Restoration
For Lee Chapel

Do You Remember?

THE ABOVE PHOTOGRAPH is submitted by Joseph B. Dabney who attended Washington and Lee in 1891-1893. He identifies the picture as that of the Washington and Lee Glee Club in the year 1892-93 and recalls that "George Lenert, '95 was the leader, Thomas Emory Merrill, '95 played the violin, A. L. Dabney, '92 (a brother) played the flute and I (J. B. Dabney wearing a derby) strummed one of the guitars." The other members of the Glee Club in this photograph have not been identified. It is apparent that members of the Glee Club at the turn of the century were men of many talents who not only sang but provided their own music. This practice was apparently standard procedure until about 1902 when there began both a Glee Club and a Mandolin Club.

Mr. Dabney who celebrated his 88th birthday in December, 1960, resides in Vicksburg, Mississippi, where he is a retired lawyer. He missed the General Reunion of all classes in 1959 but says he hopes to be on hand for the next one in 1964.

LEE CHAPEL, symbol of Robert E. Lee's continuing influence on Washington and Lee University and a campus landmark remembered and loved by all alumni, will be restored and preserved through a gift of $370,000 to the University from the Ford Motor Company Fund of Dearborn, Mich.

Presentation of the first payment of the gift was made at Commencement when President Fred C. Cole, in the president's traditional remarks to graduates, urged a re-emphasis of the ideals of honor, integrity, and humility which governed Lee's life.

Allen W. Merrell, vice-president of the Ford Motor Company Fund, represented Henry Ford, II, in impressive ceremonies on the Commencement platform before 199 seniors and some 1,000 parents, faculty, and others.

Mr. Merrell said the Fund's trustees were impressed by the large number of Americans, from all over the nation, who visit Lee Chapel annually, and he said they were impressed by the fact that the Chapel continues to be a "living" shrine, an integral part of the life of a university of "proud historic and scholastic record." But he said the most compelling reason to assist in the Chapel's restoration was "the character of the man who caused the Chapel to be erected."

"General Robert E. Lee is loved and respected by all Americans," Merrell declared. "His dedication to the education of youth after he had suffered the sorrow and agony of military defeat catches up and exemplifies the American ideal of responsible citizenship.

"His courage, his integrity and the lofty dignity of his character that caused him to rise above bitterness inspire all of us. It is the hope of the Ford Motor Company Fund that, in helping in this way to preserve his memory, we may perhaps contribute a little also to the preservation of the things for which he stood and which all of us need particularly today."

In accepting the first payment of $25,000 from the Ford Fund, President Cole asked Mr. Merrell to assure the Fund's trustees that the gift will be applied "conscientiously and prudently."

"We shall proceed with our work at the Chapel with a humble awareness that all we do to restore and preserve Lee Chapel not only honors a man whose life was noble and generous, but honors as well those principles of personal honor and integrity that are the opportunity of all men and which were possessed by Robert E. Lee in such impressive abundance."

The presentation and President Cole's subsequent graduation address followed the conferring of degrees and a valedictory address by Brian H. Vitsky of Richmond. Among the graduates were 23 Bachelors of Law, 25 Bachelors of Science in Commerce, 22 Bachelors of Science, three Bachelors of Science in Chemistry, and 126 Bachelors of Arts.

Honorary degrees were conferred upon Stuart Thomas Saunders, president of the Norfolk and Western Railway Company, and, in absentia, David K. E. Bruce, American ambassador to England. Both were made Doctors of Laws. (Citations on Page 6.)

Weather for the two-day program of final exercises was ideal. Dr. William F. Quillian, Jr., president of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, delivered the Baccalaureate sermon in Lee Chapel on Thursday. Seniors and their parents were guests of the Alumni Association at luncheon that day, and in the evening, President and Mrs. Cole received parents and their sons at their home.

On Friday, 38 seniors were commissioned Army second lieutenants at 9 a.m. in Lee Chapel. Colonel Ben L. Anderson, '38, was in charge of the commissioning ceremony.

In his remarks to graduates, President Cole quoted often from Lee's correspondence with others and from notes which the famed general and educator jotted down as guidance for himself.

President Cole cited the high value which Lee attached to education and he urged the 1961 seniors to continue a "systematic pursuit of knowledge." He recalled Lee's integrity, and he warned his audience that temptations to compromise integrity "will come soon and often."

"Under the circumstances of such temptation," President Cole asserted, "I hope you will be able to recall that Robert E. Lee was a man of uncompromising integrity and that you, as alumni of Washington and Lee, have a special obligation to fulfill."

Commenting on Lee's humility, the president said he hoped that each graduate would take with him a measure of Lee's humble attitude. "I want you to be proud of your accomplishments as a graduate," President Cole said, "but I hope you will have the humility to acknowledge that the diplomas you hold in your hands are possible only because a great many other persons also sacrificed and labored in your behalf."

The restoration of Lee Chapel is expected to take from 18 months to two years to complete. Architects have begun detailed plans, and the Boston firm of Perry, Shaw, Hepburn & Dean, which directed the restoration of the 18th Century City of Williamsburg, among other historical projects, will act as consultants to University architects. Mr. William Perry, senior partner of the firm, will conduct the appropriate research for Lee Chapel.

President Cole has emphasized that Lee Chapel's appearance will not be changed. The building will be restored as originally constructed. The main masonry walls are apparently structurally sound and will continue to be used. Certain interior bearing walls will be removed and rebuilt or strengthened by adding steel columns and beams within such walls. The existing interior columns will be replaced with new steel columns. There will be new plaster ceilings and walls throughout; also new wood floors for the auditorium and balcony, and benches and pews will be refinished. All work will be done with extreme care, and workmanship and materials will be of the highest quality, duplicating where possible the materials used originally.

The Chapel will be made fire-resistant, and will include modern heating, air-conditioning, and electric lighting that, of course, were not in the original conception of General Lee. Provision for dehumidification of the interior will help protect the priceless art collection housed in the Chapel.

President Cole pointed out that the University, whose first commitment, he emphasized, is to education, has lacked for many years the resources to take appropriate steps for the Chapel's restoration and preservation. Among his predecessors in office who agreed that such steps were needed was George Washington Custis Lee, who with his father, helped plan the Chapel

LEE'S WORDS

'A True Glory, A True Honor'

"There is a true glory and a true honor: The glory of duty done—the honor of integrity of principle."

"Private and public life are subject to the same rules; and truth and manliness are two qualities that will carry you through this world much better than policy or tact, or expediency, or any other word that was ever devised to conceal or mystify a deviation from a straight line."

"It is to men of high integrity and commanding intellect that the country must look to give character to her councils."

"So the work is done, I care not by whom it is done."

and supervise its construction. In 1909, several years after he had completed 30 years as president of the University, he wrote to a friend that rather than make some desired changes in the Chapel, he'd rather see a new one built, for he wrote, "the present one is patched up enough already."

Lee Chapel was ordered built by General Lee shortly after he assumed the presidency of the College in 1865.

One of the large architectural drawings of interior specifications remains in University hands today, and on it are pen and ink notations, apparently in the handwriting of General Lee. He is reported to have given the Chapel's construction his close personal attention, assisted by his son Custis, and one of his son's colleagues on the faculty at neighboring VMI.

The red brick structure has been described as a "style of architecture plain indeed," but is otherwise identified as Victorian Gothic. It was completed in 1868 in time for graduation exercises, and subsequent commencements were held there until the Chapel's small size made it impractical for further such use. It is still the scene of the Baccalaureate sermon, although parents and guests must sit on folding chairs on the outside and hear the speaker over a public address system.

Following Lee's death in 1870, he was entombed near the center of the Chapel's lower level. A photograph of his funeral shows a huge crowd of mourners gathered about the Chapel, with the columns of Washington College in the background draped with black crepe.

With the presentation of Edward Valentine's famous "Recumbent Statue" of Lee to the University in 1883, an extension was built on the rear of the Chapel to house the statue. The Lee family crypt then was placed beneath the statue chamber, Lee's body was moved the short distance to its final resting place, and other members of his family, including his father, the famed "Light Horse Harry" Lee of Revolutionary War renown, were interred in the mausoleum.

Since Lee's death, many valuable portraits have been hung in the Chapel. The most noted is Charles Willson Peale's portrait of George Washington, the first ever painted of him, and executed in 1772 when Washington was a "red coat" in Braddock's army. Other interesting and valuable paintings include a Peale portrait of General Lafayette, Pine's famous painting of Lee in Confederate uniform, a Harding portrait of James Madison, a Harding of John Marshall, and a Gilbert Stuart of Washington.

Wassum, III, and Stephen Lee Thompson.

In the Lee family collection in the Chapel are two Van Dyck paintings of members of the Custis family (Mrs. Lee), personal and battlefield mementoes of General Lee, and personal items once belonging to George Washington. Lee's office is preserved as it was when he died.

Alumni remember with mixed emotions the straight-backed, hard-seat wooden pews of Lee Chapel, made only slightly more comfortable today by the addition of a foam rubber padding on the seat.

The Chapel continues to be used for freshman orientation lectures, various small university assemblies, and other special occasions.

Many alumni will remember a cartoon that once appeared in the Southern Collegian, whose original hangs on the wall of former President Francis P. Gaines. Dr. Gaines is still sought after as a moving public speaker, a gifted orator. The cartoon depicts Dr. Gaines addressing a Lee Chapel audience, and the caption says, "Once when Dr. Gaines spoke..." The drawing shows George Washington in the Peale portrait attending Dr. Gaines closely, with a tear on his cheek, and in the statue chamber, General Lee has raised himself on one elbow and he, too, is listening with tears in his eyes.

■ The prospective restoration of Lee Chapel and the general interest in the Civil War Centennial is bringing Washington and Lee much nationwide publicity. A photographer for the National Geographic Society was on campus during finals and a forthcoming issue should contain several campus views; the Ford Times is planning a Chapel article; and nearly 300 newspapers carried pictures of the Chapel when the Ford gift was announced.

Citations of Honor

"STUART THOMAS SAUNDERS, President of the Norfolk and Western Railway Company.

A native of West Virginia, a graduate of Roanoke College with his law degree from Harvard, Mr. Saunders began his notable career as a lawyer in the nation's capital. Joining the legal staff of one of America's great railways in 1939, his remarkable talents led to his appointment as its president in 1958. Thereby Virginia retained a distinguished citizen and this University a faithful friend.

Markedly successful in planning and executing the merger of railroads, Mr. Saunders has proved himself as master of the connective word, "AND," with all its implications. His railroad, the Norfolk and Western, connects the Atlantic Ocean with the Mid-West; his academic career embraced institutions in Virginia and Massachusetts; his home has been in Virginia and its sister state to the west; he is a trustee of both his alma mater and Hollins College; in his estimable work with the Virginia Foundation of Independent Colleges he is indefatigable in his efforts to open the doors (and even the treasuries) of business corporations to the educational institutions of the Commonwealth.

This University, itself an example of the connective, since it links Washington and Lee, bestows upon an apt pupil, in admiration of his achievements, the degree of Doctor of Laws."

"DAVID K. E. BRUCE, farmer, author, legislator, lawyer, public servant, diplomatist.

A native of Baltimore who received his education at Princeton, Virginia, and Maryland, he practiced law in Baltimore, was a representative in the House of Delegates in both Maryland and Virginia, served in the United States Army in both World Wars, directed the Office of Strategic Services in the European Theatre of Operations, was Assistant Secretary of Commerce and then Undersecretary of State. After having represented his country as Ambassador to France and to the Federal Republic of Germany, he is now the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

The turning point in Mr. Bruce's career came with his sagacious removal from Maryland to Virginia, for since that time he has steadily enlarged his range of usefulness—from the private practice of law and business to an ever-widening arc of service to his country, from the halls of two state legislatures to the highest councils of the Federal government, from the Free State of Maryland to the chancelleries of Paris, Bonn, and London, from a handsome farm in Virginia's Campbell County to the Court graced by such distinguished ambassadorial predecessors as Pinckney, John Jay, John Quincy Adams, and John W. Davis.

His grace of manner, his wise counsel, his diplomatic skill, his shrewd perceptions of men and affairs, his expert knowledge, and his versatility of mind merit for him the degree of Doctor of Laws."

LEWIS F. POWELL, JR., '29

ALUMNI JOSEPH EARLE BIRNIE, prominent Atlanta banker, and Lewis F. Powell, Jr., distinguished Richmond attorney have been elected to membership on the University's Board of Trustees.

Their selection was announced by Rector of the Board James R. Caskie following the regular meet- of the Board which preceded commencement exercises. They will take their oaths of office and assume their new responsibilities at the Board's next regularly scheduled meeting in October.

Both bring to their new positions rich experience in educational pursuits.

Birnie, president of the Bank of Georgia, is a member of the Board of Visitors of Emory University in Atlanta and a trustee of the Rotary Educational Foundation.

Powell, a senior partner in the law firm of Hunton, Williams, Gay, Powell & Gibson, is a member of the Virginia State Board of Education and the boards of trustees of Hollins College and the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond.

Their election brings Washington and Lee's Board to its normal membership of 15. Vacancies existed through the death of Dr. Walter Lapsley Carson of Richmond in October, 1959, and the later resignation from active Board service of Walter Andrew McDonald of Cincinnati. Mr. McDonald was subsequently named a Trustee Emeritus. With the exception of Mrs. Alfred I. duPont, all members of the University's Board are alumni of the institution.

Birnie attended Washington and Lee in 1924. He is an excellent example of many non-graduates of the University who maintain close association with the school and render important service in its behalf. He has served as president of the University's alumni chapters in both Richmond and Atlanta, and during the Bicentennial observance in 1949 he acted as national treasurer for the celebration's fund raising effort.

Birnie assumed his present position as president and director of the Bank of Georgia in 1940. He is currently a director of the Georgia International Life Insurance Company, chairman of the board of the Georgia Southern Business Equities, Inc., a past national president of Consumer Bankers Association, and a past president of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra.

Birnie was decorated by the Navy for service in World War II. He is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, the Society of the Cincinnati, Society of Colonial Wars in Virginia, and the Order of St. John. A native of Greenville, S. C., he is now 57 years old.

Powell holds both B.S. and LL.B. degrees from Washington and Lee and the LL.M. degree from Harvard Law School. Hampden-Sydney College and Washington and Lee have conferred honorary degrees upon him.

In addition to his work with the Richmond law firm, Powell serves as General Counsel and member of the board of trustees and executive committee of Colonial Williamsburg, Inc. He is a member of the Virginia State Library Board, the state delegate from Virginia to the house of Delegates of the American Bar Association, and chairman of the committee on economics of law practice for the American Bar Association.

Powell was a member of a special commission which wrote a new charter for the City of Richmond in 1947-48, and from 1951 to 1961 he was chairman of the Richmond Public School Board.

In World War II, Powell won decorations as an Air Force officer. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Order of the Coif. He is a native of Suffolk, Va., and is 53 years old.

Construction and Progress, But Some Inconvenience; Surprise in Campus Politics

"Superintendent" DICKEY views new science building works

SUMMER VISITORS to the normally tranquil Washington and Lee campus found a growing and changing University, its air filled with the growl of bulldozers, the blast of jackhammers and dynamite charges, and the ring of power saws. Contractors were busy on three fronts, providing buildings and athletic fields. Even in quiet Lee Chapel there was more activity than usual as architects made preliminary sketches and drawings, and special inventory clerks counted the Chapel's contents in preparation for its major renovation and restoration.

Behind Tucker Hall, the new science building—future home of the Department of Physics, Pre-Engineering, and Biology—was a gaping hole gouged in the hillside where the Howe Hall parking lot once was. An elevator pit and places for reinforced concrete footings had been blasted in the solid limestone, and concrete walls and pillars were taking shape. In Howe Hall, jackhammers had chiseled out another elevator shaft through solid concrete floors, and more explosives were used to excavate a pit on the lowest level. Behind Howe Hall, more footings and concrete forms were in place for the new wing which will provide additional laboratory, classroom, and office space for the Departments of Chemistry and Geology.

Work on the new science facilities brought some inconvenience. Students taking final exams in the north end of campus found the noise of construction distracting. Dean Charles P. Light, Jr., of the School of Law displayed a large fragment of stone that had been lobbed into the student lounge window in the basement of Tucker Hall, causing a momentary delay in the progress of a "Hearts" game there. Through traffic via the back campus drive from Washington street to Letcher avenue became a thing of the past. Signs warned motorists at McCormick Library that all roads lead to a dead end. An already acute parking problem was further complicated by the elimination of many spaces by new construction and its effects. A large expanse of asphalt was laid behind Doremus Gymnasium to help ease parking pressures, but students motoring in from the Sigma Chi and Red Square houses complained they were ending up farther away from school than when they started.

Over on Washington street, opposite the Freshman Dorm and adjacent to the new Baker and Davis upperclass and law dorms, a third dormitory for this unit was going up amid noise and dust. It will help alleviate crowding in the Freshman Dorm and will enable the University to eliminate use of auxiliary dormitories for freshmen in university-owned dwellings. Progress on this four-story building has been markedly swift, according to Dr. Robert W. Dickey, the honorary sidewalk superintendent for all new campus construction.

(Dr. Dickey was accorded this important title at a reception in honor of his June retirement as head of the Department of Physics. His certificate assures him all "rights and privileges" of his new office, including free access to the premises and the opportunity to advise the project foremen. But,

Dr. Dickey complains, this certificate doesn't guarantee they'll heed his advice.)

Across the footbridge and beyond the stadium, more bulldozers and giant earthmovers chewed away at the hill which separated the Alumni intramural field from the baseball and soccer field named in honor of Cap'n Dick Smith. When the digging and filling was done, the Athletic Department had the equivalent of nearly two and a half additional practice fields for use by varsity and freshmen soccer, football, lacrosse, and baseball squads. Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds D. E. "Pat" Brady, Jr., had an anxious time when a severe summer storm struck shortly after the new area was harrowed and seeded. But, luckily, the washing was negligible.

Only one serious mishap has occurred in connection with the various projects. An operator of a front-end loader was injured when his big machine overturned while he was filling in a water main ditch at the intersection of the campus drive with Letcher avenue. His injuries were painful but not crippling.

■ CAMPUS POLITICS this spring were marked by some of the shrewdest maneuvering since 1950 when wily Bill Cogar delayed the election of student body president Sam Hollis until the following September.

Things started out normally enough. The University Party, the old "big clique," presented a strong slate of candidates, including a young man considered unbeatable in the battle for the top student body office. The Independents, or "little clique" organization, thought tall Rosie Page of Beavertown, Va., was unbeatable, too. So they decided not to challenge him, but reasoned that their best boys might have a good shot at the vice-presidency and secretariat.

No one, at first, gave much thought to the protestations of

ANDREW "UNCAS" MCTHENIA, '58

Grayfred Gray, a bearded senior and a philosophy honor student. For some time, Gray had been distributing a mimeographed newsletter entitled "Protest," and suddenly Gray was protesting the existing political situation to the four winds. He wanted to bring about some changes in the student body constitution, but most of all, he wanted to see no one win the student body presidency by default and without a platform.

With adroit persuasiveness and considerable backing by the Independent hierarchy, he prevailed upon law student Andrew "Uncas" McThenia to run on the Independent ticket. No one had even thought about Uncas before. In fact, few knew he was even back in school. He'd graduated, Phi Beta Kappa and with honors, several years previously and now he had a master's degree and was going for his LL.B. as a mid-term freshman. Suddenly, he was everybody's favorite, or so it seemed. At least, he breathed new life into the election campaign, setting forth a broad platform and challenging Page to match it with one of his own. A special voluntary assembly was called for Doremus Gym where all candidates would express their views on current topics of interest. The faculty, somewhat overwhelmed by this swift revitalization of campus politics, begrudgingly granted short classes so everyone could attend, and most did.

In the final testing, the mountain twang of Alderson, W. Va.'s Uncas was more persuasive than the Tidewater drawl of Beavercreek's Rosie. After one of the greatest "get-out-the-vote" efforts ever seen at Washington and Lee, McThenia was elected president, fellow law student Ray Robrecht, a talented amateur boxer, was elected vice-president; and the quiet Texas quarterback, Steve Suttle, was in as secretary, making an Independent clean sweep of the top three positions.

Almost unbelievably, there was a 100 per cent turnout from the Law School, and political second-guessers are convinced this did the trick for McThenia. As law student Charlie Broll put it:

"The way I see it, it's a matter of education. I think the president of the student body should be an educated man. McThenia's got a B.A. and an M.A. and he's working on his LL.B. All this other fellow's got is a high school diploma."

At any rate, campus politics this year came out refreshingly different. And everybody agrees that the likeable young man with the improbable name of Uncas will make a good president.

FACULTY

■ THERE WILL BE ten new faces among the faculty in September when the University resumes classes. Recent appointments announced by Deans William W. Pusey, III, and Lewis W. Adams include.

Professor: James Joseph Pollard, 54, engineering sciences and applied mathematics.

Associate Professor: Dr. Milton Colvin, 38, political science.

Assistant Professors: Dr. Harmon H. Haymes, 33, economics; Lyman R. Emmons, 33, biology; Robert W. Kenny, 28, history; and J. Thomas Ratchford, 25, physics.

Instructors: Samuel J. Kozak, Jr., 30, geology; Dana W. Swan, II, 28, physical education; and Stanislaw Zimic, 31, romance languages.

Emmons, Kenny, Ratchford, and Kozak are expected to receive their Ph.D. degrees in the near future.

In addition to these regularly employed members of the faculty, William Keens will serve as a graduate assistant in physics while attending the School of Law, and William H. Williams, assistant professor of philosophy at VMI, will be a visiting lecturer in philosophy.

■ DR. EARL M. CRUM, 70, professor of ancient languages, died on July 28 in the University of Virginia hospital following a brief illness. He had joined the Washington and Lee faculty on a part-time basis in 1957, and in 1959, upon the death of Dr. Henry V. Shelley, he assumed full-time duties.

Dr. Crum lived in Greenville, Va., where he had retired in 1956 after 28 years as head of the Department of Classical languages at Lehigh University.

As an Army officer in World War II, he was directly responsible for the reopening of the University of Heidelberg in Germany following the cessation of hostilities. For his service to the famed German university, he was honored by its faculty with an honorary degree in 1949. Recently upon his birthday, he received letters of warm best wishes from his friends there.

■ DR. ROBERT D. WHITAKER, '55, associate professor of chemistry, has been named to a newly created post of assistant director of admissions by President Cole.

Dr. Whitaker, 28, will assist

Dean Frank J. Gilliam in office interviews, school visitations, and in selecting the entering classes for the University. He will continue to devote approximately halftime to teaching.

"I think it will be extremely helpful to have a person of Dr. Whitaker's scientific background working with us in admissions," President Cole said. "With his help we hope to interest more and better students with special talents in science in coming to Washington and Lee."

Dr. Whitaker, a native of Tampa, was a Phi Beta Kappa student at Washington and Lee and received his Ph.D. degree at the University of Florida in 1959. He joined the University's faculty the same year.

■ DR. JOHN HARVEY WHEELER, professor of political science, has been granted a two-year leave of absence to take part in formulation of a "master plan" for future editions of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Dr. Wheeler will work at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara, Calif., a research center supported by the Fund for the Republic.

■ OPPORTUNITIES FOR SUMMER research and study came to eleven additional Washington and Lee professors.

Four received grants through the Research Council of the University Center in Virginia. They were Dr. Allen W. Moger and Dr. Leon F. Sensabaugh, professors of history; Dr. James S. Patty, associate professor of romance languages; and Dr. Paul C. Hayner, associate professor of philosophy and religion.

Seven others became participants in the John M. Glenn Program, joining eleven previously announced professors sharing 1961 Glenn funds. The new recipients were Dr. Jay D. Cook, Jr., associate professor of accounting; Paxton Davis, associate professor of journalism; Dr. Lewis W. Hodges, assistant professor of religion; Dr. Cecil D. Jones, Jr., assistant professor of drama; Dr. Marion M. Junkin, professor of fine arts; Dr. Leland W. McCloud, associate professor of commerce; and Dr. Charles F. Phillips, Jr., assistant professor of economics.

■ DR. ALLEN E. REGAN, associate professor of political science, presented a paper on "A Proposed Federal Administrative Court System" at the 34th annual meeting of the Virginia Social Science Association. Alumnus Lewis F. Powell, Jr., was a featured speaker at the meeting, discussing "The Social Sciences and America's Position in World Affairs."

■ DR. LEONARD E. JARRARD, assistant professor of psychology, was co-author of a paper on research in the simulation of psychological process in computers, read before the annual meeting of the Midwestern Psychological Association.

■ ROBERT STEWART'S "Prelude for Strings" was among selections played at the American University's Contemporary Music Symposium in late May in Washington. A program of Stewart's compositions also was featured over a Roanoke FM "good music" station. He is an associate professor of music and fine art.

■ "SLEEPING BEAUTY and Her Suitors: The South in the Sixties" is a new book by Dr. Marshall Fishwick, professor of American Studies. The book, an application of the Sleeping Beauty legend to Southern history since the Civil War, is part of a paperback series dealing with the American South published by Wesleyan College. Fishwick presented the material in shorter form as the 1960 Lamar Memorial Lecturer at Wesleyan.

Dr. Fishwick has been awarded a Fulbright fellowship for lecturing in Germany in 1962, principally at the Johann Gutenberg University in Mainz. In 1958, Dr. Fishwick took part in a similar Fulbright program in Denmark.

■ DR. CHARLES F. PHILLIPS, assistant professor of economics, is the author of several recent articles appearing in business and professional journals. The Western Business Review carried an article on collective bargaining; the Journal of Industrial Economics of England carried his "Market Performance in the Synthetic Rubber Industry"; the Antitrust Bulletin printed his "Merger Litigation, 1951-1960;" and the Public Utilities Fortnightly used his "The Railroads' 'Four Freedoms' and Regulation" as its July 20 lead article.

■ WILFRED J. RITZ, professor of law, received his degree of Doctor of Juridical Science from the Law School of Harvard University in June.

■ DR. A. ROSS BORDEN, professor of English, was one of a two-member selection committee which chose the winner of the first annual Samuel A. Jessup Memorial Scholarship of the Virginia Trailways System.

■ DR. KEITH SHILLINGTON, associate professor of chemistry, has received a National Science Foundation grant of $9,400 for a two-year chemical research project on "reagents for the resolution of racemic carbonyl compounds." He expects to use Washington and Lee students as research assistants on the project.

■ FOUR MEMBERS of the faculty were participants in a three-week academic workshop sponsored by the Danforth Foundation at Colorado Springs, Colo. They included Dean of the College William W. Pusey, III, Dr. E. C. Griffith, head of the Department of Economics; Dr. Edward F. Turner, newly named head of the Department of Physics; and Dr. Sidney Coulling, assistant professor of English.

Purpose of the workshop was "to provide for intensive study of ways and means of raising the level of excellence in such aspects of the campus community as curriculum, administration-faculty-student relationships, counseling, evaluation, and religion and values in regard to educational objectives."

UNDERGRADUATES

■ BY ACTION ON JUNE 1, 1961, the Alumni Board of Trustees approved the transfer from the Wedgwood plate account the sum of $1,000.00 to the scholarship funds of the University for the purpose of establishing an alumni scholarship.

The sale of the Washington and Lee commemorative plates, through the central office of the Alumni Association, began some 20 years ago and the profits therefrom have been used on various projects to the benefit of the University.

The principal of the new gift will be used for the immediate needs of deserving young students as opposed to the endowment type scholarship. In taking this action the board understood fully that the available funds might be completely consumed in one or two years.

The recipient of the Alumni scholarship for the 1961-62 session is a rising junior, Herbert Michael Walker, of Norfolk, Virginia. A Dean's List student in pre-engineering, Walker is also a varsity football and track letterman and was awarded the physical education scholarship in June, 1961.

■ A LETTER WRITTEN by Dr. Henry Ruffner, president of Washington College from 1836 to 1848, has been found among a collection of old letters purchased by a Washington and Lee University law student.

Lewis Leigh, Jr., a freshman lawyer, will give the letter to the University. Written shortly after Dr. Ruffner became president of the college, it is addressed to a Colonel Aspinwall, American consul in London. It thanks Aspinwall for his help in obtaining a valuable book on astronomy from a London source for the College's library.

Librarian Henry Coleman believes that Vince's Astronomy, published in 1814, is the book referred to in the letter. Two of the three volumes are on the McCormick shelves.

■ DAVID W. HASLETT, of Hickory, N. C., and Roy Carpenter, of Bryan, Texas, will do graduate study next year in Germany. Haslett became the third Washington and Lee senior to receive a Fulbright award for 1961-1962, while Carpenter received a German Government travel grant for study in that country. Haslett also will study in Germany.

Fifty Years a Teacher, Dr. Robert Dickey Retires

Dr. Edward F. Turner, His Former Pupil, Succeeds Him

A COLLEGE TEACHING CAREER that has spanned a half century ended in June when Dr. Robert W. Dickey retired as head of Washington and Lee University's Department of Physics.

Dr. Dickey, who first faced a class of undergraduates as an assistant in physics at Washington and Lee in 1910, is succeeded as department head by Dr. Edward F. Turner, Jr., 41, a former honor student of Dr. Dickey's and a 1950 graduate of the university.

Still vigorous at 70, Dr. Dickey says he is looking forward to a retirement of "scientific loafing." By that, he says he means pursuing scientific interests at a leisurely pace.

"Primarily, I want to observe construction work," Dr. Dickey says. "I like to watch buildings go up. When I go to New York, I don't go to the art galleries or places like that. I head for the nearest skyscraper under construction."

Dr. Dickey's first degree at Washington and Lee in 1910 was a B.S. in civil engineering, and although he went on to master's and doctor's degrees in physics at Johns Hopkins, he admits that he has remained an engineer at heart.

DR. EDWARD F. TURNER, JR., '50

DR. ROBERT W. DICKEY, '11

Dr. Dickey is finding ample opportunity to witness much construction on the Washington and Lee campus, including one building that he has helped plan. Among several construction projects underway is a new science building for physics and biology. For the retiring professor, the new building is at once a source of great pride and mild regret. "I am delighted that the building and its modern facilities will be available soon, but I would like to have ended my career in it," he says. "I often have said that I came here ten years too soon."

Both Dr. Dickey and Dr. Turner agree that the new facilities will prove a tremendous boost to student interest in physics at Washington and Lee.

"Our enrollment in physics has already doubled in the past four or five years and now undoubtedly will grow more," Dr. Dickey says.

Dr. Turner is especially enthusiastic about accommodations planned for student research projects under Washington and Lee's new Robert E. Lee Research Program. "The research opportunities will make a great difference in the way in which the department will be operated in the future," Dr. Turner predicts.

In many ways, Dr. Dickey and Dr. Turner reflect the advance and expansion of physics as a science and academic discipline over the past 50 years. Both men have solid foundations in general physics, but Dr. Dickey admits that over the years his concern has been primarily in teaching "classical" physics.

Dr. Turner, who came to Washington and Lee originally to study journalism, is a product of the post World War II nuclear age, with graduate work in nuclear physics and an ambition to introduce more of this area of study at Washington and Lee University. The new building has provisions for a nuclear physics laboratory.

Dr. Dickey's affiliation with Washington and Lee began in 1906 when he enrolled as a freshman. A charter member of the institution's Phi Beta Kappa chapter, he served as a student instructor while earning B.S., B.A., and M.A. degrees, and upon completion of graduate school in 1916, he joined the faculty as an associate professor.

He helped organize the department of electrical engineering, and served as a professor of physics and electrical engineering between 1928 and 1934. When Washington and Lee abandoned its engineering curriculum, Dr. Dickey became Cyrus McCormick Professor of Physics, and in 1947 he became a professor on the Thomas Ball Foundation.

Looking back, he singles out two aspects of life at Washington and Lee that have meant most to him. "I think I appreciate the student Honor System more than anything about Washington and Lee," he says. "And the intellectual freedom that has existed here is another striking point for which I am grateful."

He and Mrs. Dickey have retired from their campus home to a story and a half Cape Cod-style home.

Dr. Dickey's successor is an energetic Purple Heart veteran of World War II who doubted his ability to handle a tough academic load when he enrolled in 1946 at age 26. Dr. Turner went on to earn both B.S. degree in physics and B.A. degree in math and membership in Phi Beta Kappa.

Dr. Turner received his M.S. in nuclear physics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1952 and his Ph.D. in solid state physics at the University of Virginia in 1954. For three years he was an assistant professor at George Washington University before joining the Washington and Lee faculty as an associate professor in 1957. Since 1959 he has held the rank of professor. In the summers of 1955 and 1956, he was a physicist at the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, and in 1957-58 he held summer positions as a consulting physicist for the Diamond Ordnance Fuse Laboratory there.

Dr. Dickey will still keep his finger in the teaching pie. He has been asked to assist in the physics department as a "distinguished lecturer."

Washington and Lee Will Seek To Set Up Occupational File

Important Questionnaire

To Go To All Former Students

EVERY Washington and Lee alumnus, whether he be an attorney, a broker, an editor, an account executive, or a peanut farmer, knows the importance of complete, accurate records and reference files in his particular work. The more pertinent facts and figures a person has at his fingertips, the better job he can do when the job calls for such precise information.

In the daily operation of a university, there are almost countless demands upon the records kept on students, professors, classes, grades, and alumni. Washington and Lee's recent addition of electronic data processing equipment has increased the availability of normal statistical information, and it has also opened up new opportunities for expanded statistical recording in other important areas.

One of these important areas involves the records kept on alumni.

Because students and professors are on campus most of the year, it is a relatively easy task to keep their records in first class order. Not so, however, with the University's 11,000 alumni who are spread all over the nation and some foreign countries. It has been some 14 years since former students were asked to fill in and return questionnaires on their whereabouts and activities. The opportunity to commit such information to the speedy data processing system has prompted the University to plan circulation of a new questionnaire for up-to-date data on all of its former students.

The emphasis of the new questionnaire will be on the occupations of alumni. Much other valuable information will be obtained, but the University is primarily interested in finding out what each alumnus is doing for a living. Such knowledge is vital to Washington and Lee in seeking the support of the many foundations, corporations, and individuals interested in assisting higher education. A foundation whose primary interest is the support of pre-medical programs may want to know how many doctors there are among Washington and Lee's alumni. An individual interested in helping develop courses in creative writing might be encouraged to help the University if it can tell him how many of its former students are engaged in literary activities. A prospective corporate donor might wish to know how many Washington and Lee men hold top management and executive positions. Thus, the maintenance of an accurate occupational file on alumni is one of the greatest necessities of the moment.

Soon each alumnus will receive his copy of the questionnaire, including instructions for its completion. He will be asked to answer all questions and to submit as complete a description of his occupation as possible. On the reverse side of the questionnaire will be a tabulated list of many occupational categories. Each alumnus will be asked to mark the category most descriptive of his work. As the questionnaires are returned, they will be correlated in the Alumni Office and appropriate information will be transferred to the data processing system. Subsequent periodic checks are planned to keep the records accurate, and alumni will be reminded to keep the Alumni Office informed of changes in their occupational status.

When your questionnaire arrives, please do your University the great service of completing it promptly and returning it to Lexington. Your cooperation will be of utmost value to Washington and Lee in a project of urgent importance.

Coaches Have Problems But They're Different Now

Like What To Do With 28 Lettermen
And 20 Promising Sophomore Gridders

BOYD WILLIAMS, the big former professional football player who takes time out from his busy insurance business every fall to assist in coaching the Generals, has been associated with Washington and Lee football since the fall of 1954, the year the university gave up the so-called "big time." Williams coached a "jayvee" eleven through a four-game schedule that year, and then stayed on to assist first Bill Chipley for two varsity seasons and then Lee McLaughlin. He has had more direct association with the Generals' program since 1954 than anyone else.

Thus, it's always interesting to hear how Williams views an upcoming season. Time was when he was the big optimist. Able to count the football players available to the coaches on two hands, he'd say, "We're going to be all right. We just need a few breaks." He said it largely because he wanted very badly to believe it himself, but if he didn't know it then, it's plain now that Williams was engaging in some very wishful thinking.

Now, when the thinking is no longer so wishful, it's interesting to note the tune that Williams whistles. As for the 1961 prospects, he'll tell you:

"Well, we've got some problems at fullback and center, but other than that we're not too bad off. Of course, we've got a real problem on what to do with these sophomores."

What Williams means when he talks about the problem at fullback is this: Where is a third one coming from as good as the two that'll be on hand? Barring injury the Generals will have senior Doug Martin, who gained 619 yards last year—that's 6.9 yards per carry—and was named to the state AP small-college all-star team. Also, there'll be Tommy Keese, a junior, who added 303 yards at 5.2 yards a try. He was the Richmond Times-Dispatch's "back of the week" following his starring role against Carnegie Tech last November.

At center, the problem is even more "acute." Here the Generals only have a Little All-American to hold down the first unit duties, with a veteran letterman to back him up. Terry Fohs, the all but incredible 145-pound mite who was on everybody's all-star team last season, should have his best year ever. If he does, he should be a strong choice for the first team Little All-American squad of the Associated Press. He was a third team selection in 1960. The second-unit center is Jerry Hyatt, an ever-improving hustler, and back of him comes Don Jackson and sophomore Mike Sheffey, both top boys.

And about those sophomores that Williams says present a problem. There will be some 20 of them, and the problem which the coaches face is how to get them their normal share of experience and action on a squad that will list 28 lettermen from an undefeated 1960 team.

All of these troubles that are bothering Boyd Williams are likely to bring tears of sympathy to the eyes of rival coaches, particularly Joe McCutcheon, '51, whose Randolph-Macon team is the Generals' Homecoming foe on October 14.

Seriously, Coach Lee McLaughlin's deep and experienced Generals face a tough assignment this fall. All of the coaches admit that the team will be better than in 1960 when only a tie with Johns Hopkins marred an otherwise perfect record. But, as McLaughlin points out, no matter how good a team is, it has to be very lucky to go undefeated.

"Looking back," reminds McLaughlin, "we got the big break last year when it counted. If we hadn't had the luck when we needed it, the season could have been very different indeed."

and Frederick College, a new four-year college in Portsmouth, are newcomers to the 1961 slate, replacing Carnegie Tech and Dickinson.

The 1960-61 seasons in all sports were, on the whole, good ones. The track team was unbeaten in dual competition, getting performances from Jim Hickey that broke long-standing school records in the 100 and 220-yard dashes. The baseball team surprised everybody by winning eight, losing only four, largely through the superb pitching of senior Roy Carpenter. Only in soccer, basketball, and lacrosse did the Generals lose more games than they won. Golf, swimming, and tennis remained strong sports at Washington and Lee, even with beefed up schedules.

In lacrosse, despite a 3-8 season, the Generals could take some satisfaction from the annual North-South All-Star game played this year at Annapolis. Billed as a "battle of the brothers" for the Civil War Centennial, the game featured Bill McHenry, '54, and Bob McHenry, '56, as coaches of the North and South squads, respectively. Little brother Bob's talented Southerners won, 12-6.

Bob coaches basketball and lacrosse at Washington and Lee, while Bill has been head lacrosse coach at Williams College. In September he moves to Lebanon Valley College as head football coach, and next year Lebanon Valley turns up as a football opponent on the Generals' schedule.

John Dinkel, senior defenseman for the Generals, was a member of the victorious Southern lacrosse team in the All-Star contest.

Spring Class Reunions For 1961 Largest Ever

THE LARGEST TURNOUT by alumni since the annual class reunions were begun in 1955 was recorded May 5-7 when 126 members of the 50th, 40th, 25th, and 10th anniversary classes assembled in Lexington.

Only in general reunion years like 1954 and 1959 have there been more alumni on campus for the full schedule of social and other activities. The response was gratifying to members of the faculty and administration who participated in the three-day program and to the faculty alumni committee and other staff members who helped plan the event.

The largest class representation was from the 1951 "old boys," although sizeable contingents from 1936, 1921, and 1911 also were on hand.

University officials attributed the good attendance to the fastgrowing popularity of the anniversary reunions among alumni, and also to an increased desire on the part of many former students to observe first-hand recent progress and current developments on the campus.

Several new features were added to the 1961 program. President and Mrs. Cole were host and hostess in their home for a Friday afternoon reception that lasted twice as long as planned because of the unanticipated complexities of a change from standard to daylight saving time. And Friday evening the Troubadour players, under the direction of Dr. Cecil Jones, presented alumni with a preview performance of Shaw's "Man of Destiny" which they were preparing as their spring production.

In Lee Chapel Saturday morning and at luncheon, alumni heard reports from the University's top administrators and from the president of the student body. President Cole addressed the luncheon session in Evans Dining Hall, where he said the dedicated and distinguished service alumni render their communities reflects honor and credit on the university, as well as themselves.

The weekend weather was generally damp, canceling the scheduled baseball game with Lynchburg College but failing to slow the all-weather alumni golfers who took part in a reunion tournament at the Lexington Golf course.

As always, the class banquets on Saturday evening provided the highlight of the reunion. Roger Winborne was master of ceremonies for the class of 1911, and James "Gander" Bryan presided for 1921 at the Mayflower Hotel, while Charlie Smith was in charge of toasts and introductions at the Robert E. Lee Hotel for 1936 classmates. At the Virginia House Restuarant, Sam Hollis and Bill Cogar agreed to a political truce that permitted Hollis to act as toastmaster there.

Following the banquets, a jamboree session for all classes was held at the Robert E. Lee Hotel.

Next May, it will be the classes of 1912, 1922, 1937, and 1952 who will return. Take a tip from those who came this year and make plans now for a wonderful time. You'll renew "College Friendships" and you'll have an opportunity to see a close-up of the important work your university is doing in American higher education. If you are a member of the anniversary classes in 1962, you'll receive full particulars, so plan now to attend.

New Officers Chosen for 1961-62

THE ASSOCIATION'S annual meeting was held on Thursday, June 1, in Lee Chapel, following the luncheon on the lawn.

Formal reports from the officers of the Association were read, and President Paul M. Shuford, '43, conducted a business session that resulted in important new changes in the Association's charter and organization. These changes have been discussed at length in previous issues of the magazine, and are referred to in the President's Report on page 22.

A meeting of the Alumni Board of Trustees followed the general session.

A result of the actions of the two meetings were elections of new officers for 1961-62, pictured above, and of new members of the Alumni Board of Trustees to four-year terms. The new trustees are pictured below. They are the first to be elected under the charter's new provisions.

A Call For A Renewed Effort

THE ALUMNI FUND COUNCIL is pleased to report on the 1960-61 Alumni Fund to all Washington and Lee men. This is a report of the 29th year of annual alumni giving and is marked, once again, by its concurrent operation with that of the University Development Program. It must be interpreted in this light and with the realization that this year's fund was conducted on a limited basis. The aim was to solicit only those alumni who were not currently under pledge to the development campaign.

At the close of the fiscal year, June 30, 1961, the Alumni Fund had received support from 1,522 alumni, in the amount of $47,075.66. This does not include gifts received during the year to the University Development Program. It is a record not only of generosity but also of loyal and unselfish service by the class agents, regional chairmen, and their associates. It is a privilege to serve Washington and Lee, and surely these men deserve every credit and appreciation. The unshakable loyalty and the devoted response of all alumni, not only to the Development Program but also to the annual alumni fund, are among the greatest resources Washington and Lee possesses with which to meet the future.

Speaking of the future, the president of the Alumni Association, addressing the General Meeting in June, reminded us that alumni serve their alma mater in many ways, not the least of which is adding honor to the University through their own character and achievement. However, he added, perhaps the greatest task is "the intensive development of a systematic and significant program of annual giving on the part of all alumni and friends of the University." At a time when many other colleges and universities must grow large and perhaps unwieldy, Washington and Lee adheres to its proven philosophy of educating well a limited number of carefully selected young men. We have a relatively small alumni community of about 11,000. If we cannot command the loyalty of this comparatively small group, the future for Washington and Lee and its distinctive philosophy and creed is clouded. Speaking very practically, the great foundations and corporations judge our University's qualification for assistance, in large measure, upon the continuing support received from alumni. In the last full Alumni Fund campaign (1957-58), the effectiveness of our solicitation—those responding from total number solicited—was a participation of 35.3 per cent. This is fine, but suggests much to be desired when measured against the 1959-60 record of some sister institutions such as Princeton's 71.9 per cent, Dartmouth's 64.9 per cent, Williams' 57 per cent, Yale's 46 per cent, and Johns Hopkins' 44.6 per cent.

When a young man enrolls at Washington and Lee, his investment of time and effort is our sacred trust. All of our efforts are, or should be, dedicated to assuring the fullest possible dividend for him. The alumni role in helping Washington and Lee fulfill its mission is a significant one. Essentially, it is a matter of a manifest interest in the needs of Washington and Lee through a participation in the annual Alumni Fund. Those teachers and others who carry on the work of our University need yearly evidence that the vast majority of our alumni loyally support the aims and objectives of Washington and Lee

With the thoughtful conviction that all alumni who have participated in the Fund in the past will continue to do so in the future and with unswerving faith in the bond between our University and all of its sons, the Alumni Fund Council has set a monetary goal for the 1961-62 session of over $100,000.00 and a double or better percentage of participation. This, then, is a call to our loyalty. We ask that you ponder with us the needs of our university in the future into which it moves. The University deserves to know that an even increasing number of alumni are truly interested in its progress. Every new contributor to the Alumni Fund conveys this happy message. The generosity of alumni will assure that Washington and Lee can maintain its high standards of quality in the education of young men. We earnestly call upon each of you to make the 1961-62 Fund a record contribution. Join us in our confidence that it will be just that.

Gratitude for an Opportunity, Challenge for the Future

By PAUL M. SHUFORD

President, 1960-61

IT IS WITH A peculiar mixture of pride, pleasure and regret that I make my report to the Washington and Lee Alumni Association—pride in the honor that has been mine this past year, pleasure in the opportunity I have had to serve the University which has given me so much and the alumni who have contributed to her greatness, and regret that the limitations of time and ability have prevented me from doing all that I would have liked to do. Fortunately, though their time has also been limited, the ability of the other members of your

Board of Trustees has more than compensated for the lack on my part. Thus, the past year has been one of devotion and accomplishment on the part of your Board.

As I am sure you can appreciate, much of the work of the Board is relatively routine. This is not to say that it is not both necessary and rewarding, but merely that it is not the sort of thing which makes for interesting listening. However, there are several things I do deem worthy of mention.

First, as you have heard, the limited Alumni Fund Campaign, coupled with our allotted share of the Development Fund, produced a surplus which will be given over to the University for general use. Next year the Alumni Fund Committee has recommended a return to a full scale Alumni Fund campaign such as had been conducted prior to the Development Fund campaign. It is my sincere hope that the results will be the best and most gratifying ever.

Secondly, it seems proper to mention what has already been reported to you through the Alumni Magazine. That is, that your Board gave very thorough consideration to a list of proposals presented to last year's meeting by Dr. Amos Herold, and referred to the Board for study. Dr. Herold's proposals were printed in the Fall issue of the magazine, and the conclusions and actions were printed in a subsequent issue. Upon consideration of all relevant factors most of these proposals were deemed to be not in the best interest of the University (to the services of which our charter commits us;) a lesser number of his proposals were for procedures already in effect; and one or two were held over for possible later consideration, pending future developments.

Thirdly, I would like to say that the matter of an alumni or alumni-faculty house has been kept before the University's Board of Trustees for their consideration. As you probably know, such a facility has a definite place in the University's development program, and we are all looking forward to the day when it becomes a reality. However, I must say in all candor, that your Board did not feel it could conscientiously insist that it be put before other obvious needs of the University, such as additional and remodeled class and laboratory facilities, additional dormitory space, and an enlarged law library, to mention only some. While I feel certain that your Board will continue to place this matter at or near the top of its list of desirable projects, and will do its best to bring it to fruition, it seems proper that we should cooperate fully with the University's Board of Trustees in the total development program. There is no lack of sympathy there—I can assure you—for every member of that Board, with the obvious exception of Mrs. duPont, is also an alumnus of Washington and Lee.

Finally, as was mentioned at last year's meeting, there has been a committee at work drafting proposals for certain changes in our charter and by-laws. This committee has concluded its task, at least for the time being, and the Board has recommended for your adoption several changes which will be presented to you shortly. Briefly these changes concern:

(1) Enlarging your Board of Trustees and lengthening the tenure of individual members in order to bring about greater alumni representation and interest and to better enable those members to render effectual service.

(2) Redefine the classification of "alumnus" for greater simplicity and to bring the present clas-

(3) Redefine the title and certain duties of the alumni secretary.

Before concluding I would ask your indulgence to submit one personal thought. Individual alumni serve their alma mater in many ways—by contributions to the Alumni Fund, by developing the interest of others, particularly prospective students in W&L, and certainly not least of all, by adding honor to the University through their own characters and achievements. However, it has been my growing conviction that the greatest task of the Alumni Association, as an organization, is or should be the intensive development of a systematic and significant program of giving on the part of all alumni and friends of the University. I would not for one moment detract from the fine record that has been established, but I feel we have only "scratched the surface," if I may use a metaphor. It is my hope, far-fetched as some may think it to be, that in the not too distant future W&L would have a scholarship endowment or contribution program sufficient to say that no worthy applicant need ever seek another college simply because of a lack of funds. This will obviously require greater effort and sacrifice on the part of all of us but I feel that Washington and Lee alumni are equal to any task when properly motivated and organized. The motivation is already here—our beloved University. More intensive and extensive effort at organizing is what I bespeak to succeeding Board members and officers, and to the officers and members of the various chapters and classes. As with Rome, this will not be done in a day, but here is our challenge for the future.

In closing may I sincerely thank each and every alumnus, and particularly the members of the Board and our executive secretary, Bill Washburn, for their unflinching support and assistance. You have made my tenure as President one of real joy and satisfaction.

A Busy Year of Reunions, Chapter Visits, Fund Activity

By WILLIAM C. WASHBURN

Executive Secretary

ONCE AGAIN IN THIS annual report I am happy to say that your alumni association is healthy and continues to progress. In all areas the growth and development has been evident. Briefly, I would like to mention a few of the major programs.

Last year at this time there were 37 active chapters in the association. Today we have 40 such chapters and there is one more which is on the verge, so to speak, of becoming activated soon. By next fall it will be in full operation. While the establishing of new chapters is taken with some caution, the association is eager to assist in this development wherever there is the need or the desire expressed. The three newly organized chapters have gotten off to a splendid start—several meetings have been held and in the one case of Wilmington, Delaware, the chapter arranged a splendid spring program with the W&L Glee Club. Organizationally, then, I think we are on the move at the proper speed. As secretary, I have personally attended meetings in 31 of these 40 chapters, traveling from New York to San Antonio; from Norfolk to St. Louis; from Miami to Chicago. Members of the faculty and administration have also been to several other chapters.

All of these visitations attest to the fact that the alumni chapters are active and energetic and are performing a good service for the University.

We are all familiar with the University Development Program and its fine achievements evidenced by the new buildings which are now under way. Jim Whitehead, his staff, and Dr. Cole have been extremely helpful to all chapters this year and I should like to just pause here long enough to publicly declare our many thanks on behalf of the Alumni Association for all their good assistance and cooperation. The University Development Program has brought and is still bringing a renewed interest and vigor to our chapters and to the alumni. The culmination of this task, so well executed, is a tribute to the University Development team as well as to the alumni.

In addition to the University Development capital campaign, the Alumni Fund was reactivated this year under a limited operation. The Fund Council, headed by Linwood Holton, has held several meetings during the year and has directed the fund to a point at which we can all be proud. As ordered by the Council, the Fund appeal was, again this year, made only to those alumni who were not still under pledge or payment to the University Development Program. The sincere effort was not to "double-up" on anyone. The program, even on this limited scale, now consumes a great part of our effort. Last year on a very small scale the Alumni Fund managed to accumulate approximately $20,000. This year we have reached, as of May 27, $45,325.00 from 1,431 contributors. The fiscal year ends June 30. Whatever success the Fund achieves this year can be credited largely to the 93 class agents, the 43 regional agents and the scores of committeemen serving in our behalf. These men have given not only of their resources but, more important, of their time and energy to make our Fund a success. For this next year the Alumni Fund Council has directed a full and complete campaign: goals of 4,000 contributors and $100,000.00 have been set. We urge each and every alumnus conscientiously to share in this effort.

Our annual Anniversary Class Reunions are getting larger each year. Last year we instituted the 10th anniversary reunion and this year we had over 50 back from the class of 1951. The total number in the four classes was half again as many as last year. The men thoroughly enjoy seeing the college in session and having the opportunity to participate in the future programs of the university. Of course, stories of all kinds abound on all sides and there is much reminiscing, all of which results in a more dedicated and sincerely interested alumnus.

The Alumni Magazine had a few face changes this year. We hope they have improved its readability. It continues to be our widest channel of communication between alumni and the University. Quarterly this magazine is sent to a mailing list of approximately 10,700 (including some 135 overseas) with the hope of keeping you informed on the news and affairs of the University as well as your classmates and college friends. My deep appreciation goes to Mrs. Jeffrey, our managing editor, and to Mr. Lauck of our Printing Laboratory for all their interest and cooperation. Without their patience and understanding nothing would get out. In the years ahead we will continue to try to give you a magazine of which we can all be proud.

There are quite a number of others facets in alumni work. I'll not take time to elaborate on them. One program for next year however needs mentioning. We will attempt in this year to establish what might be called an Occupational File of alumni. It is an effort, through submitted questionnaires and by use of our IBM system, to classify each alumnus into an established set of occupational categories. In this way we can then determine who and how many doctors we have, or ministers, or bankers, or ranchers, etc.

More and more the public is asking the colleges and universities to prove themselves in the products they produce. We think the Occupational File will not only be helpful and informative but will also be a means of proving Washington and Lee does indeed have an enviable record. Let me urge each of you to respond fully to this program.

Now briefly some of the other facets: In our student relations area we participate at freshman camp and award a prize to the boy who upholds the tradition of knowing the most names of his classmates; Homecoming, wherein we award four prizes to the winners of the fraternity house decorations contest; our senior banquet each year. All of these activities are of tremendous value and grow increasingly important.

In closing, let me say that I have truly enjoyed this past year of progress and look forward with eager pleasure to the coming year. It is always difficult and dangerous to extend thanks to all who have helped, for I am most fearful of overlooking someone. But first let me congratulate you on your association officers who have given so unselfishly of their time and talents. To the administration and faculty, to the Development Office, the Faculty-Alumni Committee, chapter officers, class and regional agents, and in fact just about every alumnus, I extend my very deep appreciation.

And to my office staff—I'm sure they'll best understand—my simple but most profound "thanks."

Homecoming and Openings: The Same Big Weekend

FOR THE FIRST TIME in many years, Homecoming weekend will coincide with Opening Dances. A student steering committee has been working with Executive Secretary Bill Washburn and will confer later with the Alumni Faculty Committee in more detail. The date is set as October 13-14 and promises to be one of the most colorful weekends in the college year.

In addition to the fraternity house decoration contest, a pep rally is planned for Friday evening in Doremus gymnasium and will be followed by the jazz session of Opening Dances. The bands have not yet been named, but the Dance Board promises its usual caliber of outstanding entertainment.

Registration of alumni will begin Saturday morning in the Student Union Building. The day's program includes a morning Coffee Hour and the Alumni Luncheon in Evans Dining Hall before the afternoon festivities. The kickoff for the Generals' game against the Yellow Jackets of Randolph-Macon will begin at 2 p.m., brightened with all the color of the Homecoming queen and her court. A reception for all alumni and guests is planned immediately following Saturday's game, and that evening the formal dance will begin at 9 p.m. with Openings figure taking place at approximately 10 p.m.

There is no more beautiful time of the year to visit the Shenandoah Valley than Mid-October. The color of the foliage and the color of Homecoming will blend to provide an unforgettable weekend for alumni. A word of caution, however, must be entered. Because of the combination attractions for the weekend and the limited hotel space, room reservations should be made well in advance. Everything points to a great time. Try to make it if you can.

At one time he was also publishing director and assistant advertisement manager at the Lamp Division of Westinghouse Electric Company.

ELMER S. LANE, Oyster Bay Town Attorney, died on April 28, 1961, following an automobile accident.

1940

ROBERT R. DAVIS, a member of a prominent Milwaukee family and a Marine aviator with decorations from two wars, died in April, 1961. Early in World War II, Col. Davis served with the 8th Marine Regiment in Samoa, and later, as executive officer and skipper of Marine Bombing Squadron 611, he flew combat missions over New Ireland, New Britain, and the Philippines. He was awarded the Purple Heart for injuries suffered when his plane was shot down near Mindanao. During the Korean conflict, Col. Davis commanded a Marine night and all-weather flying squadron, called the "Flying Nightmares," that chalked up a record of hours of night flying in Korea. He himself was awarded medals for meritorious acts in completing sixty missions in the conflict, including the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Bronze Star. Col. Davis also performed intelligence duties as a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations Military Staff Committee.

Chapter

Meetings

ST. LOUIS

The St. Louis alumni chapter held a December business meeting. Retiring president Malcolm Holkamp presided and installed the following new officers: Albert H. Hamel, '50, President; Joseph R. Long, '23, Vice-President; and Fred W. Webber, Jr., '56, Secretary-Treasurer.

The chapter made plans for spring and summer activities including a possible event in August during the American Bar Association meeting.

RICHMOND

The Richmond chapter has been active this spring. On the evening of April 7, the Sir Walter Room of the Hotel Raleigh was the scene of a chapter meeting at which Dr. Leonard E. Jarrard, Assistant Professor of Psychology at Washington and Lee, gave an interesting talk on "Radiation and Its Effects on Behavior." Dr. Jarrard explained the use of laboratory tests and the many experiments which have been conducted and are being conducted at the University. The banquet was preceded by a social hour which was attended by a large group of alumni and their wives.

The annual business meeting of the Richmond chapter was held on Friday, May 26th, at the Rotunda Club in the Hotel Jefferson. This meeting, at which A. Chris Compton presided, was well-attended, and the following officers were elected for the coming year: Reno S. Harp, III, '54, President; Edward J. McCarty, '42, Vice-President; C. W. Pinnell, Jr., '46, Secretary; and John F. Kay, Jr., '51, Treasurer.

SOUTHERN OHIO

The Southern Ohio chapter held its spring meeting in Cincinnati at the Queen City Club on Wednesday, April 26, with a banquet. President Fred C. Cole was introduced as the guest speaker by John Hamilton, '32. Presiding at the dinner was chapter president, Bob Wersel, '42, who introduced the guests, among whom were Mr. Phil McDevitt, Principal, and Mr. Carl Peets, Guidance Advisor at Walnut Hills secondary school. Also present was Mr. Joseph Ayer of Withrow High schools. Mr. Walter McDonald, '10, former University trustee, also gave a short address to the group.

President Wersel announced plans for another meeting of the chapter to take place in the fall.

NORTH TEXAS

Alumni of the North Texas Chapter gathered in the Sundown Room of the Marriott Motel in Dallas for a stag banquet on May 15. At the meeting were 60 members from Fort Worth, Dallas, and the surrounding areas, who unanimously elected the following new chapter officers: President, J. B. Sowell, Jr., '54, of Dallas; Vice-President, Clay J. Berry, Jr., '50, of Fort Worth; and Secretary, C. M. Patrick, Jr., '55, of Dallas. Also named as the Board of Directors were James H. Clark, '31, Edwin A. Nesbitt, '32, both of Dallas, and Sam B. Cantey, '35, of Fort Worth.

John M. Stemmons, '31, outgoing President, presided and introduced David Ellis and Charles E. Long, III, both of whom will enter the University this fall, and the several other guests. Executive Secretary Bill Washburn remarked briefly on the new developments on the campus and monitored a short football film of the undefeated 1960 season.

SAN ANTONIO

The alumni of the San Antonio chapter gathered at the Country Club on Tuesday evening, May 16. At the reception Bill Washburn made a brief report on the new developments on the campus. Present were four prospective students and two young men, Tom Figuers and Sam Simpson, who have enrolled for the school session this fall. A round table discussion with these students was conducted and a football movie was shown. John Goode, '43, president of the chapter, presided.

HOUSTON

Alumni and wives of the Houston Chapter met for a luncheon on Wednesday, May 17, to hear Executive Secretary Bill Washburn report on the progress of the University. Bob Davis, '30, president of the chapter, presided over the affair held in the Gallery Room of the Houston Club. He presented the parents of those students who are entering Washington and Lee in September, 1961, and extended them a cordial welcome to join in the chapter's activities. Ben Ditto, '43, and Milton Morrison, '38, on behalf of Bob Davis, made brief reports concerning the regional agent program in the Houston area. The president announced plans for a late summer program in honor of all boys going to the University in September.

NEW ORLEANS

James W. Hammett, '40, was elected president of the New Orleans chapter at a luncheon meeting held Thursday, May 18th at the Sheraton-Charles Hotel. Other officers are John H. McMillan, '42, Vice-President and Beauregard A. Redmond, '55, Secretary-Treasurer. Bill Washburn addressed the alumni and outlined the University's recent developments and showed a film of the 1960 football highlights. Mr. Herb Jahnce, past president of the chapter, presided at the meeting and installed the new officers.

NEW YORK

Some 64 New York alumni and families gathered at Emmett Poin-dexter's Putnam County summer home, "Sunlight Farm," on June 17 for the New York chapter's 15th annual Family Picnic. Emmett, '20, is Secretary-Treasurer of the New York chapter and has been host to the picnic since 1947.

Swimming, baseball, badminton, horseshoes, along with a quiet julep or two, combined with good weather to make the day an outstanding success. A highlight was the copious supply of Southern fried chicken expertly prepared by Emmett's wife, Winfield, a graduate of Randolph Macon Woman's College.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Army-Navy Country Club was the site for the annual dinner-dance of the Washington alumni chapter on June 30. The gala occasion was attended by some 60 members and reports indicate it was in the usual "Mink" style. In a short business session which was part of the program, "Senator" McWhorter gave his usual inspiring nominating speeches and the following officers were elected: Julian E. Gillespie, '52, President; George S. Boswell, '52, Vice-President; and Arthur C. Smith, '41, Secretary-Treasurer (re-elected).

A program for the entertainment of the Washington freshmen entering the University in September was discussed.
