ON THE COVER: A pen-and-ink rendering of the facade of McCormick Hall, the former home of the undergraduate library, and now the refurbished quarters of the School of Commerce, Economics, and Politics. The school occupied the building this fall. The drawing is by Drayton N. Smith, '74, a cum laude art graduate of W&L. He now has an art studio in Baltimore.

To alumni, parents, members of the business community, and other friends and supporters of Washington and Lee University:

This issue of the Alumni Magazine is our annual report of the achievements of the University Development Program, emphasizing not only the successes of the past year but the steady, sometimes agonizingly slow progress toward the objectives of our decade-long fund-raising effort. Our proximity to these goals is spelled out in some detail on Page 20, and I hope you will examine this important information with the same mixture of pride and concern that I feel when I consider these figures. As impressive as our achievements have been to date, the task remaining is a challenge of sobering dimension: We must raise $12.5-million by December 31, 1981. To succeed, we must attract this support at an unprecedented pace. We must succeed, for the bulk of our remaining need is endowment, that vital, permanent resource that will undergird the operation of our new facilities and the programs they support. As always, our hope for success will rest on the shoulders of a relatively small number of dedicated friends. This report acknowledges our gratitude to these friends, even as it calls attention to our urgent need for even greater acts of generous endorsement.

From time to time, the report issue of the Alumni Magazine has focused attention on other aspects of Washington and Lee's constant efforts to merit your pride and support. As competitive as private colleges and universities may be for philanthropic assistance, they are equally competitive in their quest for good students. We hope that the following article by our admissions director, Bill Hartog, will provide you with new insights as to just how Washington and Lee is confronting the challenge in undergraduate admissions. His report reflects a new vitality in our student recruiting efforts that is producing highly gratifying results. While the emphasis here is on undergraduate admissions, it is important to note that our Law School admissions program continues to attract the strong flow of applications from highly qualified candidates that has become characteristic of this important part of our University.

I invite your careful attention to this magazine issue. Its content is important, not only for what it says of the present and recent past, but for what it says about Washington and Lee's future. There are busy days and hard work ahead for us all.

By virtually every yardstick, 1980 was a banner year in admissions at Washington and Lee. We had more applications (1,413) than in any year since 1966, and a 30 percent increase over the number a year ago. By objective measurement, the Class of '84 presents the strongest qualitative academic profile the University has seen since 1973.

Only in one respect was the 1980 admissions picture less than successful: financial aid.

For the first time in four years, our resources were insufficient to meet the demonstrated need of all the applicants we accepted.

Among the 343 freshmen Washington and Lee enrolled in September were 11 National Merit Scholars; a year ago we enrolled six—a W&L record—and were delighted. This year our freshman class includes 15 young men who were valedictorians of their secondary-school graduating classes, and five who were salutatorians. Mean Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores this fall were 560 (verbal) and 600 (math), up 16 points from a year ago, and the highest since 1973. Eighty percent of the new freshmen graduated in the top two-fifths of their classes, and 31 percent were in the top tenth.

In nonacademic terms, the Class of '84 is in many ways similar to its predecessor classes. Sixty percent are graduates of public schools, 40 percent of private schools. Three quarters of them come from 10 states—in order, Virginia, Texas, New York, Maryland, New Jersey, Florida, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Connecticut and Georgia. Seventy percent of the members of the class have indicated they plan careers in just three fields: business, law, and medicine. Forty-two percent of the new freshmen report their parents' income exceeds $50,000; conversely, 20 percent of the freshmen are receiving some form of need-based financial aid from the University.

The dilemma that faces Washington and Lee in the '80s—and beyond—is this: As strong as we are (and as strong as our reputation may be), we cannot assume that we will automatically attract classes of such strength in the years ahead. This warning derives in part from a simple look at some of the statistics that describe the portion of the population that will reach college age in this decade.

First, the numbers themselves will shrink dramatically—by 23.8 percent.

That prospect is compounded by the corollary fact that institutions such as Washington and Lee—private, undergraduate colleges, with high academic standards, comparatively high tuition, and geographic, academic and

Admissions: Strong Today, But . . .

The Dilemma of the 1980s
Makes It Clear That W&L
Must Broaden Its Bases

economic bases that are narrow in some degree—are the most vulnerable to that decline in sheer numbers of students of college age. Unlike other kinds of colleges and universities, we cannot generate substantial income through auxiliary programs such as continuing education or part-time undergraduate or graduate programs. For better or worse, we are an institution that relies entirely on the reputation and appeal of our school to bring to us a class each year that satisfies our standards in qualitative and quantitative terms.

Given Washington and Lee’s heritage and prestige, our challenge would be an easy one if we viewed it in terms simply of filling the dormitories. But our concern goes far beyond sheer numbers. We want to—and shall—continue to require of each of our students an exceptionally strong background of academic distinction (as reflected in test scores, class standing, and other measurements) and promise for unusual day-to-day achievement in college; beyond that, we expect them to be superior both in strength of personality and in commitment to their fellow men. These are, in fact, imperatives if Washington and Lee wishes not merely to survive but to continue to lead in American higher education.

We may perhaps come to a fuller understanding of the dimensions of our challenge if we examine the demographic characteristics of this fall’s freshman class in relation to the entire “pool” in our principal 10-state area.

In Virginia, there were 37,206 high-school seniors who took the SAT and may thus be considered “college-bound.” But fewer than half of them—16,486—were men. And of the men, only 2,005 scored at or above the W&L averages on the SAT and ranked in the top 40 percent of their classes. And of those 2,005 in Virginia, only 891 came from families with an income sufficient to pay Washington and Lee’s tuition.

Elsewhere, the analysis yields similar results. In Maryland, an initial population of 29,408 diminishes to just 779. In Pennsylvania, where 94,575 students took the SAT, only 1,448 emerge. In Texas, the pool begins with 54,138 but decreases to 891.

In all 10 states, what at the outset began as an undifferentiated pool of 524,895 high-school seniors, actually offered just 9,241 prospects when considerations of admissibility to Washington and Lee and financial capability are imposed.

These are 1980 figures, of course, and thus do not even reflect the precipitous decline in college-age population that awaits us (and every other college) in the ’80s.

It thus becomes clear—dramatically clear—that if

Washington and Lee wishes to maintain and improve its position as a truly outstanding undergraduate liberal arts institution, we will have to broaden our geographic, academic and financial bases. We do not intend to begin enrolling women in the undergraduate level; nor are we prepared to lower our standards of academic and personal quality.

Instead, Washington and Lee has begun in the very recent past to expand its efforts significantly to reach larger numbers of qualified prospective students from diverse backgrounds.

We have expanded our admissions staff; this year we will visit more than 500 secondary schools in 33 states. At the same time, under the direction of James D. Farrar, we have established alumni admissions programs in more than 50 cities and, using the computer, are able to provide the names and addresses of students in each city who have been identified as reasonable admissions prospects.

On campus, we have begun providing prospective students more—and more direct—contact with and exposure to our faculty and our current students. We encourage every prospect and applicant to visit Lexington not only for an interview and campus tour but also to sit in on classes, to meet W&L's professors and generally to explore life at W&L for a day or more. We have reorganized the Student Recruitment Committee to include members from every discipline in order to match the interests of prospective students.

We have adopted the concept of "rolling" admissions and financial aid; this means, essentially, that we no longer wait arbitrarily until April 1 to notify students whom we have accepted.

In publications, we have developed an extensive array of new literature, including an expanded introductory Admissions Handbook (now a handsome 48-page viewbook) and a series of individual brochures describing specific departments. All our admissions materials unabashedly address W&L's special strengths in curriculum, faculty (and individuality of attention), facilities, the Honor System, our current students, our alumni.

There was a time when colleges simply erected the finest buildings, assembled the best faculty, and devised the broadest curriculum—and thereby attracted the top students. Those assets are just as crucial today. But the declining numbers of students, and particularly superior students, has forced all private institutions (and many public institutions) to develop admissions programs that are far more extensive and aggressive than they used to be.

The search for exceptional students today requires an understanding of national trends and, more importantly, a knowledge of Washington and Lee's special place in the community of higher education. Accordingly, we undertake continual research into our distinctive pool of potential students in order to develop more and better prospects. In doing so, we have adapted certain techniques from the business world such as direct mail and net cost analysis. These new procedures have measurably helped us identify prospective students and convert the potential application into the actual.

While our efforts so far have brought impressive results, at least on a short-term basis, and while we have already begun to realize a broader geographic and academic mix in our student body, a severe threat lies in the limitations of our financial-aid resources.

Approximately 175 accepted students sought and were judged to require financial aid this year; the computed total need was nearly $400,000. Though all were students of sufficiently high caliber, academically and personally, we were able to reach only 135 with an estimated expenditure of $300,000.

In short, many students who wished to attend W&L, and were qualified to do so, were denied the opportunity solely because of our financial limitations.

While financial assistance should never be considered a right among applicants, a college of the national prominence and reputation of W&L must recognize an obligation to enroll a class of financial diversity as well as academic and geographic diversity. Our current award level of just 20 percent of the student population falls far short of that achieved by the "prestige" institutions with which we are continually compared, and with which we compare ourselves.

We continue to cherish and nurture our relationships with secondary schools and areas which, for years, have been important sources of students for this institution. We have begun also to attempt, however, to develop and strengthen successful relationships in new regions and cities and schools. In our admissions travel, we continue to seek more applications from public and private schools alike. We will continue to seek greater numbers of scholarship applicants, while also seeking greater numbers of students whose families are able to afford the full cost of private, higher education. The sole common denominator continues to be the strength of our commitment to the very high caliber of student and individual that this University has historically enjoyed and richly deserves.

Washington and Lee Development Program Enters Final Stages: Only a Few Months Remain

Washington and Lee University—her trustees, alumni, parents and friends—has been engaged in a comprehensive development program which was announced publicly in 1972 and is to be finished by the end of 1981. As of June 30, 1980, commitments for the purposes of the program reached a total of $50.8 million with 18 months remaining to accomplish the following announced and critically important capital objectives:

To complete the announced 1981 requirement for endowment growth	$ 8,619,167
To complete the funding for the new home for the School of Commerce, Economics, and Politics	1,972,917
To provide funding for the renovation of Tucker and Newcomb Halls	1,500,000
To complete the funding for campus improvements (walkways, landscaping, utilities) and capital changes	250,029
	$12,342,113*

As has always been the case, Annual Giving is the flagship of the fleet in the overall success of the development program. The results of the Annual Fund for 1980-81 will be added to the above capital objectives in accounting for Washington and Lee's total achievement.

(*As of the time of publication of this annual report—September 30—$171,605 in additional commitments have been received, making the total remaining objective $12,170,508)

The Robert E. Lee Associates

The Robert E. Lee Associates was established by the Board of Trustees in 1967 to identify and recognize leadership in support of the University's educational program through the Annual Fund. Alumni and friends are cordially invited to join this fellowship.

Qualification for Membership: An alumnus, parent, or friend may join the Robert E. Lee Associates by contributing $1,000 or more to the University through its Annual Fund for support of current operations in the educational and general budget. This gift may be paid in one or more installments during the fiscal year—July 1 to June 30.

General's Council: A Lee Associate becomes a member of the General's Council for cumulative gifts totaling $10,000 or more in 12 consecutive years or less, or for a pledge to accomplish this result. Thus, a donor may fulfill this requirement by giving—or by pledging to give—$1,000 in any 10 years out of 12, by making larger gifts at less frequent intervals, or by a single gift of $10,000 or more.

Listed here are members of the General's Council and those Lee Associates who made a gift to the Annual Fund of $1,000 or more during 1979-80.

The Annual Fund: Academic Classes

The Annual Fund is Washington and Lee's most vital source of gift income. Again in 1979-80 the Annual Fund exceeded its goal and recorded an increase over the previous year (1978-79) of 8%. Listed here are the names of alumni who contributed to the 1979-80 Annual Fund. Their gifts helped Washington and Lee continue the high quality of its educational program. The heading Lee Associate indicates gifts of $1,000 or more made in 1979-80; the heading Colonnade Club indicates gifts of $100-$999 made in 1979-80.

The Annual Fund: Parents

Gifts by parents are especially significant because they represent a generous "extra" investment in the quality of education offered by Washington and Lee. The University is especially grateful for this demonstration of confidence. Listed here are the names of parents who contributed to the 1979-80 Annual Fund. The heading Lee Associate indicates gifts of $1,000 or more made in 1979-80; the heading Colonnade Club indicates gifts of $100-$999 made in 1979-80. The 1979-80 Parents Fund exceeded its goal and showed an increase of 6% over last year's fund.

The Annual Fund: Friends

Each year, Washington and Lee receives many gifts in support of current operations from persons who are neither alumni nor parents. Most of the gifts from these "friends" are unrestricted and are given in the form of direct grants or in the form of memorials. Some are designated for student financial aid to be awarded during each academic year. Washington and Lee is deeply grateful for these gifts. The heading Lee Associate indicates gifts of $1,000 or more made in 1979-80; Colonnade Club indicates gifts of $100-$999 made in 1979-80.

Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges

A record of $2,116,180 was contributed by business and industry to 12 private Virginia colleges through the VFIC during 1979-80. Washington and Lee University's share was $193,121. (Member colleges' shares are based on undergraduate enrollment.)

Under the direction of a board that includes 35 business leaders and the presidents of the 12 independent colleges, the VFIC enlisted more than 1,000 supporters, primarily corporations doing business in Virginia who are concerned with strengthening private higher education. Although, because of space limitations, the full listing of donor sources published annually in the VFIC annual report is not repeated here, Washington and Lee acknowledges with gratitude the concern and leadership of the companies, foundations, and individuals, who made generous contributions through the VFIC.

Business and Industry

Washington and Lee University was assisted in large measure during 1979-80 by direct grants from corporations in addition to corporate assistance received through the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges (VFIC). Investments by private business in private education take on special meaning and importance. The total of these gifts during the 1979-80 year was $57,825.

Irrevocable Deferred Gifts

The following persons have made estate-planned gifts or gifts commonly known as "deferred." The term deferred denotes the fact that immediate income tax advantages and estate benefits accrue at the time the gifts are made even though (except with gifts of life insurance) income is retained for the donor or the donor's family. The three main forms of deferred giving at Washington and Lee are the Pooled Income Fund, the Unitrust and the Annuity Trust.

Foundations

Because a foundation's grant to an educational institution is a highly respected public endorsement of the institution's leadership and educational program, Washington and Lee acknowledges with special gratitude the gifts it received from foundations in support of current operations in 1979-80.
