Student Research Program Flourishes

Seventy-Five Robert E. Lee
Research Scholars Are Working
With Professors on Projects
In Seventeen Academic Areas

IN THE PSYCHOLOGY laboratory in duPont Hall, a senior performs a delicate brain operation on a white rat, while in an adjoining room, another student clocks other white rats in their progress through a simple maze.

Across town, in the privacy of his own room, a student sits down with a stack of seldom-opened books from the recesses of McCormick Library and prepares to search them for references to French philosopher Pierre Abelard.

Fifty miles away, in the Roanoke office of the president of a small metal fabricating plant, another Washington and Lee student questions the older man about the way he operates his profitable business.

In the physics laboratories of Washington and Lee's new science building, several students patiently set up another attempt to "grow" a pure single crystal of zinc in a high temperature furnace that they have helped design and build.

Still another student is quietly but thoroughly poring over a collection of faded letters, most of them a century old, in the office of a history professor.

The activities of these young men are typical of those involving some seventy-five Washington and Lee students during the current academic year. Each is engaged in a highly specialized area of research, each is working under the guidance of a professor who is a trained researcher, and each is permitted a degree of responsibility in the project that is commensurate with his training and experience.

Each is either a Robert E. Lee Research Assistant or a Robert E. Lee Research Scholar, and both terms mean distinction on the Washington and Lee campus.

In many instances the student's project involves research interests of the supervising professor, in which case the student serves as a research assistant or apprentice, carrying out assignments at the direction of his professor. In other projects, the research may have been conceived by the student himself, then planned and executed under the supervision of a professor interested in helping the undergraduate.

In virtually every case, the work of the students and their level of involvement is comparable with that undertaken normally only at the graduate level in pursuit of advanced degrees. And the close relationships between students and professors is of a proximity seldom encountered below the Ph.D. level in graduate school, University officials point out.

The unusual, perhaps unique, aspect of this activity at Washington and Lee is the fact that such work is being done on such a large scale at the undergraduate or bachelor degree plateau. Few, if any, colleges and universities in the United States have yet undertaken such a broad program of undergraduate research.

Washington and Lee's program is known as the Robert E. Lee Research Program for Undergraduates, and it is now well established in its third year of operation. The program is supported by a gift of more than a quarter of a million dollars from the late Dr. Gustavus B. Capito, '99, of Charleston, W. Va., in 1960. This fund was later augmented by two gifts from the Charleston Foundation for Research, and under the combined support, the program has grown significantly.

Established in the second semester of the 1960-61 session, the program first involved only twenty-five students in a handful of projects. By 1961-62, fifty-seven students were active in forty-nine projects. During the current academic year, participation has increased even more. The seventy-five students are working in fifty-five projects under thirty-five professors who represent seventeen academic areas.

Although a large number of projects concern the natural sciences, the humanities and social sciences are well-represented in the program, and a University-wide balance is achieved in application of the program's funds. Active with 1962-63 projects are such diverse research projects that will acquaint the students with the tools, techniques, and methodology of scholarly and scientific investigation.

A principal benefit of the program is the stimulus given to the intellectual curiosity of the students. The program can be expected to encourage participants to go on to graduate school and future careers as teachers, scholars, and scientists. Even for students who do not intend to pursue graduate work, participation in the program is rewarding and challenging.

him valuable training for a task he is sure to encounter as a graduate student.

No Robert E. Lee Research Program participants receive academic credit for their work, nor do they feel that this kind of program should involve grades and credit. R. Meade Christian, Jr., of Richmond, the 1963 valedictorian who assists Biology professor Dr. Lyman R. Emmons in a project in cytogenetics, feels the Lee program offers undergraduates a unique relationship with professors.

fields as accounting, music, sociology, linguistics, economics, public speaking, military science, commerce, modern foreign languages, English, philosophy, history, and law, as well as the sciences—biology, chemistry, geology, physics, and psychology.

Dean of the College, Dr. William W. Pusey III, under whose direction the program operates, expects student and faculty interest to increase still further, to a point where the limited funds available for the program will place student applicants in a highly competitive situation.

The overall purpose of the program is to present undergraduates with an opportunity to work closely with professors in meaningful Willard R. Young III of Lebanon, N. J., is a senior who expects to follow a banking career. His Robert E. Lee project—one he devised himself with the assistance of Commerce professor Dr. Lewis K. Johnson—is a study of the operation of small metal fabricating plants within a seventy mile radius of Lexington. Young feels that a grasp of problems of small businessmen and industrialists will help him in his future career as a banker in a city of modest size.

James W. McBride of Hilton Head, S. C., will study German in the University of North Carolina's graduate school next year. His assistance to Philosophy professor Dr. Paul C. Hayner in compiling a bibliography on Abelard will give

"I think it is good for students to work with their professors and not be concerned with getting an 'A' or a 'B' as a result," says Christian. "It's a real change of pace for me to work with Dr. Emmons, share his excitement and his enthusiasm—and his disappointments. This program encourages students to do things on their own, and for me, it has been excellent technical training for my future work in medical school."

For all of the undergraduate participants, the program means essentially a form of very beneficial campus part-time employment. Each student agrees to devote a given number of hours during a semester to his work, for which he is compensated at a rate of $1.35 to $1.50 per hour, depending upon his experience. But, as a campus job, a research appointment has important advantages other than the modest income it provides for its recipients. When the program was first announced, the New York Times commented this way:

"The undergraduate who wishes to work his way through college is generally faced with a choice among menial and non-academic jobs that have little relation to the higher education he is seeking. A recent gift to Washington and Lee University, however, will make it possible for talented students to engage in research projects for pay, instead of waiting on tables or shelving library books. The financial aid is not designed to underwrite honors work, but to enable the student to earn his way by a means that has educational value."

If students are the prime beneficiaries in the Robert E. Lee program, there are benefits for professors, too, Dean Pusey points out. They have an opportunity to work closely with highly motivated and highly interested students, of the type usually found only in graduate school. Professors are encouraged to undertake the kind of research projects that can involve student assistants in meaningful work, and Robert E. Lee funds are available for the purchase of equipment and materials essential to projects which do involve students.

Professors are enthusiastic about the program, and they agree that it has an important future at Washington and Lee. Dr. Samuel J. Kozak of the Geology department has two students working on two different projects now, but he anticipates expanded use of student assistants in the future. "If I can begin training selected students as sophomores, by the time they are seniors we can have a really important research team functioning in geology," he points out.

Science professors are especially proud of the number of papers presented each year by Washington and Lee research participants at the Virginia Academy of Science. Virtually no papers are presented from other colleges by undergraduate students at the academy's annual meeting.

In addition to the knowledge they acquire of research tools and techniques, Washington and Lee's researchers learn of other important attributes of the successful scholar or scientist. Says Robert M. Auburn, a senior pre-medical student from Falls Church, Va., "You learn to be patient, to work hard without expecting dramatic results at every turn. When I was interviewed by Duke Medical School, the doctors there were impressed, I think, with my understanding of the patience that research and advanced study requires." Auburn was accepted at Duke, and will enroll there in the fall.

George K. Taylor, a junior from Orange, Va., has found that the researcher can encounter many blind alleys, even in the most fundamental of investigations. Taylor wants to build pipe organs as a profession, so when the Lee Chapel restoration got underway, he took on a study of the Chapel's Erben organ which also was to be restored. For one thing, he wanted to know who participated in the dedication program in 1872. But the Lexington Gazette of that day offered little help: "The participants are so well known locally that it is unnecessary to list them here," it reported. Taylor has continued the search diligently but with little success.

Some of the students achieve almost total involvement in their research. William M. Durrett, an Atlanta senior, has acquired a surgeon's skill in his work with Dr. Leonard E. Jarrard's white rats, used by the professor in a number of psychology studies. Durrett keeps a sleeping bag in his laboratory, works late and gets early starts. He is so interested in the experiments that he hopes to return next year as a special student to continue his assistance to Dr. Jarrard.

An attractive feature of the Robert E. Lee program is an opportunity for the young scholars in various fields to share a part of their experience with their student colleagues and professors. Dean Pusey is host each year at a series of small dinners at which the program participants bring short oral reports on the work they have been doing and of their reaction to the program itself.

"They all have a contagious enthusiasm," says Dean Pusey, who adds, "My enthusiasm for the program continues undiminished."

Directing the program is a job Dean Pusey does with vigor. Part of its administration involves considerable bookkeeping on the part of Dean Pusey's secretary, Mrs. Faye Lowry. Among many other important duties connected with Lee research, she helps ascertain whether a student qualifies as a Robert E. Lee Research Assistant or a Robert E. Lee Research Scholar. It takes a "C" average for participation at all, but if an applicant has a "B" average, he gains the "scholar" designation.

Dean Pusey remarks that participation in the program involves certain status among serious students. He says they see in the program an opportunity to make a contribution to their own educations and to the University.

President Cole is pleased with the progress of the Robert E. Lee program to date, but he is hopeful that its influence can be broadened. President Cole also is hopeful that projects can be undertaken in the sciences and other disciplines that will continue throughout the summer months, thus making worthwhile use of university facilities that otherwise stand idle during the normal vacation period. The University's new science facilities all have special provisions for student research.

Expansion of the program along these lines will require additional resources, but University officials are hopeful that such help will be forthcoming. Washington and Lee is exercising outstanding leadership in the field of undergraduate research, and the success of the program to date is encouraging, not only to the University, its professors, and students, but to many others as well.

University's Permanent Art Collection Growing With Gifts and Purchases

DR. MARION JUNKIN, standing, and junior TIMOTHY DOLS uncrate several recent additions to the University's permanent art collection.

A MEMBER OF THE class of 1959 and a Virginia newspaper editor are among the latest donors to Washington and Lee's permanent art collection.

Henry Hecht, Jr., who received his B.A. degree four years ago and now lives in Washington, D.C., has given five works to the University's Department of Fine Arts, and William G. Levery, assistant managing editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, has given an oil painting. Department head Dr. Marion M. Junkin noted that these gifts bring the University's total holding to some 40 prints and 12 paintings. Works belonging in the Lee Chapel collection or located in other buildings on the campus are not included in Dr. Junkin's count.

Among Mr. Hecht's gifts are works by Tomayo, Picasso, Chagall, Staack and Friedlande. The works include both oils and prints. Some time ago, Mr. Hecht donated works by Rouault, Goya and Daurier to Washington and Lee's collection.

Mr. Hecht's mother, Mrs. A. F. Hecht who also lives in Washington, exhibited a selection of her works in the duPont Hall gallery during March. Her exhibition was among nine such displays sponsored by the Fine Arts Department during the school year.

A painting by Ray Prohaska, a New York artist who gave a gallery talk for faculty and students at Washington and Lee two years ago, is Mr. Levery's gift to the University's collection. Prohaska is a personal friend of Mr. Levery's. The newspaperman also serves as a visiting instructor in Washington and Lee's Department of Journalism and Communications.

Dr. Junkin has acquired for the University works by Rockbridge County artist Pierre Daura, Ulysses Desportes, Horace Day (who teaches at nearby Mary Baldwin Col-

New 42-Booth Electronic Laboratory Aids Students' Foreign Language Study

WHEN Washington and Lee's new electronic language laboratory went into use early in the second semester this year, one of the first lessons students learned was how to say "No Smoking" in five foreign languages.

Amid the tape recorders, microphones, and master console costing thousands of dollars were six, colorful, carefully hand-lettered wall signs. Five say "No Smoking" in French, German, Italian, Russian, and Spanish; the sixth, obviously for beginning language students, is in English.

The signs serve an important purpose, according to Prof. B. Stuart Stephenson, assistant professor of German and coordinator of the language laboratory. Microphones and other electronic gear located in the forty-two student booths and the master console are extremely sensitive and could be damaged by smoke in the air, Stephenson explains. His colleague, German instructor David B. Dickens, lettered the laboratory signs.

The laboratory, available for instruction in all the foreign languages offered at Washington and Lee, is housed in a large converted classroom in the university's duPont Hall. The laboratory is open daily and Sunday nights for class instruction, study and review.

Half of the laboratory's booths are equipped with individual tape recorders for students' use, and each student booth has a microphone and earphones, plus accompanying controls. All the booths may be controlled from the instructor's console, and it is possible to teach four classes at the same time. Normally, not more than two classes—relatively small conversation sections—use the laboratory simultaneously, Prof. Stephenson noted.

The instructor, through switches at his console, is able to monitor a selected student during a class period without disturbing the work of the entire class. Corrections, daily quizzes, and other types of class work may be accomplished on a full class or individual basis through the master console. The master unit itself has three tape recorders and a phonograph for transmitting professionally-made tapes and records or those made by instructors. The teacher's microphone enables him to speak to the class or to individual students.

Language laboratories have become a common feature in most colleges and many high schools in recent years. Washington and Lee's installation has grown from a small console-listening unit given by a student's father in 1960. The initial unit still sees service in another room in duPont Hall.

"A laboratory of this type can be a highly efficient teaching method," Prof. Stephenson observed. "It certainly stimulates enthusiasm in the students."

Some language students are asked to purchase their own reels of tape for study. The student-owned tapes serve as the basis for "comparison recording." For this type of study exercise, the student records transmissions from the master console, plays them back, listens and records his repetitions. After class, the student is able to listen to his repetitions and compare them with the instructor's recording to increase his language fluency. The laboratory furnishes other tapes for student use.

Language professors at Washington and Lee are especially enthusiastic about using the laboratory's facilities for introducing students to plays, operas, novels and poetry of other languages and cultures.

Daily operation of the laboratory is handled by three student assistants working under the auspices of the university's undergraduate Robert E. Lee Research Program. Junior Robert Brewer, Jr., sophomore Tim Vanderver and freshman Philip Manor currently are Prof. Stephenson's assistants. The laboratory assistantships are to be awarded annually to the top applicants regardless of the academic department in which they are majoring.

The students keep tabs on the working order of the equipment, catalogue tapes and records, set up recorders and other instruments for class sessions. Whenever needed, they are on hand during class periods to aid instructors. One of the assistants' primary duties is helping fellow students in using laboratory equipment during after-class hours. Actual maintenance of the facilities is handled by Roanoke sound specialists who installed the equipment.

Phi Beta Kappa Keys For Eight Students, Alumnus Edward Korry

EIGHT WASHINGTON and Lee students and one alumnus were elected by the Gamma of Virginia Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa for initiation into the national honoratory scholastic society for 1963.

All but alumnus Edward M. Korry, '42, were initiated in ceremonies held traditionally on April 12 in connection with the annual Phi Beta Kappa-Cincinnati Society Convocation. Mr. Korry, recently named by President John F. Kennedy to be United States Ambassador to Ethiopia, was en route to his new assignment in Addis Ababa.

PROFESSOR KITTO with PRESIDENT COLE on a campus stroll.

His initiation will take place at a later time.

Students honored include senior Herbert Jahncke, Jr., son of Herbert G. Jahncke, '30, of New Orleans, who was also selected to membership in the Virginia Gamma chapter while an undergraduate at Washington and Lee. Mr. Jahncke was on hand for the day's activities, and spoke briefly at the banquet in honor of the new initiates which followed the initiation ceremony.

Other student initiates included academic seniors Richard Thomas Edwards, III, son of Richard T. Edwards, '35, of Roanoke; Charles Alan Grubb of Silver Spring, Md.; William Bryan Lowry of Hobbs, N. M.; and John Francis Refo of Norfolk. Academic juniors elected were Jere Davis Cravens of Summit, N. J., and William Alfred Noell of Bluefield, W. Va. Timothy Giles Ireland, '60, of Akron, O., was the sole student in the School of Law picked for membership this year.

The eight students make up the smallest group of initiates in many years for the Virginia Gamma Chapter. Two other seniors, Robert Meade Christian of Richmond and Calvin Meredith Morrow of Oklahoma City, Okla., were initiated last year as juniors.

Speaker for the noon convocation was Prof. H. D. F. Kitto, English scholar and classicist, currently a visiting professor at Brandeis University in Boston. Professor Kitto, since 1944 Professor of Greek at England's University of Bristol and the author of two highly regarded books, The Greeks and Greek Tragedy, spoke on "Divine Justice in Greek Tragedy."

HERBERT G. JAHNCKE, '30, right, was on hand for the initiation of his son, HERBERT G., JR., center, into Phi Beta Kappa. PRESIDENT COLE congratulates both.

Usually conducted in Lee Chapel, the Phi Beta Kappa-Cincinnati Convocation was held this year in the smaller duPont Auditorium, with special seating and a public address system located in the adjoining hall for the more than capacity audience which heard Professor Kitto.

Although Professor Kitto's discourse was appropriately scholarly, his remarks often reflected a keen sense of humor. After speaking for an hour concerning the manifestations of divine justice in certain Greek tragic drama, Professor Kitto concluded, "Now, I was about to relate all this to the current world situation, but I see my time is up."

The professor also spoke in a light vein as a part of the after dinner program of the initiation banquet. Dr. James G. Leyburn, professor of sociology and president of the Virginia Gamma chapter, presided over the day's activities.

At the banquet, President Fred C. Cole congratulated the new initiates, and Timothy Ireland spoke in behalf of the other initiates in acknowledging their gratitude and honor to be associated with Phi Beta Kappa.

FACULTY

■ AN ARTICLE by Dr. Leonard E. Jarrard, assistant professor of psychology, appears in a recent issue of the Journal of Comparative and Physiological Psychology.

Entitled "Effects of X-irradiation on Operant Behavior in The Rat," the article is based on research conducted under the auspices of a grant from the National Institutes of Health.

■ DR. L. L. BARRETT, head of the Department of Romance Languages, participated in a Colloquium on Curricular Change in The Foreign Languages at Skytop Lodge, Pa., in April.

The three-day session, sponsored by the College Entrance Examination Board, is the first in a series planned by the CEEB.

■ THREE FACULTY MEMBERS took part in the annual meeting of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology April 11-13 in Miami Beach, Fla.

Dr. William M. Hinton, head of the Psychology Department, acted as chairman of two joint sessions of the society, of which he is a former president. Dr. Harrison J. Pemberton, Jr., associate professor of Philosophy, and Dr. Leonard E. Jarrard, assistant professor of psychology, presented papers during the meetings.

■ THE RESIGNATIONS of three faculty members have been announced.

Dr. Marshall W. Fishwick, professor of American Studies and a member of the faculty since 1949, has been on a year's leave of absence serving as director of the Wemyss Foundation of Wilmington, Del. He will continue to direct the activities of the foundation which conducts research and study projects in the fields of American history and other American studies.

Joining the faculty of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in September will be Thomas P. Hughes, associate professor of history. Dr. Hughes has been on leave this year teaching at M. I. T. and at the University of Wisconsin. He has been a member of the faculty since 1956.

Dr. J. Harvey Wheeler, professor of political science, has been on a two-year leave taking part in the formulation of a "master plan" for future editions of the Encyclopedia Britannica. A member of the faculty since 1954, he has been working at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara, Calif. Co-author of the best-selling novel, Fail-Safe, he will continue his writing and research activities in California.

LAW SCHOOL

■ DR. CHARLES V. LAUGHLIN, professor of law, will serve as a Fulbright Lecturer at the University of Helsinki in Finland for the 1963-64 academic year. Professor Laughlin will lecture on American Jurisprudence and Judicial System.

A member of the law faculty since 1940, Dr. Laughlin received his LL.M. degree from Harvard University and his J.S.D. degree from the University of Chicago. His undergraduate work was done at Lenox College in Iowa and at George Washington University.

He practiced law with a Washington, D. C., firm in 1929-30 and with a Chicago firm in 1930 and again from 1932 to 1938. He was professor of political science at Lenox College in 1931-32.

Professor Laughlin, who has been admitted to practice in the District of Columbia, Illinois and Virginia, is a graduate of the first officer candidate class of the Army's Judge Advocate General's Corps, serving in JAGC from 1942 to 1946. He is a retired Army Reserve lieutenant colonel.

DR. CHARLES V. LAUGHLIN

The new program, supported by a grant from Carnegie Corporation of New York, will make available to undergraduates of certain other institutions Princeton's resources for instruction in Arabic, Chinese, Japanese, Persian, Russian and Turkish languages and related regional studies in the social sciences.

Washington and Lee is the only institution from the South so far invited to take part in the plan. Other participating colleges include Carleton, Hamilton, Haverford, Kenyon, Lawrence, Oberlin, and Swarthmore.

In the program, undergraduates from other institutions will be admitted to Princeton at the end of their sophomore year for a year of instruction in the critical languages, and related studies, and will return to their own colleges as seniors to complete their undergraduate work.

■ R. MEADE CHRISTIAN, JR., of Richmond, Va., will deliver the traditional student valedictory address at commencement exercises on June 7.

He was selected for the honor by the faculty as the senior degree candidate with the highest cumulative academic average at the end of first semester. A pre-medical major, Christian achieved a 2.96 grade-point average on a scale where 3.0 would indicate no grade below A. He received B grades for only four hours of work, while earning A's in 108 hours of work.

The 1963 valedictorian is a graduate of Thomas Jefferson High School in Richmond. He was elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa as a junior and is president of Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary leadership fraternity.

He is president of Phi Gamma Delta, a freshman dormitory counselor, a Robert E. Lee Research Scholar, and a member of the student Executive Committee. Last summer, he visited Ghana as a member of a work camp crew sponsored by the Episcopal Church.

■ FOUR SENIORS, a junior, and two professors have been elected to membership in Beta Gamma Sigma, honorary scholastic business fraternity.

Seniors selected are James W. Ivey, II, West Hartford, Conn., John T. Mills, Leesburg, Va., George E. Missbach, Jr., Atlanta, Ga., and William E. Smith, Jr., Birmingham, Ala. William A. Noell, Jr., Bluefield, W. Va., is the junior chosen for membership.

Dr. S. Todd Lowry and Dr. Charles F. Phillips, Jr., assistant professors of economics, are the two faculty members selected.

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE debaters ran away with the mid-April Spring Invitational Debate Tournament at Old Dominion College.

Two University teams participated. The winning team, with a 5-0 score, included Alfred Eckes, veteran debater of Drexel Hill, Pa., who was named the top debater of the tournament, and Edward Fitzgerald, a freshman from Laconia, N. H.

GIFTS

■ THE GULF OIL CORP. has given the University $808 in unrestricted funds through its aid to education program. This is the fourth such gift received under the Direct Grants to Independent Colleges section of the Gulf educational program.

■ A $1,500 GIFT from the Texaco, Inc., aid-to-education program for support of privately-endowed colleges and universities will be applied to faculty salaries, according to President Cole. The unrestricted gift marks the seventh consecutive year the University has been selected as a participant in the program.

UNDERGRADUATES

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE has been invited to participate in a Cooperative Undergraduate Program for Critical Languages at Princeton University.

Michael Hayslip of Garland, Tex., a freshman, was part of a three-way tie for the second top debater spot and was on a team with Jack Eure, a junior from Suffolk, Va., which scored 3-2 in competition.

Other colleges represented were the University of Virginia, the University of Pittsburgh, and Old Dominion, who placed in that order.

Mr. Eckes and William Noell, of Bluefield, W. Va., participated in the National Debate Tournament at the U.S. Military Academy in late April, marking the first time that Washington and Lee had been represented in the national event.

The two juniors placed second in a field of 28 teams during debate sessions at Kings College in March. They have debated as a team for three years and have won about 75 per cent of their arguments, according to debate director William W. Chaffin, assistant professor of English and speech.

■ CHRISTOPHER M. KELL, Haddon-

field, N. J., has received a copy of the Handbook of Chemistry and Physics for attaining the highest average during his first semester of physics.

The annual award, given by the Chemical Rubber Co., is designed to stimulate interest in the sciences through student competition. A mathematics major, Kell is also a member of the varsity track team.

■ TWO MEMPHIS, TENN., seniors will head the editorial and business staffs of the 1963-64 Calyx; Sydney J. Butler as editor-in-chief and Jerome Turner as business manager. Both are English majors and members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

■ A SHORT STORY by Nicholas Monsarrat has been accepted for publication in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine.

"The Handle on The Door" by the senior journalism major from Westport, Conn., will be published within the next two months in the nationally - distributed magazine.

Monsarrat's 2,000-word story is a fictional account of the death of United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld.

The story will appear under the pen name of "N. Cashatt Monsarrat" since the author has a cousin with the same name who is a well-known author.

■ JUNIORS ROBERT LEE and Norman Youngblood represented the Washington and Lee 330-man ROTC cadet corps in an official three-day visit to the U.S. Military Academy in April.

ROTC units from 10 colleges in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania were present for the weekend which was designed as an orientation for students interested in Army careers.

■ THREE SENIORS have been awarded Woodrow Wilson National Fellowships.

Recipients are James M. Campbell, St. Petersburg, Fla., Charles A. Grubb, Silver Spring, Md., and Calvin M. Morrow, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Aimed at encouraging the pursuit of a college teaching career, a Wilson fellowship carries an individual grant of $1,500 plus funds for full tuition and fees at the graduate school of the recipient's choice.

Awards by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation are made possible through grants totaling $52 million from the Ford Foundation, which has supported the expanded fellowship program since 1957.

THE CAMPUS

■ WILLIAM HUMPHREY, whose first novel Home from the Hill was published to wide critical acclaim in 1958, will be Glasgow Visiting Professor during the first semester next year.

The young American writer will assist in a creative writing course offered by the English Department and will work closely with students interested in writing careers. He will give occasional lectures before students, faculty and the general public.

The visiting professorship is sponsored by the Glasgow Endowment Committee. The Glasgow program was initiated under a bequest from the late Arthur Graham Glasgow, whose will specified that income from his gift be used "to promote the art of expression by pen and tongue, including voice production and delivery."

■ THE SPRING ISSUE of Shenandoah is a tribute to poet John Crowe Ransom and includes essays and appreciations about Ransom on the occasion of his 75th birthday in April.

The issue is the third under the fulltime editorship of James Boatwright, III, instructor in English.

Such literary figures as Allen Tate, Robert Penn Warren, John Stewart, Francis Fergusson and Cleanth Brooks contributed articles about Ransom for the magazine.

Also appearing were a selection of poems by English poet Roy Fuller and poems by Reed Whittemore, William Meredith, Daniel Hoffman, and Howard Nemerov and Richard Eberhart, both of whom visited the campus in December.

Robert P. Rushmore reviewed W. H. Auden's The Dyer's Hand and other reviewers included Stephen Stepanchev and Dr. Harrison J. Pemberton, Jr., who is an associate professor of philosophy at Washington and Lee.

■ A PIANO RECITAL by Dr. James G. Leyburn was presented in April by Radio Washington and Lee on "Pro Musica."

The program was presented through the University's remote radio facilities in the Department of Journalism and Communications. Dr. Leyburn played works by Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann and Debussy.

A second April program featured music by the Moonshiners, Lexington High School folk singers, who were heard on the "Musicale" portion of Radio Washington and Lee.

SPEAKERS

■ "THE SEARCH FOR SANITY in Thought and Art" was discussed by Dr. Brand Blanshard, professor emeritus of philosophy at Yale University, in a lecture here March 5.

Sponsored by the Philosophy Department, Dr. Blanshard compared what is happening in some sectors of the world of mind with what was happening before the great divide formed by the first World War.

The speaker's two-volume book, The Nature of Thought, published in 1940, was rated by a philosophical association committee as one of the ten outstanding works on philosophy produced in the United States since 1900.

■ THREE SCIENTISTS visited the campus in March for a series of public and classroom lectures.

Dr. Ralph T. Overman, chairman of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, discussed "Science and Religion" in two lectures sponsored by Seminars in Religion and Biology.

The American Geological Institute and the Department of Geology sponsored a visit by Dr. William A. Oliver, a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey, whose time was devoted to conferences with students and faculty members.

Dr. J. K. Galt, director of the Solid State Electronics Laboratory of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, discussed lasers in a public lecture in the new science building. He was sponsored by the Visiting Scholars Program of the American Association of Physics Teachers and the Department of Physics.

■ DR. ALFRED G. ENGSTROM, professor of French at the University of North Carolina, was the guest speaker in March for the 44th Seminar in Literature.

Speaking on "Synaesthesia and the Poetic Imagination," Dr. Engstrom was sponsored by the Seminar in Literature Committee and the Department of Romance Languages in cooperation with the University Center in Virginia.

■ A MEMBER of the staff of Harvard University's Museum of Comparative Zoology spoke to an overflow audience in late March on the provocative topic, "Was Man Inevitable?"

Dr. George G. Simpson, a former professor at Columbia, also served as curator of fossil mammals and birds at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. One of his most widely known books is The Meaning of Evolution, published in 1950.

■ AMERICAN POET and anthologist Oscar Williams discussed "The Relation of Poetry and Reality" in an April lecture sponsored by the English Department and ReVue, a campus film subscription series.

The author of several volumes of poetry, Mr. Williams is more widely known for his work as an anthologist and is the originator and general editor of Scribner's Little Treasury Series. One of 33 poets selected last October by the Library of Congress to participate in the first annual National Poetry Festival in Washington, D. C., he has recorded his poetry for the Harvard Vociarium Series and for the Poetry Archives of the Library of Congress.

■ DR. DEXTER PERKINS, professor emeritus of American civilization at Cornell University, was sponsored by the History Department in a discussion of "The Constitution after 175 Years."

The fifth University Center in Virginia lecturer to appear at the University this semester, Dr. Perkins is author of thirteen books on history and foreign policy.

He served as moderator of the Unitarian Churches in the U.S. and Canada in 1952-53 and was the official historian for the Overseas Branch of War Information at the United Nations Conference in San Francisco in 1946. He continues to serve as a lecturer at the National War College, a post he has held since 1946.

One Thousand Regional Agents Ready To Aid Alumni Fund

Response by Alumni Donors
Boosts Fund Over $100,000 Mark
For Tenth Time in History;
Participation Goal Is Far Short

SOME ONE THOUSAND Washington and Lee Alumni, all of them supporters of the 1962-63 Alumni Fund, have launched a home stretch effort to solicit the help of the more than 7,000 former students who have not responded to the current campaign appeal.

One hundred alumni have agreed to serve as regional agents during the phase of the annual fund drive that emphasizes contact with prospective contributors according to areas of residence. The regional campaign is designed to complement and support the work accomplished by the Class Agents who have contacted all alumni through academic and law class rolls.

The names of the one hundred regional agents appear on the inside back cover of this magazine issue. Each has recruited a corps of co-workers, averaging about ten men per agent, thus making up a group of workers nearly a thousand strong.

If you are among those who have not yet responded to the 1962-63 Alumni Fund appeal, chances are that one of the regional representatives will be calling soon. In many cases, he will be a friend or neighbor. In all cases, he will be a dedicated alumnus of Washington and Lee, willing to give of his time and efforts in an undertaking that is important to you as an alumnus and to your University.

As the regional agents and their helpers begin their work, there is a strong incentive for them to perform a thorough and effective job. As of mid-April, the 1962-63 contributions to the Fund have totaled $101,932.54. The goal of $115,000 established last fall by Chairman Don Fergusson's Alumni Fund Council is definitely in reach. In fact, it could be substantially surpassed if the expected good results from the regional campaigns materialize.

The results of the Fund appeal are significant in many ways this year. The current total marks only the fourth time that alumni have exceeded the $100,000 mark in their giving through the annual Fund. In 1956, the first time this level was reached, the total was $100,931.31; in 1957, it was $102,- 461.26; and in 1958, the total was a record high of $113,681.79, which included a substantial amount earmarked for the Cy Young Scholarship Fund. There followed the successful University Development Program for capital funds and the subsequent suspension of the Alumni Fund as such for a period of two years. The results of the current year reflect a gradual reestablishment of the Fund over a four year period, beginning in 1960.

As encouraging as the prospect is for a record Fund year, there is a discouraging note, too. This involves the number of alumni contributors who are making this banner year possible. The Alumni Fund was openly ambitious when it set a participation goal of 100 per cent, but council members were convinced that the efforts should be directed toward all Washington and Lee men, not just an arbitrary fraction.

As of mid-April there have been 2,647 contributors to the Fund. During the 1956-58 Fund years, the number of contributors totaled 3,363 in 1956, 3,369 in 1957, and 3,378 in 1958. It is obvious that the current Fund finds fewer contributors giving more, a response that indicates that many alumni are increasing their level of support as their capabilities increase. This is good, for increased giving is one of the goals sought by the Council, but there is another goal that is of equal importance.

This goal deals with those alumni who have yet to support any annual Fund, or those who give intermittently or infrequently. The concern here is not how much a person gives, but the simple act of responding itself. Response can be only a token gift, but it can be a thoughtful gift, one that expresses—however modestly—the former student's continuing interest in the University he attended. Many colleges and universities—generally those with which Washington and Lee men like to compare their University—achieve fifty to seventy-five per cent participation in their annual alumni fund drives. Washington and Lee's participation is now approximately twenty-five per cent, and the Alumni Fund Council is hopeful that a significant trend upward may start this year.

First letters back from those alumni who have received their Lee Chapel nails express pleasure and gratitude for this impressive symbol of their support of Washington and Lee.

If you haven't registered your support of your University through a contribution to the Alumni Fund, won't you do it now?

Annual Meeting on June 6 Will Elect Three New Members of the Alumni Board

THE ANNUAL general meeting of The Washington and Lee Alumni, Inc., will be held Thursday afternoon, June 6, at 2 p.m. All alumni are welcome to attend and take part in the meeting.

The meeting, which is held normally in Lee Chapel following the annual lawn luncheon, will be conducted this year in duPont Auditorium in duPont Hall. Work on the restoration of Lee Chapel continues and the auditorium there will not be ready for use.

The June meeting is provided for under the Association's charter and by-laws, and generally is devoted to reports by the officers on the past year's activities and progress, to the election of new members of the Alumni Board of Trustees and the alumni representative to the University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics, and to a general report on forthcoming plans and projects.

Three vacancies occur this year on the Alumni Board and will be filled at the annual meeting. Members of the present board whose terms expire include Rodney M. Cook, '46, of Atlanta, the Association's president for 1962-63; Andrew H. Baur, Jr., '37, of St. Louis; and James B. Martin, '31, of Gloucester, Virginia.

The term of I. Thomas Baker, '52, of Lexington, as a member of the University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics, also expires.

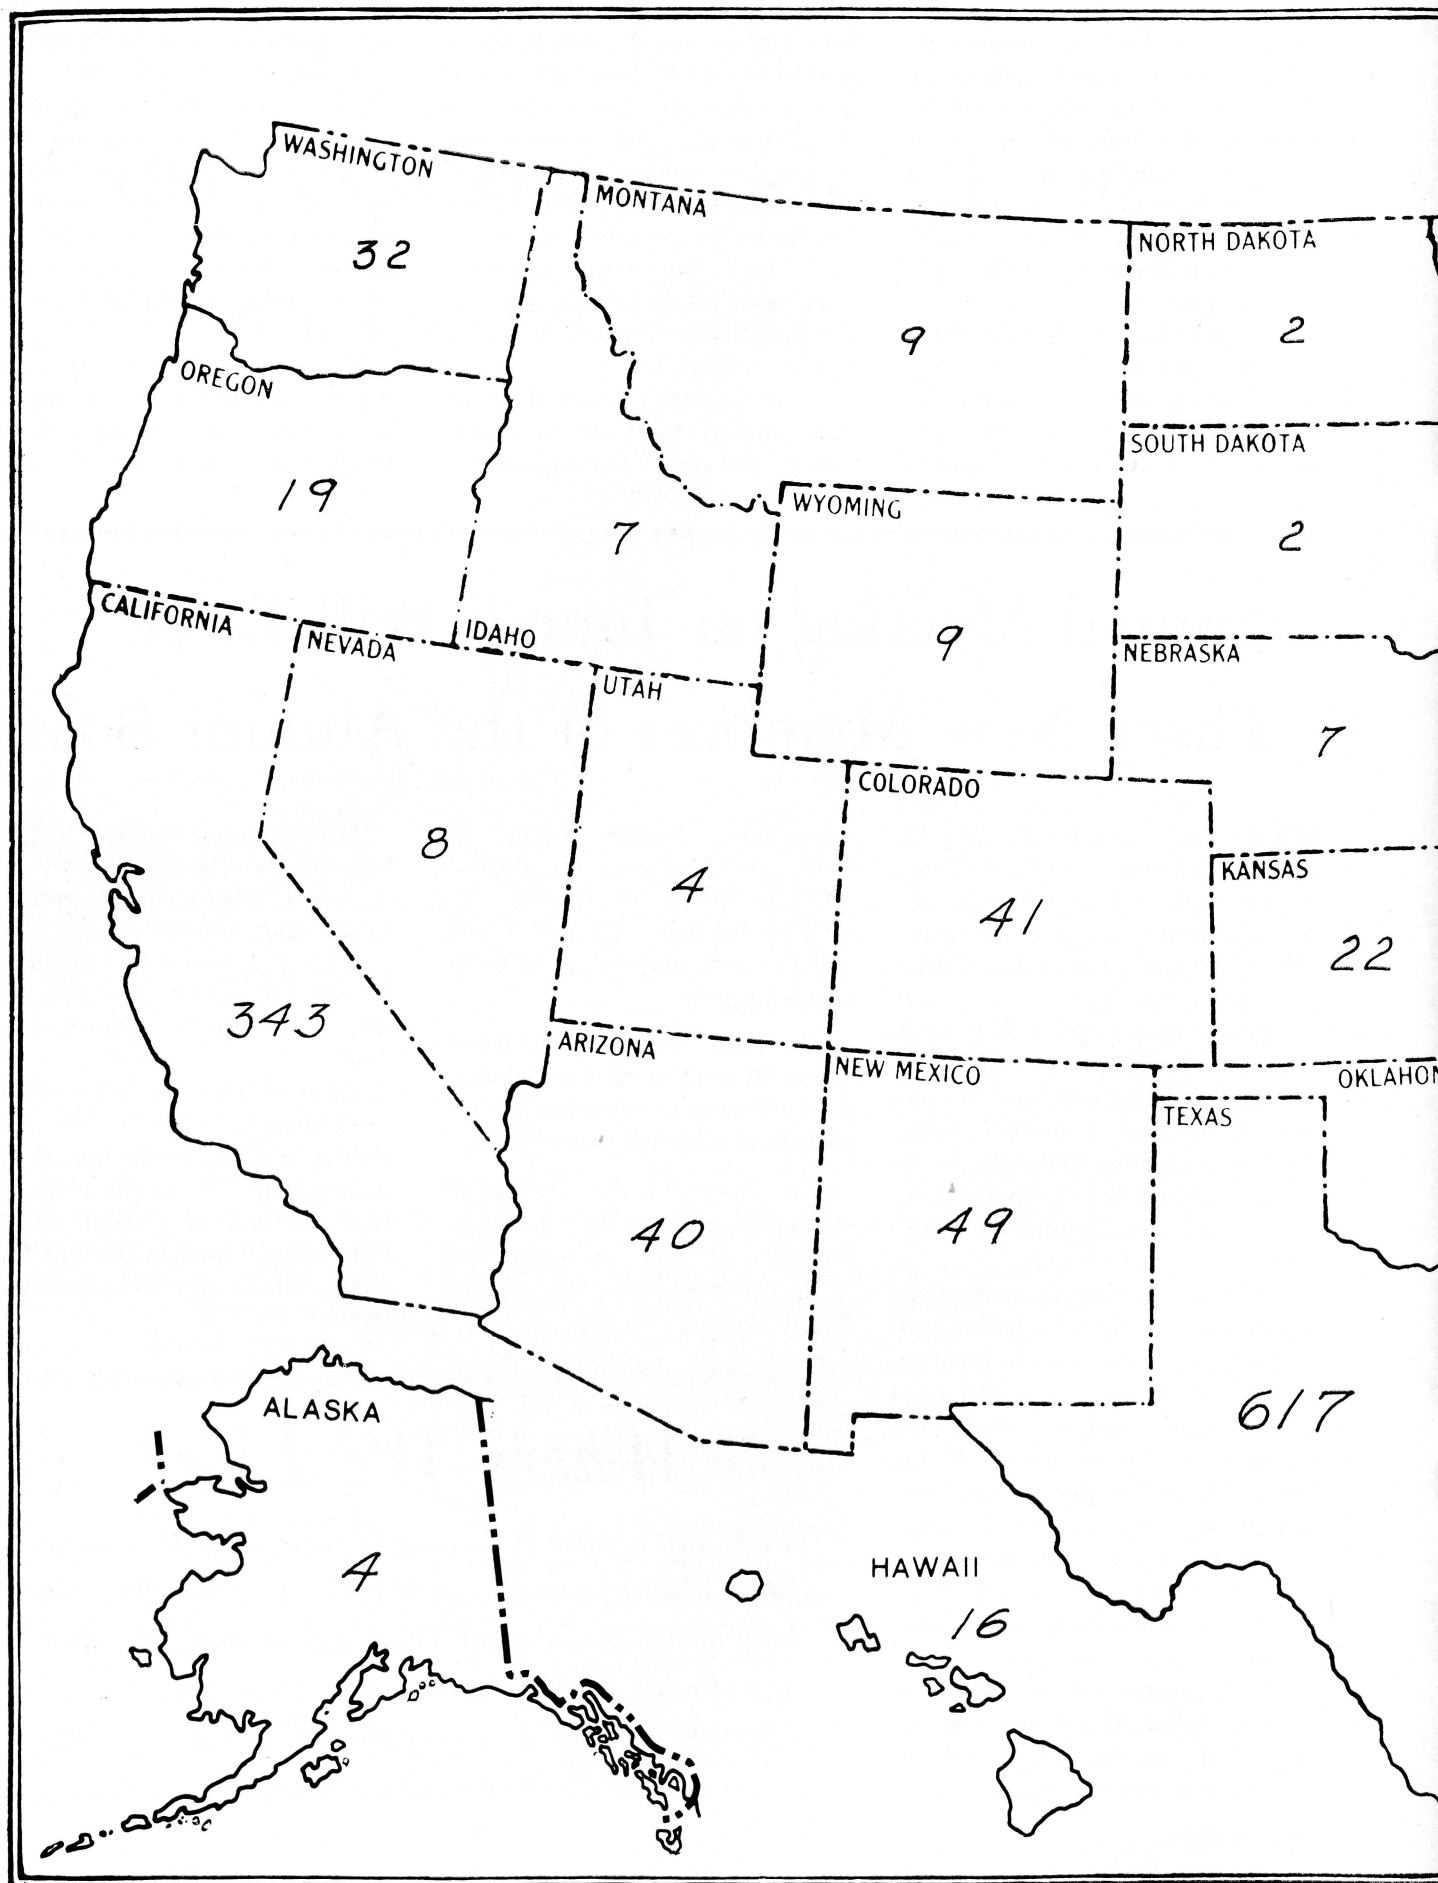

The report of the nominating committee, as prescribed by the association by-laws in connection with vacancies on the Alumni Board, is shown on page 22.

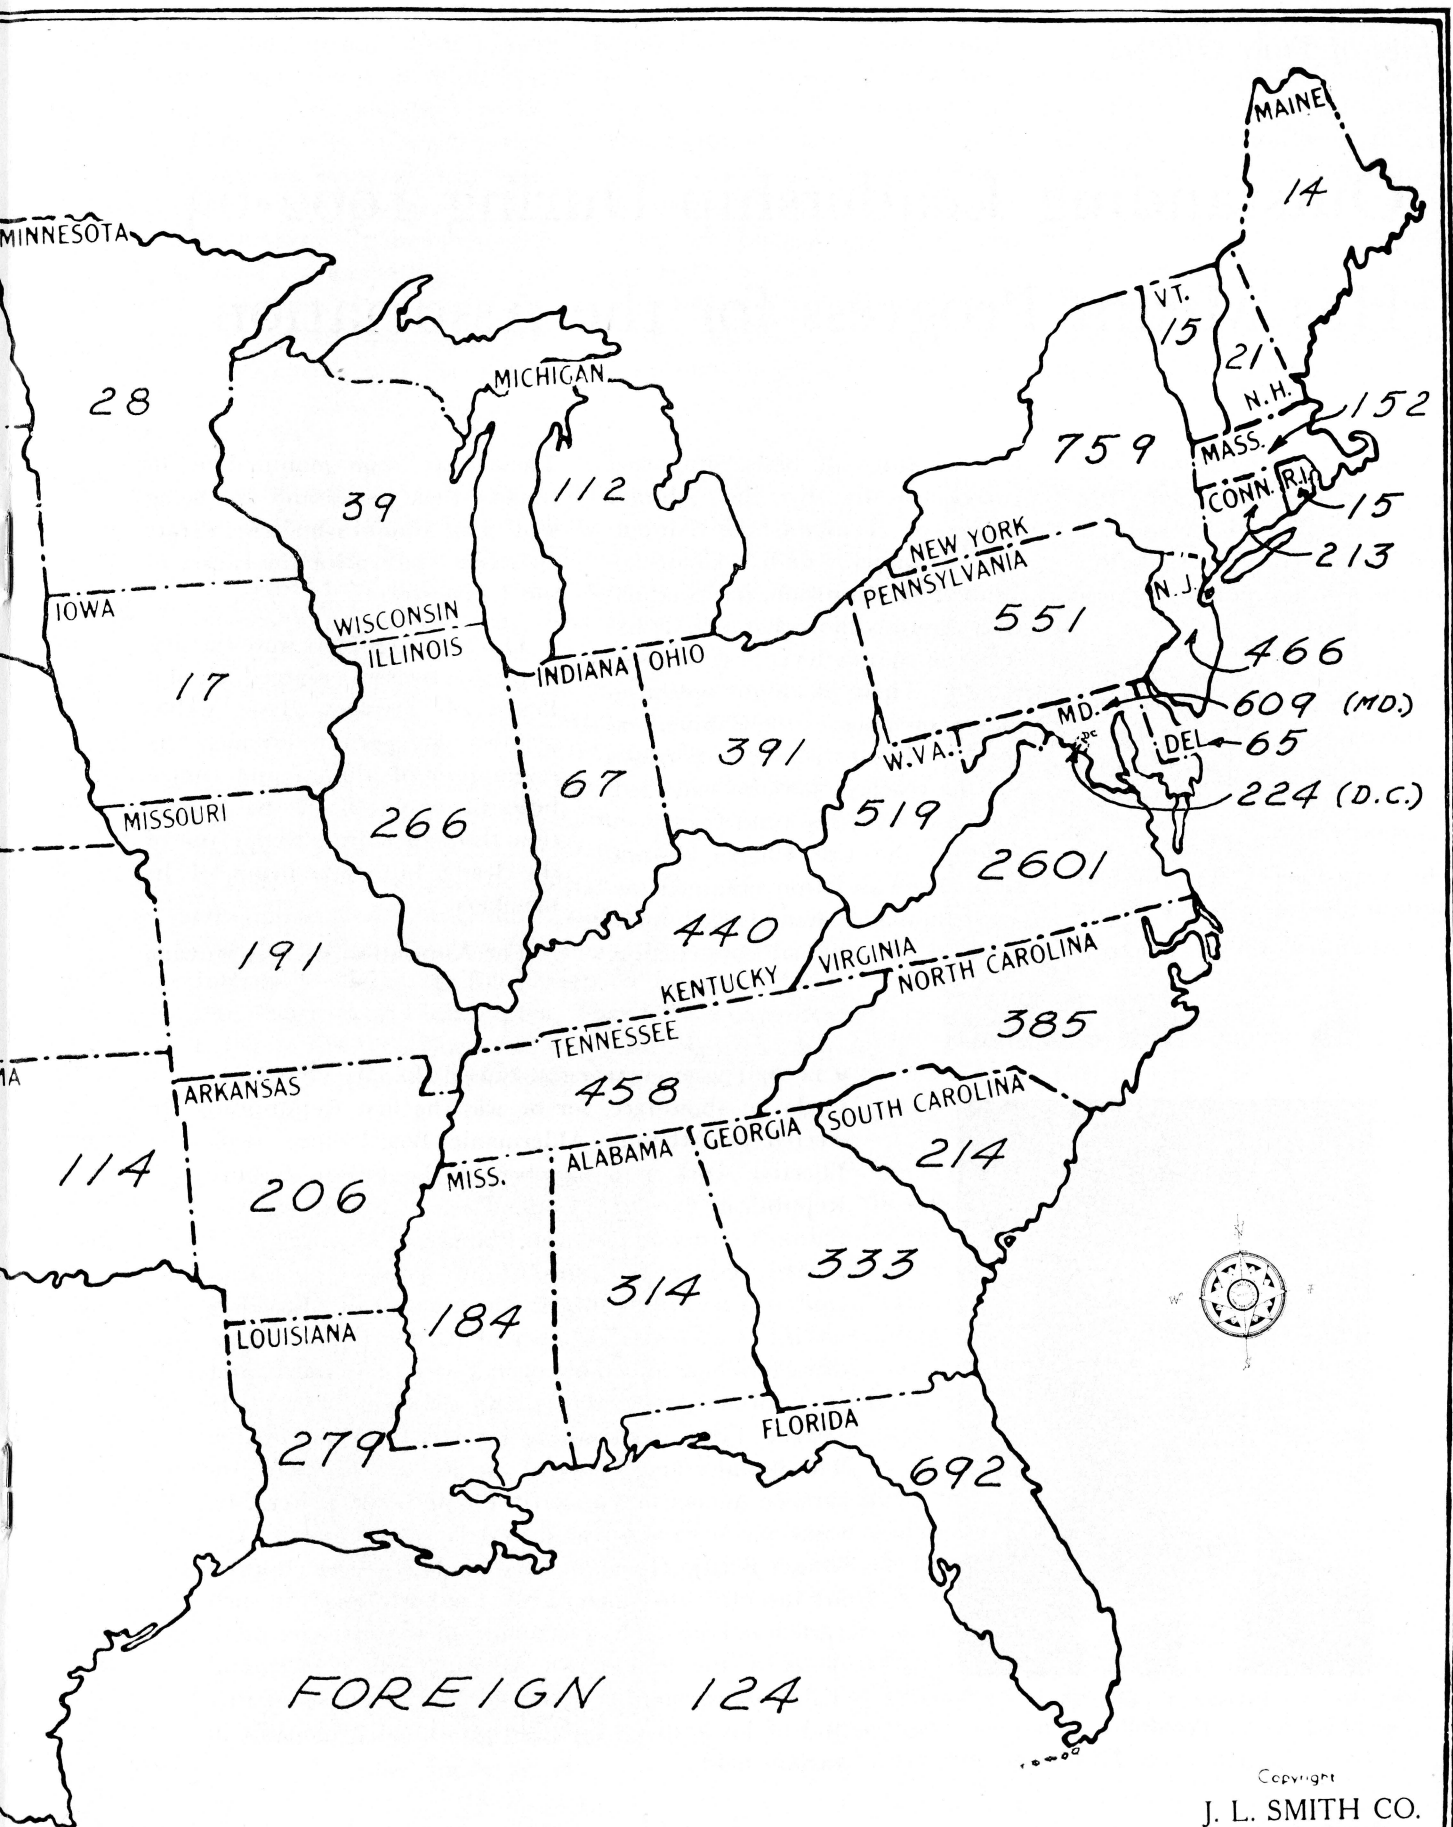

The Alumni Luncheon will follow the Baccalaureate Service for graduates, scheduled this year for Evans Hall instead of the traditional Lee Chapel. Dr. David W. Sprunt, Chaplain of the University, will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon.

All alumni are invited to attend the luncheon, given by the Association in honor of the seniors and their parents. In recent years, the luncheon has been held on the front campus lawn, before the President's House and the Lee-Jackson House.

Where We Live!

The map on the following two pages will impress upon alumni something that the central office has known all along—that Washington and Lee men are spread to the four winds (and fifty states). Chances are you'll be surprised at the size of some of the state representations.

Outstanding Leadership During 1962-63 Has Meant Progress for the Association

AN ARTICLE in the Winter issue of the Alumni Magazine stressed the essential need for the continued high quality of leadership which the Association has produced year after year.

In this issue, it seems appropriate—while their terms of office are still effective—to recognize the excellent officers who have directed the Association's activities during the current year.

The year 1962-63 has been an important one in alumni affairs!

The Alumni Fund was reactivated on a full-scale basis. Supported enthusiastically by the Alumni Board of Trustees, the Alumni Fund Council, under Chairman Donald M. Fergusson, has conducted a vigorous effort that already has seen the 1961-62 level of giving surpassed. There is high optimism among members of the Council and the Board that the goal of $115,000 will be reached, perhaps exceeded, by the close of the fund year.

From the Lee Chapel restoration, the Association obtained several thousand hand-forged nails used in the original construction.

These have been mounted as attractive desk pieces and are being sent to all alumni who demonstrate an active concern for the future of the University.

The 1962-63 officers were the first to preside over an enlarged Alumni Board of Trustees. The twelve-member size permits broader representation of alumni and contributes to the vitality of the Association through more effective use of the leadership capabilities of its members.

The Association itself is growing

RODNEY M. COOK, '46
President

■ IN 1961 RODNEY M. COOK caused the city of Atlanta to do an about-face, for he was the first Republican elected to Atlanta's Aldermanic Board since 1876. Effective work as a member of the Fulton County Republican Executive Committee, as chairman of the Fulton County Republican Planning Committee, and as vice-president of Fulton County Young Republican Club was rewarding for Mr. Cook politically; unselfish service as a charter member of the St. James Methodist Church, as a member of its Board of Stewards, and as a former Scout Master and manager of a Little League Team is rewarding for Mr. Cook personally. The founder and owner of the Rodney M. Cook Insurance Agency and a Certified Life Underwriter, Mr. Cook was born and reared in Atlanta and married the former Bettijo Hogan of Atlanta. Their three children are incentives to much of Mr. Cook's interests in such varied activities. His acceptance of the first vice-presidency of the well-known Atlanta Civil War Round Table shows another facet of Mr. Cook's personality and of his ability to give inspirational leadership in various fields.

during the current year. New chapters have been established at Little Rock, Ark., and Beckley, W. Va. There is new, enlarged activity apparent in many areas of long-standing chapter organization.

The chapters are being visited by a broad representation of University officials. President Cole, Deans Pusey, Adams, Light, Atwood, and Farrar, and many professors have appeared before chapter meetings, bringing first-hand reports on new developments at Washington and Lee.

Last fall, one of the biggest turnouts of alumni in memory was recorded at Homecoming. Prospects are bright, as of this writing, for another banner year of class anniversary reunions.

Further progress was made toward analysis of alumni occupations. Returns of the occupational questionnaire are substantially complete, and studies of this useful information will begin in the near future.

It has been a busy year, and it isn't over yet for the three top officers of the association whose photographs and brief biographies appear on these pages.

■ TENNIS FOUR DAYS A WEEK, barring bad weather, figure skating at the ice rink of the Cleveland Skating Club, working on the Bronze dance test—these activities reveal John Battle as the man of diversified interests that he is. Furthermore, when the weather is really bad, the American Revolution comes in for a studious going-over. Following participation in the campaigns of Guadalcanal and Bougainville, attached to the Marine duty of the Navy Medical Corps, Dr. Battle became associated with the department of internal medicine of the Cleveland (Ohio) Clinic, and he is now Head of the Department of Hematology of this clinic. A Fellow of the American College of Physicians and Diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine, he is presently President of the Ohio Society of Internal Medicine. Dr. Battle married the former Lauretta Warwick of Philadelphia. They have a daughter living on the West Coast and a son starting his sophomore year at Hamilton College in New York.

Vice-President

E. ALTON SARTOR, JR., '38
Treasurer

■ E. ALTON SARTOR, JR., finds himself increasingly, but profitably, involved in community affairs, ranging from service as a board member of Shreveport's active Little Theater to participation as a board member of the Noel Memorial Methodist Church. Four children, two boys and two girls, seemingly encourage both Alton and Jean Oliver Sartor in their outstanding service to many phases of Shreveport life. Mr. Sartor is president of the board of trustees of Southfield School, a private elementary school. The executive committee of the Community Council, the Community Chest, the council of Family and Children's Services—all call upon Mr. Sartor for his valued experience and judgment. He is also the 1962 president of the Cotillion Club. In the business world, Mr. Sartor is vice-president and director of C. W. Lane Co., Inc., a real estate investment company, and treasurer of Giddens-Lane Co., Inc., an office building company.

lege), Charles Smith and John Balator. Each of these works was obtained through Washington and Lee's new rental-purchase plan. The special purchasing plan allows Dr. Junkin to buy items from artists who have been asked to exhibit part of their works for a full semester in one of the two lounges of Evans Dining Hall. The dining hall exhibitions were started in 1959 as an effort to acquaint more students with different styles of art. Each time the Evans exhibits close, the University purchases one or more of the artist's works for its permanent collection.

Paintings and prints by Theodore Turner, head of the University of Virginia's Department of Fine Arts, and Jack Perlmutter, of Washington, D.C., are on display this semester in Evans Hall. Turner is a brother of Washington and Lee history professor Dr. Charles W. Turner, Jr.

An oil painting by Yaffe Kimball was added to Washington and Lee's collection largely through the efforts of the father of a 1962 graduate. This work was added to the collection earlier this semester.

Some of these recent gifts will be displayed in duPont Hall continually while others will be rotated in order to give students, faculty members and visitors to the campus a chance to see the majority of the collection, Dr. Junkin said.

The annual student show in May will close out the duPont monthly exhibits. Works by undergraduates enrolled in Dr. Junkin's studio class and structural models made by students in the course in American art and architecture will be in this display.

Other artists who have exhibited in duPont gallery since September include Dean Carter, Forrest L. Moses, Jr., '58, and a number of Oriental painters.

C. C. CROCKETT is now judge of the City Court of Dublin, Georgia. He made a successful race for this office as an Independent against the nominee in the Democratic primary. Judge Crockett advises that, in spite of its name, the City Court is really a County Court and has a considerable amount of work in it.

FRANCIS J. HEAZEL, former class agent and an attorney in Asheville, North Carolina, was named the 1963 Chairman for the United Fund Admissions Committee. Mr. Heazel is a former president and secretary of the Madison Square Garden in New York City and has had a long and active career in local, state and national affairs.

COLONEL PAUL A. ROCKWELL, President of the Asheville, North Carolina, Branch of the English-Speaking Union, recently had as his guest the foreign correspondent, Denis Warner, of Australia. Colonel Rockwell has also recently joined with the Reverend Elmer T. Clark, Executive Secretary of the Association of Methodist Historical Societies, as editorial advisor for a new reference book giving the biographies of contemporary leaders in the state of North Carolina. The book is entitled "North Carolina Lives: The Tar Heel Who's Who."

WILLIAM McELWEE MILLER retired in December, 1962, from the Presbyterian Mission in Iran after forty-three years of service. He is now living in Philadelphia.

Joining the ranks of the retired, LEWIS BERKLEY COX has recently returned from an extensive trip. After World War I, Berkley received his law degree from Washington and Lee in 1920. He became general counsel for the Aetna Life Insurance Company, which he served until his retirement.

For seven years J. GOODLOE JACKSON has served on the Alleghany County Board of Education. This is also his fourth year as the presiding officer of the Board.

ROGER BEAR of Cincinnati could not remain in retirement long. He recently was lured into a job in Kentucky of supervising the building of some fifteen reinforced concrete bridges on the Western Kentucky Turnpike. Roger reports that he is "having a ball"—enjoying the outside and doing what I love to do most."

DAVID BROCKMAN WINFREY, after thirty years in responsible government positions in Washington, D.C., has retired and is now living a well earned rest in Martinsburg, West Virginia. Dave has been enthusiastically interested in Washington and Lee for many many years.

DR. RICHARD W. FOWLKES of Richmond, Virginia, is now Professor Emeritus of Dermatology at the Medical College of Virginia. He retired ten years ago after thirty years of impressive service to the Medical College.

Having retired in November, 1960, PAUL C. THOMAS writes that the past several years have been "the happiest years of my life." He stays busy doing the things he always wanted to do. His grandson, Paul C. Thomas, III, is a plebe at West Point.

JUDGE PAUL D. BARNES has retired from the Supreme Court of Florida and also from his position as professor of law at the University of Miami. He does serve at times, however, as a retired justice on the Courts of Appeals and the Circuit Court in Miami.

1918

In March COL. LYON M. BRANDON, Veterans Employment Representative for Mississippi, received a 30-year pin to mark the 50th anniversary also of the Department of Labor.

COL. GEORGE T. MADISON was honored in February when the State Board of Education of Louisiana held a special luncheon meeting to award him a plaque in appreciation of his service for thirty-two years on the board. Education officials from over the state were on hand to honor Col. Madison, and he was also presented a gift and was awarded the president's plaque from various presidents of Louisiana colleges and universities. In a lengthy editorial paying tribute to Col. Madison, the Shreveport Times states, "Few men in Louisiana—none that we can recall at the moment—have served the cause of public education in this state so long and so faithfully."

After forty-one years with Sun Oil Company, SIM B. CHRISTY, JR., has retired and lives in Roswell, New Mexico. The Christy family is co-owner of the Coca-Cola Bottling Works in Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

Except for occasional consultation in the field of preventive medicine, DR. HARRY

E. HANDLEY has retired and is now devoting a major portion of his time to research and to writing a local history. Dr. Handley is living in Lewisburg, West Virginia.

JESSE W. BENTON has been practicing law in Danville, Virginia, since July 15, 1915. He has a three-year old grandson who, he hopes, will be the third generation to enter Washington and Lee.

DR. DANIEL BLAIN has been named director of psychiatric planning and development at the Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia, as of April 1, 1963. In his new post, Dr. Blain will be responsible for widening and co-ordinating with public and private agencies the Pennsylvania Hospital's psychiatric services. He is also clinical professor of psychiatry at the School of Medicine, University of Pennsylvania.

1922

DR. HARRY LYONS, Dean of the Medical College of Virginia's school of dentistry, was installed President of the American Association of Dental Schools at the association's 40th annual meeting in Pittsburgh in March. More than five hundred dental educators from throughout the nation attended the meeting.

JAMES MADISON practices law in Bastrop and Monroe, Louisiana. He is in the firm of Madison, Madison, Files and Garrett. The Madisons have three sons, one of whom is in the law firm with his father; a second son, John, is selling containers for International Paper Company in Texas; and the third son, George, is a sophomore at Washington and Lee.

ROGER B. JONES has been employed by Sinclair Refining Company for thirty-seven years in the legal department with offices in Atlanta, Kansas City, and now in New York.

A Tennessee judge, PEABODY HOWARD of Chattanooga, joined the College of Law faculty of Stetson University, St. Petersburg, Florida, in September. In 1934 Judge Howard was elected District Attorney General of the 6th Judicial Circuit of Tennessee and served in that capacity for ten years. He was then Chancellor of the 3rd Chancery Division, vacating this position to accept appointment as judge on the Appeals Court. After retirement in 1960, and until his acceptance of his present teaching position, Judge Howard continued to serve on call on the Court of Appeals.

J. W. McDONALD is a wholesale distributor in Memphis, Tennessee, for RCA and Whirlpool.

Banker Named to Key Position

■ ALLEN B. MORGAN has been named chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Foundation for Commercial Banks, an organization which educates the public on the aims and functions of commercial banks. In his key position, Mr. Morgan deals with the top officials in the world of finance.

Mr. Morgan joined the bond department of the First National Bank, Memphis, Tennessee, the city's oldest financial institution, shortly after graduation from Washington and Lee, and in 1937, at the age of twenty-eight, he became the youngest vice-president ever chosen by a Memphis bank.

In 1960 he was elevated to the presidency, and under his leadership the bank is now constructing a 26-story building. In addition to directing the bank and its sixteen branch banks and participating in national and regional banking groups, Mr. Morgan finds time for innumerable civic activities and is serving this year as president of the

EDWARD I. BOSTWICK is manager of the Claim Department of the Travelers Insurance Company in Richmond, Virginia. At the time he started with the Travelers in 1930 the working force in the Claims Department consisted of ten people. The strength of this department at the present time is almost one hundred.

Judge MORRIS CARPENTER MONTGOMERY was sworn in in January, 1963, for his second term of office as Chief Justice, Court of Appeals, Frankfort, Kentucky.

Dr. STANLEY F. HAMPTON engages in part-time allergy research and teaches internal medicine at Washington University School of Medicine as assistant professor of Clinical Medicine and Director of the Allergy Clinic. Dr. Hampton is also in private practice. In 1955-56 he was president of the American Academy of Allergy and a member of the Board of Directors of the Allergy Foundation of America and of the Foundation for Asthmatic Children at Tucson, Arizona.

A. L. ROBERSON, JR., has been with the credit division of the duPont Company at Wilmington, Delaware, since graduation. The Robersons have two sons, the older a senior at Washington and Lee this year.

Rep. Bill Brock, Tennessee Republican Winner

■ WILLIAM E. BROCK, III, '53, thinks there's a chance for the two-party system in the South.

So the Brock Candy Company heir from Chattanooga, with no political experience, defeated a promising New Frontiersman and became the first Republican elected to the House of Representatives from his district in 42 years. (He is one of two Washington and Lee alumni serving freshman terms as Congressmen this year. John O. Marsh, Jr., '51, a Democrat, was elected from Virginia's Seventh Congressional District.)

Brock, 32, decided in January, 1962, to run against the conservative incumbent, Rep. James B. Frazier, Jr., a Democrat who had been in Congress since 1949. When Frazier was beaten by the liberal Wilkes T. Thrasher in the party primary, it became an all-out battle between two opposing philosophies of government in the November balloting.

Using a borrowed but effective political technique, Brock enlisted his entire family as campaign workers. A younger brother, Paul K. "Pat" Brock, an alumnus of the class of '54, became his campaign manager.

Having no political experience, Brock relied on his know-how gained in working for the family business—he went at his campaign as if he were selling candy. Beginning with twenty-five helpers, he wound up with 4,000. "If you haven't got a sales force you won't get the product off the shelf," Brock says.

In a district where Republicans hadn't fielded a candidate in two previous elections, the final vote was 47,499 for Brock and 45,390 for Thrasher.

Brother Pat suggests that the GOP can make other significant Southern gains. "The primary reason the average Southern voter hasn't identified with the Republican Party," he says, "is that he has no reason to. By having a good candidate, and putting out the effort, it can be done in any area in the South."

"I kept trying to say," Bill Brock recalls, "that I was nobody's candidate but the people's."

He served in the Navy from 1953 to 1956 with the rank of lieutenant (j.g.) and is a member of the Navy Reserve (Ready) with the rank of lieutenant. In addition to his business activities, he has served numerous civic organizations in Chattanooga and has served as a Sunday School teacher and as a member of the Christian Education Council of the Lookout Mountain Tennessee Presbyterian Church.

The Democrats are already labeling Brock as a one-term wonder, but the Brocks have moved to Washington anyway. Mrs. Brock is the former Laura Handly, and the little Brocks include William E., IV, five, and Oscar Handly, almost six months.

The Brock home in Chattanooga is on Lookout Mountain where one of the neighbors is Senator Estes Kefauver, up for re-election himself in 1966. Perhaps in a few years Chattanooga will be asking, "Will the real king of the mountain please stand up?"

News of the Chapters

NEW YORK

A large group of New York alumni gathered on March 21st to hear Coach Lee McLaughlin and other members of his football coaching staff. The annual chapter dinner was held at the President Restaurant.

The honored guests included backfield coach Buck Leslie, '50, defensive coach Boyd Williams, and freshman coach Dana Swan. Coach McLaughlin displayed football film in connection with his commentary. The other members of the coaching staff also made short talks.

The meeting was enthusiastically received and future plans were discussed for a repeat performance in January, 1964, when the coaching staff will be in New York City again for the NCAA meeting.

LEXINGTON

During the meeting of the Kentucky Bar Association in Lexington, Kentucky, Washington and Lee alumni of the area joined for a luncheon at the Campbell Inn on April 3. The honored guest was Dean C. P. Light, Dean of the University's Law School.

In his talk Dean Light presented an up-to-date picture of the recent developments on the University campus and particularly as they relate to the future planning of the Law School. C. W. "Bill" Swinford, '43, presided over the luncheon meeting and was toastmaster for the affair.

Among the approximately fifty alumni were distinguished attorneys throughout the state of Kentucky including William L. Wilson, '35, of Owensboro, the new 1963-64 president of the Kentucky Bar Association and Judge Morris C. Montgomery, '30, of Lawrenceburg, former chief justice and present judge of the Court of Appeals.

NEW ORLEANS

The alumni of New Orleans were pleased to have Dean of the College W. W. Pusey, III, as guest speaker on Wednesday evening, April 3 at the Country Club. A large group of alumni, together with several of the current students who were home on spring vacation and a few prospective students with their parents, were on hand to welcome Dean Pusey.

Chapter president, John H. McMillan, '42, presided at the meeting and Dean Pusey was introduced by Herbert Jahncke, Sr. In his talk Dean Pusey gave a brief but very thorough discussion on the present state of the University.

LYNCHBURG

Meeting at the Boonesboro Country Club on George Washington's birthday, the Lynchburg alumni were pleased to have as their principal speaker Dr. Edward F. Turner, head of the Physics Department at the University. Mr. James R. Caskie provided the formal introduction. Dr. Turner's remarks were entitled "New Facades, New Faces, New Fervor."

An enthusiastic group joined for the social hour preceding the dinner. Bill Washburn, the Alumni Secretary, and his wife accompanied Dr. and Mrs. Turner to the meeting. In the short business session prior to the principal address the alumni approved a very splendid financial report from treasurer, Bert Schewel. William Lynn, the outgoing president, received the following nominations for officers who were unanimously elected:

President, Robert B. Taylor, '44; Vice-president, Bertram R. Schewel, '41; and Secretary-treasurer, S. James Thompson, '57.

PENINSULA

After installation of the new officers, President I. Leake Wornom, Jr., '50, presided over the annual meeting of the Peninsula Chapter at the James River Country Club on Thursday evening, March 7th. The other officers named were: Vice President Dan Wilkinson, '38;

FRED H. NEWTON, '59, left, welcomes DR. JOHN H. WISE, professor of chemistry, to a meeting of the Peninsula Chapter. DR. WISE spoke to alumni of the Newport News area.

Secretary James Harvell, '56; and Treasurer Richard Hudgins, '55.

The large attendance made the meeting one of the most outstanding in recent years. A cocktail hour preceded the banquet where the alumni heard a talk by Dr. John H. Wise, Professor of Chemistry. He was introduced by the outgoing president, John Bowen, '51. Dr. Wise's remarks brought an up-to-date description of the new science facilities.

Bill Washburn, Alumni Secretary, was also present and made some remarks about the position of the annual Alumni Fund campaign. Color slides of the campus were shown following the banquet.

NEW RIVER-GREENBRIER

A reorganizational meeting of the New River-Greenbrier Chapter was held at the Black Knight Country Club in Beckley, West Virginia, on Thursday evening, March 14th. HIGGINS, JR., '37, Fayetteville.

'31, as the new president of the chapter.

After a social hour and banquet, Bill Washburn showed colored slides of the University campus which brought the assembled group up-to-date on the most recent additions and developments at Washington and Lee. At the suggestion of Joe Rahall a proposed meeting was planned for late July.

MEMPHIS

Southwestern University and the Memphis Alumni Chapter were co-hosts to Dean Atwood, Jr., of Washington and Lee on Thursday, February 21st. Dean Atwood participated in Southwestern's University Lecture Series by addressing the group on the subject, "Cold War Economics."

A dinner for alumni and their wives preceded the lecture, at which William Carrington Jones, president of the alumni chapter, presided.

The next morning Dean Atwood made a tour of the Southwestern campus with President Rhodes and Southwestern's Dean of Alumni Alfred O. Canon. This is the third year that Washington and Lee University has participated in this lecture series.
