You, Too, Can Be First in Line . . .

TO HAVE THE VERY BEST time, "Be first in line . . ." A great many Washington and Lee alumni and their wives and families have already indicated their plans to be on the campus June 11, 12 and 13 for the Reunion of All Classes. Beginning with the Bi-Centennial in 1949, the University has maintained a policy of conducting a reunion of all classes every five years. The affair in June, 1954, was such a tremendous success and so well attended that everyone has been eagerly awaiting this coming June of 1959. Because of limited hotel space and the many varied functions of both Washington and Lee University and VMI during the month of May and the graduation exercises, the alumni office is obliged to schedule the Reunion of All Classes following the graduation exercises of both schools. All surrounding hotels and motels have been reserved for this occasion, and there is the possibility of using one of the University dormitories.

Included in the program for the reunion will be special banquets and attractions for the twenty-fifth, fortieth and fiftieth anniversary classes. These classes, which normally hold their individual anniversary reunions the middle of May in previous years, have enthusiastically joined forces with the general reunion to make this June, 1959, one of the largest affairs in the University's history. In view of the announced retirement of Dr. Francis P. Gaines as president of Washington and Lee University, many alumni are returning as a tribute to him. Dr. Gaines is pleased to have this opportunity to see again so many of the alumni and friends before his retirement. It is also evident from the campaign being carried forth by the University Development Program that great strides will be taken by Washington and Lee University in the immediate future, and the comments from those returning for the reunion indicate a tremendous interest in these plans. New construction and buildings are now taking place at the University and many more are in the planning stage. The returning alumni will be interested in seeing these new facets of the University.

The program as outlined is not intended necessarily as a punch card time schedule. The activities are varied, and it is expected that all alumni of the various age groups will find interesting and entertaining events. Because of limited eating facilities in Lexington, Thursday, June 11 will feature a "dutch" box lunch which is strictly voluntary. It will be the first chance for a great many alumni to get together in many years and this function was considered wise in order to ease the situation on the local restaurants. This will precede a panel discussion Thursday afternoon on the state of the University at which time the Deans of the various colleges, together with other administrative officials, will discuss the present situation and future plans as related to their individual fields.

The principal speaker at the reunion convocation on Friday, June 12, will be Mr. Stuart Saunders of Roanoke, Virginia. Mr. Saunders is president of the Norfolk and Western Railway Company and is chairman of the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges. Mr. Saunders has long been a prominent figure in the railroad and business circles. As chairman of the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges, Mr. Saunders is also eminently qualified to discuss the problems and responsibilities of small independent colleges and universities such as Washington and Lee. His message to the returning alumni will be both challenging and entertaining.

The golf tournament Friday afternoon will be capped by a reception given by the Alumni Association in honor of Dr. and Mrs.

Campaign Reaches

ON MAY 1, WASHINGTON and Lee's capital funds campaign reached its halfway mark—one million dollars. Thus in only a little more than five months alumni, friends, and parents of University students have given half of the total funds required to begin construction of the urgently needed science and journalism facilities and other capital improvements for the campus.

This million dollar sum represents gifts from approximately 1600 individuals, with campaigns completed or nearing completion in twelve communities. One-fourth of the task has now been accomplished. Within the next eight months, solicitation will be conducted in the remaining 32 areas of the country which have a concentration of one hundred or more Washington and Lee friends, alumni and parents.

Realizing that this half-way point could not have been reached without the active support of thousands of alumni, the Alumni Magazine wishes publicly to commend the alumni chairmen of the fund drive, as well as the chairmen for each area in which a campaign is underway. On these pages are recorded the names of local chairmen, the number of committeemen in each locale, and the totals raised to date in each community. In some of the cities, campaigns are still in progress. Therefore, the totals recorded here represent only partial figures, accurate to the first of May.

Of course, funds have also been received from many other sources, through the mail, and from individuals in areas where campaigns have not yet begun. Altogether the community totals and these other gifts add up to the million dollar sum.

General chairmen of the capital fund drive are Christopher T. Chenery, 'og, and Joseph T. Lykes, 'og. Not recorded on these pages are the amounts raised for Houston and New Orleans where campaigns are now in progress. The chairman for the Houston area is MARVIN K. COLLIE, '39, assisted by 29 committeemen. In New Orleans HERBERT G. JAHNCKE, '30, is general chairman with 20 committeemen.

Still in the initial organizational stage are campaigns in Philadelphia, Baltimore and the Washington, D. C., area. Chairmen for these are FRANCIS W. PLOWMAN, '24, Philadelphia; FRANK C. BROOKS, '46, Baltimore; and FRED M. VINSON, JR., '49, Washington, D. C.

The new dormitory for students has been named Baker Hall, for NEWTON D. BAKER, '94, who was Secretary of War during World War I. It is in the process of getting a covered walkway (foreground) to the new dining Hall. The architecture of this building and the dormitory for law students is similar to that of the freshman dorm, which is just across the street. The dining hall was named Evans Hall, in honor of a great benefactor, LETITIA PATE EVANS, who left considerable funds in trust for the use of Washington and Lee.

University Commons Now Almost Completed

ALUMNI RETURNING to Washington and Lee June 11-13 for the General Reunion will be eager to tour the four new University buildings, now rapidly nearing completion.

The commons was begun in November, 1957, and includes an imposing University dining hall, two student dormitories, and a book-store-snackbar, thus fulfilling long-standing needs on campus.

Graduates who won't be in Lexington to view the new buildings or the dedication of Evans dining hall can see pictures of the finished products in the next issue of this magazine.

Evans dining hall, with its handsome school seal high above the five vertical front windows, will accommodate 495 persons under normal seating arrangements, and 650 at banquets. It contains a main dining hall, three small dining rooms, kitchens, lounges, coat rooms, and offices for supervisory personnel. When it goes into active use next September, it will solve a large number of eating problems in Lexington—for students who have switched from restaurant to restaurant uptown; for campus groups which have wanted to have private dinners and haven't had the place or cash to stage what was desired. For fraternities, it will create problems, because all freshmen will be required to eat at the University dining hall, instead of paying board bills to fraternity houses.

The two dormitories will provide living quarters for about 40 men in each unit. One building will be occupied by Law School students; and the other by academic upperclassmen.

The bookstore-snackbar, attached to the Lee street side of the Student Union Building, is a two-story structure designed to furnish space and facilities for functions formerly crammed into one small and inadequate building.

All work on the new project is supposed to be completed by July 15, including landscaping of the grounds.

Site of the project is the spacious grounds where once stood the residence of the family of the late Dr. John Preston, Presbyterian minister here. A number of the large boxwood and shrubs which stood on the property were "heeled-in" behind Doremus gymnasium when the excavation work began, and they will be moved back to enhance the grounds. Other transplants include a large and ancient "white fringe tree," or "mountain ash" which the Prestons once enjoyed, and two large specimens of American tree box which formerly guarded the Preston walkway.

The whole project is located on Washington street, directly across from the President's Home, and on Lee avenue. Lee avenue was widened by eight feet this spring, and Washington will also gain four feet more of roadway. This was done because of expected increase in traffic on the two narrow Lexington streets.

The building project has been carried out by the English Construction company of Altavista, Virginia, at a cost of around $1,500,000. Plans of the work were prepared by Clark, Nexsen and Owen, Architects, of Lynchburg, Virginia.

University News

■ DR. FRANCIS P. GAINES, who will retire as president of Washington and Lee in the fall, has been lauded by the Governor of Virginia for his long years of service to education. Governor J. Lindsay Almond praised Dr. Gaines as "one who has followed in the footsteps, and reflected the glory" of General Robert E. Lee. He said he wished to "express my own feeling of devotion . . . and that of the people of Virginia" to Dr. Gaines for his service.

Washington and Lee, the chief executive continued, has left its imprint on the state of Virginia, America, and the world.

■ UNIVERSITY STUDENTS and V.M.I. cadets alike will benefit from a joint program by the two colleges to provide further instruction in the Russian language.

The program, to start in September, calls for elementary Russian to be offered at one institution, and intermediate Russian at the other, on a two-year rotating basis. During the first two years, the beginning course will be given by Washington and Lee, and intermediate work by V.M.I. Both courses are open for full credit to students of either college.

At the present time, five Washington and Lee students are enrolled in elementary Russian under Dr. William W. Pusey. At V.M.I., two cadets are studying Russian under Colonel Albert L. Lancaster.

The new program will eliminate duplication, and offer the opportunity for more intensive training than previously available at either institution in a language whose importance is steadily increasing in scientific and political matters.

■ PARTICIPATING IN a National Science Foundation study group this summer will be Dr. J. Keith Shillington, assistant professor of chemistry. He will join thirty-nine other college teachers in a six-week study of the latest developments in chemistry. The course will be held at the University of North Carolina from June 8 to July 17. A National Science Foundation grant of $52,800 is supporting the event.

During the same period, Dr. Leland W. McCloud, associate professor of economics, will study on-the-spot operations of the Virginia Electric and Power Company in Richmond. His special fellowship is made available by the power company through the Foundation for Economic Education. During August, he will attend a seminar on new developments in business administration, at the University of Michigan, sponsored by the Ford Foundation.

■ FRANK J. GILLIAM, dean of students, was named lay representative of the Augusta convocation to the Executive board of Episcopal Diocese of Southwestern Virginia in April.

Dr. Marshall W. Fishwick, professor of American studies, was chosen historiographer.

■ TWO MORE ADDITIONS to the faculty and staff for next year have been announced.

Charles B. Brockman of Blountville, Tennessee, who has two degrees from the University of North Carolina, will be instructor in French.

J. Thomas Russell of Washington, D. C., will serve as public services librarian for McCormick Library. He replaces James C. Hearson, who is returning to graduate school. Mr. Russell will receive his master's degree in library science this summer at the University of Michigan.

■ DR. WILLIAM M. HINTON, head of the department of psychology and education, will attend a three-week seminar session for college teachers of psychology at the University of Michigan this summer.

Only 15 college professors have been selected to participate in the Ann Arbor session, which is sponsored by the National Science Foundation. The seminars open June 22 and continue through July 10.

■ DR. MARSHALL W. FISHWICK, professor of American studies, left March 21 by jet plane for five months in Europe on a Fulbright Fellowship. Accompanied by his wife and four children, Dr. Fishwick will teach at the University of Copenhagen and at the International Peoples' College in Elsinore, Denmark. He will also give lectures at Oxford's University College, and at universities in Berlin, Mainz, and Hamburg, Germany. His lectures will deal with contemporary American thought and society.

■ A NEW CIVIL WAR book, "Stonewall's Man: Sandie Pendleton," was published April 25 by the University of North Carolina Press. The author is Dr. William G. Bean, head of the history department at Washington and Lee.

The 252-page volume is a biography of Alexander (Sandie) Swift Pendleton, who at the age of twenty-two became chief of staff of Stonewall Jackson's famed Second Corps of the Army of Northern Virginia. Young Pendleton died of battle wounds in 1864, and Dr. Bean's book is based on diaries, personal letters, and manuscript collections, revealing in detail the last years of the youthful soldier's life.

The book sells for five dollars.

Dr. Bean is Douglas Freeman professor of history. He is also a member of the Civil War Centennial Commission.

UNDERGRADUATES

■ EDITING THE CALYX is getting to be something of a family tradition for the Ladd boys from Mobile, Alabama. Edward B. Ladd, a sophomore this year, was named by the Publications Board in March as editor of the yearbook for 1960. His older brother, Russell, '57, was editor of the Calyx in 1956.

■ C. ROYCE HOUGH, III, of Washington, D. C. has been named valedictorian of the class of 1959 by the Washington and Lee faculty.

Faculty affirmation of his choice as valedictorian was based on a four-year academic record of 2.857 of a possible 3.0 grade point ratio. This means Hough has done "A" work in 96 semester hours, and "B" work in only 16. He has received no grade lower than B in the seven semesters he has completed.

Hough, who is 21, is president of the student body. In four years at Washington and Lee, he has achieved virtually every significant honor an undergraduate can receive.

An honor graduate of Washington's Western High School, Hough won the Washington and Lee interfraternity council's award as the outstanding member of his class as a freshman. The next year he was honored by Phi Beta Kappa as the school's top sophomore in academic standing, and as a junior he was elected to membership in the national honorary scholastic fraternity.

In elections held last spring, he was chosen overwhelmingly to serve as president of the student body. He is a member of the Washington and Lee chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, commerce fraternity, and is an officer in the university's ROTC unit. He will be commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army reserve upon graduation. He is a varsity letterman in lacrosse, and he served as president of the school's Opening Dances.

■ ANOTHER NATIONAL honor has come to a Washington and Lee student. Charles W. Springer, a junior from Des Moines, Iowa, has been named winner of the nationwide essay contest on international relations.

His entry, "Collective Security in Southeast Asia," based on a study of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO), was judged best in the contest sponsored by the National Association of International Relations Clubs.

He was presented a $100 savings bond, and an expense-paid trip to the association's national convention in April in Asilomar, California.

■ THE UNIVERSITY Party swept the campus elections on April 23, and placed all seven of its candidates in office.

President of the student body for next year is J. Frank Surface, Jr., a junior from Jacksonville, Florida, co-captain of the basketball team. William H. Abeloff, '57, a law school intermediate from Richmond, Virginia, was chosen vice-president; and Peter J. Lee, Pensacola, Florida junior, was elected secretary.

The four dance sets will be headed by the following: Openings, sophomore Henry Harrell, Sabot, Virginia; Fancy Dress, junior David K. Weaver, Pelham, New York; Springs, sophomore William B. McWilliams, Selma, Alabama; Finals, George H. Fralin, Jr., Huntington, West Virginia, law student.

■ THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION held its annual senior banquet May 6 at the Natural Bridge hotel.

Guests were members of the graduating classes of academic and law schools of June, 1959, and February, 1960.

The senior banquet is held annually to organize graduates into an alumni group, and to explain the work of the alumni association.

■ A 19-YEAR-OLD student from Beaver Dam, Virginia, has been named the school's "outstanding freshman" by the Interfraternity Council.

He is Rosewell Page, III, a graduate of St. Christopher's school in Richmond. His selection was based on all-round excellence. He holds a Robert E. Lee Scholarship, and was elected to Phi Eta Sigma, national freshman scholastic honor group. He has been co-captain of the freshman football team, and also participated in wrestling and lacrosse.

Runners-up were Steve Walker Rutledge of Wichita, Kansas, and Allyn D. Kantor of Memphis, Tennessee.

■ A WASHINGTON AND LEE senior, junior, and 1958 graduate have been awarded coveted fellowships by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

Honored were senior Werner J. Deiman, Hempstead, New York; junior Thomas W. Wieting, Owensboro, Kentucky; and Lewis G. John, '58, Cortland, New York.

They are among 1,200 outstanding American and Canadian students selected as Woodrow Wilson Fellows. The program's purpose is to encourage promising young scholars to enter the teaching field.

Deiman plans to study English literature at Yale University next year. Wieting, one of only a select few college juniors receiving an award, will do graduate work in mathematics at a university he will determine later.

John was awarded a Wilson fellowship last year, but declined in order to accept a Fulbright fellowship for study at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland. He applied again this year successfully.

■ ELEVEN SENIORS in the banking problems class conducted by Professor Edward C. Atwood, Jr. traveled to Richmond April 14 to tour the First and Merchants National Bank there. They met with bank officials to discuss investment and loan policies of the bank, and were later entertained at lunch by officials.

THE CAMPUS

■ SIX OUTSTANDING HIGH SCHOOL students have been awarded the coveted Robert E. Lee Scholarships, President Gaines has announced. They will enter the University in September, and will hold the scholarships for four years. Annual assistance ranges from $800 to $1,600.

The Lee Scholars are: David C. Montgomery, 17, of Richmond, Virginia; John F. Refo, 17, of Norfolk; James L. Surface, 19, of Roanoke, Virginia; Robert B. Cordle, 18, Charlotte, North Carolina; Sandord H. Morrow, III, 17, of Memphis, Tennessee; and Robert E. Payne, 18, Louisville, Kentucky.

Each year since 1955, Washington and Lee's scholarship committee has selected five or six of its highest qualified scholarship applicants to be Lee Scholars.

SPEAKERS

■ JOHN MELBOURNE HOWARD, conservative member of the British Parliament was one of the interesting speakers who appeared at Washington and Lee during the spring. Mr. Howard, who represents the city and port of Southampton in the House of Commons, spoke on "A Briton Views the East-West Conflict."

Harvard professor Dr. Crane Brinton's subject was "The Belief in Human Perfectibility," when he spoke on April 13 at the Phi Beta Kappa Washington-Cincinnati Society Convention. Dr. Brinton is the author of fourteen books, and a former Rhodes Scholar.

In another field, Dr. Thomas S. Lovering delivered two lectures April 30 and May 1 on "Geochemical Prospecting" and "Current Leadership of our Mineral-Dependent Economy." He is chief of the geochemical exploration section of the U.S. Geological Survey at Denver, Colorado, and a former professor of geology at the Universities of Michigan, Arizona, and Minnesota.

Dr. Arthur Kyle Davis, professor of English at the University of Virginia, an authority on folk songs, talked on "English and American Ballads" in April.

Author-scholar Andrew Nelson Lytle was guest speaker at the Seminar in Literature on April 20. He chose as his subject, "The Working Novelist and Myth-making Process." On May 4, the last Seminar featured Glenway Wescott, novelist and poet, whose subject was "The Best of All Possible Worlds."

R.O.T.C.

■ FIFTY WASHINGTON and Lee ROTC students will receive reserve commissions at 9 a.m. on graduation day, June 6.

An additional eleven students will be awarded commissions during the summer, after they complete the necessary six weeks of ROTC camp.

For Colonel Charles E. Coates, Jr., professor of military science and tactics, the commissioning ceremony on June 6 will be his fourth at Washington and Lee, and his last official duty for the corps. He is being transferred to Germany in July. Only one officer of the present staff will remain, with replacements for others scheduled to come in during the summer.

LAW SCHOOL

■ THE CHIEF JUSTICE of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, John William Eggleston, '10, was selected in April as this year's honorary initiate of the Order of the Coif.

Four senior students, in the top ten per cent of their class were also chosen. They are Samuel James Thompson, Rustburg, Virginia;

■ ALTHOUGH WASHINGTON and Lee's Moot Court team did not win or place this year in the national finals in New York City in December, the University could claim a little reflected glory from the team which did triumph.

One of the members of the winning University of Texas team was Alfred H. Ebert, Jr., who graduated magna cum laude from Washington and Lee in 1950, with a B.S. degree in Commerce.

Alfred was graduated with honors in February from the Texas Law School, and on April 1, became associated with the law firm of Andrews, Kurth, Campbell, and Bradley in Houston, Texas.

While at the University of Texas, he was on the Honor Roll, and and president of Phi Delta fraternity.

■ F. WILLIAM LING, '53, intermediate from Roanoke, Virginia, was elected president of the Student Bar Association in April. An outstanding student, Ling is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and holds a Menckemeller Scholarship. He served in the armed forces from 1953-56, and last year, won a Fulbright grant to study in Germany. There he lectured German students on American government. He plans to return to Europe this summer and travel in the Soviet Union under a grant from the Institute of International Education.

He has held departmental scholarships in Religion and Greek, and has served as student assistant in the English and German departments. He is currently acting as a tutor for the English department.

He has been a member of the Burks Competition Committee, a contributor to the Law Review, and was winner of the Freshman Oral Competition.

Other officers of the Student Bar are: vice-president, Bayles Mack, Fort Mill, South Carolina; secretary, Joseph L. Lyle, Jr., Virginia Beach, Virginia; and treasurer, Jerry A. Susskind, Jackson, Michigan.

■ THE MOCK TRIAL this year took on a definite flavor of realism, when two students, posing as ex-convicts, "robbed" the Co-op store on the night of February 12. In the excitement, a gun held by one of the convicts went off and "fatally" wounded a student. The two men got away, but were subsequently apprehended.

Later, in a three-hour trial in the Court of Tucker Hall, the defense attorneys succeeded in gaining an acquittal for the killers. The turning point came when two witnesses for the defense testified they saw the accused men having a beer at Snookie's Lunch approximately five minutes after the alleged shooting took place. Defense attorneys pointed out the ridiculous nature of the assumption that the two men would commit murder, and then dash three city blocks to quaff a brew. Coupled with conflicting testimony of other witnesses, the Commonwealth's case was broken.

Professor Charles V. Laughlin presided as judge.

■ FRESHMAN LAW STUDENT William C. Miller, from Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida, has been awarded a Fulbright fellowship for graduate work in Europe next year. He will study journalism at Ludwig Maximilian University in Munich, Germany.

Another Washington and Lee student, senior John A. Paul of Harrisonburg, Virginia, received a Fulbright "travel grant" for use in France next year for physics study, but Paul is declining the award because of a conflict in plans.

Tucker

THE ELEVENTH ANNUAL Tucker Law Lectures brought back to the campus a number of former law students on May 1 and 2. Speaker this year was Whitney North Seymour, president-elect of the American Bar Association, and a partner in the New York firm of Simpson, Thatcher, and Bartlett since 1929.

His subject was, "Horizons for the Young Lawyer," and he told his student audience that they face new challenges to make greater contributions to American Life. Among new areas where the legal profession can serve, he listed parental counseling to forestall juvenile delinquency, study of and interest in American history, and promotion of the dignity and prestige of the American judicial system.

At the end of the first lecture, the Staples Chapter of Phi alpha Delta legal fraternity presented a portrait of Dean Clayton E. Williams, '12, to the University. The portrait, painted by Dr. Marion Junkin, head of the Washington and Lee department of fine arts, will hang Dean Williams is completing his fortieth year of teaching this year. He joined the faculty in 1919, and became dean in 1946, succeeding the late William H. Moreland.

The gift of the portrait was a "response to kindness and inspiration" provided for hundreds of students by Dean Williams, law student Joseph C. Knakal, Jr., declared. Undergraduates, alumni, and faculty members of Phi Alpha Delta contributed to make possible the painting of the portrait. A standing ovation was given Dean Williams at the close of the presentation.

Washington and Lee Sets Up Publications Fund

IT HAPPENS FAIRLY often. John Q. Professor, on dozens of college faculties throughout the nation, has written a very scholarly treatise which he thinks should be published in book form.

He tries several publishers and gets substantially the same answer from all: rising costs in the publishing industry have forced presses to insist that either the author or his college partially subsidize the volume's publication.

This situation generally has tended to discourage erudite writing among professors.

Washington and Lee, realizing this situation, has moved to provide a special publications fund to help its professors who wish to publish books. And Dean Leon F. Sensabaugh says the plan is expected to give new impetus to scholarly writing by faculty members.

According to Dean Sensabaugh, the publishing situation in scholarly books is almost the reverse of that in textbook publishing. Almost any textbook written by a professor will find a willing commercial publisher. But the learned volume, treating special subjects and limited in its appeal, is now generally accepted only by the various university-sponsored presses throughout the country.

And before a professor's book is accepted, he must be willing to help pay for publication, either out of

While publication costs vary in special instances, a book of about 275 pages requires approximately $5,000 to put 1,200 copies into print.

Washington and Lee's publication fund will make use of money available in the university's John M. Glenn Fund, a source of assistance to professors conducting study and research. A portion of the Glenn money available each year will be set aside for the publication fund, for three years, after which it is hoped the University can appropriate independent funds for publication. In addition, a surplus fund of Glenn money has been transferred to the fund.

President Francis P. Gaines has appointed an editorial board of six faculty members and Dean Sensabaugh to review manuscripts presented by faculty applicants. This board will make recommendations to the president's faculty advisory committee, which is to administer the publication money. On the board are Dr. James G. Leyburn, sociology; Dr. A. Ross Borden, Jr., English; Dr. Lomas Barrett, Romance languages; W. J. Ritz, '38, law; Dr. Lewis K. Johnson, commerce and Dr. Esmarch S. Gilreath, chemistry.

FIRST TO DRAW benefits from the new fund is Dr. William A. Jenks, '39, professor of history. His 278-page book, "Hitler's Vienna: 1907-1913," has been accepted by the Columbia University Press for publication early next year, with the major portion of the cost of publication coming from its resources, and Washington and Lee contributing the rest.

Dr. Jenks' new book is the second handled for him by the New York firm. When his thesis for his Ph.D. was published in 1950, Columbia University Press did the job.

He began work on his new book

NOTICE TO ALUMNI

The nominating committee, appointed by the President of the Washington and Lee University Alumni, Inc., nominates for election to the Alumni Board of Trustees, at the meeting of the Corporation to be held at 10 a.m. on June 12, 1959 in Lee Chapel the following:

JAMES BLAND MARTIN '31 (Law), Gloucester, Virginia
JAMES M. COOK '46, Atlanta, Georgia

A. LINWOOD HOLTON, JR. '44, Chairman
A. MILTON MORRIS '38
EMMETT W. POINDEXTER '20

in 1952, with Washington and Lee providing limited financial assistance for his research through Carnegie Foundation funds then available. In 1954-55 he spent the entire year in Vienna on a Fulbright Fellowship, working primarily at the University of Vienna Library.

Generally, his book discusses political, social and intellectual currents prevalent in the Austrian capital when Adolph Hitler was living there during his early twenties. In Hitler's autobiographical "Mein Kampf," he says this was his "formative period," and that all his major ideas developed during this time.

For this reason, Dr. Jenks thinks the influences which Hitler came under are of great importance and significance to an understanding of the man who brought about World War II.

Libraries and scholars will be the principal purchasers of this book, Dr. Jenks points out, and he is hopeful that the book will sell well. Even so, he will not likely reap personal gains, for should there be profits, they will be returned to the publications fund until the University's share in the subsidy has been repaid.

Dr. Jenks has been a member of the history department since 1946. He has been a full professor since 1956.

Gaines at the Tri-Brook Country Club. Many of the returning alumni who matriculated during Dr. Gaines' term of office, and many more who have known and respected him for his outstanding leadership will want to take this opportunity to extend him good wishes. Howell Brush's orchestra will play at the alumni dance on Friday night.

Throughout all of the affairs during the reunion there have been arranged certain side trips and attractions which will be entertaining for the younger people who have accompanied their parents to the reunion. There will be guided tours to Natural Bridge and bus trips through Goshen Pass, which is lovely at this time of year.

We're looking for you here—so y'all come! BE FIRST IN LINE!

ATHLETICS

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE's well-balanced golf team captured the state intercollegiate championship, and javelin thrower Karl Rohnke led a resurgence in track and field interest to highlight a better-than-average spring sports season.

Coach Cy Twombly's ever-strong golfers swept through nine dual matches without defeat, before dropping two contests of the year to Richmond and Virginia. But in the State Intercollegiate Tournament at Hot Springs, the Generals rebounded to take the team trophy by a nine stroke margin over defending champion Virginia.

Captain Ned Baber of Lynchburg was consistently medalist for the Generals, but it was the near-equal balance of Coach Twombly's next seven men that provided Washington and Lee with one of its best golf teams in history.

On Wilson Field, a new, re-vitalized track and field squad turned in a dual meet record of six wins and two losses. Rohnke, one of the greatest athletes ever to attend Washington and Lee, established a new school javelin mark of 200 feet, 10 1/2 inches, taking second place in the Penn Relays with the record-shattering throw. Earlier in the season, he had bested his old record of 189 feet with a Wilson Field effort of 198-11. Just a junior, Rohnke will captain the track team next year for the third consecutive season. Returning are a host of young athletes who contributed to Coach Norm Lord's fine season this year as freshmen and sophomores.

The tennis team, under the coaching of alumni secretary Bill Washburn, started slowly but gathered momentum in the late season to compile a 9-3 record, with one match left—with Virginia—at press time. Mauricio Glauser and Bill McWilliams were steady winners.

Coach Bob McHenry's rebuilt

lacrosse team—sorely missing All-American goalie Jim Lewis and several other departed stars—has surprised with a creditable 4-5 season and a chance to break even for the year if they can down Virginia in their 1959 finale. Play by juniors Skip Horst and Jay Stull has marked them for possible 1960 All-American honors.

In other lacrosse news, a combined team of Washington and Lee and University of Virginia players has been invited to participate in the 1959 Australian Lacrosse Carnival in Melbourne. Each school will contribute ten men to the combined squad. Once in Australia, the team will be the guests of the Australian Lacrosse Council. Fund-raising activities are underway now to help transport the team "Down Under" this summer.

Mosby G. Perrow, '30 Heads Commission

STATE SENATOR PERROW was chairman of a pivotal legislative commission at a crucial point, so far as race relations are concerned, in the history of Virginia. The United States Supreme Court's decision in Brown v. Board of Education ended the era of separate, and theoretically equal, educational facilities for the white and negro races. Virginia's response to the Supreme Court decision was massive resistance. The massive resistance program, embodied in several acts of the regular and special sessions of the Virginia legislature, fell by the wayside as the result of two decisions handed down on the same day. One was the ruling by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals that the massive resistance laws were invalid on state constitutional grounds. A United States District court held that those statutes did not comply with the United States Supreme Court decisions. Virginia met the void created by these decisions by an immediate and temporary repealing of all compulsory education laws. A legislative commission, headed by Senator Perrow, was appointed to study the problem and to recommend a permanent solution.

The Perrow Commission tackled an extremely difficult problem. It had to guide a course between the Scylla of offending the century-old sensibilities of a large portion of Virginia's white population and the Charybdis of possible adverse judicial action. After extensive study and discussion, Senator Perrow guided his commission to a series of moderate proposals. Compulsory education was to be restored; assignment of students to schools was to be undertaken by local authorities; and scholarships to private non-sectarian schools, not to exceed $250 per year, were to be provided for those children whose parents, for any reason, did not want them to attend public schools.

Senator Perrow's report was acceptable to Governor J. L. Almond and to a large portion of the non-extreme members of the body politic. However, the proposals made by the Commission would have no force and effect until adopted into law by the General Assembly. The accomplishment of that mission proved to be a Herculean task calling for political diplomacy by Senator Perrow. However, several bills which embodied the proposals of the Perrow Commission were enacted into law with some modification. Those bills passed the House of Delegates, and the combined force of the Governor and Senator Perrow was able to bring about their passage in the State Senate by a margin of one vote. Senator Perrow's mission has been accomplished; the laws are on the books. Now remains the obligation upon the citizenry to make them work.

Sheriff F. P. Gaines Gets New Duties

AFTER THIRTY-TWO YEARS as a college president, Dr. Francis P. Gaines has taken on duties of an entirely different nature.

He is now honorary sheriff of Duval county, Florida.

"They haven't found it necessary to call on me yet, but I'm ready," President Gaines declared.

He recently traveled to Jacksonville, Florida, for speaking engagements at the Timuquana Club, the Newcomen Society, and at the George Washington Hotel. While there, Duval county's sheriff Dale Carson appointed him honorary sheriff.

Although he is planning to execute his duties as sheriff conscientiously, Dr. Gaines said he would not wear a badge or uniform. With a broad grin, he asserted, "I think I'm a plainclothesman."

He says he is not planning to neglect any duties attendant with his job. "I'm keeping my eye on the boys in the college from Jacksonville," he added.

He doesn't plan to carry a weapon. In the time of need, he said, he would have to rely upon his letter opener—a replica of a Venetian dagger, supposedly executed originally by Cellini.

Besides his law enforcement job, Sheriff Gaines is also an honorary State Senator of Louisiana. Six alumni are members of the Senate, and named him to the legislative post in 1958.

Dr. Gaines, who will retire next fall as president, after 29 years on the job, is planning to build a small home in Lexington at the corner of Washington and Estil streets across the street from the faculty apartments. Dr. and Mrs. Gaines also plan to spend some of their time at their country home, "Penrobin."

11 WILLIAM THURMOND RIVIERE has had a varied and notable career since his graduation. When World War I started, he left Columbia Theological Seminary to serve in France for two years as a second lieutenant in a machine gun battalion of the 81st Division. Later, he received his bachelor of divinity degree from Columbia Presbyterian Seminary, and during 1919-20, he was professor of Bible at the University of South Carolina. In 1928, he married Mrs. Louise R. Jennings, who then had a four-year-old son, Lee. Between World Wars, he was pastor of First Presbyterian churches at Cleburne, Texas, and Victoria, Texas. In recognition of his good work, an honorary D.D. degree was conferred upon him in 1928 by his alma mater. When America entered World War II, he resigned from his pastorate, and entered service as a Major. Later, as a Lt. Colonel, he had charge of 4,000 German war prisoners at Camp Chaffee, Fort Smith, Arkansas. In February, 1946, he suffered a severe stroke of paralysis, and is still incapacitated in his left arm and leg. He is confined to a wheel chair in the daytime, but enjoys his friends, his home, grandchildren, and the library. His foster son is director of Christian Education at University Presbyterian church, Austin, Texas. The Rieves live at 336 Devonshire Drive, San Antonio, Texas, and friends may write or visit him there.

S. R. GAMMON, head of the department of history at Texas A. and M. College from 1925 until 1954, retired from teaching in 1957, and now spends his winters in Texas and his summers in Southwest Virginia. In 1955 and 1957, he toured Europe during the summer. His entire life has been devoted to teaching—first at Austin College, Sherman, Texas, 1913-15 and 1917-19; then at Texas A. and M. from 1925 until 1957. He served as a lieutenant in World War I for two years. Dr. Gammon's home address is 405 Crescent Drive, Bryan, Texas.

12 WILLIAM L. ("PIN") WEBSTER will be awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree on June 14 by Union College in Schenectady, New York. "Pin" has served as chairman of Union College's Board of Visitors on Athletics. He is a director of the Schenectady Trust Company, and a trustee of Albany Medical College, St. Clare's Hospital, and Sunnyview Hospital. He founded and is still active in a number of Schenectady firms: Webster Motor Sales, Van Curler Motors, Bigsbee Motor Company of Saratoga Springs, Patroon

The new president of Churchill Downs, WATHEN R. KNEBELKAMP, '21, has been a popular leader in sports and civic life in Louisville, Kentucky, for most of his life.

With his father, the late William F. Knebelkamp, he owned and helped operate the Louisville Colonels baseball club back in the '20's. Through an uncle, he became interested in thoroughbred racing. He was appointed to the State Racing Commission of Kentucky by Governor Earle C. Clements, and became chairman of the group. He also served twice as president of the Kentucky Thoroughbred Breeders Association, and as first secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Breeders Clubs.

Leasing Corporation, Mohawk Leasing Company, and Lowell Operating Company. Pin is a veteran of both World Wars. He served two years overseas in World War I, and was discharged as a captain in the Motor Transport Corps. He re-entered service in World War II, as a Major in the Army Air Corps, and became Top Secret Control Officer on the staff of General H. H. Arnold, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

13 The University of Virginia has established a fund in memory of FRED W. MCWANE, who helped establish the graduate school of business administration there in 1955. President Colgate Darden, Jr. initiated the fund with a $5,000 gift. University authorities hope the fund can be built up to a six-figure amount, and that income from it can be used for the school. Mr. McWane, a Lynchburg, Virginia, industrialist, helped build a million-dollar endowment fund for the graduate school, and a student loan fund of more than $100,000. Mr. McWane died of a heart attack on March 3, 1959, while speaking to Halifax county Jaycees in South Boston, Virginia.

In 1955, he was made president of the national Association of State Racing Commissioners without a dissenting vote.

He has been president of the Louisville Chamber of Commerce, and chairman of its Kentucky Derby Press Entertainment Committee. For many years he has served as a leading member of the Municipal Athletic Commission, a Louisville group appointed by the mayor to govern all municipal athletics.

With a Washington and Lee man at the head of the Kentucky Derbies, we can all look forward to bigger and better Derby days in the future!

BILL CASH, who carved a second career for himself when he began teaching science in 1947, has had to resign as head of the science department at Eagle Rock, Virginia, High School, due to ill health. Bill had formerly been in industry, as chief chemist for a large research company, but retired for health reasons and began teaching. During his administration, the science department at the small school received considerable recognition and the school's science club made history by being awarded the Miller Award for two successive years. This is an award given by the Virginia Academy of Science to the best club in the state with the most outstanding record of accomplishment for the year. Members of the club won all top awards of the Western Virginia Science Fair, and several won honorable mention in the National Science Talent Search. Bill Cash organized Botetourt County's first Science Fair in 1954, one of Southwestern Virginia's outstanding fairs. He helped organize science clubs in all his county's schools and others in nearby counties. But more important, he had the rare gift of arousing a thirst for knowledge in the boys and girls of his native mountains, and inspiring in them the desire for further education after high school. In 1958, Bill Cash received one of the highest national honors, the Science Teacher's Award, a check for $250, a medallion and plaque from the National Teachers Association and the U.S. National Cancer Institute.

Halfway around the world, at Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, two law school friends of the class of 1932 met again. On the left is ROSS L. MALONE, American Bar Association president, and on the right is CAPTAIN ED BURKE, Legal Officer, Fleet Commander's Staff.

IN THE FALL of 1929, two Western young men entered law school at Washington and Lee as first year students. One was Ross L. Malone of Roswell, New Mexico, and the other was Edmund Burke Jr. of Bozeman, Montana.

During the first week of April, 1959, Captain Ed Burke, U.S. Navy, now Legal Officer on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief, United States Pacific Fleet, was at International Airport in Honolulu, Hawaii, to meet the Hon. Ross L. Malone, president of the American Bar Association, as Ross returned from Melbourne, Australia, where he had participated in ceremonies marking the centennial of the Law School of Victoria. Much reminiscing took place.

During their short stay in Honolulu, Ross and Mrs. Malone toured Pearl Harbor, and visited the USS Arizona, as guest of the fleet commander. Although Ross served in the Navy during World War II and his carrier had been through Pearl Harbor, this was his first post-war visit.

LEIGH D. BULLUCK has been elected president of Hanes Hosiery, Incorporated, a sales subsidiary of the Hanes Hosiery Mills Company. He has been executive vice-president of Hanes for the past four years.

L. STORY STEMMONS has won the Easterwood Cup from the Dallas Real Estate Board in Dallas, Texas, which designated him as outstanding realtor of the year, as well as recognizing his community service. Mr. Stemmons is chairman of the board and general manager of Industrial Properties Corporation, which has developed 1,200 acres on the city's western fringes, in an area once dominated by floods, grazing lands, and timber. Now about 1,000 companies are settled on the industrial sites. He still practices a little law, in connection with the district's procedural matters. He and his wife live at 4246 Lupton Drive in Dallas, but do a good bit of traveling, in places like Great Britain, Italy, France, Nassau, Louisville, Kentucky (for the Derby) and the various abodes of fish, moose, and customers.

SAMUEL A. McCAIN is now a vice-president of Corn Products Company. He joined the firm as associate counsel, and became counsel and head of the legal department in 1945. He was appointed general counsel five years ago. Prior to his association with Corn Products, he was with the law firm of Cotton, Franklin, Wright, and Gordon in New York City. A native of Oklahoma, he was graduated summa cum laude from Washington and Lee, and won a Rhodes Scholarship. He received his B.A. degree in Jurisprudence in 1929 and his B.C.L. degree in 1930 from Oxford University. Mr. McCain is chairman of the Food Law committee of both the American Bar Association and the New York State Bar Association. He and his wife and two children live in Riverdale-on-Hudson, New York.

G. CARLTON WALTERS reports that he is now engaged in fulltime private law practice, after fifteen years as a State Referee, Workmen's Compensation.

28 GEORGE WAINSCOTT is president of Commerce Acceptance Company in Atchison, Kansas, with seventeen offices in Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma, and is an important financial factor in the Midwest. A few years ago, in an effort to spend more time at home, George took up flying. He now owns a Cessna 175, and says flying is an interesting and educational hobby, as well as a time-saver. George is past president and director of the Kansas Association of Finance Companies, is a former president and director of the Atchison Development Corporation, and is a director of the American Finance Conference and the American Industrial Bankers Association. He is the father of three children—George, Jr., a Navy flyer; Jeffrey, thirteen; and Deborah, ten.

31 JOHN T. RAYMOND has been rector of St. John's Episcopal church in Lodi, California, for the past eleven years. He and Mrs. Raymond are the parents of two girls, Betsy, a freshman in high school, and Marjorie Ann, two years old. He says he sees DAVE MCKAY, '31, nearly every summer, and that Dave is a TV cable tycoon and has two daughters, eleven and thirteen.

32 DR. JACK J. STARK is new president of the Parkersburg Academy of Medicine in the northern part of West Virginia. He is also president of the Council of Boy Scouts in Belpre, Ohio, and will represent his area at the national meeting on the West Coast in June. He expects to return in time to attend the Reunion of all classes at Washington and Lee on June 11-13, however.

33 M. HOGE CRIGHTON, JR. has been elected a vice-president of the Seaboard Surety Company. He is manager of the Company's Southeast operations, with headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia. He joined Seaboard in 1953.

The L. PALMER BROWN, III, family is beginning to monopolize the annual Memphis Cotton Festival. MRS. BROWN was queen of the celebration in 1934, and PALMER, '30, was president of the Carnival in 1958. To make the circle complete, daughter AXSON, a junior at Hollins College, was crowned queen of the 1959 Carnival and reigned over the five-day event which began May 12. This set some kind of record for participation!

34 SIDNEY H. KELSEY is engaged in negligence trials, specializing in seamen, marine workers' trials in admiralty. He was appointed this year by the U.S. District Court at Norfolk, Virginia, as an official delegate to the Judicial Conference of the Fourth Circuit in June.

35 JAMES E. BROWN will receive his Master of Education degree from Harvard University at the June Commencement exercises. He completed his work in March of this year.

36 FRANK L. PRICE is now head of the F.B.I. office in San Diego, California, after spending seven years in Washington, D.C. as chief of the FBI's criminal section, and one year in Savannah, Georgia, as assistant special agent. He and his wife, Josephine, are the parents of two sons, James, 12, and David, 15.

JOHN T. COVER is manager of the insurance department of Clem and Company in Staunton, Virginia. Prior to his recent appointment, he was a rate analyst for the Virginia State Corporation Commission's Bureau of Insurance in Richmond. He had been in the insurance business for 18 years in Staunton before going to Richmond. John and Mrs. Cover have one daughter, Betsy, aged 15. Address: Edgewood Apartments, Staunton.
