, Ohio, and president of Sigma Chi.

This opinion is echoed by other chapter presidents, although none thinks his house will be one of those having to pull out.

"I think seventeen houses are too many for a small school like Washington and Lee, anyway," says Jerry Lindquist, of Memphis, Tennessee, president of Lambda Chi Alpha.

"We're going to examine our expenses very carefully and attempt to cut costs," says Joe Stevens, of Huntington, West Virginia, head of Kappa Sigma.

Recognizing the important and almost integral role the fraternity system plays in overall university life, Washington and Lee has named a special faculty committee which will offer financial advice to houses experiencing difficulties. The university holds mortgages on all but one fraternity, and readjustments in the amortization process have been suggested as a means by which Washington and Lee can assist fraternities seeking help.

An alumni newsletter of at least one fraternity regularly accuses Washington and Lee's faculty and administration of trying to remove the fraternity system entirely. The newsletter says the new dining hall will be an effective means toward this end.

Unanimously, chapter presidents disagree with this charge. They recognize the new dining hall as a crying need at Washington and Lee, and all agree that, in the long run, the fraternity system may be strengthened, not hurt, by the new facility.

With the dining hall available to upperclassmen as well as the freshmen class, fraternities will have to show prospective members they have "something more to offer than a place to eat," one student summed it up.

Fraternity men admit that many freshmen are eager to pledge a fraternity largely because it will assure them of a reasonable place to eat in pleasant surroundings. With a year in the university dining hall required, many new students will want to take a longer and more discriminating look at fraternity life than that afforded during the hectic five-day "rush" period.

"In this way" points out Tom Gowenlock, of Chicago, president of Delta Tau Delta, "the commons will hurt the weak fraternities and help the really good ones."

"The break between the good and not-so-good will become more apparent," adds Dick Gwathmey, of Baltimore, Beta Theta Pi president.

The Ring-tum Phi plans to make an extensive study of rushing practices at other colleges. Editorially, the newspaper points out that the university is giving fraternities a free hand to make their own recommendations for rush week.

If second-semester rushing does come, the long range effect on fraternities could be significant, many feel. Students who possibly would have joined under the current system may decide that fraternity affiliation is not the necessity of college life it might seem during their first week on campus.

"Boys will have a chance to make a more discriminating choice in their fraternity," Ray Robrecht, of Mountain Lakes, New Jersey, president of Phi Gamma Delta, says. He and other fraternity leaders believe that a stronger Campus Club, or organization of non-fraternity men, would be a healthy result of second semester rushing.

A. C. Hubbard, of Wilmington, Delaware, president of Phi Kappa Psi, foresees a high percentage of fraternity membership at Washington and Lee for years to come. But he agrees that fraternities will have to be on their toes and have something more of value to offer the prospective member than an eating club.

Stricter Rules

conduct of house parties must be in accord with the rules and regulations of the faculty.

4. Lodging Houses: The University is concerned with the conduct of students who live in privately owned facilities. Accordingly, students in such rooms or apartments must conduct themselves in such manner as not to disturb the peace and sensibilities of the community.

5. Paid musical entertainment:

a. The use of paid musical entertainers (such as combos or their equivalent) in out of fraternity house on Sundays runs counter to the rights of those who regard this as a day of rest, quiet, and worship. Students have the obligation to respect these rights. Accordingly, the use of such entertainment in fraternity house or on fraternity property is permitted only at the following times: On Fridays of formal dance weekends from 5:00 p.m. to 3:00 a.m., and on Saturdays when permitted from 2 p.m. until 2:00 a.m.

b. The occasions upon which musical entertainment is permitted as are follows: (1) the three officially scheduled fraternity house parties (2) Fridays and Saturdays of University Dance weekends; (3) the Saturday of Homecoming; (4) the Saturday of at-home football games.

III.

The committee recommends that the following administrative procedure for enforcing the regulations regarding good behavior shall be established:

1. The office of the Dean of Students shall be the central agency.

2. The Dean of Students shall have authority to enforce the rules applicable to fraternities. In enforcing the rules regarding fraternities he shall act with the advice and consent of the Faculty Committee on Fraternities. Penalties may include social probation and recommendation to the faculty of suspension of charter for a fraternity.

3. The Dean of Students shall enforce rules applicable to individual students including the conduct of students in lodging house and shall act with advice and consent of the Administrative Committee, which shall be enlarged by two members chosen annually by the Faculty. Penalties may include temporary or permanent withdrawal from the University.

4. The Dean of the University shall report to the Faculty monthly any actions taken in regard to the enforcement of the University regulations regarding student behavior.

5. It is recognized that the office of the Dean of Students may consult periodically the records of the town court of Lexington to the end that good conduct on the part of students may be promoted and the good name of Washington and Lee protected.

6. There shall be established the office of University Proctor to consist of one full-time employee equipped with an automobile and having appropriate authority to assist in carrying out University regulations. During the period of heavily concentrated student activities, part-time assistance will be provided.

Sigma Nu Fraternity Moves to Lexington

THE NATIONAL Headquarters of Sigma Nu fraternity is now located in Lexington, scene of its founding 89 years ago.

The fraternity purchased the home formerly owned by the late Dr. Livingston S. S. Smith, professor of mathematics at Washington and Lee for 41 years, and has now completed an extensive remodeling job on the building. The property is located on Lewis street and includes seven acres of grounds, as well as the twelve-room home.

Heading the staff of Sigma Nu here is Richard R. Fletcher, national secretary of the fraternity. Mr. Fletcher was formerly director of student affairs at the University of Virginia.

Sigma Nu, which now has over 100 chapters, was founded at Virginia Military Institute in 1869. Before the move here, national headquarters were in Indianapolis, Indiana.

New Buildings Due for Completion in May

WASHINGTON AND LEE'S new buildings, under construction since November, 1957, are rapidly moving toward completion now. Target date for finishing the project is May, 1959, according to D. E. Brady, Jr., '37, superintendent of buildings and grounds. In the top picture above, the large dining hall may be seen at the left, the dormitories at the right. In the lower picture, the photographer has pointed his camera at the side and back views of the block-long project. The building in the foreground is the new University store, attached to the Student Union building. Just beyond is the rear of the dining hall, plus a view of the back of the three dormitories.

General Lee's Wartime Papers Will Be Published By Civil War Commission

PUBLICATION OF General Robert E. Lee's wartime papers and letters has been put down by the Virginia Civil War Commission as its number one task.

Announcement has been made that the commission will publish in 1961, preferably in one volume, all of Lee's significant correspondence during the Civil War years. The book will be copyrighted by the commission in the name of the commonwealth of Virginia.

Serving on the executive committee for the project are state senator Charles T. Moses; Clifford Dowdey, Civil War novelist and historian; Dr. W. G. Bean, head of the history department at Washington and Lee; Victor C. Barringer; state senator Curry Carter; and delegate Frank Moncure. Mr. Dowdey said he had investigated the cost of the project and estimated it upwards of $30,000, provided it can be done in one volume.

Lee's papers have never been assembled and printed in a comprehensive publication. Many of his wartime letters, dispatches, and orders are contained in the 128-volume series of "Official Records," but they are scattered throughout.

State Archivist William J. Van Schreeven said, "An edition of Robert E. Lee's papers, 1861-1865, would be valuable to both the researchers and to the general reader. For the first time, the researcher would have available to him a completely edited publication of the papers of the Southern commander-in-chief. The general reader could trace the course of the war as depicted by the calm, dispassionate, and highly literate pen of Robert E. Lee."

Guests of the Roanoke chapter at its meeting on October 30, 1958, are shown above with chapter officials. Left to right are: DR. LEON F. Dr. Leon F. Sensabaugh, dean of the university, addressed the group, explaining the criteria on which the finer colleges are rated, and some of the problems that Washington and Lee faces in these fields.

President Tom Martin, '41, presided at the meeting.

ST. LOUIS

The St. Louis chapter, sparked by president Andy Baur, '37, royally entertained the Washington and Lee Generals and coaches with a "social hour" in the Hedgerow

Room of the Clayton Inn on October 25, 1958, after the football game against Washington University. Bill Washburn, alumni secretary, and Bill Young, team captain, handled the introduction of coaches and team members. The General supporters who had watched the contest with pride and excitement extended the gracious hospitality of their homes, and a delightful time was had by all.

Excitement reigned during the meeting when the Louisville Fire Department, complete with hook and ladder, suddenly appeared. It turned out to be a false alarm at the hotel, but Ernest Woodward, II, '40, jokingly announced that the chapter had arranged this excitement and the speakers "were assured" of a "captive audience."

CINCINNATI

The University Club in downtown Cincinnati was the scene of a luncheon meeting of alumni on October 24, 1958. William C.
