Degrees Conferred on 375 Men and Women; Five Receive Honorary Doctorates

University Marshal Westbrook Barritt heads commencement procession.

Washington and Lee conferred undergraduate and law degrees on 375 men and women and honorary doctorates on five men in commencement ceremonies marking the end of its 228th academic year.

The honorary degrees were awarded to Dr. John T. Fey, a 1939 alumnus who is chairman of the board of The Equitable Life Assurance Society and former president of the Universities of Vermont and Wyoming; Dr. Henry A. Turner Jr., a 1954 graduate who is now chairman of Yale University's history department; Robert R. Witt of San Antonio, a Rockbridge County native who received his W&L degree in 1913 and who was president of Builders Supply Co. from 1929 and chairman of the board from 1951 until retiring in 1959; M. Caldwell Butler, Republican member of the U. S. House of Representatives from Virginia's Sixth District, which includes Lexington; and Peter H. Taylor, an award-winning writer and professor at the University of Virginia.

Commencement-week activities began with the traditional baccalaureate sermon, delivered this year by Dr. Minor L. Rogers, associate professor of religion at W&L, whose topic dealt with "spiritual renewal."

Believing that there "is an absence today of a sense of moral clarity about what is right and wrong; an absence of heroes who even begin to measure up to our ideals; a lack of ready recognition that service to others brings joy and peace and meaning to our lives," Rogers recommended that people return to the message found in Micah 6:8, "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

This imperative, Rogers said, is both universal and particular, a text with the capacity to speak to people of all faiths in a religiously plural world.

Board, was the principal speaker at the Reserve Officer Training Corps commissioning ceremonies in Lee Chapel. Three students received regular army commissions and 15 received reserve commissions during the ceremonies. Six of the students were designated distinguished military graduates.

During the traditional remarks to the graduates, President Robert E. R. Huntley said that knowledge can give men both freedom and power. That knowledge, he quoted from Socrates, "is not in the sensations but in the process of reasoning about them, for it is possible to apprehend being and truth by reasoning, but not by sensation."

Freedom and power are counterparts of one another, Huntley said, freedom being "the ability to think, to discern, to evaluate, to choose," and power is "the ability to act as a result of knowledge and reason, the ability to determine one's own course as a result of thought."

Harking back to the truism that power tends to corrupt, Huntley said "the freedom a person has as a result of his capacity for knowledge is a burden which he often carries badly," but he also said that men need not be corrupted. "For the beauty of humanity is this: if we have the power to lead corrupt lives, we also have the power to lead good lives—and most important of all we have the power to tell the difference."

The Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award, conferred by the faculty upon the graduating student who has excelled "in high ideals of living, in spiritual qualities, and in generous and disinterested service to others," was awarded to Richard W. Stein of

John Theodore Fey

Jacksonville, Fla. Stein, a cum laude graduate who majored in both psychology and religion, was head of the University Federation and chairman of the Big Brother volunteer programs and was coordinator of a tutoring program in the local elementary schools and of a companion therapy program at the Western State mental hospital in Staunton, Va. He also worked at the Presbyterian Children's Home in Lexington.

The Frank J. Gilliam Award, the chief honor that can be conferred on a graduating student by his peers, was presented to George F. Griffin IV of Rockville, Md., the vice president of the student body during the 1977-78 academic year. He had been a student manager in the dining hall for three years, a junior class representative on the Executive Committee, and a sophomore representative on the University Council.

The class valedictorian was James G. Sheridan Jr. of Lexington, who earned a perfect 4.0 grade-point average—only the fifth W&L student to do so—while majoring in both chemistry and physics.

John T. Fey entered the University of Maryland's law program directly from Washington and Lee. He received his LL.B. degree from Maryland in 1940, the M.B.A. degree from Harvard in 1942, and the J.S.D. degree, the highest earned degree in law, from Yale in 1952. He holds honorary doctorates from Middlebury and Alma Colleges and from the University of Vermont.

He was president of the University of Vermont from 1958 to 1964 and president of the University of Wyoming from 1964 to 1966. Previously he had taught law and later was dean of law at Henry Ashby Turner Jr.

George Washington University. He joined The Equitable as vice chairman of the board in 1974, after eight years as president of the National Life Insurance Company of Vermont. He became board chairman of Equitable in 1975. Fey received the honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Henry A. Turner Jr. is an expert on the history of modern Europe, and Germany in particular. He joined the Yale faculty in 1958 and is chairman of the history department for the term 1976-79. He was born in Atlanta and received his graduate degrees from Princeton. He is the author of Stresemann and the Politics of the Weimar Republic and other books and articles on the political and economic history of modern Germany and on the comparative aspects of European fascism.

He has been the recipient of several grants and research fellowships, including a Guggenheim, a Fulbright to Germany, a German Marshall Foundation fellowship, a Stimson fellowship to Germany, and two grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Turner received the honorary Doctor of Letters degree.

Robert R. Witt was born near Lexington in 1889. At W&L he was president of the YMCA and of the Cotillion Club, the Final Ball and the 1913 Fancy Dress Ball. After graduation he became a salesman for the Steves Sash & Door Co. in Texas and later became manager of the company's Corpus Christi branch.

In 1920 he opened his own business as a broker in building materials, and a year later merged his firm with a faltering wholesale company, Builders Supply, and assumed management responsibilities. He became president in 1929 and chairman in 1951. He has been a trustee of Trinity University (San Antonio) since 1945. That institution awarded him an honorary doctorate in 1951. He has been a trustee of Southwest Research Institute, a director of the Alamo National Bank, and is former president of the San Antonio Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce. In 1966 he was designated San Antonio's Outstanding Citizen of the Year by the Exchange Club there at its annual Golden Deeds Award banquet. Witt received the honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

M. Caldwell Butler was elected to Congress in 1972 and has been reelected every two years since. He is a member of the House Committee on the Judiciary, and played a prominent part in the impeachment inquiry of then-President

James G. Sheridan Jr., valedictorian with a perfect 4.0

Nixon in 1974 as well as in confirmation hearings for Vice Presidents-designate Gerald Ford and Nelson Rockefeller.

Butler is the ranking Republican on the Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, and in that capacity he has been instrumental in drafting the revised general bankruptcy code and the special bankruptcy act providing the mechanics for adjusting the long-term debt of major cities such as New York. He was active from the outset in planning for the national Bicentennial observance and worked closely with John W. Warner, chairman of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration and a W&L trustee.

Butler is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Richmond and received his law degree from the University of Virginia. He was a member of the Virginia House of Delegates from 1962 to 1972 and was House Minority Leader from 1966. Before his election to Congress, he was a partner in the Roanoke law firm of Eggleston, Holton, Butler & Glenn. His former law partner, A. Linwood Holton, is a 1949 Washington and Lee graduate and received an honorary LL.D. degree from W&L seven years ago. Butler also received the honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Peter H. Taylor, who has been called "the American Chekhov," has taught at U.Va. since 1967 and is currently Commonwealth Professor of English. He received his B.A. degree from Kenyon College. Before joining the faculty at Virginia, he taught at Indiana and Ohio State Universities, the Universities of Chicago and North Carolina—Greensboro, and Kenyon.

His stories appear regularly in The New Yorker among other publications, and this year his New Yorker story "In the Miro District" was cited in the presentation of the National Magazine Award for fiction to that magazine.

Taylor is a member of the American Academy/Institute of Arts and Letters and of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has been the recipient of Guffenheim, Fulbright and Ford fellowships and grants and in 1950 won the National Academy Award for fiction.

His books include a novel, Woman of Means, and several collections of stories, among them A Long Fourth and Other Stories (1948), Happy Families are All Alike (1959), Miss Leonora When Last Seen and Other Stories (1964), Collected Stories of Peter Taylor (1970), Presences (1974) and In the Miro District (1977).

His stories have appeared in such periodicals as The Southern Review, New Republic, Harper's Bazaar, Partisan Review and Kenyon Review as well as in The New Yorker.

The Spring 1977 issue of Shenandoah, Washington and Lee's literary quarterly, was dedicated to articles about Taylor's writings. He received the Doctor of Letters degree.

THE PLACEMENT GAME

Do Business Majors Have a Real Advantage Over Liberal Arts Graduates?

The liberal arts have been getting a bum rap.

There is, to be sure, no doubt about one point: It's easier for an undergraduate business major to find a job today than it is for a student who majored in the liberal arts and sciences.

But is the business major at so overpowering an advantage as to warrant the exodus we see throughout higher education today from the arts and sciences into business?

Most studies show that arts-and-sciences majors do, in the long run, find fulfilling and satisfying work—despite the typically difficult initial job search and sometimes-unusual career patterns.

But what about the short run?

To answer this question, Washington and Lee has undertaken studies in each of the past two years to determine the employment/unemployment rates among recent liberal-arts graduates as compared with those rates for recent business graduates. The surveys were taken in mid-October following

This is a revised and expanded version of an article by Dr. Cappeto, "Liberal Arts vs. Business Administration," that appeared in the Fall 1977 issue of The Journal of College Placement. The editors of W&L are grateful to the College Placement Council for permission to adapt that article.

graduation in 1976 and 1977; each time, one primary and two follow-up mailings resulted in remarkably high returns of 84 percent and 85 percent, respectively. One might plausibly argue that the statistics for Washington and Lee graduates don't necessarily reflect general patterns throughout the nation, but they do provide some surprises and some reassurances in light of "conventional wisdom" about the lack of practical usefulness of a liberal-arts education.

Our two-year results show that on graduation day, about 50 percent of the members of each class who had sought jobs had found employment. When the figures are broken down by academic division, however, sharp contrasts become evident: 72 percent of business graduates had job offers—contrasted with 47 percent of social-science graduates, 43 percent of graduates in the humanities, and just 22 percent of science majors. Based on these graduation-day figures alone, the business major certainly does look attractive.

Especially at a small college such as Washington and Lee, an important element in the senior-year job-search ritual is the campus grapevine. Although students do not have precise statistics day by day, they do know what students in which majors are receiving job offers—and which students are not.

Students are less aware, however, of what happens after graduation. The grapevine shuts down, of course, and the job-market impressions held by the new degree-holders are based largely on what they had heard while school was in session. These impressionistic views—which receive annual reinforcement in the national news media—typically predict doom for the liberal-arts graduate and imply that all available jobs will go to the business majors.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE FOUR YEARS CAN MAKE

One of the predictable results of going to college is that a student's career plans as he thinks of them when he enters are likely to undergo considerable reformulation before he leaves.

Each year, entering freshmen at Washington and Lee, and at several hundred other four-year liberal-arts colleges throughout the nation, participate in a detailed survey prepared and evaluated jointly by the American Council on Education (ACE) and the University of California at Los Angeles. The results are tabulated individually by college and for the national group as a whole.

And each year, about one in three W&L freshmen says he intends to enter law, while one in five says business. (Last September, 31.8 percent of W&L's freshmen named law; 21.6 percent named business. Both figures are typical for freshman classes at W&L throughout the 1970s.)

But by graduation day, the percentages are virtually reversed.

The third most popular career choice among 1977 freshmen at W&L is medicine; 12.6 percent indicated they intend to become physicians or dentists.

Journalism was the next most frequently named career among W&L freshmen last fall—5.4 percent.

The figures for all four of the most popular professions among Washington and Lee freshmen are considerably

Placement Director Michael A. Cappeto

But the data say that it ain't necessarily so.

An examination of what happened to W&L graduates in 1976 and 1977 within five months of graduation offers a substantially different picture. About 10 percent of the unemployed graduates received job offers in each of the five months—so that by October of both years, only about 7½ percent of W&L's graduates did not have jobs.

Furthermore, the graduation-day discrepancies among majors became dramatically less pronounced. Two percent of our business majors were unemployed; the unemployment rates among other majors were 6 percent in the humanities, 7 percent in the social sciences, and 8 percent in the natural sciences.

Of considerable importance, furthermore, is our finding that among those few still unemployed in October, about three-quarters of them had only recently begun to look for a job at all—and the remaining quarter had not yet initiated a job search.

The data clearly indicate, then, that business graduates receive job offers earlier than art/sciences majors and subsequently continue to experience the lowest incidence of unemployment. However, the differences among unemployment rates five months after graduation do not seem to be significant enough to make the business major preferable—at least not as dramatically

Only 6.7 percent of male freshmen at four-year colleges throughout the country chose law. The W&L figure is four times higher.

Nationally, 14.5 percent of male freshmen indicated they plan to enter business; the W&L figure is half again larger.

Six percent nationally chose medicine. The Washington and Lee figure is twice as large.

And only 1.6 percent of male freshmen throughout the nation named journalism. The W&L freshmen figure is almost three-and-a-half times that.

Among Washington and Lee

freshmen, 11.6 percent said they did not have definite career plans. Nationally among male freshmen, that “undecided” figure was 9.6 percent.

There are no data to explain why Washington and Lee undergraduates change their career objectives during college. But by the time they graduate, the fact is that their goals closely reflect their father's footsteps.

Among last fall's freshmen at W&L, for instance, almost half—48 percent—are the sons of businessmen. The fathers of 11.6 percent of the members of the class are lawyers, and the fathers of 10 percent are physicians or dentists.

Other data about 1977's “typical” W&L freshman show that the University's “good academic reputation” was an overwhelmingly important reason why he chose Washington and Lee. That was named by 88.5 percent of the class as a “very important” factor. Students were allowed to designate more than one “very important reason” for choosing W&L, and their other reasons, in rank order, were the advice of an alumnus (27.7 percent), financial aid awarded by the University (23.2 percent), Washington and Lee's special academic programs (14.2 percent), the advice of a secondary-school guidance counselor (11.7 percent), a visit with a W&L admissions representative (10.4 percent), and the recommendation of friends (9.6 percent).

preferable as people commonly think.

A slightly different question is that of underemployment, as against unemployment. It is useful to inquire whether a business degree brings any distinct advantages, in terms of short-range underemployment, absent in a degree in arts-and-sciences.

It is generally agreed that the careers of college graduates are unstable during the first few years after graduation. Although this general conclusion is perhaps not perfectly adaptable to the situation of the Washington and Lee graduate, nevertheless an analysis of underemployment five months after graduation is interesting and possibly even useful.

The W&L study revealed a disappointing overall underemployment rate of 31 percent. Surprisingly, natural-science graduates experienced the lowest underemployment rate (24 percent,) followed by business graduates (29 percent), social-science graduates (32 percent), and humanities graduates (39 percent).

Sixteen percent of the W&L graduates who participated in the study said they were working in what they considered to be temporary jobs, not viable careers. Again, sharp contrasts among academic divisions were found: 92 percent of business graduates said they believed their jobs possessed career potential, as compared with 82 percent of the humanities graduates, 81 percent of social-science graduates, and 73 percent of graduates in the humanities.

Thus, business graduates do seem to have a short-range advantage in finding career-oriented jobs. This most likely

EMPLOYMENT AND GRADUATE-SCHOOL PATTERNS

In order to serve W&L students more effectively, the University's Office of Career Development and Placement surveys each graduating class to determine employment and graduate-school patterns. Results of these annual surveys are distributed to the faculty for use in advising undergraduates, and to students themselves for use in planning their own careers.

Based on an 85 percent return from members of the classes of 1976 and 1977, these patterns were found:

Graduate school. About 40 percent of W&L graduates entered graduate or professional school as full-time students. Law school represents the most frequently chosen field, about 15 percent in each graduating class. Medical school accounts for about 7 percent, and business school about 6 percent. Another 12 percent pursue a variety of other graduate programs.

Employment. About 55 percent of the graduating classes entered the job market after graduation. They pursue almost every kind of work imaginable; the most popular careers, however, are business administration and management, merchandising, sales, military service, banking and finance, and journalism.

results from the nature of the education itself; the liberal arts do not pretend to prepare a student for any particular career, while the business major is career-specific.

But in examining yet another variable—job satisfaction—our study found that humanities majors enjoy the highest degree of satisfaction (92 percent), followed by business graduates (89 percent), social-science graduates (85 percent), and natural-science graduates (76 percent). It is interesting and instructive to note that humanities graduates, though they are the ones most frequently underemployed, have the highest incidence of job satisfaction.

It is my conclusion, based on analysis of all the data gathered in our two years of studies, that the short-range employment advantages of earning a degree in business (as opposed to earning a degree in the arts or natural or social sciences) are not so great as to warrant any automatic decision on the part of a career-oriented student to choose a business major solely on the grounds of its potential practical usefulness—especially when subjective factors, notably perceptions of underemployment and personal satisfaction, are weighed in the balance.

THE UBIQUITOUS SWING

W&L's Fight Song Is Virtually the National Anthem of College Airs

The Washington and Lee Swing has stood up for seven decades as the granddaddy of them all among college airs.

Beginning with a short-lived misunderstanding over the true authorship of the famous song, followed by its being filched by dozens of other colleges with scant regard for copyright laws, and continuing through its use as a campaign song in a Presidential election, the Swing has had a history that is as stormy as it is fascinating.

One unusual aspect of the Swing is that it is an original product of the college whose national stature it has helped acclaim. While other universities have usually adapted their words to established tunes, the Washington and Lee Swing struck a new note, so to say, among college anthems because its words and music were the product of W&L students.

For the record, credit for the song is given to three Washington and Lee men, all now deceased. The tune was first strummed on a mandolin in a dormitory room in 1905 by Mark Sheafe, a South Dakota native then attending Washington and Lee.

Without benefit of lyrics, the melody was kept alive by the W&L Mandolin and Guitar Club after Sheafe's graduation in 1906. Three years later, Thornton W. Allen came to Washington and Lee, heard the tune, and set it on paper. In collaboration with Clarence A. (Tod) Robbins, an imaginative undergraduate from a prominent Brooklyn family, the Swing was published and copyrighted. Robbins provided the words which have been sung by generations of W&L men ever since. Sheafe's name was omitted and did not appear in the copyright until 1930, Robert B. James Jr. is the Chief Administrative Judge of the Board of Contract Appeals for the federal General Services Administration. More to the point, perhaps, is that he is also one of the most ardent Swing aficionados in all of W&L alumnidom; at last count, he had 38 different recorded versions of it in his collection. This article, Judge James notes, is based in large measure on a history of the Swing published in the 1951 Gator Bowl Program.

Robert Bleakley James Jr. owns 38 different recorded versions of the Washington and Lee Swing.

after it was positively established that it had been he who had conceived the original melody a quarter of a century earlier.

On the strength of the commercial success of the Swing, Allen founded his own music publishing firm in New York. By the time of his death in 1944, it had become the nation's leading publisher of college songs. Many of America's leading universities credit Allen with composition of their official marching and victory songs.

After leaving Lexington in 1910, Tod Robbins set up residence on the French Riviera and spent his life there as a writer and sportsman. Prominent as an author of mystery novels, one of his books, The Unholy Three, was made into a movie starring Lon Chaney.

THE UBIQUITOUS SWING

Mark Sheafe, to whom primary credit should be given for creating the Swing, lived a modest life in Watertown, S.D., where he practiced law until his death in 1949.

But the tune which the W&L trio fashioned endures as an all-time classic of American collegiana.

No one knows how many colleges have adopted it as their own. In the '30s, it was claimed by both Tulane and Alabama, which caused no small amount of consternation when those two schools met each other in football in 1931. Today it's played by college bands from Arizona to Slippery Rock State. And when freshmen arrive at W&L each fall, many are startled at first to hear their familiar high-school fight song played and sung at their new college.

The Swing stimulates a flood of memories whenever alumni hear it—and they're likely to hear it no matter where they are in the world. One alumnus recalls visiting a church where he heard the Swing played as the offertory hymn while the plate was being passed.

In 1924 the Swing was solidly identified as the Democratic party's campaign song in the race for the Presidency as they whooped it up for John W. Davis of the Class of '92, a former law teacher and then a member of the Board of Trustees. In spite of the vigorous melody and special lyrics (supplied by the Louisiana alumni chapter), the Republicans put an Amherst man, Calvin Coolidge, in the White House.

SWINGING NUMBER ONE

It has been 20 years since Washington and Lee University de-emphasized intercollegiate athletics. But the Generals are still swinging Number One on the hit parade.

There are hundreds of college football songs. The Irish conquered while they sang "Cheer, cheer for old Notre Dame." The Yellow Jackets rallied to the tune of "I'm A Ramblin' Wreck From Georgia Tech." "On, Wisconsin" fired the Badgers to victory. At Yale, it was "Boola Boola"; at Cornell, "Far Above Cayuga's Waters," and at Princeton, "Old Nassau."

None, however, has achieved the popularity of the W&L song.

Composed 65 years ago, the Washington and Lee Swing is the most popular football song ever written, still played more than any other.

Excerpted with permission from an article by Abe Goldblatt, staff sports writer for the Norfolk (Va.) Virginian-Pilot, in 1974. Goldblatt—who didn't go to Washington and Lee—heard the Swing on the radio one morning while driving to work. "They play it nearly every day," he mused, and he decided to investigate the continuing popularity of the all-time college favorite.

When Washington and Lee's men

fall in line,——

We're going to win again

another time;——

For W. and L. I yell, yell, yell, yell, yell,——

And for the university I yell, I yell like hell, So fight! fight!

fight! for ev'ry yard;

RAH! RAH! RAH!

Yes by gosh!

W&L's Famed Reeves Collection of Porcelain Returns to China

More than 100 pieces of Chinese porcelain exported to the United States in the 18th and early-19th centuries went on display this summer in the Republic of China.

The exhibition marked the first time the Chinese descendants of the early porcelain artisans have had the opportunity to see a comprehensive showing of the delicate and historically important porcelain items their ancestors manufactured.

The pieces shown in Taiwan are from Washington and Lee's widely acclaimed Reeves Collection, which consists of 2,000 items in all. Selections from the Reeves Collection have been shown in museums and galleries throughout the United States for more than four years. This summer's visit to China marked the first time the Collection had been exhibited outside America.

Most of the pieces shown in Taiwan are decorated with representations of scenes, people and emblems of particular significance in the formation of the United States. Many of the pieces show American eagles or flags.

The exhibition opened at the National Museum of History in Taipei, Taiwan, in mid-July. Representing the University at the opening were President and Mrs. Robert E. R. Huntley; University Treasurer James W. Whitehead, curator of the Reeves Collection, with Mrs. Whitehead; and Prof. I-Hsiung Ju, artist-in-residence, with Mrs. Ju. The Huntleys visited Taiwan for the exhibition as guests of the Chinese education ministry. The Whiteheads and the Jus visited through grant support from the National Museum and from the Pacific Cultural Foundation.

Also representing Washington and Lee at the ceremonies marking the opening of the Reeves Collection exhibition were Mr. and Mrs. H. Gordon Leggett Jr. of Lynchburg; Mrs. Farris Hotchkiss of Lexington and her mother, Mrs. Albert Love of Atlanta; Dr. and Mrs. Leon F. Sensabaugh; and Mrs. Staunton Sample of Shreveport, La. Dr. Sensabaugh is former dean and professor of history emeritus, and Mrs. Sensabaugh is office manager of the University Development Office. Mrs. Sample is the widow of a 1938 Washington and Lee alumnus and the mother of a 1969 graduate, Wade Sample.

While in Taipei, Whitehead delivered two lectures at the National Museum on the topic of the role of export porcelain in the development of trade between China and the United States in the years immediately following independence.

Generally, the Chinese craftsmen—who made the finest hard-paste porcelain in the world at that time—decorated items only after they received a specific commission from a Western merchant. A number of the pieces shown in the Taiwan exhibition thus bear family crests or other personalized patterns, such as the plate owned by George Washington—combining the distinctive Chinese flower-and-butterfly "Fitzhugh" pattern on the border with the emblem of The Society of the Cincinnati in the center. The Cincinnati was the organization of Revolutionary War officers to which Washington belonged. The china set purchased by Washington is believed to have been among the first to come to the United States after direct trade between the two countries was established following the Revolution.

Other pieces from the Reeves Collection shown in Taiwan included several examples of so-called "Jesuit ware," decorated with scenes copied by Chinese painters from prints brought to the Orient by Western missionaries.

The Reeves Collection was donated to Washington and Lee in 1967 by Euchlin Dalcho Reeves, a 1927 law graduate, and his wife, Louise Herreshoff Reeves (whose paintings from early in this century, also part of their gift to W&L, have generated much attention in their own right as the result of the touring exhibition, "Louise Herreshoff: An American Artist Discovered"). Mr. and Mrs. Reeves spent their entire married life assembling the collection.

Their emphasis was on Chinese porcelain manufactured specially for export to the United States, though the Collection also contains Chinese pieces made for export to European markets and pieces crafted in Europe after German alchemists discovered the secret of making hard-paste porcelain early in the 18th century, thus enabling them to manufacture it successfully and compete with the Chinese on a commercial scale.

The exhibition in Taiwan grew partly out of the interest of the Chinese ambassador to the United States, James C. H. Shen, and his wife. They became acquainted with the Reeves Collection—the first Chinese export porcelain they had ever seen—when it had its premiere exhibition in Norfolk, Va., in 1974 as a part of the American Bicentennial observance.

Mr. and Mrs. Shen subsequently visited Lexington to view the permanent collection while the Bicentennial selections were on the nationwide tour under Smithsonian Institution sponsorship.

Also instrumental in arranging the Taiwan exhibition was Prof. Ju, a native of mainland China and a leading Chinese artist who has long been associated with the National Museum on Taiwan.

When news of the Taiwan exhibition was announced, Ambassador Shen remarked that "under ordinary circumstances, sending porcelain to the Republic of China would be like carrying coals to Newcastle, because it was in China that porcelain originated—many, many centuries ago.

"But there is an important difference," he said. "The pieces Washington and Lee University is sending from its famous Reeves Collection are export porcelain, chinaware manufactured mostly on order in the 18th and 19th centuries.

"Most Chinese people have never seen them before, except in foreign museums. For this reason, the display in Taipei has extraordinary educational significance."

William M. Hartog

Florida man named new W&L admissions chief

William M. Hartog, head of admissions at Rollins College in Florida since 1972, has been named director of admissions at Washington and Lee.

Hartog, 31, succeeds James D. Farrar, who had been W&L's admissions director for 16 years. Farrar was named in March to organize and direct a new program designed to involve W&L alumni intensively in the undergraduate recruiting and admissions process.

The new W&L admissions director is a 1969 B.A. graduate of Rollins and earned a master's degree in 1972 from its graduate school of finance and business administration.

Widely active in professional organizations, he is president-elect of the Southern Association of College Admissions Counselors and conference chairman for that group's annual meeting this year.

Hartog's appointment was announced by Dr. Lewis G. John, dean of students. Admissions activities at Washington and Lee are part of that office's responsibilities.

A search is currently under way to fill the newly created position of associate admissions director, Dr. John said.

Faculty promotions

Five members of the faculty have been awarded promotions in rank, effective Sept. 1.

Moving up to associate professor from assistant professor are Dr. Minor L. Rogers of the religion department; Dr. Halford R. Ryan, W&L debate coach, of the English department; William J. Stearns, swimming coach, of the athletic department; and Robert B. Youngblood of the German department.

Promoted from instructor to assistant professor is Dr. Harlan R. Beckley of the religion department.

Dr. Rogers has taught at Washington and Lee since 1972. He received his undergraduate education at Virginia Military Institute and holds the bachelor of divinity degree from Virginia Theological Seminary and the Ph.D. from Harvard University. He was a missionary in Japan from 1961 to 1965 and is currently an active teaching participant in W&L's Asian Studies program. He was president of the Virginia Association of Teachers of Asian Language and Literature in 1975.

Ryan has taught at W&L since 1970. He is a B.A. graduate of Wabash College and earned his advanced degrees from the University of Illinois. He is a former president of the Virginia Forensics Association and currently edits its newsletter. Ryan is widely active in debate organizations and was an organizer and director of the Bicentennial Youth Debate program for secondary-school students.

Stearns holds the B.S. and M.S.

degrees from Springfield (Mass.) College. He began teaching at Washington and Lee in 1966. In addition to swimming, he coaches W&L's newest intercollegiate sport, water polo, and is assistant track coach.

Youngblood joined the faculty in German in 1965. He earned his B.A. degree in Germany at the University of Heidelberg and his master's degree at San Francisco State College. He was awarded a Fulbright summer grant for study in Germany this year.

Beckley has taught at Washington and Lee since 1974. He is a B.S. graduate of the University of Illinois and received his master's degree in divinity and his Ph.D. from Vanderbilt University.

Endowed scholarship fund honors 1927 law alumnus

An endowed scholarship fund has been established at Washington and Lee in honor of a 1927 law graduate by his brother, a 1937 B.A. graduate.

The new scholarship is named for Robert Hancock Jones, a retired attorney in Dallas. It was created by an endowment gift from his brother, George Rather Jones, also of Dallas, a retired captain for Braniff International Inc.

The Robert Hancock Jones Scholarship will be awarded on the basis of academic achievement and personal promise, with preference given to students from Texas and Tennessee.

Named scholarships are established at Washington and Lee in recognition of endowment gifts of $25,000 or more, designated specifically for financial aid.

Faculty publications

Two W&L teachers, one in art and one in psychology, have had books published recently here and in China.

I-Hsiung Ju, artist-in-residence and associate professor of art, is the author of The Book of Orchid, the second in a series of texts by him on the topic of Oriental brush-painting.

Dr. David G. Elmes

Dr. David G. Elmes, professor of psychology, is the author of Readings in Experimental Psychology, recently published by Rand McNally College Publishing Co.

In addition, the National Museum of History in Taipei, Taiwan (the Republic of China), has just issued an anthology containing reproductions of 26 full-color landscapes painted by Prof. Ju. The landscapes, which are removable from the volume for framing, are primarily from private collections in Virginia. Ju has taught at Washington and Lee since 1969.

The collection of reproductions has an introduction by Ju's W&L colleague, Dr. Harold C. Hill, director of the University's Asian Studies Program. The book also contains a preface by Ho Hao-tien, the director of the National Museum. In that preface, Ho describes Ju as "one of the few Chinese artists who can blend the two worlds"—traditional Oriental brush-painting and western oil painting—"and enrich his work with modern techniques yet remain still essentially Oriental." Ju's paintings, Ho writes, "possess the same spirit as those of the great masters of the past."

Ju's Orchid volume follows his Book of Bamboo. Orchid and bamboo are two of the so-called "four horsemen" of Chinese brush painting. The others, the chrysanthemum and the plum, will be the subjects of future books. The four contain all the basic strokes used in traditional Chinese painting.

Elmes' new book is a companion volume to Experimental Psychology: Understanding Psychological Research, written by Elmes and a 1969 W&L graduate, H. L. Roediger III.

Two teachers awarded NEH summer study grants

Drs. John C. Winfrey and Alfred G. Fralin Jr. were recipients this summer of two-month research grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Winfrey, professor of economics and author of Public Finance: Public Choice and the Public Economy, is studying 17th-century English political theory at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Fralin, assistant professor of French, is conducting research into the classical tradition in European and American drama at the University of California at Berkeley.

Each NEH-supported seminar brings 12 college teachers in a variety of academic fields, selected from throughout the nation, to study a single topic together with authorities on the topic.

Turner edits two more sets of historical letters

Dr. Charles W. Turner, professor of American history, is the editor of two groups of 19th-century Rockbridge-related letters, published this spring and summer in scholarly journals.

"The Life and Letters of Albert Davidson" appeared in West Virginia History, that state's quarterly historical review. Davidson, a graduate of Washington College, served throughout the Civil War and was killed by a Union prisoner near the end of the conflict.

"The Life and Letters of James B. Dorman" appears in Civil War History this summer. Dorman, a graduate of V.M.I. and later a teacher there, was a well-known judge in Staunton and achieved particular local prominence as a delegate to the pre-Civil War Secession Convention in Richmond. He was a cousin of the Davidson family, whose letters, including those of Albert Davidson, Dr. Turner has been cataloguing and editing for publication in various journals for several years.

No slack summer for W&L's Phillips

Dr. Charles F. Phillips Jr., professor of economics, is teaching in five separate programs and seminars this summer, is organizing a management symposium on utility regulation, and has re-assumed the presidency of an international economics honor society upon the death of the man who succeeded him in that office last winter.

Phillips taught courses in two Public Utilities Executives' programs at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, in June and July, each involving about 55 executives from across the nation. He has taught in the Michigan program each year since 1970.

Phillips also led seminars on "the cost of money" in New York at a symposium sponsored by Kidder, Peabody and Co. and he directed another seminar on regulation of the telecommunications industry and the rate-setting process for a program sponsored by Arthur Young and Co. on behalf of RCA's three communications subsidiaries.

He also taught a course in the economics of public utilities in a M.S. program offered by Pace University of New York on behalf of middle-management executives of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Phillips is also the organizer, planner and moderator of an annual four-day symposium on the topic of competition and monopoly in the telecommunications industry, which will take place at the end of August. The symposium—the sixth of its kind for which Phillips has been responsible—is sponsored jointly by Washington and Betty Munger, the irrepresible, imaginative, and enterprising manager of the W&L Bookstore installed a brood of baby chicks to promote her wares this spring. As sales grew, so did the chicks, and everybody had something to crow and cluck about.

Lee and the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Cos. Approximately 18 economists from the area served by C&P affiliate companies will take part in the series.

Phillips became acting president of the economics honor society, Omicron

Delta Epsilon, following the death May 23 of its new president, Dr. I. James Pikel of the University of Wyoming. Phillips had been president of the society in 1976 and 1977, and as immediate past president had just become chairman of its board of trustees, a post he will continue to occupy in addition to his duties as acting president.

Phillips is also the author of an article, "The Thin Red Line: The Rights of Regulators to Regulate vs. the Rights of Managers to Manage," published in the summer issue of Bell Telephone Magazine.

Scholarship fund started in honor of Leyburn

Three former students at Yale University of Dr. James Graham Leyburn have begun a scholarship fund in his honor at Washington and Lee.

The new Leyburn Scholarship Fund, which the donors hope will be increased in size over the years, was established this spring by Mowry Smith, Alan F. Dill, and Kenneth F. Burgess Jr., all of whom studied under Dr. Leyburn when he taught sociology at Yale from 1927 to 1947.

Dr. Leyburn came to Washington and Lee in 1947 as Dean of the University, a position he held for eight years, and professor of sociology.

He retired from teaching in 1970, the year he turned 70, and moved to his family's ancestral farm, Spring Hill, near Martinsburg, W. Va., where he continues to read in several languages, write (scholarly works and personal correspondence alike), and pursue hobbies such as playing the piano.

Under his direction as dean, W&L's curriculum was extensively broadened to give considerably more emphasis to the humanities, an already-excellent faculty was substantially improved, and Washington and Lee's reputation as an outstanding teaching institution was greatly increased.

At W&L—as at Yale—he quickly developed a reputation as perhaps the University's premier teacher. In a school which prides itself on small classes and close teacher-student relationships, he found it impossible to keep his classes small, but nevertheless he was able to maintain the close contact he cherished with his students.

Though he was an administrator of formidable foresight and persuasiveness—the so-called "Leyburn Plan," set forth the year he arrived at Washington and Lee, provided the pattern for most of the University's academic progress for the next quarter-century—his first love remained teaching. The enthusiasm and skill he brought to the classroom was reflected in burgeoning enrollments in the courses he taught (in ancient history, Greek and Latin classics, and social anthropology and general sociology), and by 1955 he concluded that the burdens of administrative responsibility could not be balanced effectively with his desire to teach, and he resigned as dean to return full-time to the classroom.

He received his bachelor's and master's degrees, both in economics, from Duke University, then took a second master's at Princeton, and earned the Ph.D. in sociology from Yale in 1927. Before joining the Yale faculty that year, he had taught at Hollins College and at Princeton.

"The Leyburn spirit," the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot commented editorially when he retired, "inspired a generation of students and brought W&L to the front rank of small men's schools."

In 1974, W&L awarded him an honorary Doctor of Letters degree, and remarked in the degree citation that Dean Leyburn's career had "seldom if ever" been matched in the University's history. "He enriched in countless and immeasurable ways the academic, cultural and religious life of this community. . . . An inspiring teacher, active scholar, accomplished musician, Presbyterian elder and leader, he embodied in his personal as well as his professional achievements the Greek ideal of arete—excellence and versatility in all that is admirable."

SPRING REUNIONS

Alumni Return in Large Lots; New Association Officers Are Elected

More than 250 alumni and their guests were on campus May 12-14 for the annual Spring Class Reunion Weekend which included Law Day activities, a meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors and the annual meeting of the Alumni Association.

The weekend brought together members of the Academic and Law Classes of 1928, 1938, 1953, 1963 and 1968, as well as the Old Guard, those who were at Washington and Lee more than 50 years ago. They participated in a full round of reunion banquets, cocktail parties, luncheons and a dance.

Edwin J. Foltz, '40, of Gladwyne, Pa., vice president for corporate relations of Campbell Soup Co., was re-elected president of the Alumni Board of Directors at its spring meeting. He will continue as president through next May.

William P. Boardman, '63, of Columbus, Ohio, an attorney with the firm of Wright, Harlor, Morris & Arnold, was elected vice president. Another attorney, Richard Denny, '52, of Atlanta, was elected treasurer of the alumni board.

At the Alumni Association meeting, three men were named to four-year terms on the board. They are W. Donald Bain, '49, president of Moreland Chemical Co., Inc., of Spartanburg, S.C., James F. Gallivan, '51, senior vice president of the Commerce Union Bank in Nashville, and John H. McCormack Jr., '50, chairman of the board of the Atlantic National Bank of Jacksonville. They replace retiring members Courtney Mauzey, '61, of Raleigh, N.C., Samuel B. Hollis, '51, of Memphis, and M. G. (Gus) Heatwole, '41, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

In addition, William B. Ogilvie, '64, the director of management information at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, was elected to fill the unexpired term of Fred Fox Benton, '60, also of Houston, who was elected to the University Board of Trustees last winter.

William C. Washburn and Leroy C. (Buddy) Atkins were re-elected as secretary and assistant secretary of the Alumni Association. Frank A. Hoss, '58, succeeding John A. Wolf, '69, '72L, a Baltimore attorney.

The 1977-78 Alumni Fund trophies were presented during the annual meeting.

Foltz announced at the meeting that nominations for the Distinguished Alumnus Award are open. The award or awards will be presented at Founders Day ceremonies in January. He also reported that the University Board of Trustees has asked the Alumni Association to nominate a candidate for consideration by the Board for membership. The trustees will make their decisions some time this fall, he said.

Elections were also held at the Law Council meeting, part of the annual Law Day activities.

Walter L. Hannah, '50L, of Greensboro, N.C., was elected president of the Law Council, the law school's equivalent of the Alumni Board of Directors. Robert E. Stroud, '56, '58L, of Charlottesville, was elected vice president and Robin P. Hartmann, '71L, of Dallas, was elected to the Council.

Hannah succeeded John R. Alford,

'57, '59L, of Lynchburg, as president and Stroud stepped into Hannah's position.

During the Council's meeting, it was decided to extend the terms of Law Council members from three years to four. The Council also heard reports on the Law Center, the Law Library and inter-school competitions in which W&L law students participated.

Cherie Wright, executive secretary of the Law School Association, which is made up of dues-paying members of the law alumni, was re-elected. She reported the Association's membership had risen to an all-time high of more than 870.

Paul J. Mishkin, the Emanuel S. Heller Professor of Law at the University of California at Berkeley, gave the John Randolph Tucker Lecture, entitled " 'Our Federalism' and the Limits of Litigation to Reform Governmental Institutions."

PHONATHONS I & II

First Alumni and Then Students Raised $60,000 for Alumni Fund

Jack Neill, '38A, Group III-A vice chairman

Stewart Epley, '49A class agent

Rob Norfleet, '62A

Two "phonathons" this spring, one by students and one by alumni, were responsible for adding more than $60,000 to W&L's Annual Fund.

In April, approximately 60 alumni met at the F&M Center in Richmond for three nights. They called more than a thousand of their classmates and received 443 specific pledges for the Annual Fund, amounting to $44,296, a new record for alumni telephone giving.

The effort was organized by L.

Gordon Miller, '45, a vice chairman of the Annual Fund, who was greatly assisted by Rob Turnbull, '72.

In May, a follow-up campaign began, lasting three nights and staffed entirely by students working from the admissions offices at W&L. The 28 students involved raised nearly $20,000 from 218 specific pledges.

The coordinator for the student effort was Frederick A. Brimberg, a junior from Scarsdale, N.Y. He recruited five students to help him, and they each recruited other students to work during the phonathon.

As is the case during the alumni efforts, the caller who received the most money or the most pledges each night won a prize, for this occasion a W&L beer mug.

The prize winners were Harry T. Jones III, a senior, and William M. Webster, a junior, during the first night; E. Hubbard Kennady III, a sophomore, who won in both categories the second night; and Jerry M. Baird, a senior, and Anthony A. Carli Jr., a sophomore, on the final night.

The other student participants were seniors John L. Bruch III, Robert M. Couch, Walter Granruth III, George F. Griffin IV, Benjamin I. Johns, Philip J. Kaplan, James S. McNider III, Marcus M. Pennell III, and third-year law student Robert G. Morecock.

Juniors who took part in the effort were Andrew J. Archie, R. E. Lee

Davies, Frank R. Ellerbe III, Douglas B. Lane, J. Hagood S. Morrison, Stephen D. Trigg, Peter M. Williams and Thomas A. Wiseman III.

Sophomores Daniel J. Weeks and John T. Woods and freshmen R. Christopher Gammon, James G. Hurley Jr., and Joseph Robles constituted the rest of the group.

The money raised by the two groups went to the Annual Fund, which this year had a goal of $775,000. The fund provides between eight and ten percent of W&L's annual operating budget, accounting for approximately $450 per student of the difference between the cost of a student's education at W&L and the amount the student actually pays in tuition.

ANNUAL FUND REPORT

Gifts Establish Record as Alumni Participation Rises to 36.6 Percent

The 1977-78 Annual Fund reached an all-time high of $802,439 in gifts from alumni, parents and friends—$96,573 more than last year's record-setting total of $705,866. The average gift also hit an all-time high of $142.22, up from last year's record high of $135.74. The number of donors rose from 5,200 last year to 5,692, and alumni participation rose from 32.3 percent to 36.6 percent.

Leadership for the 1977-78 Annual Fund was provided by C. Royce Hough, '59A, Annual Fund chairman and Academic Alumni chairman. Assisting him were S. Maynard Turk, '52L, Law Alumni chairman; John H. Van Amburgh, Current Parents chairman; W. Martin Kempe, Past Parents chairman; and Everett Tucker Jr., Robert E. Lee Associates chairman.

The 1977-78 Annual Fund covered eight percent of the University's educational and general budget. In 1977-78, 247 alumni, parents and friends contributed at the Lee Associates level ($1,000 or more), 33 more than last year, and 1,873 at the Colonnade Club level ($100-$999), 199 more than last year. Although Lee Associates and Colonnade Club givers comprised only 37 percent of the donors, their contributions amounted to 89 percent of the Fund.

Overall, the Fund showed an increase of 14.7 percent over last year in dollars given, and a 9.5 percent increase in the number of donors.

SPRING SPORTS ROUNDUP

All-American Honors and National Rankings Highlight the Season

All-American honors in three sports and national ranking in two were the highlight of W&L's spring sports season.

LACROSSE

On the strength of two late-season wins over Rutgers and North Carolina State, the lacrosse team went to its seventh straight NCAA championship tournament. With a 9-4 record, including a loss to perennial rival Virginia—the first in five years—the team met number-one ranked Cornell in the first round.

Cornell had won 40 games in a row at that point, but the Generals were hoping to cut the streak off. That was not to be, and in Ithica the Generals became victory 41 for Cornell. Not until the finals of the tournament, when they met Johns Hopkins, was Cornell defeated.

Head coach Jack Emmer said the loss didn't come as a result of any lack of effort by the Generals. "We hustled all the way against Cornell," he said. "They're a team with tremendous sticks, very well coached, and they never, ever stop moving. We never gave up and kept knocking them down, but were simply beaten by a team with more skill."

Among the individual highlights of the season were junior attackman John Black joining the "50-point club" with 30 goals and 23 assists and senior co-captain Charlie Brown's 164 saves and .614 save percentage. His four-year mark of 735 saves breaks All-American Skeet Chadwick's career record of 684. Middie Charlie Stieff and Brown were selected as members of the South team for the '78 North-South All Star Game. Jeff Fritz, Black's running mate on attack, missed the "50-point club" by only two points for the second year in a row. Brown was named a second-team All-American, as he was last year, and Black and Fritz earned honorable mention All-American status.

Emmer is already looking toward next year's season. "We can't feel too bad finishing the season at 9-5 and making it our seventh straight time to the tournament. We lacked skill in some positions this year but never stopped fighting for the extra edge. As a team, the players earned everything that came their way. With a strong nucleus returning, it looks good for the future of W&L lacrosse."

TENNIS

For the second year in a row, the W&L tennis Generals swept all six singles flights and all three doubles flights in winning the Old Dominion Athletic Conference tennis championships. Including the team's final year in the VCAA, W&L has been conference tennis champions for the past three seasons.

For the second consecutive year, W&L's Benjamin Johns captured the championship at number one singles and was named Conference Player of the Year.

W&L coach Dennis Bussard kept his perfect record intact, winning the ODAC Coach of the Year award for the second time. He had been named Coach of the Year in the VCAA in both 1975 and 1976 and in his four years as W&L head coach never missed being selected as the league's coach of the year.

W&L defeated teams from Emory & Henry, Hampden-Sydney, Randolph-Macon, Bridgewater, Lynchburg, Eastern Mennonite and Roanoke.

Each individual winner was named all-conference for the season, giving W&L six all-ODAC performers for 1978. Winners for the Generals were Johns, Stewart Jackson at number two singles, Cody Davis at number three, Doug Gaker at number four, David Constine at number five and Pat Norris at number six singles.

Johns and Jackson teamed up to win the number one doubles, Davis and Norris won at two and Constine and Gaker won the number three doubles.

Also for the second straight season, the tennis Generals finished in the runner-up position in the NCAA Division III national championships.

Johns made it to the semifinals of the singles play before losing. He assured himself of All-American honors, W&L's first ever in singles, by making it past the quarterfinals. He won four individual matches, including one over the top-seeded player, before losing in the semifinals.

Johns teamed with sophomore Stewart Jackson to finish second in the doubles competition. The duo won the national doubles and All-American honors in 1977. They won four championship matches this year before losing in the finals. The top four doubles teams are accorded All-American recognition and Johns and Jackson, W&L's first tennis All-Americans ever, achieved that honor again as a team in 1978.

After the season ended, Coach Dennis Bussard announced he would be leaving W&L to take the post of assistant athletic director and head basketball coach at Babson College in Massachusetts. Gary R. Franke, a 1971 graduate of Mankato State in Minnesota, was named head tennis coach. He will remain as the University's head wrestling coach, but relinquished his position as assistant trainer to take on the tennis duties. Franke is an assistant professor in the University's physical education department.

GOLF

W&L successfully defended its ODAC golf title by winning the team championship in the 1978 tournament held at the Staunton Country Club. The Generals shot a four-man total of 628 for 36 holes defeating second place Hampden-Sydney by 13 strokes. Following the leaders were Roanoke, Lynchburg, Bridgewater and Randolph-Macon.

Senior captain Jerry Maatman was named the ODAC Golfer of the Year after capturing medalist honors in the tournament. Coach Buck Leslie was named the ODAC Coach of the Year for the second straight season.

Gary R. Franke, new tennis coach

Golfer of the Year Jerry Maatman

Each of the top six individual finishers was named an all-conference golfer for 1978, and joining Maatman were junior Dave Leuning, the 1977 ODAC Golfer of the Year and this year's third-place finisher, and sixth-place finisher Bob Moorhead.

By losing the final match of the season to Roanoke, W&L just missed the opportunity for an undefeated season. The Generals closed out the season with an 8-1 record, bringing their four year total to 42 wins and six losses.

Maatman was the only W&L golfer selected to play in the Division III national championships in Wooster, Ohio. He finished with a four-day total of 304 for third-place honors and was named a first-team All-American for the second season in a row. His third round score of 69 was the lowest of the tournament and the lowest score ever in competitive play at the Wooster Country Club. He had finished fifth nationally in 1977 when the Generals as a team were seventh. W&L was not selected as a team this season.

BASEBALL

The baseball team finished the 1978 season with a 5-16 won-loss record, including a 3-9 mark in conference play. The highlight of the season would have to be W&L's upset win over ODAC champion Bridgewater.

Sophomore Chip Childs was the team's leading pitcher with three wins and a 5.69 earned run average. Vic Shepherd won two games and By Steele had the best E.R.A., 5.03.

Senior designated hitter Bob Szczecinski completed the year as W&L's leading hitter with a .373 average and also led in RBIs with 15. Second baseman Pete Restaino was second in batting with a .285 average and leftfielder Chuck D'Auria had a .283 batting average. Shortstop Doug Hassinger led in home runs, doubles and walks.

SPRING SPORTS ROUNDUP

Two regulars completed the year without an error and a 1.000 fielding percentage—Rich Wiles and first baseman Mike Busbey.

TRACK AND FIELD

The W&L track and field Generals finished a disappointing sixth place in the ODAC championships, having entered with hopes of a second-place finish or perhaps their first championship.

Bridgewater won the team title, followed by Lynchburg, Emory & Henry, Eastern Mennonite, Roanoke, W&L and Hampden-Sydney.

The highlight of the meet for W&L was freshman Karl Cheatham's 46'2" leap in the triple jump. That jump broke his own school record set only two weeks before. Junior sprinter Jack Norberg also had a fine afternoon, finishing second in both the 100 meters and the 200 meters. His 200-meter time, 21.9 seconds, missed the national qualifying time by a tenth of a second.

Other top performances for W&L were by R. J. Scaggs in the 400 meters, Norvell Scott in the 400-meter hurdles, Paul Hendry in the high jump, Baker Spring in the pole vault and Bob Hoffman in the triple jump. The mile relay team of Scaggs, Norberg, Bill Morris and Stew Atkinson finished second.

Six new school records were set during the 1978 season. Norberg set new marks in the 100 meters at 10.8 seconds and in the 200 meters in 21.9. Scott set a record in the 400-meter hurdles at 57.0. Richard Bird set the record in the 1500 meters with a time of 3:59.5 and Al Weeks set a new standard for the 5000 meters at 15:35.6. Cheatham broke the triple jump record twice, his best jump being 46'2".

ATHLETIC AWARDS

Swimmer John S. Hudson of Lancaster, Pa., was named the recipient of the Preston R. Brown Memorial Award at the season-ending All Sports Barbeque and Award Ceremony May 23 in the Warner Center.

Presented annually since 1950, the award is given to W&L's most valuable senior athlete for overall performance and athletic proficiency during the college career. It is voted by the members of the athletic department and is the highest honor a W&L athlete may receive.

In four years, Hudson has achieved All-American honors 17 different times. Head coach Bill Stearns calls Hudson, "far and away the best swimmer in the University's history." He was W&L's first-ever national champion, winning the 500- and 1650-yard freestyle events as a sophomore. He has been a Virginia state champion eight times, is a school record holder in six events, holds the state record as a member of the W&L 800 free relay team, and has been named W&L's outstanding swimmer in each of his four years in Lexington.

Seniors Jeff Slatcoff of Windber, Pa.,

and Mark Duncan of Roanoke, Va., 1977 football co-captains, were named co-recipients of the Wink Glasgow Spirit and Sportsmanship Award. The Glasgow Award has been given annually since 1958 to the W&L senior who has demonstrated the highest qualities of true W&L spirit and sportsmanship in his career. This marked the first year there have been two winners of the award.

Jim Herbert of Winston-Salem, N.C., was named the winner of the Outstanding Freshman Athlete award. That award was established in 1960 to honor the first-year athlete who showed the most athletic ability through his participation in one or more sports. Herbert, a graduate of Virginia Episcopal in Lynchburg, played defensive back in football and was a defenseman on W&L's nationally ranked lacrosse team.

GUS OTTENHEIMER was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree by the University of Arkansas at Little Rock during commencement exercises May 14. The ceremony was part of the university's 50th anniversary celebration. Ottenheimer, a businessman in Little Rock, was honored for his leadership in the development of the university. In the 1950s he chaired a committee that recommended the Little Rock Junior College be converted to a four-year institution and as a member of the board of Little Rock University he headed a committee to merge the institution with the University of Arkansas. He served for 13 years on the LRU board of trustees and the UALR board of visitors. He is a partner in Ottenheimer Bros., manufacturers of women's clothing for 30 years and he later developed the Cloverdale subdivision. Ottenheimer is also in the investment business.

FRENCH R. MCKNIGHT of Helena, Ark., received the Liberty Bell Award given annually by the Phillips County Bar Association in recognition of individual contributions to Helena, West Helena and Phillips County.
