At Long Last— An Alumni House!

Work Begins on Remodeling of a Former Faculty Home on the Campus with Spring Completion Date; President Nuckols Announces Special Fund Drive

AN ALUMNI HOUSE located on the Washington and Lee University campus will be ready for occupancy and use by the Spring of 1966.

Work began on September 15th to remodel completely the former faculty home at 34 University Place, a large, two-story residence on Lexington's Letcher Avenue—the street extending toward VMI from the Tucker Hall end of the Colonnade.

For many years the home was occupied by the late Dr. Fitzgerald Flournoy and his family. Owned by the University, the home was made available to the alumni association by the University's Board of Trustees following Dr. Flournoy's death in January, 1964.

The renovation is scheduled for completion in six months, in time for the new center to serve anniversary class reunions in May and the annual alumni events at Commencement in early June.

The cost of the project, including landscaping and furnishings, is expected to run slightly more than $100,000. A special fund campaign will be conducted among alumni during October, November, and December to provide support for the house project.

Such an Alumni House will fill a need of long-standing for Washington and Lee and its more than 11,000 living alumni. E. Marshall Nuckols, '33, of Camden, N. J., the 1965-66 president of Washington and Lee Alumni, Inc., says the new faculty will be "a place we can hang our hats, find familiar faces, and feel at home."

"All returning alumni have had the feeling at one time or another of being just a little lost on a campus that we once knew so well—a feeling we need never have again when the project is completed," Nuckols added.

H. Graham Morison, '30, Washington, D. C., attorney who will head the house fund campaign, sees the new Alumni House as a timely and essential strengthening of the bonds among alumni and the University.

"The greatest strength of Washington and Lee University is the quality of its relations with its alumni," he declared. "Financial endowment, ancient brick and mortar, quality of faculty and student body, history and tradition—all are ageless and important assets of our University. But Washington and Lee's indispensable resource lies in its widely dispersed alumni. Without their informed and continued interest, guidance, and support, its other assets will not sustain its important role in our nation."

The house will function as a center for all alumni activities on the campus, such as Homecoming, class and general reunions, meetings of the Alumni Board of Directors and the Alumni Fund Council, and various other special events. It will also provide a permanent, adequate headquarters for the staff and administrative offices of the alumni association, now located in cramped quarters on the first floor of Washington Hall. The Alumni Board of Directors hopes to work out arrangements with a faculty committee which would permit and

Members of the Alumni Board of Directors examine the architects' drawing of the new Alumni House prior to giving final approval to plans for renovation of the former faculty home and for a $100,000 fund drive to support the project. encourage the use of the Alumni House for appropriate University functions when these would not conflict with alumni use.

The Alumni House is an outgrowth of more than a year of careful study and planning by the Alumni Board of Directors and a special ad hoc house committee of board members. Besides the current president, past presidents E. Alton Sartor, Jr., '38, of Shreveport, La., and Dr. John D. Battle, '34, of Cleveland, Ohio, were leaders in getting the project started. Sartor, Robert A. Fulwiler, Jr., '25, of Wilmington, Del., and E. Stewart Epley, '49, of New York made up the ad hoc committee.

The alumni directors worked closely with alumni Executive Secretary William C. Washburn, University President Fred C. Cole and other members of the University administration, the University Board of Trustees, and the University architects, Clark, Nexsen, and Owen of Lynchburg, Va.

Plans and specifications were devised, and various plans for financing the project were discussed by the alumni board and their colleagues at the University. Final approval of all plans came at the June meeting of the alumni board. The contract was awarded to the Lexington firm of W. W. Coffey & Son, general contractors who have worked successfully for Washington and Lee on numerous other building and remodeling projects.

The decision to remodel rather than build was made after the University architects estimated that a new building to provide the same space would cost twice as much as the expense of renovation.

Simultaneously with the start of actual work on the remodeling, the fund campaign to support the project swung into action. In a letter to all chapter presidents. President Nuckols announced the appointment of Mr. Morison as the national chairman of the house fund campaign.

In charting plans for the house fund campaign, particular concern was expressed by the Alumni Board of Directors and the 1965-66 Alumni Fund Council as to the effect such a capital campaign might have on the vital annual program of alumni giving. Consideration was given to a merger of the two efforts, but a final decision was made in favor of two separate fund campaigns.

Executive Secretary Washburn, on whose shoulders rests the administrative responsibility for both the house fund drive and the annual Alumni Fund, explained the decision for two, separate campaigns in this way:

"Each fund effort will serve a distinctive and equally important purpose. The House Fund campaign is a capital campaign to provide a critically-needed facility for alumni use. It will be an intensive, one-shot solicitation of all alumni. The Annual Fund will continue to function as the vital year to year support which our alumni so generously extend to the ongoing work of the University itself, the support of higher education at Washington and Lee. Our dual effort this year is much like the situation most of us have encountered in our churches, where a building campaign often runs concurrently with the annual every-member canvass."

"We hope our alumni will recognize how important both the Alumni House and the Annual Fund are to the association and to the University," Washburn added.

A special feature of the House fund campaign is the plan to concentrate its major effort through the association's forty-three active alumni chapters.

In President Nuckols' letter to chapter presidents, he explained how the alumni board had declined the University Board of Trustees'

Architects' floor plans suggest the changes which will be made in converting the faculty residence into an Alumni House.

offer to underwrite the complete costs of an Alumni House. Said Nuckols:

"This (the Alumni House) is one of the most important steps the Alumni have ever taken in strengthening their ties with each other and with the University. Unless these ties can be strengthened, Washington and Lee will experience great difficulty in retaining its place of leadership during the difficult years that lie ahead for independent colleges. Its alumni are the University's single greatest source of strength.

"For this reason your Alumni Directors declined a University offer to provide the funds for this Alumni House. We believe this project will be much more meaningful to the Alumni and will more fully achieve its purpose if the Alumni themselves, rather than the University, provide the funds."

President Nuckols outlined the costs involved and explained to the chapter presidents how the campaign will center around chapter efforts.

"This will give us an unusual opportunity to provide chapters with a project that can stimulate interest and enthusiasm among their local membership," he said, adding, "This is the first time we have called on the individual chapters to take on this type of responsibility. We know we can count on you for full cooperation and we thank you very much."

Fund Chairman Morison's letter to chapters explained details of how the campaign would be organized, and he echoed President Nuckols' theme of alumni participation in the project:

"Washington and Lee's future is our concern, and we should create this place of welcome to alumni on the campus that will so significantly mark our identity with our University. By this act, we will make a basic contribution to the preservation and endowment of our University's 'indispensable resource'—its alumni."

Here's how the House Fund campaign will be conducted:

The 6,551 alumni living in areas which have active chapter organizations will be solicited personally by workers from the chapters. The remaining 4,650 alumni who reside outside the areas served by chapters will be contacted by mail, although several additional areas of personal solicitations will be organized in cities where substantial numbers of Washington and Lee men live but who are not organized on a chapter basis.

Chairman Morison's letter to chapter presidents asked them to appoint campaign chairmen for their organizations and to set up teams of workers who will make the personal calls on other alumni.

Chapters will have considerable freedom in the details of their local campaign organization and procedures. Some have indicated interest in special luncheons or receptions to organize or kick-off local campaigns.

Each chapter will work toward a definite local goal which is to be determined by the national campaign leaders in consultation with the area chairman.

Special materials will be provided for the use of chapter workers and their team leaders and chairman. These include a campaign brochure, pledge cards, and related materials. Alumni outside chapter areas will receive copies of the Alumni House brochure and pledge card by mail.

Target date for completion of the personal solicitations in each chapter area is December 10.

Chairman Morison is expected to appoint from eight to ten vice-chairmen to assist him in directing the national campaign. Each vice-chairman would coordinate work of chapter leaders within given geographic or regional areas.

Alumni Secretary Washburn is confident that the house fund campaign will be completed rapidly and successfully.

"The amount needed to establish the Alumni House is not large in terms of the goals of many capital campaigns," he explained. "But we hope that our campaign organization will be as effective as the similar effort made several years ago in the University Development Program."

Washburn emphasized that the $100,000 needed will provide no frills or luxuries, but it will enable Washington and Lee alumni to enjoy tasteful comfort in a home of their own when they visit their Alma Mater.

"I believe every alumnus wants to come back to Washington and Lee as often as he can," Washburn adds. "With the Alumni House, we'll have a place to make him more welcome than ever, a place close to the campus where he can relax, meet friends, and enjoy his return to the University to the fullest extent possible."

Washburn also was enthusiastic about the ways in which the new Alumni House would improve the efficiency of the association's headquarters.

"We'll have adequate working space for our secretaries, for our files, for our office machines, and for storage," he explained. "We'll be able to do a better job in virtually every phase of our regular work, and most important, we'll be able to serve the individual alumnus and the various chapters in better fashion than we've been able to do previously."

And he said the projected use of the Alumni House for appropriate faculty functions will help strengthen the ties between alumni and the faculty.

"I believe we're moving into an area of new alumni interest in the University, an area of new alumni concern for its future progress, and I believe the presence of our Alumni House and its use by Washington and Lee men will be a positive factor in sustaining and encouraging this new interest," Washburn said.

"I hope every alumnus will start making his plans now to return to Washington and Lee next spring and make use of our new home at the very first opportunity," he said.

New House Will Feature Comfort, Utility

WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY alumni's new home will serve a variety of purposes, and the remodeling and renovation necessary to adapt the former faculty residence for these purposes are substantial.

The architects' rendering of the way the Alumni House will appear is carried on the cover of this magazine. On another page there is a floor plan of the building, showing both the layout of the old house and the new arrangements to accommodate the association's offices and the general purpose uses of the building.

The Alumni House is and will be a big house. The lounges, foyer, and card room of the first floor will provide ample space for reunions, receptions, parties, and other social activities. In good weather, porches which will encircle the first floor on three sides will provide additional room, and it is expected that approximately 450 guests can be accommodated at one time with all facilities in use.

A kitchen will be equipped to facilitate serving light luncheons and other refreshments on a catered basis. The necessary appointments, including sink, stove, refrigerator, and other appliances, will be functional but not elaborate. The kitchen will also have facilities for uncatered serving of soft drinks, set-ups, and coffee and tea.

A movable bar is planned for use on the porches or in the lounges as needed. When not in use it can be stored in the kitchen's serving pantry.

Adequate rest room facilities will be located conveniently.

In addition to serving as a site for receptions, parties, and other planned events, the Alumni House will be a place for informal socializing and for meetings of alumni during weekends when appreciable numbers of alumni are on campus. And the House will be a place for the casual alumni visitor to check in, be welcomed by the alumni secretary, and relax with his family during their visit to the University.

No effort is being made now to provide overnight guest facilities at the Alumni House.

Decorations and furnishings for the lounges and other first floor rooms will be tasteful and comfortable. Materials of interest to alumni, such as back issues of the Calyx, the University catalogue, and the Alumni Magazine, will be available for browsing.

The second floor will be the center of the Alumni Association's routine administration. Executive Secretary Washburn's office will be located here, along with the secretarial offices, the active files, and the equipment necessary for carrying on the varied activities of the Alumni Office.

A Board Room will be furnished to provide an appropriate meeting place for the Alumni Board of Directors, the Alumni Fund Council, and other special groups.

Access to the second floor will include a ramp at the rear of the house which will facilitate the easy moving of magazines and other printed materials into the workrooms for addressing, packaging, and other activities.

Part of the remodeling includes special structural reinforcements to support heavy office equipment used by the Alumni Office and to soundproof the operation of this equipment from the other parts of the building.

Provision for air-conditioning of the entire house is being made, but at the outset only the second floor, where year-around use is planned, will be cooled. When air-conditioning is added to the first floor, it will be possible to regulate temperatures separately at the different levels.

The attic level will be used for dead files and storage.

Landscaping will include terraces and walls for the yard facing on Letcher Avenue and for parking at the back for the Alumni Office staff and a limited number of visitors' cars.

Maintenance, repair, and utility costs of the Alumni House will be borne by the University, which supports the Alumni Office to this extent in its present location.

Alumni Fund Council Chairman GEORGE M. PERSINGER, '51.

Annual Fund Seeks $225,000

A GOAL OF nearly one-quarter of a million dollars has been set for the 1965-66 annual Alumni Fund Council of Washington and Lee Alumni, Inc.

Meeting in Lexington in early August, the Council agreed unanimously on a $225,000 target for the forthcoming year, and again they agreed to seek 100 per cent participation among Washington and Lee alumni.

George M. Persinger, '51, Lexington men's clothing store owner, was elected chairman of the six-member council. Serving with Persinger are William B. Wisdom, '21, of New Orleans, William S. Hubbard, '50, of Roanoke, and J. Maurice Miller, '45, of Richmond, members of the 1964-65 council. New members on the body are Kiah T. Ford, '41, and J. Raine Pettyjohn, Jr., both of Lynchburg.

In planning the 1965-66 Alumni Fund, the council faced up to two critical challenges:

—the necessity of conducting the annual giving effort almost concurrently with the campaign to raise over $100,000 for the Alumni House.

—the need to raise the sights of Washington and Lee alumni giving although the 1964-65 campaign, despite setting new records in funds received and numbers of contributors, did fall short of its $210,000 goal. (See Pages 26-27 for a report on the 1964-65 Fund.)

The council discussed at length the possibility of a merger of the annual Alumni Fund with the House Fund, but it concluded that two separate efforts would better serve the interests of the Association and the University.

Chairman Persinger was authorized to act as the council's representative on the Alumni House Committee where he would help coordinate the work of the two different fund drives.

The nature of the 1965-66 annual fund solicitation will follow closely the same successful pattern of previous Alumni Funds. In charting a plan for the Fund, the council sought to concentrate the major campaign effort for December, 1965, and the first months of 1966.

"Hopefully, by the time the annual fund drive begins its major activities, the House Fund will have been completed successfully," Chairman Persinger explained. "We want to avoid the possibility of our alumni confusing the nature, goals, and purposes of the two campaigns."

Persinger underscored the importance of success in each campaign, and he expressed confidence that Washington and Lee men would rally to the support of each.

"We have a good, hard-working Alumni Fund Council this year," he pointed out. "We've got men on the council who are bringing in fresh new ideas about the way our campaigns can be improved, and I am optimistic that this will be the best fund year ever."

"Every member of this council is impressed by the almost daily accounts in our papers about the mounting needs of higher education in this country," he said. "We see a responsive Congress and responsive legislatures moving to meet many of these needs, but we realize that Washington and Lee is not helped by this response. And we realize the responsibility that we as alumni share to help our University in its progress. It is a very sober and challenging thought that just to keep up, Washington and Lee must move ahead more rapidly than ever before."

Dr. Huston St. Clair Elected As New Rector

Dr. Hutcheson Retires from the Board
Of Trustees and John Stemmons of Dallas
Is Chosen as a New Member; Dr. St. Clair
Holds Position Once Occupied by His Father

DR. HUSTON ST. CLAIR, '22, of Tazewell, Va., has been elected Rector of the Board of Trustees of Washington and Lee University.

Dr. St. Clair succeeds Dr. J. Morrison Hutcheson, '02, of Richmond, who has retired as rector and as a member of the University's board. Dr. Hutcheson became a trustee of the University in 1935 and he has served as rector since 1962.

Dr. St. Clair was named to the Washington and Lee Board in 1943.

The University also announced that John M. Stemmons of Dallas, Tex., has been elected to membership on the board of trustees. A Dallas industrialist and civic leader, Stemmons is a member of Washington and Lee's class of 1931.

The University's announcement followed the regular mid-summer meeting of the board of trustees held in late July at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

University President Fred C. Cole commented:

"Dr. Hutcheson has served Washington and Lee as a trustee for 30 years, and in this time he has been instrumental in effecting great improvements in the University's academic program and its physical facilities. His colleagues on the board and his friends among the faculty and alumni regret most sincerely that considerations of general health compel him to end his active participation in the affairs of the University.

"Dr. St. Clair is eminently qualified to continue the distinguished leadership characteristic of this board. His deep interest in Washington and Lee, and his close working relationship with the University in a number of important areas, underscore the wisdom of the Board in choosing him as its new rector.

"Mr. Stemmons' election as a new member is a most commendable choice. He will bring to the board's deliberations a vast knowledge of sound business and management techniques. Above all, his interest in the progress of Washington and Lee is profound."

As rector, Dr. St. Clair follows in the footsteps of his father, George Walter St. Clair, '90, who was rector from 1928 until his death in 1939, having become a member of the Board in 1901.

The new rector, who is a native of Staunton, Va., received his B.A. degree from Washington and Lee in 1922. In 1926 he graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, and for six years he practiced medicine in Philadelphia and Bluefield, W. Va.

Dr. St. Clair became affiliated with the Jewell Ridge Coal Corp. in 1932, and in 1939 he succeeded his father as president of the firm. Dr. St. Clair continues in this position, and also is president of the Jewell Ridge Sales Co., Inc. He also has been associated with numerous other industrial and banking concerns as an officer and director.

From 1944 until 1946, Dr. St. Clair was president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, and he is currently a member of the executive committee of the Virginia Manufacturers Assn. and a member of the board of the National Coal Assn. He is an elder in the Presbyterian Church.

As a Washington and Lee trustee, Dr. St. Clair has served as a member of the board's executive committee, and he is one of two trustees who regularly participate in the selection of George F. Baker Scholarship recipients at the University. In 1959-60, Dr. St. Clair was a leader in the University's development program which provided capital funds for the construction of new science and journalism facilities at Washington and Lee.

Dr. St. Clair, who is 65, is married to the former Janet McClure Hardie of Wilmington, Del. A daughter, Mrs. William Bussey, and a son, Huston St. Clair, Jr., live in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Washington and Lee's newest trustee is a native of Dallas and the first Texan to serve on the University's board. Stemmons is president of Industrial Properties Corporation, developers of a 1,100-acre Dallas industrial area that now contains 1,200 firms.

Returning from Washington and Lee to Dallas in 1931, Stemmons affiliated with a land development firm headed by his father. In 1946, he and his brother, L. Storey Stemmons, also a Washington and Lee alumnus, established the Industrial Properties Corporation.

Stemmons is currently general campaign chairman of the Dallas County United Fund, and is immediate past president of the Dallas Citizens Council and the Dallas Rotary Club. He is also chairman of the Dallas County Flood Control District and the Episcopal Diocesan Revolving Fund. He is a director of more than a dozen Dallas business, civic, and religious organizations.

Stemmons, who is 54, is married to the former Ruth Thomas Stemmons of Bedford, Va. A daughter, Ruth Allison Stemmons, is a graduate of Sweet Briar College, and John M. Stemmons, Jr., is a senior at the University of Colorado.

The retiring rector, Dr. Hutcheson, graduated from Washington and Lee in 1902, received his M.D. degree at the Medical College of Virginia in 1909. He joined the JOHN STEMMONS of Dallas, Tex., the University Board of Trustees' newest member.

Medical College faculty in 1911 and subsequently became professor of therapeutics and professor of clinical medicine. Since his retirement from teaching, he has been associated with his son, Dr. James M. Hutcheson, Jr., in medical practice in Richmond, specializing in internal medicine.

Dr. Hutcheson, who is 82, is a native of Rockbridge County. Among his various professional associations he has been particularly active in the American College of Physicians, in which he has served as governor, regent, vice president, and master.

Washington and Lee University's Board of Trustees now includes, besides Dr. St. Clair and Mr. Stemmons, Joseph E. Birnie of Atlanta, James Stewart Buxton of Memphis, James R. Caskie of Lynchburg, Christopher T. Chenery of New York, Mrs. Alfred I. duPont of Wilmington, John F. Hendon of Birmingham, Homer A. Holt of Charleston, W. Va., Joseph L. Lanier of West Point, Ga., Joseph T. Lykes, Jr., of New Orleans, Lewis F. Powell, Jr., of Richmond, the Reverend John N. Thomas of Richmond, and Judge John Minor of New Orleans.

TRUSTEE DR. JOHN N. THOMAS, '24, left, presents DR. J. MORRISON HUTCHESON, '02, with an engraved silver tray from his colleagues upon the Board of Trustees upon DR. HUTCHESON'S retirement as Rector and as a Trustee. The tray carries the signatures of all members of the Board.

Promotions Are Announced For Seven Faculty Members

PROMOTIONS for seven members of the College faculty were announced in June by Dr. William W. Pusey, III, dean of the College.

Promoted from associate professor to professor are Dr. Sidney M. B. Coulling, '48, English; Dr. Edward B. Hamer, Romance languages; Dr. J. Keith Shillington, chemistry; and Dr. William J. Watt, chemistry.

Assistant professors promoted to associate professorships included Dr. L. Randlett Emmons, biology; and Dr. Samuel J. Kozak, geology. Dr. H. Robert Huntley, instructor in English, become an assistant professor.

All new ranks are effective in September, Dean Pusey said.

Dr. Coulling, 41, is a 1948 graduate of Washington and Lee who received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of North Carolina. He joined the Washington and Lee faculty in 1956.

Dr. Hamer, 40, is an A.B. graduate of Wofford College and holds advanced degrees from the University of Maryland and the University of North Carolina. He came to Washington and Lee in 1954.

Dr. Shillington, 44, received his B.S. degree at Iowa State University and his Ph.D. at Cornell University. He was appointed to the Washington and Lee faculty in 1953.

Dr. Watt, 40, joined Washington and Lee's faculty in 1955, and received his Ph.D. degree from Cornell University a year later. He is a B.S. graduate of Davidson College.

Dr. Emmons, 38, holds a B.S. degree from Trinity College and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Virginia. He has been at Washington and Lee since 1961.

Dr. Kozak, 34, received his B.S. degree at Bates College, his M.S. at Brown University, and his Ph.D. at the State University of Iowa. He first joined the Washington and Lee faculty in 1958, and returned in 1961 after receiving his Ph.D. degree.

Dr. Huntley, 37, received his Ph.D. degree in June at the University of Wisconsin, where he also holds the M.A. degree. His B.A. was earned at Wisconsin State University. He joined Washington and Lee's faculty in 1960.

Seventeen New Men Join W & L Faculty For Current Term

SEVENTEEN MEN have been appointed to faculty positions for the 1965-66 academic year at Washington and Lee University. The appointments were announced by Dr. William W. Pusey, III, Dean of the College, and Dr. Lewis W. Adams, Dean of the School of Commerce and Administration.

Dr. William Buchanan was named professor and head of the department of political science in the School of Commerce and Administration, effective in February, 1966. A former resident of Richmond and Danville, Dr. Buchanan, 46, is a 1941 graduate of Washington and Lee.

Named to the College faculty are James Harold Crouse, assistant professor of psychology; Martin C. Dillon, instructor in philosophy; William G. Heigold, instructor in romance languages; Fred Helsabeck, Jr., instructor in mathematics; Robert S. Johnson, instructor in mathematics; Leonel L. Kahn, Jr., instructor in fine arts; Dr. James D. Lowell, assistant professor of geology; Henry E. Sloss, Jr., instructor in English; Dale Edward Richardson, instructor in English; Norris Mac Kinnon, instructor in romance languages; W. Dabney Stuart, instructor in English; Robert B. Youngblood, instructor in German, and Urs Victor Weber, instructor in German.

Other additions to the School of Commerce and Administration faculty are Dr. John C. Winfrey, assistant professor of economics, and Martin Merson, visiting assistant professor of political science.

Sgt. Maj. Homer R. Moss, 38, a native Tennessean, has been assigned as an instructor in the university's Reserve Officer Training Corps.

Manuscripts, Books, Letters Received from Carter Estate

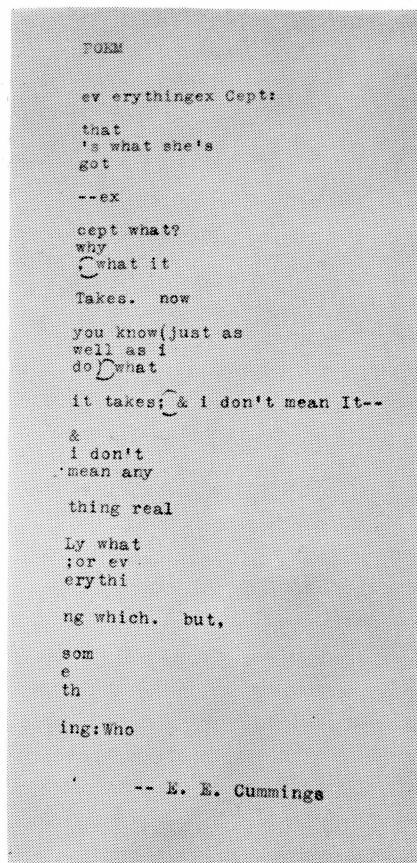

■ Valuable books, manuscripts and letters dealing with many contemporary authors have been presented to Washington and Lee University from the estate of an alumnus.

The collection, valued at approximately $1,800, is a gift of the family of the late Thomas H. Carter of Martinsville. Carter, a 1954 graduate of Washington and Lee, was himself an author and critic. He founded and edited several literary magazines and it was through his work that he received numerous letters and some manuscripts from such writers as T. S. Eliot, Ezra Pound, William Faulkner, Wyndham Lewis, E. E. Cummings, Carson McCullers and Katherine Anne Porter.

The collection also includes a number of books by and about three well-known writers—Pound, Lewis and Ford Madox Ford. At the time of his death in 1963, Carter was compiling material pertaining to the poet Pound.

Other writers who corresponded with Carter include James Branch Cabell, August Derleth, Caroline Gordon, Randall Jarrell, Hugh Kenner, Russell Kirk, Robie MacAuley, Merrill Moore, Flannery O'Connor, John Crewe Ransom, Wallace Stevens, Allen Tate and William Carlos Williams.

Many of these authors were contributors to Carter's literary magazines. Probably his most successful publication is Shenandoah, which he founded while an undergraduate at Washington and Lee. Still published on the campus, the university literary magazine is highly regarded as one of the best college "little magazines." Carter, who after graduation returned to Martinsville to teach at Martinsville High School and at the Patrick Henry Branch of the University of Virginia, also edited "Spearhead" in Martinsville. It has ceased publication.

In June of 1964, Martinsville High School published a magazine called "Tribute." The focus of the tribute was Carter. The new magazine stated that its purpose was twofold: to honor the memory of Carter as a writer, critic, and teacher, and to serve as a model for a future literary publication that would be a continuing acknowledgment of his special contributions to the literary influence upon Martinsville High School students.

The letters, manuscripts and books have been catalogued and placed in circulation at the University's McCormick Library.

Gift to the Library Honors the Memory Of "Miss Annie Jo"

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE University will honor with books the woman who served as its librarian for 27 years.

Income from a special fund will be used to purchase volumes in memory of the late Anne Robertson White, known to many generations of Washington and Lee students as "Miss Annie Jo."

An alumnus of Washington and Lee, Marion S. Sanders, '17, of Wytheville, was instrumental in setting up the special fund to purchase the memorial books.

The volumes will be placed in the University's McCormick Library for general circulation. Henry Coleman, present University librarian, said the money will be used to buy biographies, "because Miss Annie Jo's chief means of interesting students in reading was to start them on biographies. She believed the students would become interested in the person and the times in which he or she lived, and want to read more about them and their times."

"Miss Annie Jo," University librarian from 1895-1922, perhaps is better remembered as the originator of Washington and Lee's famous Fancy Dress Ball. The first Fancy Dress was a small, private costume party given by Miss White in 1907. The students liked the idea, expanded it, and took over its operation. It has been featured several times in national magazines and annually receives wide newspaper publicity.

"Miss Annie Jo" continued to supervise arrangements for each Fancy Dress Ball until she retired in 1922, and was an honored guest at each ball until her death in 1938 at the age of 85.

Professor Turner's New Book Recounts History Of "Mississippi West"

■ PROFESSOR Charles Wilson Turner has recently completed his book "The Mississippi West." It is published by Garrett and Massie, Incorporated, of Richmond, Virginia, and is priced at $7.50.

"The Mississippi West" is a topical study of the American West, testing the various theses pertaining to this area. The entire story is told in relation to history east of the river and there is an attempt to show the part the federal government has played in the development of the West.

Dr. Turner is a graduate of the University of Richmond, University of North Carolina, and University of Minnesota. He has written extensively on historical subjects including more than forty articles in the field of economic history and dealing with railroads, agricultural, immigrant and western topics. His previous volume, "Chessie's Road," a comprehensive history of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, was published by Garrett and Massie in 1956.

President and Dean Are Visitors at ROTC Camp

■ PRESIDENT Fred C. Cole and Dean of Students Edward C. Atwood visited Indiantown Gap Military Reservation in Annville, Pennsylvania, this summer where they viewed training of more than 2,700 United States Army Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets July 15-16.

Among the cadets visited were 41 students from Washington and Lee.

Lt. Col. Richard H. Brownley, Professor of Military Science at Washington and Lee was the escort officer for Dr. Cole and Dean Atwood.

Minneapolis Newspapers Make Scholarship Grant

■ WASHINGTON AND LEE has been chosen to receive funds under a new scholarship program for journalism students established by the Minneapolis Star and Minneapolis Tribune.

The five-year $100,000 program is being set up by the Minneapolis newspapers for the top journalism students in accredited schools and departments of journalism throughout the U. S. It will begin with the 1966-67 school year.

As one of the nation's approximately 50 accredited schools or departments of journalism, Washington and Lee University's Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation will administer for each of the five years a $400 award which will go to the student rated the outstanding journalism student at the end of his junior year.

Twenty Newspapers Aid Journalism Wire Fund

■ TWENTY Virginia and Washington, D. C., daily newspapers and a Virginia radio station have made 1965 contributions to the Frank Fuller Wire Fund of the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation at Washington and Lee University.

The wire fund, established in 1951 by the late Douglas Southall Freeman, Virginia editor and historian, to honor the retired veteran chief of the Richmond AP Bureau, provides Washington and Lee students with full Associated Press teletype news services for the academic year.

President Cole Named To CEEB Committee

■ PRESIDENT Fred C. Cole has been appointed to a new standing committee on international education of the College Entrance Examination Board.

The 1965 Calyx Honors Professors Crenshaw and Junkin with Dedication

■ THE 1965 edition of Washington and Lee University's yearbook, the Calyx, was dedicated to Dr. Ollinger Crenshaw, head of the department of history and University historian, and Dr. Marion Junkin, who heads the department of fine arts.

The yearbook cited the two professors for "the acceptance and understanding of life."

"This gives them confidence in themselves and others," the citation continues, "which makes for a great scholar, artist, professor, friend."

Dr. Crenshaw, a 1925 graduate of Washington and Lee, was appointed to the W&L faculty in 1926 and became head of the history department in 1962. He currently is compiling a history of the University.

Dr. Junkin, also a University graduate—class of 1927—joined the faculty as professor of fine arts in 1949. He is a well-known painter, having had numerous one-man exhibitions and having had paintings exhibited at many shows.

Two University ROTC Students Are Honored

■ TWO WASHINGTON AND LEE University students are among 600 college students who have been selected to receive the first two-year Reserve Officer Training Corps scholarships ever given by the Army. They are cadets J. Randall Miller of Natural Bridge and Paul R. Greenwade of Atwater, Calif. Both are juniors.

The awards are being made to outstanding ROTC students entering their junior year of college this fall. The scholarships provide for tuition, textbooks and fees and a $50 monthly allowance.

The University Confers 257 Degrees Upon Its Largest June Class Ever In a Weekend Marred by Rain

JON A. SUPAK of Virginia Beach, Va., delivers the valedictory address before an audience of some 1,700 persons. Other photographs of graduation appear on Page 16, 17.

RAIN FELL on part of Washington and Lee University's finals program this year for the first time in the memories of most persons now associated with the university.

After intermittent showers during the morning forced a change in the usual processional arrangement for Baccalaureate, the rain finally came down in buckets while the Evans Hall sermon by Chaplain David W. Sprunt was in progress.

The downpour inconvenienced many seniors and their families, and it made for congested conditions in the dining hall when the Alumni Association's luncheon for graduates, families, and faculty—normally held outdoors on the lawn before the President's Home—was moved inside. Over a thousand guests sidestepped the busy workmen who cleared chairs and brought in tables and set up serving counters.

Next day the sun shone in accustomed Commencement fashion, and few umbrellas that the faithless had brought hung unneeded on the back of the speaker's platform, or leaned almost forgotten against trees.

The graduating class was—by four students over the 1964 record number—the largest ever to march up for June diplomas. A total of 257 accepted degrees from President Fred C. Cole, as an estimated 1,700 persons looked on and/or took pictures.

Dean C. P. Light, Jr., presented thirty-six candidates for the LL.B., and Dean Lewis W. Adams presented thirty-three candidates for the B.S. in Commerce and thirty-eight for the B.A. in political science or economics. Dean William W. Pusey, III, presented 134 candidates for B.A. degrees, thirteen for B.S. degrees, and three for B.S. degrees with special attainments in chemistry.

Honorary degrees were conferred upon two outstanding alumni and two other distinguished men. Doctor of Laws degrees were bestowed upon William C. Norman, '28, of Crossett, Ark.; Matthew W. Paxton, '18, of Lexington; and Richard P. Thomsen of Alexandria, Va. The Doctor of Letters degree was awarded to Dr. Arthur S. Link of Princeton, N. J., (See Page 18).

Jon A. Supak, the much-honored senior from Virginia Beach, Va., delivered the valedictory address in which he said that every individual deserves the freedom to stand alone, live his own life in whatever way he wishes, without limitations of artificial social restrictions.

President Cole, addressing the sixth senior class to graduate since he assumed the presidency in 1959-60, urged the commencement audience to learn from history but not to be restricted by what has happened in the past. (His full text begins on Page 19).

In customary procedure, President Cole called the commencement audience's attention to the lists of awards and prizes for graduates and students in the graduation program. He singled out for special mention Christopher McCallum Kell of Haddonfield, N. J., who won the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Medallion for outstanding achievement in University citizenship, and James W. DeYoung of Kennilworth, Ill., winner of the Frank J. Gilliam Award, which also recognizes outstanding contributions to university life.

Earlier on graduation morning, the University's military department presented forty seniors for commissions in the Regular United States Army and in the Army Reserve.

The rain which dampened the Baccalaureate program fell heaviest just as the services ended in Evans Hall. Some had brought umbrellas, but others just lifted their academic skirts and ran for it.

MAJ. GEN. ARCHIBALD A. SPROUL, III, '37, of Staunton, commanding general of the 29th Division, presented commissions to ROTC seniors at Lee Chapel. If the veteran of Normandy's beachhead fighting objected to the non-military haircuts of the Army's newest officers, he didn't let on.

With armies of family photographers flanking the commencement platform, good vantage points were at a premium. These ladies—wives, sweethearts, or sisters of seniors—managed to maneuver close despite the risks of ruined hosiery.

Honorary Degrees Awarded to Four

MATTHEW WHITE PAXTON, attorney, editor and publisher, and civic leader, Lexington, Virginia.

"Among Washington and Lee's distinguished alumni are natives of this community who have continued to enrich the University and its family by rendering constant and magnanimous service to their Alma Mater and by assuming roles of leadership in the town of Lexington. Such an exemplary graduate is M. W. Paxton whose wisdom, sound judgment, broad influence, and personal integrity have touched every worthwhile endeavor in this community for more than half a century. As a member of the Rockbridge County bar, and as owner, editor and publisher of one of the commonwealth's most influential weekly newspapers, he has contributed profoundly to the progress and development of this vicinity where his interests have embraced civic, cultural, religious, charitable, and historical affairs. No degree conferred by Washington and Lee University has ever been given with greater admiration and affection than the Doctor of Laws degree it now awards to M. W. Paxton."

ARTHUR STANLEY LINK, Edwards Professor of American History, Princeton University, Princeton, New Jersey.

"Acclaimed as the nation's foremost authority on the life of Woodrow Wilson and this great American influence upon the nation and the world, Professor Link is that rarity among American scholars who is able to translate the fruits of exhaustive research and analysis into published works that are as lucid in their literary quality as they are sound in their scholarship. Author of thirteen volumes of history, Professor Link twice has won the coveted Bancroft Prize for biography with his incisive studies of President Wilson. Honored abroad as Harmsworth Professor at Oxford, he now holds a distinguished chair in American history at one of the nation's greatest universities where he is currently directing a projected forty-volume collection of Woodrow Wilson papers. Washington and Lee University is proud to confer upon this native Virginian its degree of Doctor of Letters for the way in which he is bringing such distinction to the academic profession."

WILLIAM CLARENCE NORMAN, manufacturing executive and banker, Crossett, Arkansas.

"As an honor graduate of Washington and Lee and of the Advanced Management Course at the Harvard University School of Business, and as banker and industrialist, William Norman's career has been one of superior scholarship, good citizenship, and sound management—all coveted qualities for leaders in the business world. As vice-president of one of America's greatest companies—the Georgia-Pacific Corporation—he directs the production of goods that enrich our lives and uses his wise management to assure the prudent use and conservation of one of our country's greatest natural resources. His capacity for capable and unselfish leadership has extended to his community and his state where he has served generously, particularly in his 20-year presidency of the Crossett Board of Education. His accomplishments reflect credit upon his Alma Mater and, with gratitude and pride, Washington and Lee University awards to William Norman its degree of Doctor of Laws."

RICHARD PORTER THOMSEN, headmaster, the Episcopal High School, Alexandria, Virginia.

"A graduate of the distinguished young man's preparatory school that he now heads, Richard Thomsen is recognized throughout the United States as one of the outstanding headmasters in American secondary education. His appreciation for academic excellence was sharpened by his own experiences at two of the nation's great universities—Yale and Johns Hopkins—and as boxing captain at Yale he learned, too, of the value of physical fitness to the good scholar. The program he directs at Episcopal High School is a model in its effective emphasis on the development of the mind and body. Episcopal High School's graduates go forth annually to enroll in the best colleges and universities, and Washington and Lee has been proud to count among its finest students young men who first studied under Richard Thomsen. In recognition of the many achievements of this good partner in the education of young men, Washington and Lee University proudly confers upon him its degree of Doctor of Laws."

The President's Address

President Cole Recounts Some Aspects of Lee's Administration Which Began 100 Years Ago. He Urged the Commencement Audience To Learn from the Past, But Not To Be Restricted by History's Lessons.

I WILL COMMENT BRIEFLY ON matters that reflect a remarkable degree of continuity about Washington and Lee. Student attitudes and values change from one generation to another, and this is good. But there are certain aspects of their viewpoints that seem to be rather constant, and this is good, too. My walks to and from the office take me by the bulletin board at the front of Payne Hall, the open board where all manner of student publications have been posted this year. These comments and notes and cartoons have been interesting, at times amusing, and, because I belong to "olden times," often puzzling to me. Presumably they have reflected some student attitudes either here or on other campuses.

I noted, for example, the cartoon that showed the commencement speaker happily assuring the graduates that as they left the campus they need no longer worry about the Honor System. I noted, too, a poem that dealt with the droning voices of professors and the poet's longing to be set free from his boredom.

The anonymous author did me an injustice when he removed it before I had an opportunity to make a copy. I had wished to compare it with one that I had written many years ago. Perhaps this was well, because the young man had much more talent or had read more widely than I. I recall the closing line of Thomas Hardy's poem, "An Ancient to Ancients:" "...rush not; time serves; we are going, Gentlemen."

My training as a historian has taught me that it is good to read our history, to learn from it, to respect and profit from our traditions and experience but not always to be bound by what may appear to be an established precedent. There are precedents in history for almost anything one may wish to do; thus, decisions that are made today must be based on present circumstances as well as on past practices. I beg your forbearance, therefore, as I look to the past briefly to note a matter or two of importance to the past, the present, and the future of Washington and Lee.

A Year of Especial Significance

The year 1965 holds an especial significance for this University, a significance apart from the importance of this Commencement exercise. One hundred years ago this month the Trustees of Washington College met to review the status of the college.

The outlook was bleak. The buildings had been spared destruction but they were in dilapidated condition; most of their furnishings and equipment had been destroyed or looted. The financial condition of the College was desperate. Much of the small endowment had been lost through investment in Confederate bonds while another portion had not drawn interest payments for several years. The salaries of the professors who remained were far in arrears.

Nevertheless the Trustees who gathered here on June 21, 1865, considered their problems with courage and faith. They determined that the College should re-open in September and they appointed committees to seek financial support and resolve other difficulties. A meeting for early August was set to undertake the election of a new president.

You know of the bold decision to invite General Robert E. Lee to accept the leadership of the College. Accounts of that meeting on August 4 suggest that the Trustees were stunned with the temerity of their action. But once the general had been nominated, no other suggestion could generate enthusiasm, and the vote on Lee was unanimous. His appointment has touched the life of every student who has come here in the century that has elapsed. On occasion I know that you become surfeited with the story of Lee's experience at Washington College, but it is a story that bears re-telling because no other institution has been so affected by the influence of one great man. Sometimes students, and others, suggest that Washington and Lee is bound too closely to the past—that this institution is inhibited by tradition and that the only way to real greatness is to look to the future and to forget the past. I am convinced, however, that none of us is so original in our concepts, or so infallible, that we cannot profit from a proper knowledge of our history.

Despite his defeat in war, Lee was a hero of the first order when he assumed the presidency here. He was idolized in the South, respected and admired in the North. Despite the fact, however, that he had served as superintendent of West Point, he was not considered to be an educational leader. Nor did the Trustees of Washington and Lee believe that they were going to find in Lee an academician qualified to deal with all the problems of a destitute classical college. They were practical men and they apparently assumed that Lee would serve Washington College primarily in practical ways. A basic consideration was finance and reputation. His name would help in both these regards.

To Lee's great credit, and to the good fortune of all associated with the College, he gave far more than his name. The destitution of the South and its people weighed heavily upon him. He welcomed the opportunity to serve his region and the nation in that time of great need.

The name of Lee did in fact bring about a dramatic strengthening of the College that perhaps exceeded the expectations of the Trustees. Admirers of Lee—Cyrus H. McCormick, Warren Newcomb, George Peabody, Thomas A. Scott, W. W. Corcoran, to name a few—responded to appeals for funds, students eagerly sought to enroll in the College, and editorials in Southern newspapers, as well as in some Northern ones, predicted that Washington College was destined to become one of the great American institutions of higher learning. The University's historian, Professor Ollinger Crewshaw—to whom I am indebted for much of the substance of my remarks today—concludes one section of his study of Lee's administration with the appropriate words: "The Great Era had begun."

President Lee Sets to Work

While the Trustees and others were busily engaged in raising funds for the College, the president assumed responsibility for all the duties imposed upon a college administrator. He immediately set to work to learn everything about the college and its operation, its students, its faculty, and its alumni. It soon became apparent that the Trustees had not appointed a figure-head for the College. Here was a man with ideas of his own about administration and education and, to the surprise of some, they were sound ideas that formed a basis for an educational philosophy of hope and promise for a rebuilt South and a peaceful nation.

Under Lee's direction and inspiration the curriculum was expanded and the faculty enlarged. There was a new emphasis on applied science and mathematics, on modern languages, and on history and literature. He introduced a system of electives that permitted students a degree of flexibility as against the formal, rigorously classical curriculum of antebellum days. Lee appreciated the importance of liberal education but he also recognized that there was, in the South especially, a great need for scientists, engineers, agriculturists, and business men. The Law School was added to the College during his administration and he presented recommendations for business courses and training of journalists. New degrees were added and the College took on the nature of a university. Plans were drawn for further expansion into the fields of civil and mining engineering, mechanical engineering, applied chemistry, and agriculture.

With Lee at the helm, faculty colleagues presented their dreams for the future. One professor proposed that a medical school be established. Although the proposal was tabled by the Trustees, there is evidence that they intended to give it fuller discussion. Other programs and recommendations, innovations that were many years ahead of their time, were debated and put aside or held for further review. The New York Herald at the time commented that the programs under way in Lexington were likely to jolt "old fogey schools just as General Lee did old fogey generals."

The University Grows under Lee

Enrollments soared to the unprecedented number of 411 in 1868, and the faculty had quadrupled. All the while Lee was bringing to bear on the institution and its students the great influence of his personality and the code which patterned his life. His own attitude toward personal honesty, courtesy, gentlemanly conduct and dress, were adopted by most of the students and subsequently passed on from one generation to another.

Then, in 1869, the president's health began to fail, and in October, 1870, he died. With his death a large measure of the impetus he gave to the College ended. Some of his and his associates' hopes for the school were to wait thirty to fifty years for implementation, and others, some of which were quite sound, have never been fulfilled. The kind of Washington College that Lee helped fashion and plan was a far different school from the Washington and Lee we know today. One cannot help but experience a sense of regret as he reads about this noble effort that was to fall short of complete fulfillment. Whether or not Lee's leadership would have been sufficient to sustain the College during the difficult years of Reconstruction is impossible to answer. Alternatives to history cannot be determined. We can be sure, I believe, that many of the problems of the school and of the South would have been less had he been able to fulfill his hopes.

If we seek sure guidelines or solutions to the current problems facing higher education and the University today, we do not find clear answers, but there are remarkable parallels to the days of Lee. What we do find in Lee and in his administration is inspiration. The problems of his time were different, but his purposes and objectives were similar. We can profit from the study of the manner in which he addressed his challenges. We can marvel at the courage with which he faced a far more uncertain and discouraging future than we face today. I say this in spite of the current turmoil of our world. We can see how his character and ideals inspired his colleagues, his students, and his nation; and a century later we can feel his influence at every turn.

A College in Constant Evolution

Those who would argue that, because of the great past of this University, we are restricted, and those who would suggest that this University is hide-bound by tradition, should look more carefully to its history. Perhaps some assume too easily that what is always has been. The truth is that Washington and Lee has been, and is, in a constant pattern of evolution—a pattern that fortunately has been guided by certain principles that stand the continuing test of time.

It is a fact that Washington and Lee is a relatively small liberal arts institution largely free from control by church or state. You know this to be true and you are aware that these conditions of institutional life are jealously guarded today. You may assume that these conditions have derived from a cardinal premise that has guided the school from its beginning. But if you look closely into the University's history you will learn that the Presbyterian Church exerted a strong influence over the school for many years, and that even after its secular nature was established and assured by charter, this emphasis continued to be a subject of debate and controversy. If you look closely at the Lee administration, you will find evidence of concentrated efforts by the College to avail itself of state funds and land through the Morrill Land Grant Act which led to the establishment of many state universities.

From my earlier comments on the nature of the curriculum under Lee you have seen that the major emphasis academically has not always been as oriented to the liberal arts and sciences as it is now. Neither is the emphasis today as narrowly classical or humanistic as it was during the school's first century. The University concentration on undergraduate education has always been constant but never so important as it is today.

I point these facts up to suggest a flexibility as we consider the future of Washington and Lee. For example, we have genuine concern about how large the University may grow before it endangers certain advantages we recognize in a relatively small enrollment. But at times during Washington and Lee's history, the University sought all the students it could get. At present the University is taking in its best judgment all the qualified students it can properly educate.

The University has adjusted to the times, to the needs of society, to the needs of the students. Some programs have blossomed for a while then were discarded as conditions and needs changed; other tentative programs never reached fruition for one reason or another. It can be argued that the University, as Professor Crenshaw suggests in his history, has been prone to make virtue of necessity. We applaud our relative smallness, forgetting that circumstances in the past prevented us from growing larger at a time when the college or university was willing to set no limits. We are jealous of our freedom from control, but there were times when controls had a different connotation.

A Sound Philosophy of Education

From all of this, there has developed an educational philosophy that I believe is a sound one for this day and age. There is a place in American higher education—a vital place—for such institutions as Washington and Lee is today. There is, of course, a place for the kind of institution that the men of the 1860's would have had it become. The nation needs colleges where great numbers can be accommodated, where every need of society can be served, studied, researched, and solved. But it also vitally needs Washington and Lee—where emphasis on undergraduate education is given primary attention and not made secondary to graduate study and research; where the professors are asked to be good teachers and good scholars, but excellent teachers first of all; where the number of teachers and students are in a ratio that permits the young student to profit from close association with professors and where the teacher can be inspired by his intimate association with the thoughts and ideas of young men. There is a vital place for a school that puts a premium on personal honor and integrity, for a school where student tradition—not rigid university policy—has afforded the student body the opportunity to distinguish itself from the current student attitude in many places in matters of honor, courtesy, and dress. These are some of the connecting threads—the principles—that have remained unbroken since Lee's time. They will continue beyond my time and yours. Washington and Lee has kept much of the good of its past and has the opportunity to consider again those positive things that were not effected while considering the demands of the present.

A Great Concern for Excellence

When the Trustees met here a hundred years ago they were as concerned with the high quality of the institution as we are today. To quote from a newspaper account of that meeting, the Trustees were determined that they would not "bring down the elevated character the College has so long borne." This has been the concern of every Board of Trustees since, and I am confident that succeeding boards will continue to have this high regard for academic excellence just as you and your professors have. But I will add that a university does not live in the past or the present, it must plan for the future and it must become stronger or it will lose its impetus.

I end my remarks by pointing out that Lee dreamed of an institution of quality which would serve the interest of the nation and his fellowman. In this respect our history lesson is clear. However, we need to define our purposes, our objectives and our emphases for today and tomorrow. We must approach these goals with courage, flexibility, and enthusiasm and with all the wisdom and experience we can bring to bear. In the course of the next five years especially, we should turn to Robert E. Lee and the men of his day. We shall note appropriately the events of his time and get inspiration from his work. We shall, however, not be bound by the past except where it gives us guidance for the future.

* * * * *

I congratulate you. I am proud of you, of your accomplishments as individuals and as a class. Within this hour, you have become alumni of Washington and Lee. Very soon your student attitudes and values will give way to alumni attitudes and values. I can assure you of one thing: As alumni you have joined distinguished company. My colleagues join me in extending to you and to your parents our warm congratulations. I wish each of you success in all you undertake.

THE NEW PRESIDENT of Washington and Lee Alumni, Inc., is E. Marshall Nuckols, Jr., '33, who will direct the affairs of the association during the important 1965-66 alumni year.

He was elected unanimously at the regular meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors held at the University on June 3, 1965.

Also elected for 1965-66 were Vice-President Francis W. Plowman, '24, and Treasurer Robert A. Fulwiler, '25.

Nuckols is a vice-president of Campbell Soup Company of Camden, N. J. and lives in Bucks County, Pa. Plowman is a vice-president of Scott Paper Company of Philadelphia and lives in Swarthmore, Pa. Fulwiler is an attorney with the Legal Department of Hercules Powder Company of Wilmington, Del., where he also resides.

In accepting the association's presidency, Nuckols expressed confidence that the Alumni Association would respond eagerly to the challenges of the coming year, and that it would continue in the future, as in the past, to provide essential support of all kinds to Washington and Lee.

Alumni Board Seats Nuckols As President For the Year

E. MARSHALL NUCKOLS, '33

In the other board matters, approval was given to plans to proceed with the remodeling of the former Flournoy residence as an Alumni House (see page 2 for additional details).

Outgoing president E. Alton Sartor praised the work of the special board committee which had developed plans for the house and the related fund campaign. Sartor reviewed the report of these plans that he presented to the meeting of the University Board of Trustees, and he said that the Trustees and the University administration are "in full accord" with them.

W. Addison Staples, of the Lynchburg architectural firm of Clark, Nexsen, and Owen, attended the meeting to explain in detail the plans for the Alumni House.

Also attending the meeting was University President Fred C. Cole who reviewed recent developments at the University for the Alumni Board.

The Board authorized the Alumni Office to offer for sale a limited number of the recently published Alumni Directory at a price of $3.50 per copy.

The Report of the Association President for 1964-65

By E. ALTON SARTOR, JR., '38
President, 1964-65

Washington and Lee Alumni, Inc.

THIS HAS BEEN a very busy year and I feel a very fruitful one. There have been, in addition to the two regular Board meetings in Lexington, special committee meetings in Washington and Philadelphia. The members of the Alumni Board of Directors are a dedicated and hard-working group of men and it has been my pleasure to work with them.

Last year at this time your Board of Directors established several goals. Among these were:

(1) the publication of a revised Alumni Directory

(2) the completion of plans for the Alumni House and the beginning of its construction

(3) to create a closer relationship between the Alumni Board of Directors and the University Board of Trustees

(4) the adoption of a revised Articles of Incorporation

(5) to insure that the Alumni Fund make a more meaningful contribution to the University

I shall comment briefly about these.

The completion of the Alumni Directory was the fulfillment of a great need and dream. I believe most of you have received copies of this very fine edition. The directory covers the period from the beginning of Liberty Hall through the class of 1967, and is divided into three parts—an alphabetical listing in which there is given the full name, address and occupation, where known, of each alumnus and the section also includes the deceased. This section also gives the man's class, his degrees and his years of attendance at Washington and Lee. There is a geographical section and there is a class section. I believe that this Alumni Directory will be a much desired volume in the home and office of every alumnus.

The long cherished dream of an Alumni House is now approaching reality and following my report I will ask Mr. Epley and Mr. Plowman who have worked so diligently on the House Committee to give a report on its present status.

I am happy to advise that yesterday Bill Washburn and myself, representing the entire Alumni Association, met with the University Board of Trustees in their business meeting. It was a very fine occasion for me and I think that the exchange of information by such a meeting was most fruitful. I might add that the University Board of Trustees is in full support of the plans being made for an Alumni House. I can also assure you that the University Board of Trustees feels a very close relationship to the work, the aims and purposes of the Alumni Association.

The adoption of the revised Articles of Incorporation was necessary because of a change several years ago in the number of members on the Alumni Board of Directors. While going into this matter it was found that there were several other changes which, though incorporated in the practice of the Alumni Association, had not been properly recorded with the State Corporation Commission. I am happy to say that all of this has now been completed with the revision of the Articles of Incorporation. It has been cleared by the State Corporation Commission and approved by the Alumni Board of Directors. It is planned to have these Articles printed in booklet form in the near future for distribution to the Alumni Chapters and other interested alumni. In all of this work, which took considerable time and effort and several meetings in Richmond with the State Corporation Commission, the Alumni Association is indebted to Professor Robert Huntley of our Law School for his good help and advice.

You have just heard a report from the Treasurer on the present status of the Alumni Fund. While we are short of our goal, our figure as of this date exceeds last year's figure at this same time by some $10,000. At this point I would like to pause to acknowledge our debt and express our thanks to the Alumni Fund Council which was headed by Robert Taylor of Lynchburg and also our deep appreciation to the fine organization of class agents and regional agents. Our continued goals for the annual Alumni Fund should be an extension in terms of total contributions and more particularly in a broader participation on the part of more alumni.

In the realm of organization, I believe your Association continues to be strong. It would be hard to keep up with all of the various activities but we are indebted to President Cole, members of the staff and faculty and Bill Washburn who have, over this past year, visited many of the forty-three organized chapters.

The Alumni Magazine continues to be our main avenue of communication. It has, I think, become increasingly effective in terms of its content and its reflection of the

My report would be entirely too long should I cover all of the usual activities which are carried on here during the school year. I might mention, however, that the Homecoming and Reunion festivities continue to be highlights of the year. This year, for the first time, there was added the fifth anniversary class. Therefore, we now have five anniversary classes which are coming back to campus in the spring for Reunion time. Serious consideration is being given to the addition of other classes. Our student-alumni relations is an important field of operation. Your Association takes a prominent place each year at Freshman Camp, and of course, we continue with our annual Senior Banquet at which time we honor and welcome those who are entering the ranks of alumni.

During this past year I have come to appreciate the job that Bill Washburn is doing. It is a demanding job of travel, of many problems, and endless detail. He gets all of the complaints and few thanks. He and the entire staff in the Alumni Office are a dedicated, loyal and hard-working team. I know I can speak for all of you in expressing our gratitude to them.

It has been a real pleasure for me to serve on the Alumni Board the past four years and it is with a note of sadness that it ends today.

I feel that definite progress has been made this year. Now we must look ahead to the challenges and opportunities that are before us.

The 1964-65 Alumni Fund Sets New Highs for Gifts and Donors

IN REPORTING on the 1964-65 Alumni Fund Campaign, the Alumni Fund Council feels that the figures shown on the accompanying graph are gratifying in several ways.

The final total of $175,572.77 represents a significant increase over last year's total of $165,272.42. The steady advance in total giving was continued and this means much for the future. And finally, there is clear indication that the question mark on the graph for 1966 will be a fulfillment of ideals of achievement.

This graph is a device to give visual impact to the comparison of Alumni Fund dollars over the past five years. The Council takes satisfaction in the continued upward trend, for this trend provides a more assured confidence in the future ability of Washington and Lee's alumni to meet any challenge.

But the graph also suggests many intangibles which cannot be put on a chart. We could plot the number of alumni solicited (11,292 this year), and we could call the roll of those who gave—3,966 of them. This number of contributors for 1964-65 is 231 above the number for 1963-64. The Council is proud of this increase because it is good, but it is not good enough. We cannot plot the individual reasons for not contributing, and we are reminded that, in some way, the non-contributors must be persuaded to become contributors, if the Fund is ever to achieve its full potential.

The vision and goal for future Councils is simply this—a broadening of participation to the level where the number of contributors will be 100% of those solicited. This is not an impossible feat. The Council believes that this can be achieved through a program of education and inspiration involving effective means and methods of communication and solicitation devised by future Councils and workers. We are confident that the alumni will ever be responsive to the needs of Washington and Lee, and that through their giving these needs will be filled in significant measure, thus enabling the University to sustain and strengthen its position of educational leadership.

Our sense of greatest gratification comes from the response of the younger classes. The classes since 1960 show a remarkable number of contributors, and in this response there rests the real future of the Alumni Fund. Even the classes of the last three or four years have a very high percentage of givers, although these are our young alumni and not yet firmly established in the business and professional world. The class of 1962 has 94 contributors out of 291 solicited; the class of 1963 has 99 contributors out of 315 solicited. Ten or twelve of the 1964 graduating class contributed to the Alumni Fund before their graduation.

These young alumni are the potential generous givers to Washington and Lee in money, time, and energy. They seem to have been educated early in the art of giving when and where there is cause for giving. This characteristic of the young alumnus is interesting and significant and inspiring.

The report of the Alumni Fund cannot be closed without an expression of appreciation to the class agents, the regional agents, and the scores of workers. The Fund total is the outward evidence of the tremendous effort put forth by all workers. It has become trite to say that success is in direct ratio to the work and enthusiasm of those who are responsible, but it is nevertheless true. We offer our deep gratitude to the fund workers of 1964-65.

Last year the Council chairman wrote, "We can draw inspiration from the past year, from the past decade, and from 216 years of our University's history." This year we have been inspired. We now add enthusiasm and the hope that the question mark on the graph means the greatest fund year yet for 1965-66.

The Alumni Fund Council Charts the Growth Of Annual Giving at Washington and Lee for the Past Five Years. The Faithful Support of 3,966 Contributors in 1964-65 Raises Hopes for Even Greater Participation by Alumni During 1965-66

The New Directory

The latest directory of Washington and Lee University alumni is now in the hands of all former students who contributed to the 1963-64 Alumni Fund. This was the method of distribution determined by the Alumni Board of Trustees when the publication of the volume was approved two years ago.

The directory contains complete listings of all alumni, arranged alphabetically, geographically, and by class.

A limited number of directories are available for sale to alumni who were not contributors to the 1963-64 Alumni Fund. They can be obtained by sending a check for $3.50 to the alumni office at the University.

CLASS NOTES

1895

In December, 1964, J. B. DABNEY celebrated his 92nd birthday. At that time he was obliged to give up his law practice in Vicksburg, Mississippi, because of the failure of his vision, but he still maintains an office and has a very able assistant. Mr. Dabney is a leading citizen in Mississippi, and has over his many illustrious years been a most prominent man in Vicksburg.

1906

Active as a Methodist minister for forty-five years, the REV. SAMUEL R. NEEL is now retired and lives in Cumberland, Maryland.

1910

THE HONORABLE JAMES R. SIMMONDS was paid a tribute by the Washington County (Va.) Bar for his more than 50 years of service to that bar. President of the Washington County Bar Association, JOHN D. GOODIN, '39, presented a plaque in honor of Mr. Simmonds at a ceremony which took place in July in Johnson City, Tennessee.

JOHN D. GOODIN, '39, left, looks on as JUDGE JAMES R. SIMMONDS, '10, receives a special plaque in recognition of his more than fifty years of service to the Washington County (Va.) Bar Association. Making the presentation at right is JAMES H. EPPS, JR.

DR. PAUL D. CONVERSE, a professor emeritus of the University of Illinois' Department of Marketing, has been honored as a past president of the American Marketing Association which is observing its 50th anniversary. Dr. Converse was president of the American Marketing Association in 1931 and was a member of the Federal Trade Commission for three years before joining the Illinois faculty in 1924. Among his many publications is "Elements of Marketing" which was written in conjunction with Professors Harvey W. Huegy and Robert V. Mitchell. Dr. Converse retired in 1957 and now resides in Urbana, Illinois.

Retired from law practice, DAVID S. BONE, SR., spends much time traveling and studying the cultures of the Indians of the Southwest. He and his wife have a camp trailer and spend carefree days visiting national and state parks in the West and South.

In 1959 BERKELEY COX retired as General Counsel for Aetna Life Insurance Company and its affiliated companies. In May, 1965, he completed twenty years of service as chairman of the board of trustees of the Hartford Seminary Foundation, an interdenominational seminary for training ministers and other church workers. He and his wife have five children and ten grandchildren.

NICHOLSON B. ADAMS, a professor of Spanish at the University of North Carolina, has just been elected a corresponding member of the Royal Academy of Cordoba, Spain. He will go to Spain in mid-October to accept the honor.

City Court Judge WILLIAM C. LITTLE of Brunswick, Georgia, has been listed in the current edition of Who's Who in the South and Southwest. Judge Little has practiced law for fifty years, and the publication notes that the 72-year-old jurist has occupied the City Court bench for twenty-one years and was city recorder for eight years prior to that.

COLONEL CHARLES R. STRIBLING, president of Missouri Military Academy in Mexico, Missouri, has been elected president of the Missouri Chamber of Commerce. Colonel Stribling has been chairman of the Chamber's education council for the past ten years. Three thousand businesses and industries have membership in the Chamber of Commerce. Colonel Stribling's election was moved by a nominating committee and approved by the Chamber's seventy-one directors, and businessmen throughout Missouri. Colonel Stribling was one of the founders of the Missouri Freedom Forum. He has been a member of the faculty of the Academy for forty-five years and became its president in 1933. He is the president of the Association of Military Colleges and Schools of the United States. In 1963 Colonel Stribling was one of seventeen in the nation to receive the American Educators Medal from the Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge, headed by Dwight D. Eisenhower. He is chairman of the Audrain Hospital Board, vice-chairman of the Park and Recreation Commission, and a director of the Mexico Saving Bank.

After 44 years of service as minister in the Methodist Church REVEREND J. WITHERS BLAKE retired as of June 1. He will live in Tampa, Florida.

A former transportation specialist with the U.S. War Department, STUART GARDNER EDMONDS moved back to Winchester, Virginia, in 1948. He was in charge of transportation for American Brakeshoe company and for twelve years was district freight representative for Novick Transfer, Inc. Presently he is associated with International Harvester Agency and owns and operates three tobacco farms in Southern Maryland. Stuart and his wife, the former Helen Ritter, have three children and three grandchildren.

The President of Kenyon College, FRANCIS EDWARD LUND, was presented an Honorary Doctor of Laws Degree by Trinity College at commencement on June 13. After receiving his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin, Dr. Lund taught at several institutions and in 1952 was elected president of Alabama College, which he converted during the next five years from a state college for women to a co-educational institution. As President of Kenyon, Dr. Lund assisted in the founding of the Great Lakes Colleges Association and the Foundation of Episcopal Colleges of which he was elected President for the 1964-65 session. Dr. Lund is also Chairman of the Ohio Foundation of Independent Colleges, Inc.

Portrait Honors Gov. Barron

■ EVERY FOUR YEARS it is traditional for a portrait of the immediate past Chief Executive of the State of West Virginia to be unveiled and to become a part of the collection which hangs in the State Capitol. This ceremony took place when the portrait of the Honorable William Wallace Barron, '34, twenty-sixth Governor of West Virginia, was unveiled in the State House in Charleston. It is also of interest to Washington and Lee alumni that the portrait was painted by the outstanding artist, Samuel Creed Gholson, who is of the class of 1941 at Washington and Lee.

Governor Barron was elected to the office in 1960 after serving as Attorney General for West Virginia for four years. He started his political career in 1949 when he was elected mayor of his home town, Elkins. This local office was followed by a term in the House of Delegates and an appointment as a member of the State Liquor Commission.

In an introduction of Governor Barron at the unveiling, Curtis B. Trent, Executive Assistant to the Governor, remarked upon "the tremendous growth of this man into one of West Virginia's truly great Governors." In January of this year, at the close of his term of office, Governor Barron returned to the private practice of law.

National Rejectors, Inc., has recently named RICHARD T. KELLEY as its Director of Technical Publications. Dick and his wife, Virginia, live in Clayton, Missouri.

COL. GEORGE W. HARRISON, whose military career spans thirty years, retired from the North Carolina National Guard in July. At retirement Col. Harrison received the N. C. Distinguished Service Medal from Governor Dan Moore, an award made for his outstanding contribution to the state in general and the National Guard in particular. During his years of service he rose from the enlisted and officer ranks to the position of lieutenant-colonel and a member of the general staff. Col. Harrison is a life insurance executive and very active in civic, business, and political life of Henderson, North Carolina, where he makes his home.

In the past 29 years, WILLIAM W. GERBER has made a fine record with National Gypsum Company. He has recently been named Eastern Sales Manager and will have offices in the company's headquarters in Buffalo, New York.

As a hearing examiner for the Federal Trade Commission, DONALD R. MOORE is serving as justice of the Washington alumni chapter for the legal fraternity, Phi Alpha Delta. He is also a member of the national fraternity's Supreme Tribunal.

After beginning a career with Eastman Kodak as a technical engineer in 1939, JAMES S. BRUCE has just been appointed associate director of the photographic technology division at Kodak Park Works. In 1952 Bruce became assistant superintendent of Kodak's paper service division and in 1956 was transferred to headquarters as assistant director of training. He became director of training in 1957. Since 1962 he has been serving as director of the Company's business and technical personnel department. He and his wife, Mary, and their four children live in Irondequoit, New York.

Allen Harris, Jr., '27, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the slate of new officers which were elected unanimously. H. Emory Widener, Jr., '53, of Bristol was named the new president. The vice-presidents, representing the various sections of the chapter are as follows: L. P. Collins, III, '51, of Marion; Steve Quillen, '57, of Lebanon; H. M. Bandy, Jr., '33, of Norton; W. L. Snead, '51, of Greeneville; J. W. Nickels, '50, of Bristol and Nelson W. Burris, '26, of Johnson City. John D. Sterrett, Jr., '38, of Wytheville, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Dean Gilliam's principal address was a report of the University which was enthusiastically received. Following the meeting Bill Washburn presented color slides.

NORTH TEXAS

■ THE CHAPTER entertained new incoming freshmen with a luncheon in the Dallas Club on August 26. Maury Purnell, '61, president of the chapter, expressed welcome on behalf of all members to the new men and their fathers. Several upperclassmen were present for the occasion and joined in honoring the new freshmen.

PENSACOLA

■ LARGE QUANTITIES of refreshments, including shrimp, ham, chicken, and salads, were the order of the day for a Pensacola Chapter Reception in honor of the new freshmen. The event took place at the home of Frank Bozeman, '60, on August 27.

A large crowd of alumni and their wives extended a warm welcome to the new freshmen including young men from Brewton and Bessemer, Alabama. William H. Clarke, '60, president of the chapter, spoke to the freshmen and their families as did several of the more recent alumni graduates.

LYNCHBURG

■ THE ALUMNI of Lynchburg held a reception at the home of the president, Bertram R. Schewel, '41, on August 25 in honor of the new freshman students and their parents.

The alumni were pleased to have a number of present students who played host for the freshmen. Swimming coach Norris Eastman was also present. The officers of the chapter and Dr. and Mrs. George Craddock, a member of the Alumni Board of Directors, were on hand to extend a welcome. The Lynchburg chapter is proud to have four new men from their area.

NORFOLK

■ THE OFFICERS and directors of the Norfolk Chapter entertained the six new students from the area who are entering Washington and Lee in September. "The cook-out" was held again at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Levin on August 12.

Bill Washburn, executive secretary, was there to welcome the new freshmen, as were several upperclassmen. Color slides of the University, particularly those of Freshman Camp, were shown.

In the short business session the following officers were named: Townsend Oast, '51, president; Thomas R. McNamara, '52, vice-president; and Samuel R. Ames, '42, secretary.

CHARLOTTE

■ THE ALUMNI of the Charlotte chapter gathered for a meeting at the City Club on Thursday evening, May 27. Harry Berry, the president, presided over the meeting and the short business session. New officers elected were James J. White, III, '51, president, and William A. Towler, III, '58, vice-president and secretary.

Bill Washburn, the Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association, made a report on the latest developments on campus. He expressed official welcome from the University to the three new freshmen from the Charlotte area who are entering Washington and Lee in September.

Charlotte meeting: l-r, outgoing president HARRY A. BERRY, JR., '49, and new president JAMES J. WHITE, III, '51.

Norfolk meeting: l-r, RICHARD SPINDLE, '42, BERNARD LEVIN, '42, and T. W. JOYNES, JR., '52.

CUMBERLAND VALLEY

■ IN SPITE of a drizzling rain the Cumberland Valley Chapter held a reception-banquet in the Venice Motel, in Hagerstown, Maryland, on September 1. The occasion was in honor of three new men from the chapter area who will enter Washington and Lee as freshmen this year. A delightful smorgasbord was served.

I. Glenn Shively, the outgoing president, expressed welcome on behalf of the chapter and called upon Kemble White, a rising senior at the University, who made a brief talk to the freshmen as to what they might expect in the first few weeks of school.

William Hamilton, '43, chairman of the nominating committee named the following slate of officers and directors who were elected unanimously:

President, Clyde E. Smith, '42; Vice-president, James L. Rimler, '31; Secretary-Treasurer, John B. Hoke, Jr., '61. Directors: Samuel C. Strite, '29, Merle G. Kaetzel, '31, Charles R. Beall, Jr., '56, Robert E. Clapp, Jr., '30, J. Malcolm McCardell, '37, John B. Hoke, Jr., '61, and R. Noel Spence, '56.

Clyde Smith in accepting the gavel expressed thanks to Bill Washburn for attending the meeting and giving an up-to-date report on the University and the plan for an Alumni House.

WASHINGTON

■ A LARGE NUMBER of the thirty-two new entering freshmen were honored by the Washington, D. C., Alumni Chapter on September 1. The occasion was a luncheon in the Army-Navy Downtown Club.

Welcome was expressed by the President Vernon W. Holleman, Jr., '58. Phil Claxton, Jr., of the class of 1967, and a recent graduate, Randy Cole, gave brief advice to the freshmen on various aspects of University life.

■ HOLDING ITS ANNUAL business meeting on June 16 at the Rotunda Club, the Richmond chapter elected the following new officers: Walter J. McGraw, '55, president; J. William Doswell, '47, vice-president; Mark W. Saur, '49, secretary; and Lee A. Putney, '53, treasurer.

A social hour preceded the business meeting. Included in the meeting were proposals for projects and activities in the forthcoming year.

■ J. WILLIAM DOSWELL, '48, vice-president, expressed welcome on behalf of the entire chapter to twelve new freshmen and their fathers at a meeting of the Richmond Chapter on Thursday, September 2.

The luncheon was held at the Hunt Room of the Richmond Hotel and featured a fine talk by Dr. Edward C. Atwood, Dean of Students at Washington and Lee. Dr. Atwood addressed himself mainly to the freshmen, giving a statistical description of the entering class of 1969 and an account of the first several months at Washington and Lee. It was a most successful luncheon and was extremely well attended.

Doswell, substituting for Walter McGraw, president of the chapter, introduced Dr. John Thomas, a member of the University Board of Trustees, as well as Dr. A. A. Houser, '09, and Mr. Jonas Larrick '15. He spoke highly of the devotion and dedication of these men.

NEW YORK

■ MEETING AT THE New York Athletic Club on September 1st, the alumni sponsored a freshman reception. The arrangements were made by Richard H. Turrell, '49, president of the New York alumni chapter.

The highlight of the meeting was a panel discussion which featured upperclassmen Chuck Griffin, '66, Luke Crosland, '68, and Dick Brunn, '68. The panel answered the questions put to them by the freshmen and their parents. President Turrell expressed the good wishes of the entire chapter to all of the new men.

CLEVELAND

■ THE ALUMNI OF THE Cleveland, Ohio, area met for lunch at the Cleveland Athletic Club on May 11. Presiding at the business session was William M. France, '58, retiring president.
