Do You Remember?

DO YOU REMEMBER back in 1903, when the captain of the Washington and Lee football team, a center named Thomas Green "Tubby" Stone, designed the W. and L. monogram, a trident, which the University has used ever since? "Tubby" was a great athlete—captain of the Albert Sidney crew, the track team, and the grid team, and reflected credit to his alma mater. It was not until 1951, however, that he was honored for his design. In ceremonies at his home in Union Mills, North Carolina, "Tubby" was awarded a plaque from the Alumni Association. Participants were, left to right, above: Mrs. Stone; J. Davis Kerr, '24; H. J. Blackford, '17; W. R. Phillips, '11; and Wiley B. Hampton, '09. Mr. Stone, in a short speech of appreciation, pointed out that the trident was patterned after Neptune's emblem of rulership. Tubby died December 8, 1960, but his memory will live on, emblazoned in the trident worn by Washington and Lee athletes, in the present and future.

The Civil War Centennial

WASHINGTON AND LEE MEN HELPED TO START IT IN EARLY 1961

AMERICA'S GREAT observance of the Civil War Centennial, a five-year effort to awaken the nation to the principles which made it great, has begun, and Washington and Lee University is having a major part in it. While ceremonies paying tribute to the memory of General U. S. Grant were held recently at his tomb in New York, a similar program was taking place in Lee Chapel on the campus of the University where General Robert E. Lee spent his last years.

Washington and Lee was represented in another way at the ceremonies at Lexington, for four of the participants were either members of its faculty or alumni. The principal address was delivered by Dr. Francis Pendleton Gaines, chancellor of the University. He was introduced by Congressman William M. Tuck, '21, vice-chairman of the National Civil War Centennial Commission, the agency created by Congress to plan and coordinate the Centennial observance. Its liaison officer, Virgil Carlington Jones, '30, presided, and was introduced by Dr. William G. Bean, head of the history department, who had charge of arrangements.

These programs in New York and at Lexington, dedicated to the senior commanders on opposing sides who became symbolic figures of Americanism during and after the war, formally began the Centennial observance. As projected, it will continue until the last anniversary of the war in 1965 with a variety of programs, most of them dignified and of a religious nature, and with a few reenactments. A part of this effort will be aimed at preserving historic records and marking historic sites.

The first major battle reenactment will take place at Manassas, Virginia, on July 22-23 of this year. V. C. ("Pat") Jones, '30, is chairman of the non-profit corporation formed to stage the ceremony. More than 2,000 men, it is estimated, each wearing authentic uniforms and carrying authentic weapons of the period, will take part.

Of additional interest were events scheduled in February at Montgomery, Alabama, to mark the inauguration of Jefferson Davis as President of the Confederacy. For seven days the city was occupied with religious services, luncheons, spectaculars, pyrotechnic displays, essay contests, style shows, and pilgrimages. The highlight of the commemorative ceremonies occurred on February 17, at which time the inauguration of a century ago was authentically reenacted.

On March 4 at Washington, D. C., the first inauguration of Abraham Lincoln was to be reenacted. This, too, was to be staged in authentic detail, beginning with a parade down historic Pennsylvania Avenue, followed by a joint session of Congress at which Raymond Massey, distinguished for his impersonation of Lincoln, was to deliver the war President's inaugural address.

Another major observance this year is scheduled for April. This will be a ceremony at Charleston, South Carolina, to call attention to details concerning the firing on Fort Sumter at the start of the war.

Science Building To Begin Soon

DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM FUNDS WILL FINANCE STRUCTURE

WASHINGTON AND LEE University's Board of Trustees has authorized the university to proceed with plans to construct a new science building intended for use in September, 1962.

The new structure will house the departments of physics and biology, and will help relieve generally crowded conditions in Howe Hall, the present science building accommodating the chemistry, geology, and biology departments.

Howe Hall will undergo remodeling and will receive a new wing of classrooms, laboratories, and an observatory as a part of the current building project.

President Fred C. Cole said university architects will submit plans to contractors for bids later this month, and work is expected to get underway in early spring.

The project marks the culmination of a two-year University Development Program which began in January, 1959, to raise $2,000,000 for improving Washington and Lee's facilities for science, journalism, and pre-engineering.

A total of 4,038 donors have subscribed more than the $2,000,000 originally sought, President Cole said, but he added that the fund campaign is continuing. Approximately $500,000 realized through the campaign's efforts, was designated by donors for scholarships, faculty salaries, and general endowment, he explained. (See chart on page 21.)

Although additional funds are still needed to equip the new facilities, President Cole said sufficient funds are "on hand, or in sight" to begin work.

"The urgency of the need for improved science accommodations has caused the Trustees to decide to proceed," President Cole said. "We are confident the additional funds will be available when they are required."

President Cole cited a growing interest and competency on the part of Washington and Lee students in science and technology. He said Washington and Lee's new plans will help give proper emphasis to scientific instruction in the university's liberal arts program and enhance its programs in pre-medical work and pre-engineering studies.

The university plans to provide all four scientific departments with modern instructional laboratories and classrooms, library and display facilities, and general facilities, including an observatory for physics, a vivarium and greenhouse for biology, a seismology room for geology, and an instrumental analysis laboratory for chemistry.

A special feature in all departments, President Cole pointed out, will be separate research laboratory accommodations for faculty and student projects. The Robert E. Lee Research Fund was established at Washington and Lee to promote faculty-student projects in all academic departments, including the sciences.

When the physics department and pre-engineering studies vacate the present Reid Hall, that building will be available for remodeling and use for other purposes, principally those of the Department of Journalism and Communications, President Cole said. Reid Hall, built in 1904, is the only academic building at Washington and Lee which has not been modernized.

Architects for the new project are Clark, Nexen, and Owen of Lynchburg. They were assisted by representatives of the science departments, chiefly the department heads: Dr. Robert E. Dickey, physics; Dr. Kenneth Stevens, biology; Dr. Esmarch S. Gilreath, chemistry; and Dr. Edgar W. Spencer, geology.

JOHN ROBINSON GAVE HIS LIFE'S EARNINGS TO BENEFIT YOUNG WASHINGTON COLLEGE

BY CHARLES W. TURNER

Professor of History

MANY HAVE HEARD of George Washington's generous gifts to a school of learning in the western part of Virginia. Few know of the Irish immigrant who left his entire fortune to further the course of learning at the same school. He, along with "Big Foot" Wallace and John Jordan, all of Lexington, were self-made men and each contributed to the fame of Rockbridge County and the nation in a unique way.

John Robinson was born in Ormagh County, Ireland, in 1753. Having lost his father at an early age, he was bound by an uncle to a weaver in order to learn the trade. In 1770, he journeyed across the sea and settled in Rockbridge County. How he secured passage over has never been revealed. Dr. Archibald Alexander, who knew him, wrote that Robinson was first an itinerant weaver going from house to house. It was said that he was then seventeen years of age, good natured and jovial. With the coming of the Revolution, "he served in various situations," as his will later claimed.

Upon his return from the service, he was given a home with General John Bowyer at "Thornhill," where he continued to engage in weaving for the folk of the area who were attracted by "his good temper and good behaviour, with a spice of Irish wit." John had saved enough money to buy himself a poor horse, and by careful feeding and training, he much improved the animal. Come court day, he resolved to see how he would fare in trading his horse. His effort was crowned with success and soon he acquired other horses to fatten and train. The market price was often twice what he had paid for them. So adept did he become at judging good horses that he soon won the nick-name of "Jockey" and he accumulated a good sum for further investment. Some of these animals later sired race horses. Robinson exemplified traits of honesty and fair play which helped with his enterprise.

The extra money he acquired made him anxious to invest in other ventures. In the Valley of Virginia many Revolutionary soldiers possessed governmental securities entitling them to receive pay for their services. The Federal government had not yet redeemed these securities, but Robinson had faith that they would. Many of the soldiers needed ready cash and were willing to sell them to Robinson at a large discount. The average sum secured was four to six-pence to the pound. He offered in good faith the current price for the securities, and when the new government under the direction of Alexander Hamilton, against the wishes of the leading Republicans, redeemed the certificates at par value, Robinson reaped the benefit. If the soldier had sold his certificates for a small amount, it was his doing. Robinson was thought then to have considerable means.

Robinson decided to buy a farm, although he was very inexperienced in agriculture. From John Bowyer he purchased a 400-acre holding called Hart's Bottom, an attractive and fertile piece of land which is included today in the Town of Buena Vista. The name had come from Silas Hart who acquired the title from George III in 1746. This purchase took a lot of Robinson's capital, and farming with slaves proved more difficult than he had anticipated. So he engaged in another profitable business—that of distilling whiskey—in which he became very proficient. His stone distillery in later years harbored a chopping mill. Jockey bought a number of tracts of land in the neighborhood, doubling the acreage of Hart's Bottom, and included land on Buffalo Creek and on the Cow Pasture river. Altogether he acquired almost 3,200 acres. His slaves numbered some 60 and each was well-cared for.

Robinson never married and lived a lonely life. The only recreation he allowed himself was riding a grey horse to Lexington, some nine miles away, and spending the day talking with friends on the street. Here, after taking a leisurely ride into town, he would visit the postoffice and then take a chair on the street, if a warm and pleasant day, visiting with such personages as Ben Darst, Sam Pettigrew, Archy Beard and Jimmy Dold. As Robinson grew older, he became more serious and his interests took a benevolent turn. He was made a trustee of The Ann Smith Academy, a private girls' school of Lexington. In 1820 he took up $3,000 worth of claims against the Academy to help keep it open. He actually kept the school from a Sheriff's sale.

His connection with Washington College was very significant and went back as far as 1803. When Liberty Hall burned, he offered the authorities a lot for a new site on the edge of Lexington. The Trustees thereupon resolved "that John Robinson is entitled to the thanks of This Board for his generous conduct and benevolent donation to Washington Academy." Further recognizing his interest in the school, in 1819 he was made a Trustee along with Andrew Heron, Sam McD. Reid and John Leyburn. All of these were present on March 12, 1819 to take the oath. Just at this period, the General Assembly of Virginia was desirous of establishing a state university somewhere and a number of committees were asking that it be established in their section. Lexington and the Board of Trustees of Washington College offered a subscription to the state of $70,000 if it could be located here. John Robinson offered his entire estate if the school could be located within four miles of Lexington. He had prepared a deed to that effect saying:

"John Robinson of Hart's Bottom in the County of Rockbridge for and in consideration of the promises have given and granted and do by these present give and grant, at and immediately after my decease, to the President and directors of the Literary Fund and to their successors in office for the benefit of the University of Virginia the following tracts of land lying in said County. A tract of land lying on the North Fork of the James River on which I live conveyed to me by General John Bowyer containing 400 acres, also an appendage of 171 acres and 1/2 conveyed to me by James Grigsby. Also a tract of land adjoining the above containing 203 acres conveyed to me by the heirs of William Paxton, known as Tavern Plantation. Also a tract of land lying on the same river above the lands of Arthur Glasgow containing 112 acres conveyed to me by William Paxton's heirs. Also a tract on said river adjoining land of Arthur Glasgow, Benjamin Camden, D. Edmondson and opposite the lands of Edmondson containing 500 acres. A tract of Pryor's Gap of 545 acres gotten from the heirs of William Paxton is to be included, as well as, a tract lying in Childers Gap containing 266 acres conveyed by William Mitchell, and finally a tract in Childers Gap of 320 acres conveyed by Nicholas Jones and a 22 acre field just out of Lexington. That the University be located there or within four miles of the said town within two years. The remainder 500 acres on Buffalo Creek adjoining lands of James Breckenridge, plus 57 slaves. All should be sold at my death for investment to be used for same."

This showed Robinson's deep interest in higher education of the day.

The State decided on Charlottesville as the site for the University, so the will was never effective. Between 1819-21, Robinson attended fairly regularly the Board of Trustees meetings, and in 1821 he was one of a committee for the planning of a new building for the college to be first known as the "Central Building," and "Washington Hall" later. Serving along with him on this committee were Robert White, James McDowell and Sam McD. Reid. The following year Robinson gave $2,000 of the $9,000 needed for the building, and was counted on to help with the remainder. John Jordan agreed to build the brick structure with high pillars supporting a porch. When the building was completed in 1824, the cornerstone was laid, and for the event, John Robinson had a barrel containing 40 gallons of best rye whiskey brought up to treat the visitors. The drink was fruity and rosy and the affair started by "Mr. Robinson escorting two leading college authorities to the barrel." Courtesy was shown at first but the thirsty crowd broke all restraints and armed with cups and dippers scooped into the barrel. Few remained sober while many rolled upon the ground. Finally the barrel was upset and for the remainder of the day, the college hill looked like a battle field. Robinson was said to have been disgusted as to how the affair had gone. J. T. L. Preston spoke of it in an address later saying "that President Baxter and professors had drunk from the barrel and had deported themselves merrily." A Miss Louise Baxter objected to this version, as late as 1873, and spoke of the affair saying, that when Robinson, a man of great eccentricity, had drawn up his will, and soon after his intention of making this donation became known, he sent a barrel of whiskey to College Hill and that "such a proceeding was considered an outrage. . . . Nothing but the well-known singularity of the donor could at all excuse the act, in the opinion of the faculty and friends of the college."

John Robinson died on June 26, 1826, and his funeral was practically a "state" one, for according to the Lexington papers, a great procession was formed of college trustees, faculty, and literary society representatives with his slaves bringing up the rear, to escort his body from outside of town to a tomb placed on the front campus. Shortly before his death he had two wills drawn. The first did not please him, but the second one did, being drawn by James McDowell, later governor of Virginia, who was a lawyer in Lexington and served on the Board of Trustees with Robinson. Colonel William Paxton, Robert White, Sam McDowell Reid and James McDowell were named executors of his estate.

The will was probated July 3, 1826. The major parts of the will are cited below:

"Having migrated to America just in time to participate in the Revolutionary struggle (which I did in various situations) and having since that period by a long, peaceful interval with my fellow citizens amassed a considerable estate which I am desirous of rendering back to them upon terms most likely to conduce to their essential and permanent interests, I do therefore will and ordain:

1. Washington College is the only intended heir of my estate.

2. Money secured from my estate is to be used to purchase stock, that will make a permanent fund to have a professorship of Geology and Agriculture so that the science of arts and life can be taught.

6. I do hereby desire $1,500 from the first clear proceeds of Hart's Bottom to be used to purchase two or more medals to be given to graduates with the highest scholastic attainment.

Having foreborn to gratify the particularities of friendship in the be- stow of personal favors which must follow the judicious appreciation of the legacy which I leave to the public instruction I hope that some facilities have been given to the march of improvement, and some contribution made to the welfare of society, and having its members inspired at an early age with the salutary and conservative lessons of knowledge and virtue. And though a foreigner by birth and without a child to provide for, I rejoice in the trust that I have done something to protect the sons of others from ignorance and vice, and something to confirm the political institutions of the country by enlightening the public will upon which they rest. For these ends I cheerfully give up the earnings of my life, and interests as my latest wish, that they be so husbanded as to carry forward the beneficent results which I contemplate."

What a generous and thoughtful statement, by one who had little, if any academic training!

The final provision of the will stated that all the lands of Robinson should be sold except Hart's Bottom and the slaves should be used on this estate for a 50 year period after which the whole might be disposed of.

The college soon disposed of the lands other than Hart's Bottom. It tried to manage the slaves on the larger property but soon found it unprofitable to run the estate. The college sought legal advice to enable it to dispose of the remainder of the estate. Chapman Johnson advised them and for a time they leased Hart's Bottom and later disposed of it to William A. Read in 1840. President Henry Ruffner signed the transfer title. The slaves were employed to fence in the campus and do odd jobs about. But the time came that the slaves had to be sold too. The hope was that the whole could be sold to one master, that the families might not be broken up and, as one expressed it, that the method would "not be food for the abolitionist mills." Both a Dr. W. A. Graham of North Carolina wanted them and a Samuel Garland of Arkansas. The latter finally purchased 51 of the slaves for $20,674.91. These were reported to be comfortably located in Arkansas soon after, only a "Caroline" had died shortly after arrival. Several of the older ones were retained by the college, and one was cared for as late as 1878.

Other property of Robinson included 100 volumes of books, three stills, live-stock and 1,000 gallons of whiskey. The latter went for 36 and 37 cents a gallon. The library included volumes of Sir Walter Scott's Rob Roy and Francisco Miranda's Expedition.

The total monetary value of the estate was figured at $46,500.00. Some $15,000 to $20,000 was shortly used for new buildings. One of these buildings, built in 1841 was a wing of Washington Hall and was called Robinson Hall, housing currently the Department of Mathematics and a portion of Romance Languages.

To carry out the provisions of Robinson's will in 1929, the Board of Trustees created the Robinson Professorship of Chemistry. The long title of the department was "Professorship of Chemical Arts and Minerology with Special Application to Agriculture." L. G. Garland was the first professor to hold this chair, with an annual salary of $600.00. The question of this new professorship had already been debated in the "town and gown" literary society of the town—the Franklin Society. Today the Geology Department still carries the title of the "Robinson Foundation."

To follow another desire of Robinson, medals were granted to the persons making the three highest grades in the college. These medals were worth $20, $30 and $40 and were first accorded in 1855 to D. Rodes Massie, John M.

Gay and W. F. Cocke. At present the awards have been extended to include languages, history, literature and social sciences. The amounts given to each recipient are $20 and the present stipulations are:

The Robinson Awards were established in compliance with the will of John Robinson, a generous benefactor of the institution. They are as follows:

a. The Robinson Award in Languages—This award is conferred on the student attaining the highest grades in ancient and modern languages, provided he offers forty-eight semester hours in these subjects, including one major.

b. The Robinson Award in Mathematics and Science—This award is conferred on the student attaining the highest grades in mathematics and natural science, provided he offers sixty semester hours in these subjects, including one major.

c. The Robinson Award in English Literature, History and Social Sciences. This award is conferred on the student attaining the highest grades in subjects other than those mentioned in (a) or (b) above, provided he offers sixty semester hours in each such subject, including one major.

The selection for the Robinson Awards are made on a competitive basis and are for excellence of work and extent of work in a particular field of study. The combined grades shall have an index rating of not less than two and a half and no grade shall be below B. Only members of the graduating class are eligible. The exact conditions of award may be learned from the chairman of the Committee on Scholarships and Awards.

To offer especial honor to benefactor Robinson, the faculty felt an impressive monument should cover his grave on the campus and for some twenty years the Board of Trustees and faculty discussed the matter. In 1843 the Board ordered a committee to secure a monument of greystone some fifteen feet in height with a substantial base, with part polished for an inscription. The following year professor George D. Armstrong and the proctor were requested to see about placing the marker. Apparently it was placed and then by some chance, thrown down and broken. In the next decade $500 was set aside to secure a new one. President George Junkin, Hugh Barclay, Samuel McD. Reid and Dr. John Leyburn made up the committee to see the job done. A Philadelphia contractor prepared the new Italian marble marker and this was delivered on the steamer, the "City of Richmond," in 1855. The monument was placed on a concrete foundation, enclosing a box of Robinson's bones, plus a current college catalogue, a dime of 1853, a copy of the laws of the college, a church paper (no doubt Presbyterian), a copy of The Lexington Gazette, and an extract of his will. The following inscription may still be read today:

Honor to whom Honor
Sacred to the memory of
John Robinson
A Native of Ireland
A Soldier of Washington
And a Munificent Benefactor of Washington College
Born A. D. 1754
Died A. D. 1826
Erected 1855

A fence for many years enclosed the handsome marker and older alumni may remember when students leaned over to read the words inscribed thereon. The shaft stands alone now before the Tucker Law School, reminding yet of the great donor who chose so wisely to give, as he had received, a gift for education to his adopted land. This gift proved to be the second largest Washington College (now Washington and Lee University) received in her first century, and one from which students still profit.

Alumni Were Gunning for Williams

FORMER LAW DEAN IS PARTICIPANT IN SHOTGUN CEREMONY

A GROUP OF former students of Professor Clayton E. Williams found out it's easier to please than surprise the retired dean of Washington and Lee University's School of Law.

Some thirty-four alumni planned to do both, but while Dean Williams was pleased with the hand-made, automatic, 20-gauge shotgun they presented him in late December, he wasn't quite as surprised over the gift as his friends had hoped he would be.

"I wasn't so sure I was going to get a gun that I brought along a box of shells, but I was pretty suspicious of things," Dean Williams said.

The presentation, made by Graham Morison, '32, of Washington, D. C., was planned to mark the end of Dean Williams' final year as dean. His retirement from that office was effective last September.

"We just didn't want to see 1960 end without expressing our gratitude to Dean Williams for all he has meant to us," Morison said.

Because Dean Williams is an ardent, expert sportsman, Morison said he and Martin P. Burks, III, '32, of Roanoke, conceived the idea of a gift for hunting or fishing.

Mrs. Williams was asked for a suggestion, and she told them Dean Williams had shown a recent interest in an automatic shotgun. Morison immediately placed an order with the Remington firearms people for one of the finest weapons they produce.

But when some of Dean Williams' Rockbridge County hunting buddies found out what the gift would be, they had reservations about it.

"Skinny Williams was brought up on an old-fashioned, double-barrelled shotgun," said Cap'n Dick Smith, former Washington and Lee athletic director. "He wouldn't any more own one of those fancy jobs than fly to the moon!"

Here, says Morison, was something Dean Williams had dealt with in forty-one years as law professor—a conflict of evidence. To resolve the issue, Smith, D. Allen Penick, '30, Matthew W. Paxton, '20, and others organized a hunt for Dean Williams.

Around the campfire, they drew him into a discussion on guns, and sure enough, out of it came the admission that while he hadn't held much for automatic shotguns in the past, Dean Williams thought perhaps he'd reached the point in his hunting career where an automatic might improve his bag.

Because the special Remington gun demanded exact specifications, Dean Williams' friends even finagled the necessary measurements from him. About this time, Dean Williams began to wonder why all this sudden interest in his arm length and his opinions on automatic shotguns. It didn't take his legally-trained mind long to weigh the evidence and arrive at a

Among those present for the gift-giving ceremonies were, seated: M. W. PAXON, SR., '20; H. GRAHAM MORISON, '32; DEAN CLAYTON E. WILLIAMS, '12; J. M. HOLT, '29; CARTER GLASS, III, '42. correct verdict, one he kept to himself, though.

While Dean Williams may not have been surprised at receiving a gun, he was appropriately impressed by the magnificence of the weapon. Every part, both metal and wood, is hand-tooled of the finest materials. Sunk into the stock is a silver medallion, inscribed for Dean Williams.

"The company put one man, working day and night, on this gun for us," Morison said. "He did a wonderful job." Morison says the gun is valued at around $1,300.

The presentation took place in the faculty lounge of the law school where 18 of the 34 who gave Dean Williams the gun were present.

"All of them wanted to be here, but they're spread all over the United States," said Morison. "We could have gotten hundreds to chip in on Dean Williams' gift if there had been time to get in touch with all of them."

A commemorative scroll bears the signatures of the participants and this inscription:

"To Clayton E. Williams, Dean, School of Law, Washington and Lee University, 1946-1960, Professor of Law, 1919-, Gentleman and Inspiring Teacher of the Law, Bird

Hunter and Fisherman Extraordinary.

"This especially made Remington automatic shotgun is presented by the undersigned, who are friends and grateful former students, to mark his retirement as Dean and with the hope that such modern weaponry will be tolerated as it increases the bag."

Dean Williams, obviously pleased with the gesture and the new gun, had one observation:

"I don't know what Mrs. Williams is going to say when she finds out I've been involved in a shotgun ceremony."

Kerns Stamp Collection Given to Library

COLLECTING STAMPS is a hobby of many, but one Washington and Lee alumnus, George L. Kerns, '14, has gathered a unique collection of Washington and Lee stamps, which he presented to McCormick Library here this winter.

The collection, which includes seven Bicentennial covers, comprises other valuable covers of local interest, many autographed by famous American men. The Kerns collection was exhibited during the fall at the Kanawha County Library of Charleston, West Virginia, before being sent to Lexington.

Philatelists will enjoy the Kerns collection, which reflects the interests of the man who compiled it—Washington and Lee; the United States Navy; the Polaris submarine, Robert E. Lee; West Virginia, and the South. The sub, SSB601, carried a first day cover for Navy veteran Kerns, and the ship's commander even added his autograph to make it more valuable.

Among the collection are seven Bicentennial covers, as follows:

1. First Day (coat of arms), autographs and correspondence.

2. First Day (coat of arms), on both sides of cover.

3. First Day (coat of arms), via Polaris submarine.

4. First Day (old view of University), President Gaines' autograph.

5. First Day (composite cachet) autographed by Lewis A. Pick, chief of Army Engineers.

6. First Day (composite cachet), autographs and correspondence, Dr. James Lewis Howe.

7. First Day, mailed in Wainwright, Alaska, and sent by dog team, mail boat, and airplane.

Some others in the collection given to the University are:

Robert E. Lee Polaris submarine cover; Truman Inauguration Day, January 20, 1949, autographed by Alben W. Barkley and Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson; Confederate Facsimiles (complete set) and Dietz correspondence; Second Inaugural Parade of Eisenhower-Nixon, autographed by U. S. Senator Chapman Revercomb (West Virginia); Annapolis Tercentenary, autographed by Edward S. Delaplaine, '14; Admiral C. P. Snyder, USN '99, First Navy Admiral from West Virginia; Senate Chamber, Washington, 88, with political patronage correspondence; Warm Springs, Virginia, 1885; and others.

Proud of Our Team!

WHEN LEE McLaughlin made his first official appearance at Washington and Lee as the university's new football coach, there were only some twenty-five boys on hand in the old Washington Chapel that spring day to hear what he had to say. Even some of that number weren't really serious about playing football the next fall, but had come only to see what manner of man would take on what seemed at the time a Herculean task of rebuilding the Generals' football stature.

Much of what McLaughlin had to say fell on unbelieving ears, even for those who wanted to believe. Said McLaughlin, "We're going to think in terms of winning them all next year." And he said, "I believe in letting a lot of boys play for me. Stick with me and you'll play football for Washington and Lee."

At the time, the football Generals seemed to be thinking more in terms of losing them all. There was the 0-7 season in 1955, and the 1-7 record in 1956. And the prospect of letting a lot of boys play didn't seem like the way to go about improving on that mark. It was more a matter, perhaps, of finding the eleven best players and calling on them to be iron men.

Even McLaughlin's unflinching optimism nearly faltered that next September when only nineteen players reported for the first practice session. There were more later, but that opening week of practice was a grim beginning.

But McLaughlin was steadfast to his remarks of the previous spring. He did think in terms of winning them all, and he did let large numbers of players see action. But results were slim. The Generals were 0-8, after a promising start of two-one-point, heartbreaking losses. But, unmistakably, there was a new spirit about Washington and Lee football. McLaughlin had made, at least a start.

The next year, the caliber of football improved vastly more than the 1-7 record indicates, and the old Brooklyn "Wait'll next year!" was heard along the Colonnade. Next year marked more progress, a creditable 3-4-1 season and the fast maturing of a bunch of youngsters who were beginning to show an esprit de corps perhaps unmatched in Washington and Lee athletic history.

Finally on autumn afternoons of 1960, that year so many had been waiting for did, at last, come. Besides thinking about winning them all, the Generals very nearly did just that. Only a disappointing 8-8 tie with Johns Hopkins marred an unbeaten 8-0-1 record. And when McLaughlin's wave after wave of Generals took the field, there wasn't too much difference in the ability of the first string or "Blue" unit boys and those on the third or "Gold" unit. An average of 35 players participated in virtually every quarter of action for the Generals. McLaughlin had developed team depth that paid off in victories over opponents with superior first teams but no reserves.

Enroute to the first undefeated season in Washington and Lee football since 1914, the Generals received nationwide publicity for their amazing comebacks under Coach Lee McLaughlin. At season's end, one of the Generals, little 145-pound junior linebacker Terry Fohs of Baltimore, became one of the smallest players in college football ever to win All-American honors. He was named to the third team of the Associated Press Little All-America squad, a remarkable tribute to a remarkable player.

In Virginia, the Associated Press revised its All-Star selection process in order to give recognition to Washington and Lee players who heretofore were ineligible for the AP's All-Little Eight team. When the AP All-Virginia Small College eleven was announced, Fohs, junior quarterback Steve Suttle and junior fullback Doug Martin were accorded first team honors. Four others, including junior guard Tommy Goodwin, junior tackle Bill Wheeler, junior end Ned Hobbs, and sophomore halfback Charlie Gummey received second-team berths.

We're Proud of Our Alumni, Too!

TO THOSE colleges and institutions which have inaugurated the plan, an occupational file has been of tremendous importance.

Every institution is keenly aware and very proud of the impact and influence which her alumni make on all levels of community and business life. In this age of competition, each college points with pride to the accomplishments of her alumni as a measure of her standards and level of attainment. Washington and Lee guards closely the thought that, percentage-wise, we produce an enviable number of leaders in all phases of economic, educational, and professional life. The time is coming when we may be called upon to prove this point.

A brochure, though not complete, is being compiled for mailing to you. Categories are being established into which our alumni may be grouped. This information will be circulated soon and it is of infinite importance that each alumnus complete his questionnaire. Experience in other colleges indicate that the system is of little use unless there is reached approximately 85% on returns of information. It is planned to establish broad occupational classification with a numerical system of detailed breakdown. For example:

100 Architecture

- 105 General
- 110 Industrial
- 115 Landscaping
- 120 Marine

200 Banking

- 205 General
- 210 Investment
- 215 Loan Association, etc.

500 Education

- 505 Administration
- 515 College teaching
- 520 Elementary teaching

The above is given only for explanation. Each alumnus, in addition to filling out the questionnaire form, will be asked to check that classification which in his opinion best describes his work.

This information when worked into our IBM data processing system will enable the University and the Alumni Office to produce statistics for many purposes. A directory can be published for distribution to alumni and to business and professional organizations.

Of course, the value of such information will depend on up-to-date records. Changes of positions and classification must be prompt and accurate. To this end there must be a new era of liaison between alumni and the central office. Everyone must recognize the importance of keeping the Alumni Office fully informed. It will be a responsibility which Washington and Lee men will gladly accept.

During the season, Fohs was picked by the Richmond Times-Dispatch as its lineman of the week, chosen ahead of the state's big college stars. A few weeks later, a second unit fullback, sophomore Tommy Keese, was honored by the same paper as its back of the week, again picking his performance as superior to those of the major college players.

McLaughlin's turn for recognition came in February when the Portsmouth, Va., Sports Club honored him as Virginia football coach of the year. In his acceptance speech, McLaughlin told the Tidewater sportsmen, "I've got one of the best coaching jobs in the country . . . and now, I want you to meet the men who have the other two." He proceeded to introduce his assistants, Boyd Williams and Buck Leslie, who, emphasizes McLaughlin, must share in all credit for the team's success.

The 1960 season was a splendid effort on all counts.

Centre fell in the opener, 21-6, and Dickinson was beaten, 23-6, for only the team's second road victory since 1953. A Homecoming crowd saw Franklin and Marshall bow, 38-8, and then the Generals spoiled Randolph-Macon's Homecoming with a 26-3 victory. Before a Parents' Weekend gathering, the Generals tackled poorly, fumbled often, and had to rely on a heavy share of good breaks to hold Johns Hopkins to an 8-8 tie. Injuries sidelined two of McLaughlin's three first left halfbacks, and the boy transferred from right to left halfback, sophomore Charlie Gummey, was the big agent in a 14-7 comeback win over Hampden-Sydney. Carnegie Tech bowed next, 6-0, in rain and cold at Pittsburgh, and the Generals closed out their home schedule with a superb 32-8 lacing of Sewanee, the last team to have beaten Washington and Lee in 1959.

A week later, with the second unit scoring all four touchdowns, the Generals downed Washington at St. Louis, 28-0, and back home, the Washington Hall bell saluted the victors and their patient coach.

General GEORGE R. E. SHELL, left, superintendent of V.M.I., presented a bronze bust of Robert E. Lee to President FRED C. COLE, right, in a neighborly gesture on Lee's birthday, January 19. The bust was done by Sir Moses Ezekiel, a V.M.I. graduate of 1866.

University News

■ DR. WILLIAM A. JENKS, '39, professor of history, will study next year in Austria on a Social Research Council grant. He was awarded the maximum grant of $6,000 under the New York organization's research fellowship program. Dr. Jenks will do the major portion of his research in Vienna.

The grant was awarded to Dr. Jenks for his proposal to initiate an independent study of the operation of parliamentary democracy in Austria from 1907 to 1914. Most of his work in Vienna will be concerned with a detailed appraisal of the effects of the electoral reform of 1905-07 upon the last years of the Austrian half of the Hapsburg Monarchy. This material will serve as a basis for the long-range parliamentary study.

Dr. Jenks is the author of two books on Austrian government, "The Austrian Electoral Reform of 1907" (1950), and "Vienna and the Young Hitler" (1960). He has been a member of the faculty since 1946. In 1954-55, he studied in Austria under the auspices of the Fund for the Advancement of Education, and the Fulbright program. His wife and two children will accompany him to Vienna.

■ A BIOGRAPHY of David Hunter Strother, writer of the Old South, by Dr. Cecil D. Eby, Jr., associate professor of English, was published January 21.

The 258-page book is entitled "Porte Crayon": The Life of David Hunter Strother. It was published by the University of North Carolina Press. The biography is Dr. Eby's second book. He is the author of The Old South Illustrated, published in 1959.

Dr. Eby joined the Washington and Lee faculty last September after teaching at Madison College for two years. A native of Charleston, West Virginia, Dr. Eby is the author of 12 articles for leading literary journals.

■ DR. EDGAR W. SPENCER, head of the department of geology has been named to the Governor's Advisory Committee on geological matters.

The six-man committee is responsible for advising the Governor on matters concerning the geology and national resources of the state. The late Dr. Marcellus Stow of Washington and Lee was former chairman of the committee.

■ DR. L. L. BARRETT, chairman of the Romance language department, was a participant in an interview recently which was part of a special telecast to Brazil and other Spanish-speaking South American countries.

The program, "Panorama Panamericano," under the auspices of the United States Information Agency, was conducted in both Spanish and Portuguese.

Dr. Barrett, former public affairs officer in United States embassies at Bogota and Quito, discussed a group of translations he has made from Brazilian plays and other literature he has translated for classroom use.

■ A PSYCHOLOGY professor here has been awarded a $2,300 research grant from the National Institute of Health to study the effects of irradiation on behavior.

Dr. Leonard E. Jarrard was given the grant for a year-long study of the effects of X-rays on behavior in white rats. Some of his findings may prove helpful in understanding how radiation exposure may affect human beings.

Plans call for Dr. Jarrard's research to be conducted in the psychology laboratories at Washington and Lee. The grant will be used to purchase additional equipment for testing behavioral patterns of rats after exposure to varied amounts of radiation. He will begin detailed work immediately.

Dr. Jarrard hopes his research will establish "a technique that may prove of value in subsequent radiation research." Results may also help find an accurate measure of the minimum amount of radiation that will cause changes in behavior. Another application would be the testing of various chemical agents for offsetting harmful effects of radiation.

■ THE ALFRED I. duPont Awards Foundation has given Washington and Lee University $5,000 for scholarships for students interested in careers in the general field of communications.

Scholarships from the special grant will be awarded for the 1961-62 session. The duPont Foundation will give the university additional $5,000 grants for 1962-63 and 1963-64.

Students majoring in journalism, language, history, literature, education, physics, electrical engineering and allied subjects will be eligible for the new scholarships if they anticipate communications careers. Grants will be limited to juniors and seniors who meet the requirements of the foundation. Washington and Lee officials will nominate candidates for the awards.

The foundation expresses a special interest in students studying for careers in public service writing, editing or programming, educational broadcasting and technical fields of transmission and reception, according to Kenneth E. Haefele, foundation secretary.

The duPont Foundation was established in 1942 by Mrs. Jessie Ball duPont in memory of her late husband.

■ THE SHELL OIL Company, through its program of "Shell Assists" to higher education, has given the University $1,500 for the second consecutive year.

Provisions of the gift allot $500 for professional development of individual faculty members in engineering, mathematics and physical sciences, $500 for general faculty development, and $500 of unrestricted funds.

■ FOR THE FIFTH consecutive year, Washington and Lee has been designated as a participant in the Texaco, Inc., aid-to-education program's support of privately-endowed colleges and universities.

President Fred C. Cole announced the receipt of a check of $1,500 from Texaco for unrestricted use by the university. He said

Washington and Lee will apply the money to its faculty salary improvement program as was done with other gifts from Texaco.

"We are grateful to Texaco for its continuing interest in Washington and Lee," President Cole said. "We are pleased when the work we do merits the support of a program such as that conducted by Texaco, Inc., in behalf of higher education."

■ OFFICIALS OF THE General Electric Co. plant in Waynesboro, Virginia, have donated four pieces of electronic equipment for use in the advanced physics laboratories.

Included are three Dumont oscilloscopes, a Dumont electronic switch and several thousand feet of hook-up wire.

SPEAKERS

DR. ARNOLD J. TOYNBEE, internationally famous historian, will speak at Washington and Lee on March 10, 1961, discussing the question "Does History Make Sense?"

His lecture is sponsored by the University Lecture Committee, of which Dr. Allen Moger is chairman. During his three-day visit here, he will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Edward D. Myers. Dr. Myers, professor of philosophy, is the collaborator with Dr. Toynbee of an atlas and gazetteer, which is the eleventh volume of Dr. Toynbee's monumental, "A study in History."

Dr. Toynbee was visiting scholar at Washington and Lee during the spring semester, 1958, and gave a series of fifteen lectures here. A motion picture record of the entire series was made by Encyclopaedia Britannica Films, Inc., through support from the Fund for the Advancement of Education. This series has been shown at a number of American colleges.

■ H. GRAHAM MORISON, '30, former Assistant Attorney General of the United States, was the principal speaker for the Omicron Delta Kappa tap exercises February 16.

He was associated with Wendell Wilkie's New York law firm during the late 1930's. He went to Washington in 1942 with the War Production Board. He joined the Justice Department as a special assistant to the Attorney-General for wartime contract negotiations. Later, as head of the claims division of the department, he successfully prosecuted the contempt cases against John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers.

He is now a partner in the firm of Morison, Murphy, Clapp and Abrams. A devoted alumnus of Washington and Lee, he has served as a trustee of the Alumni Fund. He is a close friend of ex-president Harry S. Truman, and was instrumental in drawing Mr. Truman to Washington and Lee last May to keynote the Mock Convention.

■ THREE NATIONALLY-KNOWN lecturers were the principal speakers for the annual International Relations week, February 7-9.

Norman Thomas, six-time presidential candidate of the Socialist Party, and Dr. Malcolm Moos, retired administrative assistant to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, made appearances here before student-faculty audiences. Dr. Abraham Kreuzler, head of the department of Russian at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, and a native of the Western Ukraine, was the third speaker.

Mr. Thomas, regarded as one of the elder statesmen of liberal thought in America, spoke on "An American Socialist Views the East-West Conflict." Dr. Moos spoke on foreign policy problems. He is currently on leave as professor of political science at Johns Hopkins University, and had served as Mr. Eisenhower's speech writer.

Both men had made previous appearances on the campus. Norman Thomas spoke here in the 1930's, and Professor Moos five years ago.

Dr. Kreuzler spoke on "Some Post-Stalinist Developments in Russia and Their Implication for the West."

THE CAMPUS

■ SPANISH-BORN Pierre Daura exhibited seventy-eight of his works of art in duPont Art Gallery at Washington and Lee during January and February. The exhibition covered his career from 1928 to 1961, and included forty-seven paintings, twenty drawings, water colors and prints, plus nine sculptures.

Mr. Daura, a former teacher of art, now lives in Rockbridge Baths. This was his first exhibit at the University. More than 1,200 persons visited the gallery to see the display, which was held over one week by request.

"The Daura show has been the most popular and the most successful exhibition—from the standpoint of attendance and sales—in the history of the six-year-old duPont Gallery," fine arts department head Marion Junkin declared.

UNDERGRADUATES

■ TWENTY-FOUR students have been selected for listing in the 1960-61 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

They are: student body president R. Kent Frazier, Tampa, Florida; and football co-captains Courtney Mauzy, Charlotte, North Carolina, and Robert J. Funkhouser, Charles Town, West Virginia.

Also, Edward A. Ames, III, Accomac, Virginia; J. Malcolm Brownlee, Jr., Rockbridge Baths; Paul H. Coffey, Jr., Lexington;

Donald H. Partington, Culpeper, Virginia; Hugh V. White, Jr., Holland, Virginia; L. Christian Harrell, III, Emporia, Virginia; Henry H. Harrell, Sabot, Virginia; John A. Broaddus, Jr., Brian H. Vitsky, and Joel E. Kocen, all of Richmond, Virginia; Robert L. Gilliam, III, Union City, Tennessee; Warren H. Goodwyn, Montgomery, Alabama; Edward B. Ladd, Mobile, Alabama; David Lefkowitz, III, Shreveport, Louisiana; John C. Morrison, Jr., Charleston, West Virginia; Nathan P. B. Simpson, Tampa, Florida; and James A. Vann, III, and William B. McWilliams, both of Birmingham, Alabama.

Six are law seniors; the others are seniors in undergraduate schools.

■ A CONSTITUTION and a set of by-laws have been adopted by Washington and Lee University's Troubadour Theater in an effort to give students a more direct hand in the control of the dramatic group.

An executive committee of seven students has been established to run the Troubadour Theater, which presents three or four dramatic productions during the school year.

The changes in the group's organizational structure were brought about by interested students under the guidance of Dr. Cecil B. Jones, new Troubadour director and assistant professor of fine arts.

A primary purpose of the newly-organized Troubadours is "to encourage a greater understanding of the theater as an art." Secondary purposes include the creation of opportunities for interested students to express themselves dramatically and to gain experience on the stage.

The constitution outlines two types of membership in the Troubadour Theater. Apprentice memberships will be open to all newcomers and voting memberships will be available to students earning sufficient points through participation in theatrical events.

John C. Towler, a senior from Halifax, is the newly-elected president of the Troubadour Theater.

■ A RETIRED Broadway arranger will act as a consultant for the Spring musical show to be held under the sponsorship of the Student War Memorial Scholarship Fund Committee.

Crane Calder, a Lynchburg resident who recently retired because of an illness, will arrange the student-written and produced show. Calder has worked with Rogers and Hammerstein on such Broadway shows as "Carousel" and "Flower Drum Song." He is a former associate of the Robert Russell Bennett Corporation, an arranging and orchestration firm in New York City.

Stephen I. Danzansky, a senior from Washington, is writing both lyrics and music for the 1961 musical, and is acting producer. A 28-man cast has already been selected for the production. The show will be performed in Lexington, Roanoke, and Lynchburg.

■ AN INTERMEDIATE law student at Washington and Lee is the author of an article in the recent annual issue of the Billings Geological Society Guidebook.

Andrew W. McThenia, Jr., of Alderson, West Virginia, has written an article entitled "Geology of the Madison River Canyon Area North of Ennis, Mont." for the nationally distributed guidebook.

Research for the article was done under the auspices of Dr. Edgar Spencer, '53, head of the Washington and Lee geology department, and under Columbia University. McThenia's investigation in the Montana area is part of a project Dr. Spencer is doing for the National Science Foundation.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Washington and Lee in 1958, Mc-

Thenia, received his Master's degree in geology from Columbia University last year. Last summer, McThenia worked in Germany as an international exchange trainee.

He is a member of the Geological Society of America, Phi Alpha Delta, and Delta Tau Delta. He holds a Menkemeller academic scholarship at Washington and Lee.

LAW SCHOOL

■ THE CHIEF JUDGE of the United States Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia will be the speaker for the thirteenth annual Tucker Law Lectures at Washington and Lee.

Judge E. Barrett Prettyman will speak at the University April 21 and 22. He will give a series of three lectures on the general topic of "Some Modern Problems in Criminal Law."

Judge Prettyman, chief judge of the Washington federal court since 1945, is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College and the Georgetown University Law School. He holds B.A., LL.B. and LL.D. degrees.

The Tucker Lectures were established at Washington and Lee in 1949 in honor of John Randolph Tucker, the first dean of the School of Law here and president of the American Bar Association in 1892. The initial lectures were delivered by the late John W. Davis, a member of the law class of 1895.

Law Day will be observed on April 22. Law School alumni will also hold a reunion on that day at 3 o'clock in Tucker Hall.

■ WILLIAM A. HYMAN, '12, a New York attorney, spoke to the Law School on November 28, 1960, on aspects of Space Law.

He is co-chairman of the committee on interplanetary Space of the Inter-American Bar Association, and is also a member of the space law and sociology committee of the American Rocket Society.

For several years, Mr. Hyman has been much in demand as a speaker on space law. He has addressed groups in Hong Kong, Manila, and Japan, as well as in this country. He has advocated a space code to insure the peace, covering such matters as: provisions for policing outer space; principles of liability for personnel injury, death, or property damage caused by space vehicles; prohibition of nuclear experiments in outer space; provision for arbitrating all disputes by an agency, court, or tribunal designed by United Nations.

A member of the American Bar Association, he serves on its advisory committee on Aeronautical Law. He is also a member and patron of the International Law Association and member of the International Bar Association. He is senior partner of Hyman, Hayman, and Harris, 111 Fulton Street, in New York, and is an insurance attorney. Space law is his hobby.

■ JOEL E. KOGEN, a senior law student from Richmond, is editor-in-chief of the Washington and Lee Law Review for the second semester. He served as assistant editor last semester.

Joel is a 1958 Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University. He holds a Menkemeller Scholarship, and is treasurer of the Student Bar Association and a member of the student Board of Governors. He was one of five law seniors to be named to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" this year.

He is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, Beta Gamma Sigma, and Phi Delta Phi. He is married and the father of one child. His father, Wilbur Kocen, is a Richmond attorney, associated with the firm of Cohen, Cox and Kelly.

ATHLETICS

THE CHANGE IN COMMAND went almost unnoticed at Washington and Lee, but for the first time in thirty-nine years, E. P. "Cy" Twombly isn't coaching the Generals' swimming team.

The Washington and Lee swimmers, who since 1921 made Twombly the most successful of all General coaches, are going right on winning and just about everyone assumed that Cy was still in charge.

His successor is Norris Eastman, Twombly's assistant for the past two years, and like Twombly, a Massachusetts native who came South from Springfield College with a solid background in athletics in general and swimming in particular.

As for Twombly, no coach ever turned over his team to a successor with greater confidence. "This young fellow is interested in doing a good job and he has a top-notch background," says Twombly of Eastman. "He was a big help the past two years, the boys like him, and if he stays around as long as I have, he'll probably do better."

Twombly's record is 150 wins against 50 losses. His swimmers won eight state titles, four Southern Conference crowns in a row from 1935 to 1938, and in the mid-30's, the Generals went five years without losing a dual meet. Twombly also had a 6-0 year in 1948-49.

Twombly, who at 63 continues as athletic director and golf coach, says he decided to give up the swimming job when his sinus condition became increasingly aggravated by the high humidity of the indoor pool, where he would spend an average of three hours a day. And, says Twombly, "I'm getting too old for the excitement and the pressure of the meets. In golf, I'll just pick 'em up every four or five holes and not worry so much how things are going."

The Generals' standout performer is Elliott Maynard, a 22-year-old junior from Portland, Me., who has broken every Washington and Lee record for the breast-stroke events and stands a good chance of winning national honors this year and next. He finished high in the Eastern Intercollegiate meet last year as a sophomore, and both Twombly and Eastman agree he has not yet reached his full potential.

The rest of the Generals are good, solid performers, but none approach Maynard's levels of performance.

"That's been my secret recently, good depth that has come from hard work on the part of my boys," says Twombly. "My recent teams have had far better balance than any of the good ones back in 1930 when I depended on a handful of real hotshots to win for me."

Among those who are continuing to give Eastman depth and experience are freestylers Charlie Hart and Charlie Gummey in the dashes, and Herb Jahncke, a distance freestyler whose father once swam for Twombly. All are sophomores who won their letters last season as freshmen. Co-captains Jim Parker and Maury Purnell are senior veterans.

There's Fun for Everyone at '61 Reunions

CLASS REUNIONS began at Washington and Lee in May, 1955, with the first convocation of the 25th anniversary class (1930). The Golden Anniversary (50th) was added in May, 1956, and the 40th anniversary class had its first in 1957. From 1957 to 1960, these three classes have met annually each May, and were joined in 1960 with the first reunion of the 10th anniversary class. Such has been the growth of this popular occasion.

May 5, 6, and 7 has been set as the appointed time this year, and once again reuniting alumni will reign supreme at Washington and Lee. Probably no more pertinent question is asked than, "What is the major impetus that brings an alumnus back at reunion time?" There are many and varied reasons, but unquestionably among the foremost is the joy of renewing old friendships. Both faculty and classmates—the comparing of notes, of families, and the ever-present reminiscing about the old days—renew in each heart a spirit that is hard to define or find elsewhere. The alumni who attend will leave with an inner joy and a renewed sense of pride in their alma mater.

Program outlines have been forwarded to each member of the reunion classes. Intertwined with ample opportunity to visit with friends are a series of events to bring them up-to-date with the University's plans for the future. It is hoped that all members of these reunion classes will return the pre-registration form so that a list of those classmates who plan to attend can be compiled and circulated among the class. In this manner friends can plan to attend and bring about the best reunion ever!!

Exchange students ANTONIADES, HROCH, and TURK enjoyed Freshman Camp.

Three Foreign Exchange Students Like Life at Washington and Lee

WASHINGTON AND LEE'S three foreign exchange students agree on three major points—that the United States is like the descriptions in books, that faculty-student relations at the University are better than in their native countries, and that students should not be forced to attend classes.

The group is composed of Anthony Antoniadès of Thessalonika, Greece; Peter Turk of Bad Godesberg, Germany; and Rienhard Hroch of Salzburg, Austria, and they are studying this year under the auspices of the Fulbright Commission. The three students traveled a combined total of more than 15,000 miles for their year at Washington and Lee.

Turk, 23 years old, learned English four years ago and is fluent in three other languages. Antoniadès, 20, gained a speaking and writing knowledge of English some seven years ago. Hroch has known English for five years, and also speaks four other languages.

Turk is taking a year's leave of absence from his medical studies in Germany to gain a "more general knowledge outside of the field of medicine." Hroch will resume law studies upon his return to Salzburg. Antoniadès, a sophomore, expects to stay here for at least one more year before transferring to a school of engineering for completion of his work in mechanical engineering.

Fancy Dress and Fraternity Combos

AT-MODEL AND a Thunderbird both bear the name of Ford, but the style and performance are vastly different.

Likewise, the late models of Fancy Dress Ball have been altered to suit the modern-day tastes of the students who stage them. And the weekend now brings many other kinds of social activities, in addition to the costumed gala.

Fancy Dress Ball was begun originally to brighten the dull days between the end of examinations and the start of second semester—to offer color and pageantry to quiz-weary students. And so it did, becoming a sort of weekend Mardi Gras. Young ladies who had never been invited to attend a Fancy Dress Ball were not socially solid. It was the highlight of the year.

The current students, many of whom have grown up in comparatively bountiful times, are accustomed to a multiplicity of choice when it comes to social affairs. A big event, such as Fancy Dress, has necessarily hatched a nestful of other social accompaniments. And the student of the 'sixties, with his large appetite for conviviality, participates in as many as possible.

Several changes, of course, have come about. Fancy Dress weekend costs more now than formerly; for instance, rental of costumes is now up to $16 per couple. Many fraternities have parties, for which members are assessed; some hire combos for the weekend. And girls still have to eat often during the weekend. Some of the University men without steady girl friends decline to spend this much money on casual acquaintances, so they don't ask a date. Other students have other problems—like the ones who go steady with girls at colleges which are unfortunately holding exams during the Fancy Dress weekend.

Some students contend, too, that college restrictions are so tight they tend the informal parties at the fraternity houses and have no need to don satins and laces.

So Fancy Dress Ball like so many other things which have changed in the past 50, 25, even ten years, isn't quite the same. Only about half the student body participates, and on Saturday night, the wide open spaces between the dancers are conspicuous.

But this year's Fancy Dress was a good one. The music was excellent, played by the Tommy Dorsey band led by Warren Covington, the Jerry Gray band, and the Dukes of Dixieland, who gave an afternoon concert. The costumes were colorful. The weather was cold but bearable, and, all in all, the fifty-second Fancy Dress Ball did just what it was meant to do when it was begun so many years ago—it offered a welcome bright spot between exams and the spring semester. And the students of the 'sixties are making their own tradition of how Fancy Dress weekend should be observed.

The theme for the Ball this year was "Shakespeare in the Court of King James I," and the figure dealt with the court of King James shortly after he ascended to the British throne in 1603, when Shakespeare and his players were made Knights of the Chamber Extraordinary. Dance set vice-presidents and their dates depicted leading characters in Hamlet, King Lear, Romeo and Juliet, Anthony and Cleopatra, Henry IV, and Julius Caesar.

Dr. Fitzgerald Flournoy, '21, professor of English and a Shakespearean scholar, announced the figure, and the University's John Graham Brass Choir played. Doremus gymnasium was decorated along the lines of the famed Globe Theatre.

“Matching Gift” Program

By Industry Can Aid

Washington and Lee

ONE AND ONE EQUALS TWO

TO HELP SUPPORT higher education, each of the companies listed here has a “matching gift” program, working in conjunction with employees who are alumni. It’s just as simple as one and one make two.

While individual companies may vary in the operating details of their programs, all are essentially alike in that they match—usually dollar for dollar—the contributions of an alumnus-employee to his college or university.

If the company you work for is listed, be sure to notify your employer when you make your annual or capital gift to Washington and Lee. You fill in a short form provided by your employer, who then sends an equal amount to the University.

If the company you work for is not listed, possibly it would be interested in establishing a matching gift program. Not infrequently a company wants to help support higher education, but has not yet decided how best to do it. The matching gift principle may be the answer.

SINCE THE CLASS agent letters went forward two months ago, the 1960-61 Alumni Fund is off to a running start. Contributions and number of participants are running ahead of this same time last year, but the record reached in the last full campaign (1957-58) has not been attained.

The Alumni Fund Council, which directs the annual giving plan, is keeping a close eye on two basic figures: (1) the percentage of participation, and (2) the average level of individual giving. It is imperative for Washington and Lee and her future that the alumni goals be: the broadening of the base and the raising of the level of individual gifts.

At this point in the 1960-61 Fund, it is hard to ascertain what will be the percentage of alumni contributing. In our last full year the percentage was 35.3%. Compared with other "like" colleges, this participation is low. For example, Bowdoin, Brown, Swarthmore, and Williams all registered over 45%, while Amherst at 62% and Dartmouth and Princeton, both over 70%, are in the top bracket on this score.

Our 1960-61 Alumni Fund marks its reactivation following the merger with the University Development Program. By virtue of the excellent record of this capital campaign, the interest and devotion to Washington and Lee has been enlivened in a large number of alumni. It is hoped that this interest will be further manifested by a higher percentage of participation in the Alumni Fund.

Class agents, in addition to their participation in the fund, render a tremendous service to our alma mater. Members of each class have received letters from their agents and will, no doubt, receive other correspondence in the next few weeks. Regional agents are being enlisted to supplement the work of the class agents. These men will cooperate on a personal basis within their region to urge the full participation of all alumni. Through the help of each individually and of all collectively, the broadening of the base and the increased percentage of participation can be assured.

Raising the sights on individual giving is equally important. Even at this early point in the fund year, it is determined that the average gift is approximately $31.55. This is compared with $33.65 in our last full alumni fund and with Amherst's $34.00, Davidson's $41.00, Princeton's $51.00, and Sewanee's $85.00. When dealing with large numbers of participants, it is astounding what a great increase can be realized by a small rise in individual giving. Everyone is cognizant of how all items in our everyday world have gone up in costs. Colleges are no exception to this condition. As we all know, raising the student tuition is not the only answer. Each alumnus and friend of the University is urged to look realistically at this problem and to give thoughtfully and in proportion to his concern for Washington and Lee and its mission as an independent educational institution.

Remember that one of the great strengths of the Alumni Fund lies in the fact that it is annual giving upon which the University can depend in planning annual operations. Support your class and your alma mater as she deserves through the 1960-61 Alumni Fund.

Right Around Our Campus

WASHINGTON AND LEE University is now the owner of Col Alto, the historic residence once the property of the Tuckers in Lexington. The seventeen-room home, and surrounding eight acres of grounds, was willed to the college by Mrs. Rosa Tucker Mason for use as a president's home, or "some other non-commercial purpose."

The deed conveying the ownership was dated September 16, 1957, but Mrs. Mason was given lifetime occupancy. She died January 9, 1961. The Tuckers were very close to the University. Mrs. Mason's grandfathers, John Randolph Tucker and Colonel William Preston Johnston were both members of the faculty, as dean of the law school and professor of history, respectively. Her father, Harry St. George Tucker, succeeded his father as dean of the law school and served one year as acting president. Her brother, the late John Randolph Tucker, was a member of the Board of Trustees.

The 150-year-old mansion is a two story solid brick building which contains seventeen rooms, eight baths, and a full basement. All household furnishings not otherwise disposed of by Mrs. Mason in her will became the property of the college.

University use of the property is not yet crystallized, pending legal matters.

■ AN OLD FRIEND of Washington and Lee University has left the Lexington scene. Miss Mary Paxton Barclay died November 8, 1960, at the age of 79. She had been associated at the college in various capacities for 47 of those years.

Both her father and grandfather were members of the University's Board of Trustees, the elder Alexander Barclay from 1835-39, and her father from 1885-1915. She joined the staff in 1913, when the late Paul Penick, in whose law office she was secretary, was appointed treasurer of Washington and Lee. She served as his secretary for several years and for a time was secretary to President Henry Louis Smith. In 1919, she joined the staff of the alumni office as assistant to the alumni secretary. Before "Cy" Young became alumni secretary in 1929, she took charge of all alumni office activities, and again during his absence in wartime, from 1942-44, she supervised alumni work.

Her principal concern for many years was the Alumni Magazine, which she edited at times during the '20's, and for which she traditionally wrote the class notes.

Many Alumni will remember her in a more personal way, for she and her sister, Miss Elizabeth, had student tenants in their large home one block from the campus.

Miss Mary's principal outside interest was woodcarving, and many fraternity houses boast examples of her fine work. She carved chests on commission for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Queen Mother Elizabeth. Her most familiar work is the University's ceremonial mace, which she carved in three months in 1951 from a design by Dr. Marion M. Junkin, head of the department of fine arts.

A sister of Norris, Tennessee, and a brother, of Lexington, survive her. Miss Elizabeth died on October 23, 1960. The old Barclay home is currently up for sale, and many of its furnishings were sold at auction.

■ MRS. C. HAROLD LAUCK, assistant in the Alumni Office for almost nineteen years, retired January 1, 1961.

A long and faithful employee, she began her work with the office during World War II on a part-time basis. Miss Mary Barclay was in charge of Alumni activities at that time. Later, when Alumni Secretary H. K. Young returned from service, Mrs. Lauck took on full-time work in the office.

MRS. LAUCK receives silver tray.

She has been invaluable in her service with the Class Agents' and Regional Agents' solicitation for the Alumni Fund, as well as general operation of the Alumni office. A luncheon in her honor was held by employees on January 25 at Virginia House restaurant, and she was presented a silver bowl. The Alumni office presented her a silver tray.

Mrs. Lauck is the wife of the superintendent of the Journalism Laboratory Press at Washington and Lee. They have three children and seven grandchildren.

Alumni Board Considers Resolutions

IN ACCORDANCE with a policy of keeping alumni informed of significant action by the Alumni Board of Trustees, the Magazine lists the following action taken by the board at its meeting on October 7, 1960.

The board took under consideration each of the proposed resolutions offered by Dr. Amos L. Herold, '69, in the annual Association meeting of June 2, 1960, and reviewed on pages 22-23 of the Summer issue of the Alumni Magazine. The decisions of the board are as follows:

1. Fiscal procedure: the Alumni Board of Trustees, after discussion, unanimously agreed that under the present circumstances no benefit was to be gained by a change in the fiscal procedure; that the present procedure appears to be sound and in the best interest of both the University and the Association, and accordingly reaffirmed the resolution of the previous Board of 1952.

2. Acquisition of Alumni building: in discussing the matter, the Board took full cognizance of the desirability of an alumni headquarters building and reviewed its previous actions in this connection. It was the Board's opinion, however, (a) that it could not conscientiously insist that such a structure should take precedence over urgent requirements of the University, (b) that the University Board of Trustees has such a building under active consideration in the overall development plans of the University, and (c) that actions of this Board, including the directing of the solicitations and expenditures of money through the Alumni Fund, must be in keeping with the purposes set forth in the Association's charter to operate

"for the benefit of Washington and Lee University." Accordingly, the Board unanimously agreed that the action proposed by this resolution, namely: to withhold fund balances from the University for the purpose of expending same on an alumni headquarters, under the present circumstances would be contrary to the spirit of trust imposed upon them by the charter.

3. Association budget and audit: the Board noted that such procedure was already being followed and agreed no further action was needed on this resolution.

4. Publication of board actions: the Board in discussing this proposal noted that the minutes of the Board meetings are "open" to all alumni and, in the opinion of the Board, matters of significant interest are being given appropriate publicity. Proposed By-Laws changes (see number seven below) will be published in advance in the Alumni Magazine and the alumni will be brought up-to-date on all By-Laws as soon as feasible (see number ten below).

5. Proxy voting: the Board took note that voting by proxy had been tried in the past and found to be not in the best interest of the Association and the University. It is the Board's obligation to represent the interest and views of alumni generally, and in view of the wide dispersal of alumni of our University the Board felt that proxy voting would more readily tend to militant minority control than in majority control. The Board therefore unanimously declined to approve this resolution.

6. Revision of Article VIII: in considering this the Board unanimously agreed that the deletion of this phrase (By-Law Article VIII (b) "except as otherwise provided by action of the Board of Trustees") would limit the Board, which has the ultimate responsibility for carrying on the business and program of the Association, and consequently declined to take the action suggested by the resolution.

7. Tenure of Trustees: the Board noted that it has, for some time, had under study the membership and tenure of the Alumni Board of Trustees; that such study was reported to the Association at its General Meeting in June, 1960. The proposals under study would result in greater tenure, as advocated by Dr. Herold, but would still require a rotating Board. The committee directing this study expects to have specific proposals for presentation to the General Association meeting in June, 1961, with advance publication in the Alumni Magazine. Accordingly, the Board agreed to defer action on the first part of this resolution until such time as the changes now under consideration are accepted or rejected.

8. Bond: the Board took note of a letter from the Treasurer of the University advising "This is to certify that Washington and Lee University carried a blanket position bond with the National Surety Corporation of New York which covers the Treasurer of the University and all other employees who handle any University funds whatsoever, including Alumni Funds."

9. On Magazine being sent only to contributors to Alumni Fund: the Board expressed its opinion that the worth derived from our Magazine being sent to all alumni regardless of their contributions, lies in the intangible good relations it brings and unanimously agreed that the present policy be continued with no change.

10. Publication of By-Laws: the Board noted that the publication of the charter and by-laws is already under consideration and is awaiting the proposed revisions regarding membership and tenure of the Board of Trustees mentioned in paragraph number seven above. The Board agreed that as soon as practicable thereafter a publication of the charter and by-laws would be effected.

11. Enlargement of Magazine staff: the Board, after considering the expense involved and the opinion of its editorial board representative, concluded that such a move was not justified at the present time.

Among other actions the board (a) approved the Homecoming date of October 14, 1961 when the Generals will play Randolph-Macon men's college; (b) appointed new members of the Editorial Board; (c) approved a resolution by the Alumni Fund Council regarding the class note section of the Alumni Magazine and took under advisement another resolution by this same body regarding annual reports of the Association and of the University; (d) accepted a report from the Memphis chapter regarding their participation in a "Seminar for Public Responsibility" in their area; and (e) received a personal report from President Cole on various aspects of the University.

Name Your Candidate

In compliance with Article 9 of the By-Laws of the Washington and Lee Alumni, Inc., we are listing below the names of the Nominating Committee for the coming year.

Under the By-Laws, any member of the Association may submit the names of alumni to fill the vacancies on the Alumni Board of Trustees and the alumni representation on the University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics.

There are three vacancies to be filled on the Alumni Board of Trustees and one vacancy in the alumni representation to the University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics. These vacancies are to be filled at the June 1961 meeting of the Alumni Association. Members are urged to submit names of their candidates for these offices. The nominating Committee will close its report on April 22. Present alumni trustees whose terms expire this year are: Paul M. Shuford, '43, Clark B. Winter, '37, Bernard Levin, '42. The term of Preston R. Brown, '42, on the University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics also expires this year.

The Nominating Committee as appointed by the President of Washington and Lee University Alumni, Inc., is as follows:

CLASS NOTES

1911

CHARLES E. PETERS, after ten years with the law department of the Southern Railway and thirty years in the field of Insurance and Negligence Law, is retired in Roanoke, Virginia. He and his wife do a lot of traveling and enjoy it very much.

DONALD STANT writes: "I am now the longest in active practice of any lawyer in Bristol, Virginia. One in Bristol, Tennessee, has been at it longer. I work every day, but naturally prefer office work to trials, though that part of the work has not been given up altogether."

1912

HENRY L. CROWLEY, an attorney in Emory, Virginia, has retired from his "other" job as a high school and summer college work teacher. He keeps busy raising cattle and managing his fruit orchard, and boasts of seventeen grandchildren.

ROBERT I. MONTGOMERY retired at the end of 1960 as California state senator from Kings County. In 1952, he retired from school teaching, after being head of the math department at Hanford High school, Hanford, California, for thirty-five years, and assistant principal for twenty-five years. He holds the Silver Beaver award from the Boy Scouts, in recognition of twenty-five years of service. He is a former president of the Hanford Chamber of Commerce, past president of the Mt. Whitney Council, past master of the Hanford Masonic lodge, past exalted ruler and past district deputy grand exalted ruler of the Elks Lodge. While a member of the state Senate, he was chairman of the labor committee, and a member of the agricultural committee. He was one of the authors of a $1.75 billion water plan to bring more water into Kings County's West Side, thus assisting in diversifying West Side agriculture.

1913

R. R. WITT is retired as chairman of the board of Builders Supply Company in San Antonio. He keeps busy, as he is also chairman of the board of trustees of Trinity University, on the Board of Governors of Southwest Research Institute, and on the board of the Alamo National Bank.

EDISON C. JALONICK has been a trustee for Jalonick Estate Trust since 1935. An ardent fisherman and huntsman, he lives in Dallas, Texas, and boasts two married daughters and eight grandchildren. Before assuming his present position, he was vice-president of a fire insurance company. After leaving Washington and Lee, he played football for Texas Union, but a knee injury prevented his further career in athletics.

1914

BERKELEY COX retired in January, 1960, from Aetna Life Insurance Company. He and his wife have traveled in Europe and the Near East during this past year. They are the proud possessors of six grandchildren.

He is general counsel for Merritt-Chapman and Scott Corporation, Universal Marion Corporation, Devoe and Reynolds Company, Inc., Tennessee Products and Chemical Corporation and New York Shipbuilding Corporation.

1921

PHILIP G. HARRIS has two children and three grandchildren. He is in property management in Spartanburg, South Carolina. He and Mrs. Harris expect to be on hand for the fortieth reunion in May. Address: 1008 Schuyler Apartments, Spartanburg.

DR. H. GRAY FUNKHOUSER began his fortieth year of teaching last fall, having started with a class of freshman under

Dr. Liv Smith in 1920. He is professor of math at Phillips Exeter Academy. His son, John, was married last April, and his daughter, Ann, will be married in May. This event will keep him from attending the Class Reunions, although he says he would like very much to be on hand.

1922

W. JOSIAH PATTON has been promoted to deputy comptroller of the First National City Bank of New York. He has been with the bank for 31 years. Since 1941, he had served as assistant comptroller.

WILLIAM F. MCCANN attended the National Promenade of the Forty and Eight in Miami, Florida, in October, 1960. He has been a very active member of the American Legion for some years.

DR. WILLIAM H. HESSELTINE, a member of the faculty of the University of Wisconsin, spoke in Chattanooga, Tennessee, last October on "The Election of 1860." He made his appearance at the Second Civil War Symposium of the University of Chattanooga. Dr. Hesselstine, president of the Southern Historical Association, was a former professor of history at the Chattanooga college. This year he edited for the first modern publication, Murat Halstead's "Three Against Lincoln," an account of the four political conventions of 1860 which Halstead covered as a reporter for the Cincinnati Commercial. He is the author of a number of books including, "Lincoln and the War Governors"; "Confederate Leaders in the New South"; and "The South in American History." Dr. Hesselstine has lectured in England, Germany, Central America, and India and has served as visiting lecturer at such institutions as the Universities of Tennessee, Missouri, South Carolina, Rice, Stanford, and Southern California. He twice received the McClung Award for distinguished writing in the field of Tennessee history.

EDGAR JACKSON writes: "Now a ward of Uncle Sam, I am getting a delayed bang out of life traveling, as long as my cabbage leaves hold out—had my second trip around the world last winter and during the past summer toured Scandinavia and the British Isles, including the Isle of Man; and I have photographic proof that "We, the members of the academic class of 1920, at this, the 40th year since our graduation from Washington and Lee University, pause to pay tribute to our friend and class-mate, Willis M. Everett, who departed this life last April 4th at Atlanta, Georgia. To this end, a committee of members of the 1920 class is hereby named to draft appropriate resolutions, as follows:

WHEREAS Willis M. Everett had become a distinguished and highly-respected member of the Atlanta Bar, and, as was his nature, ever championed the causes of the unfortunate and underprivileged, and was always willing to undertake, wherever necessary, to defend a just though unpopular cause, and

WHEREAS he served as commissioned officer with distinction in both World Wars, and, in 1946, was promoted to the rank of Colonel, Army Intelligence, and, while stationed at Nuremberg, Germany, was assigned to the most difficult and unpopular defense of his career: viz. the defense of 74 German officers and troopers accused of the slaughter of American and Belgian prisoners during the Battle of the Ardennes Bulge, otherwise better known as the "Malmedy Massacre," and

WHEREAS the fate of these Germans became, in time, a cause celebre, and the subject of many articles in the press, both in the United States and abroad, engendering strong emotions, overwhelmingly in favor of execution, and

WHEREAS he believed that these Germans had not had fair trials according to American notions of due process; that confessions had been coerced from them, and documentary evidence in their favor had been destroyed, and was willing to accept the challenge of their defense without reservation; further, that he spent five years of his life and considerable personal fortune in appeals to save the lives of these unfortunates, before the United States Supreme Court and the Court of International Justice at the Hague, his efforts resulting in the commutation of death sentences to sentences of life imprisonment in each instance, and

WHEREAS, we, the members of the 1920 class, take a just pride that Willis was our class-mate, and considering that his untiring efforts reflected much credit to his alma mater, that this conduct was in its best traditions, and far beyond the call of duty,

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, (1) that we, his class-mates, mourn his untimely death; (2) that, in order that his services not be forgotten, these resolutions be entered upon the official records of his alma mater; (3) that copies thereof be transmitted to the family of our class-mate, to the Board of Trustees, to the Alumni Association, and to President Cole and the members of the Administrative Board of Washington and Lee University, for such further action as may be considered appropriate.

Respectfully submitted,

Thomas M. Stubbs, Emmett W. Poindexter, Perry D. Howerton, Hope D. Stark, Committee, Academic Class of 1920

1923

M. IRVINE DUNN, JR., has been named one of three senior vice-presidents of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway System. He is in charge of operations. Mr. Dunn has been with the railroad for 43 years. He is a third generation employee of the company—his grandfather came out of Stonewall Jackson's army to become chief operating officer of the railroad. Washington and Lee conferred an honorary doctorate on Mr. Dunn two years ago.

G. PEABODY HOWARD retired in August, 1960, as Judge of the Tennessee Court of Appeals. It was in 1934 that he was elected District Attorney General of Hamilton county and re-elected in 1942. He served from 1944 until 1947 as Chancellor of the Third Chancery Division, at which time he received his appointment to the Court of Appeals.

1924

JOHN H. GUERRANT was recently named president of the Virginia Paper Company in Richmond, Virginia.

HARRIS A. RAY retired from active business five years ago. He still manages to make hopeful commitments on the stock and bond market. He lives in Orinda, California.

1925

W. J. DRIVER has recently given to the Lee Archives of Washington and Lee copies of 21 Lee letters, the originals of which are in his possession. Most of the letters are from members of the Lee family to Margaret and Carrie Stuart of Cedar Grove, near Richmond, from 1859 to 1893. Among the sixteen which General Lee wrote is an important one to Mrs. Lee dealing with his illness in 1863. All reflect the intimate relationship between the Lee and Stuart families. Mr. Driver is now a resident of Sarasota, Florida.

1927

CHARLES T. SMITH has lived in three different places in the past two years. After six years for the duPont company in north central Florida, he was transferred to Delaware in 1959 for ten months, then to Baltimore last July. He and his family are now settled in Severna Park, Maryland. Charles is now an accountant at the duPont Metals Center, a new research and development activity on the site of the existing Pigments Plant.

WALTON BACHRACH is the new mayor of Cincinnati, Ohio. The mayor is one of the proprietors of the Wheel Cafe on Walnut Street, founded fifty-four years ago. He is a graduate of the University of Cincinnati Law School.

1928

GERALD F. HORINE has completed twenty-five years with the Ford Motor Company. He is presently zone manager in the Washington, D. C. metropolitan area.

JOHN OLIVER RUTHERFORD has served six consecutive terms as clerk of the Baltimore City Court, 1938-60.

CHARLES A. STRAHORN is still a banker, and serves as president of the Winnetka Trust and Savings Bank, Winnetka, Illinois.

LEXINGTON'S CIGAR-SMOKING Sam W. Rayder, '30, has spent more time in extra-curricular activities than any Washington and Lee student—but he's been at it for 30 years.

The 57-year-old vice president and trust officer of the Rockbridge National Bank puts in his time in the all-important post of Washington and Lee student body treasurer. In this capacity he directly supervises the expenditure of all student funds at the university.

Unpaid and often not thanked for his efforts, Rayder started on his financial whirl with Washington and Lee while he was a student here. He was the first and only student to serve as student body treasurer. He held the post his senior year and ever since.

For twenty-five years, Rayder carried the dual responsibility of the administration of student body funds and the keeping of books for the then fourteen social fraternities on campus. He retired as the fraternities' financial adviser in 1955 when he was named to his present position at the bank. He still serves as advisor for his own Sigma Chi, however.

The most time-consuming portion of the student body treasurer's job is the supervision of funds for campus publications. Rayder handles the budgets for the Calyx, The Southern Collegian and the Ring-tum Phi.

Born in the little Arkansas town of Watson, Rayder came to Lexington in 1924 as a freshman. That same year he took a job at the Rockbridge Bank. He obtained his law degree from the university in 1930.

Rayder's banking interest stems from his 15th birthday when he assumed the job of cashier—the only one in knee pants—of a small country bank in Desha County, Arkansas. From this little bank he came to Washington and Lee at the suggestion of an alumnus who was employed by Little Rock's W. B. Northern Private Bank.

Besides being an active layman in Lexington's First Presbyterian Church, Rayder has found time during the past 30 years to collect antique autos. At one point he had a total of six old cars. Commercially, his interest in cars led him to the presidency of the Rockbridge Motor Company, a local dealership.

Some of his active interest in Washington and Lee student affairs has rubbed off on his family—at least Sam W. Rayder, Jr. His 18-year-old son is a freshman this year at his father's alma mater. Rayder also has two daughters and two grandchildren.

JOSEPH J. KAPLAN, an attorney in Louisville, was named "man of the year" by the B'nai B'rith Lodge 14 there. He was presented a citation for "conspicuous service to the community over a period of years." He is president of the Louisville Hebrew School, is a laymember of the advisory committee for SS Mary and Elizabeth Hospital, and has served on the budget committee of the Community Chest. He is local co-chairman of the National Conference of Christians and Jews and an executive committeeman of the Conference of Jewish Organizations. He was instrumental in building the Jewish Community Center in Louisville, and was its president from 1955 to 1958. He is the father of two sons.

GEORGE OLDHAM CLARK, a Louisville attorney, was honored recently with a plaque and a silver piece at the recent meeting of the directors of the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children. He was the outgoing president, and was cited for the fine job he did for the Society.

IRVIN W. CUBINE is City Attorney of Martinsville, Virginia. He has previously served two terms as Commonwealth's Attorney.

1929

LEWIS F. POWELL, JR. has been appointed a member of the Virginia State Board of Education by Governor Lindsay Almond. Mr. Lewis has served two terms as chairman of the Richmond City School Board, and is leaving the board on June 30 after almost eleven years of service. The governor declared he knew "of no man more qualified" than Lewis for the appointment. "He has done a magnificent job as a member of the school board of Richmond." Lewis was awarded an honorary degree last June at Washington and Lee, and was cited for "his discernment in educational matters" which have "contributed to the excellence of Richmond schools and to the influence of the higher institutions of which he is a trustee."

1931

WILLIAM M. DIX is chief chemist at the $100 million plant of the Scott Paper Company of Mobile, Alabama.

HORACE GOOCH, JR., treasurer of the Worcester Moulded Plastics Company, says his company has merged with the Packaging Corporation of America, of Evanston, Illinois. In effect, the marriage of the two concerns ties together one of the nation's largest producers of pulp and paperboard containers with a manufacturer of plastic liners and moulded packing materials. Under the terms of the merger, Gooch became vice-president of the packaging corporation, in charge of its plastic division.

1932

ROSS L. MALONE, in addition to his law practice, is now chairman of the board of the recently organized Security National Bank of Roswell, New Mexico.

DR. FRANK CUNNINGHAM has written another book, "Knight of the Confederacy." It is an account of the exploits of General Turner Ashby, one of the little-known heroes of the Civil War. It is of especial interest now, during the Civil War Centennial. In the volume, the life of General Ashby is interwoven with the careers of Joseph E. Johnstone, "Jeb" Stuart, and Robert E. Lee. Ashby is described as the "eyes and ears of Stonewall Jackson." The book is published by the Naylor Company of San Antonio, Texas, at five dollars.

1933

TED CURTIS is vice-president of Tiller, Neal, Battle and Lindsey Advertising Agency, with offices in Richmond, Atlanta, and New York. He and his wife are the parents of two daughters, and one son who will enter Washington and Lee in about three years.

1934

ROBERT K. TURNEY has been elected treasurer of the Peoples' Savings Bank in Bridgeport, Connecticut. He joined the bank in 1941 in the mortgage department. In 1951 he was appointed auditor, and in 1956, assistant treasurer. He has completed the executive management course at Dartmouth College and is a graduate of the Stonier Graduate School of Banking, Rutgers University. He serves as a trustee for Nicholas Memorial Library, and has acted as vice-chairman of United Fund's special gifts committee. He is a member of the National Association of Auditors and Comptrollers, and of Washington Lodge 19 AF and AM. He and Mrs. Turney have one son, Robert, a student at Barrington School.

GEORGE M. SPAULDING and his wife spent a month abroad recently with their daughter, Carol, who is a junior in the Hollins Abroad group. George is in the lumber business in Chase City, Virginia. The Spauldings' eldest son, George, is a freshman this year at Washington and Lee.

■ HARVARD UNIVERSITY may reign triumphant in the White House, but Washington and Lee holds sway in the Governor's Mansion of West Virginia. William Wallace Barron, '34, was elected to his present job by an overwhelming margin in the November election.

Mr. Barron had been serving as Attorney General for West Virginia for four years. He began his political climb in 1949, when the voters of his home town, Elkins, elected him mayor. Later he was elected to the House of Delegates, then was appointed a member of the state liquor commission, and served as its commissioner. In 1956, he was elected state Attorney General.

He is the sixth Attorney General to step up to the Governorship. He is West Virginia's twenty-sixth governor, and is the fourteenth Democrat to hold the office. He succeeds a Republican, Cecil H. Underwood.

Governor Barron pledged "an administration of honesty, integrity, and good government" and said he would do "everything humanly possible to expand our economy, return our people to gainful employment, and solve our other problems."

He and his wife, Opal, are the parents of three daughters, and boast one grandson, William Wallace Morgan.

1935

JOHN A. WEBER, in sending a contribution to the Class Agent fund, said, he would like to contribute more but he hopes to have his son attend Washington and Lee in September, 1961. "Have enjoyed contributing in past years," says John. And thanks to you too!

BILL DYER is the multi-purpose cartoonist for the Knoxville News-Sentinel in Knoxville, Tennessee. Among his most popular features is the "Dyer-gram," a play-by-play drawing of the University of Tennessee football games, which appears in each Sunday paper during the grid season. He draws four football fields, one for each quarter, then sketches the game—the yardage of each kick, each pass, plus the down. U. T. coaches say they keep a file of Dyergrams for a quick, handy reference to each game. Bill also draws cartoons for stories and features, plus some editorial cartoons. When Bill was first hired by the newspaper, he was assigned as a sports reporter, because he had been an All-Southern tackle for Washington and Lee. He started covering high school games, and few knew that he was also officiating some of the same games. He claimed he got exclusive coachly quotes, and also had a good view of the action from down on the field. Bill and Mrs. Dyer are the parents of three children: John, 18, a second-year-man and a Falcon fullback at the U. S. Air Force Academy; Betty, 15; and Pat, 7. They live at 4503 South Garden Road in Knoxville.

JAMES M. FRANKLIN is a District Boy Scout executive in Irvington, New Jersey. He is the father of two children, Bill, 18, and Patricia, 12. The Franklin family lives at 13 Birkendene Road, Caldwell, New Jersey.

RICHARD TOWNES KELLEY has been associated with Emerson Electrical Manufacturing Company since 1942. He is now head of the Electronics and Avionics Publication Editors and Production staff, which make the technical manuals for Convair, Boeing, and the U. S. Armed Forces. Dick and his wife, Virginia, have a son, 13, and a daughter, 9, and live in Clayton, Missouri.

1936

BORN: MR. and MRS. WALTER R. BEALES, JR., are the parents of a son Randolph Allen, born February 10, 1960. They also have a sixteen-year-old son, Walter, III. Address: Box 98, Boydton, Virginia.

CHARLES A. SWEET writes: "It seems incredible that next year will be our Twenty-fifth Reunion, and that my oldest son—the Lord and the Director of Admissions willing—will be going to Washington and Lee next year. As penance for my sins, I am a member of the Bristol Board of Education. I'm also head of a small bank, and the latest flow of information about the movement of gold makes me wish I had paid closer attention in Economics 1, so I would know what is happening."

1937

BORN: MR. and MRS. JAMES B. AKERS are the parents of a son, Bryan Scott, born November 15, 1960.

LANEON VICTOR BUTLER has two sons at Washington and Lee this year. Lanny is a sophomore and Syd is a freshman. The Butlers live in Memphis, Tennessee, and Jimmy is in the grain and cotton business.

FREDERICK A. MARSTELLER is with the Marsteller, McCabe and Company, real estate, in Washington, D. C. He often serves as a professional lecturer for the American University's School of Business Administration. He and his wife, Ruth, are the parents of four daughters and two sons, ranging in age from four years up to seventeen.

ALBERT ATLEE RADCLIFFE is now vice-president of the Farmers and Mechanics-Citizens National Bank in Frederick, Maryland. A former employee of the bank, he had for twenty years been with the examining division of the Comptroller of the Currency, Treasury Department. Since September, 1949, he served as National Bank Examiner in a three-state area. He is a director of Dietrich and Gambrell, Incorporated; Frederick Hotel Company, and is a member of the board of stewards of Calvary Methodist church. He and his wife are the parents of three children. Address: 146 Fairview Avenue, Frederick.

Since the summer of 1958, C. A. BUTTERWORTH has been the business manager, and his wife has been the Dean of Women at Brevard College, Brevard, North Carolina. Brevard is a coeducational junior college of liberal and practical arts under the auspices of the Western North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church, and is fully accredited.

LEE GATHRIGHT is purchasing agent for the Airborne Electronics division of Raytheon Corporation at Sudbury, Massachusetts. Lee and his family live ten miles away, at Lake Chauncy in Westboro, Massachusetts. He often sees Harold Hickox, '36, who is a lawyer and realtor in Westboro.

JAMES A. BYERS and KENT FORSTER paid the Washington and Lee campus a visit with their families during last summer. Each alumnus has two daughters and two sons. James is with duPont, Kent is a history professor at Penn State.

1938

JAMES EDWARD GRIFFIN is in the advertising business in Trinidad, Colorado, and is also mayor of that city. He had a recent business trip to New York City, and while there had a pleasant meeting with Bob White, '38, then editor of the Herald-Tribune. The Griffins have two children, a girl, sixteen, and a boy, fourteen.

C. PRICE BERRYMAN OWNS and operates a retail lumber yard in southeast Kansas. He is also an independent oil producer, operating in eastern Oklahoma. He is interested in exchange of information and correspondence with other Washington and Lee men in the oil business.

ROBERT FINN is fire protection superintendent at the duPont company in Niagara Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Finn are the parents of two sons and a daughter.

PAUL M. MILLER has been in the foreign service in the Far East for ten years. He is now with the American Consulate General in Hong Kong, where he serves as commercial officer and consul. The Millers and their two children expect to be back in the United States for Christmas, 1961.

EDWARD MEISTER, JR. is the president of a small publishing company in Willoughby, Ohio. The company publishes American Fruit Grower, American Vegetable Grower, County Agent and VO-AG Teacher and Farm Chemicals.

DR. PAUL H. DARSIE is engaged in the practice of internal medicine with the Health Service of Cornell University. He is associate professor of Clinical and Preventative Medicine.

COMMANDER WILLIAM B. BAGBEY is now ASW officer on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Atlantic Fleet in Norfolk, Virginia. Prior to his present assignment, he served as commanding officer of U. S. S. Keppler, a destroyer escort.

CHESTER P. WHITE is president and treasurer of Blake and Johnson Company in Waterbury, Connecticut. The Whites have four sons, the oldest of whom is now a sophomore at Washington and Lee.

ROBERT M. WHITE, II, President and Editor of the New York Herald-Tribune, is giving up his position with the newspaper as the owner, Ambassador John Hay Whitney retires from the Court of St. James in London. Mr. White will act as consultant for some time after Mr. Whitney resumes control of the newspaper, but will return eventually to his family newspaper, the Mexico Evening Ledger in Mexico, Missouri. Mr. White has handled the editorial duties on the New York paper since July, 1959. Mr. Whitney praised his "enormous contribution" to the Herald-Tribune, saying, "He has successfully directed its rebuilding during my absence and has laid the groundwork for continued development and growth... Under Bob White's supervision our European Edition has been reorganized in Paris and is going strongly forward. Our news service and syndicate are setting records."

1939

JOE OCHSIE, JR., former well-known football star at Washington and Lee, has been living in California for the past two years. He is associated with AVCO Corporation, Research and Advanced Development Division, and represents the Purchasing Department for Research and Advanced Development and also the Lycoming Division of AVCO. Joe was a Marine lieutenant during World War II, and participated in the Saipan and Iwo Jima invasion. After the war, he went to Japan for five years as personnel director for the Army Exchange system. He set up the personnel program, which entailed establishment of policies, development and administration of a training program, and supervision of the payroll which then contained 763 civilian employees, 9,900 Japanese and 62 other nationals. There were over 200 stores doing a business of $70,000,000 annually. He and his wife, Frances, are the parents of four girls. Joe says he hasn't been back to the Washington and Lee campus since he graduated, although he's still hoping to find the time and opportunity. His address: 302 Cristobal, San Clemente, California.

DR. ALEX BLAIN has been back in Detroit for three years now, after serving as chief surgeon again of the U. S. Army Hospital at Bad Kreuznach, West Germany. Since returning, he has been rebuilding the Alexander Blain Hospital, and is now president of the Cardiovascular Surgeon's Club, Detroit Science Museum Society, and vice-president of the Family Service Society of Metropolitan Detroit.

DONALD C. SMITH is in the Quality Control section of the Engineering department of Pratt and Whitney Aircraft. He and Mrs. Smith live in Coventry, Connecticut. Don is First Reader in the First Church of Christ Scientist there.

He and his wife, Betty, are the parents of four children, Debby, 14; Kathy, 11; Bill, 10; and Laurie, 6.

ALLEN R. DELONG is a special assistant to the General Counsel, U. S. Department of Commerce. He represents the Commerce Department at the meetings, three times a year, of the International Labor Organization in Geneva, Switzerland.

EMERY COX, JR. and his family moved to Minnesota in 1955. He was a special assistant attorney general for Minnesota until June, 1960, when he joined the law firm of Neville, Johnson and Thompson in the First National Bank Building, Minneapolis 2, Minnesota. He and Barbara have five children, Kathleen, 14; Emery, III, 13; Mary Barbara, 12; Brigid, 10; and Dixie, 3. Emery says he sees Bud Robb, '43, often—Bud and his family live at Lake Minnetonka and Bud is mayor of the village of Deephaven. Emery is a member of a fairly active Civil War Round Table in the Twin Cities area. There is a membership of about 95, with Emery as the only one from South of the Mason-Dixon line. However, those odds seem about right, he says, and he can hold his own pretty well.

1942

ED KORRY is European Editor of Look Magazine, with headquarters in London. Actually, he lives all over, and spent only twelve weeks of the 52 last year in London. He travels on assignments to Asia, Africa, and East and West Europe. Ed was with United Press for twelve years, resigned in 1954 as Chief Correspondent in Europe and took on his present job with Look. He has lived in Paris for seven years, in Germany for one, in Eastern Europe for three, and in England for eighteen months. Ed spent a very interesting time recently, as one of the 173 executives attending the Advanced Management Program at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. The team on which he served and for which he wrote the presentation, won the faculty award for excellence at the end of the course. Ed has four children now, the eldest nine, and the youngest two. Ed says he has been impressed increasingly during each of his short visits home by the importance of improving the American educational system—and has been delighted by the growing stature of Washington and Lee in all academic circles.

FRANK LAMOTTE has recently been promoted to Pulp Sales Manager for the Gulf States Paper Corporation. He and Mrs. LaMotte are the parents of three children and live in Demopolis, Alabama.

KENNETH S. CLENDANIEL is presently Dean of Clear Creek Baptist school in Pineville, Kentucky. He and his wife are the parents of five children; however, only one is a prospect for Washington and Lee. His age is twelve.

WILLIAM J. SCOTT, JR., is senior partner in the public accountant firm of William J. Scott, Jr. and Company. He and his wife have two sons and one daughter.

BERNARD LEVIN is being mentioned as a candidate for a House of Delegates seat in Virginia's General Assembly, in the elections to be held next July. Bernie was a delegate to the Democratic national convention in Los Angeles last summer and served as a member of the state campaign finance committee during the presidential campaign. He is president of the Norfolk United Cerebral Palsy chapter and the Sertoma Club.

G. C. McCRARY is a farmer and rancher in Post, Texas. He also is an oil operator. The McCrarys have three children, two girls and a boy.

J. LUTHER JORDAN, JR. has been elected vice-president and trust officer of the Louisiana National Bank, Baton Rouge, Louisiana. Prior to his election, he was trust officer for the First National Bank of Shreveport. He received his professional training from the Hanover Bank's Trust Development School and the Illinois Bankers Association's Trust Development School. He is a member of the bar, has served as a director of the Shreveport Association for the Blind, and a member of the trust committee of the Louisiana Bankers Association.

1943

FRANK R. BELL, JR., former executive vice-president of the Patterson, Bell and Crane Insurance agency of Charleston, West Virginia, is now with the Insurance Company of North America. ## Alumni Chapter Meetings

FLORIDA WEST COAST

More than twenty-five members of the Florida West Coast chapter met on October 28, 1960 at the University Club in Tampa for a stag buffet-smoker. Charles P. Lykes, '39, president, presided, and introduced Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn, '40, who reported on the latest developments on the campus. A current movie of the Generals' 1960 football season was shown and enthusiastically received.

Among those present was C. T. Dawkins, '09, whose reminiscing of the Washington and Lee of yesteryear highlighted the meeting.

ATLANTA

The alumni of the Atlanta chapter turned out in great numbers for a cocktail party on November 12, 1960, following the Alabama-Georgia Tech football game. The meeting was held at the Piedmont Driving Club. Bill Washburn, executive secretary from Lexington, was on hand for the occasion. Arrangements were made by E. S. Humphreys, '44, chapter president, and Farris Hotchkiss, '59, secretary.

PALM BEACH-FORT LAUDERDALE

The Coral Beach Club, at Palm Beach, Florida, was the scene of the University Development Campaign dinner on November 2. President Fred C. Cole and Dean Frank J. Gilliam, '17, were guest speakers before the large attendance of alumni, parents, and friends. The group, under the chairmanship of Beverly Smith, '32, presented a gift to both President Cole and Dean

Gilliam in recognition of their service and future with the University.

A business meeting was conducted, outlining the newly formed Palm Beach-Fort Lauderdale area alumni chapter. John Ginestra, '44, was named chapter president. The following directors were named: Horner Fisher, '16, Judge Russell Morrow, '30, Charles Fulton, '32, George Boutwell, '32, Hugh Glickstein, '53, Norman Roettger, '58, and Gavin Letts, '57.

GULF STREAM (Miami)

A reorganizational meeting of a group of alumni from the Gulf Stream chapter was held October 31, 1960, with a luncheon in the private dining hall of the Coral Way Cafeteria in Miami. Secretary Bill Washburn presented to the assembled group a report on the ways and means that the chapter might bring about its reactivation. A Board of Directors to proceed with this matter was elected as follows: J. Allen Cross, Jr., '51; Paul Barns, Jr., '44; Charles Bradshaw, '51; Donald Burton, '40; Talbot Trammel, '52; Bruce Woodruff, '50; Dr. Fred Maupai, '39; and Charles Curl, Jr., '40.

A movie film of some of the recent General football games was shown. The group proposed to meet again during the winter.

On November 1, the Development Campaign was opened in the Miami area with a well attended dinner at the beautiful LaGorce Country Club. Charles Bradshaw, '51, was chairman and presented President Fred C. Cole and Dean Frank J. Gilliam.

CHARLOTTE

A fine attendance of alumni gathered at the University Club in Charlotte, North Carolina for a luncheon meeting on November 11, 1960. Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn was the principal speaker and brought movie films of some of the 1960 Generals' football games. His talk covered recent developments on the campus and gave a status report of the student body.

Charles L. Green, '40, president of the chapter, called for a report from the nominating committee for the new officers for the coming year. The slate of officers named was as follows: John Schuber, Jr., '44, president; James White, '51, secretary; and Harry A. Berry, Jr., '49, treasurer.

The new officers proposed to have another meeting soon to discuss the actions of the scholarship and admissions committee.

ST. LOUIS

St. Louis alumni hosted a dinner November 19, 1960, for members of the Washington and Lee football team, parents, and coaches. The event was held at the Clayton Inn, following the Generals' triumph over Washington University, and was the scene of much jubilation over the team's completion of the first undefeated season since 1914.

The dinner was so well-attended that the banquet was obliged to be held in two shifts. Malcolm Hølekamp, '53, president, gave congratulations to the Generals, in behalf of the alumni. Head Coach Lee M. McLaughlin spoke briefly, praising the team and reviewing prospects for the future.

The team members, who had to fly back to Lexington that night, were given a rousing send-off by the chapter.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Washington chapter alumni luncheon on December 28, 1960, at the Army-Navy In Town club was attended by some 75 strong, to hear addresses by Football Coach Lee McLaughlin and Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn, '40.

The group included a number of students who were home from college for Christmas vacation as well as a number of prospective students for the fall session of 1961. G. Bruce West, '48, presided at the meeting. Fred Vinson, Jr., '46, introduced Coach Lee McLaughlin as the principal speaker. Football movies of some of the 1960 Generals' games were shown and enjoyed by everyone.

APPALACHIAN

The Appalachian chapter held a dinner meeting in the beautiful new Bristol Country Club November 11, 1960. Bill Washburn, from Lexington, made the principal address on the present status of the University, and particularly the new developments which have taken place in recent months. A large group, including the wives, assembled for a cocktail hour preceding the dinner meeting. A speciality group from the Washington and Lee Glee Club, the Capperales, entertained the alumni chapter. The Glee Club had a combined concert with Sullins College this same night which many of the alumni attended following the meeting.

John M. Jones, '37, presided and asked Frank Goodpasture, '43, for a report of the nominating committee. Those officers elected were as follows: president, L. A. Myers, '31; vice-presidents: W. S.
