A letter from Hillier....

Wherein he introduces much of the material that appears on the following pages

Bill Hillier

Dear Fellow Alumnus:

Your Alumni Board was represented at the September meeting of the class agents by Board member Everett Tucker, '34A, of Little Rock, Ark. Everett reports that the meeting was enthusiastic and the Alumni Fund program for 1973-74 was very effectively launched by Fund chairman Cal Thomas, '38A, of New York City. Each of you should be hearing from your own class agent.

Heed this message! The Alumni Fund makes a most important contribution to the continued well being of Washington and Lee.

With a most appropriate ceremony, the Front Campus of Washington and Lee was designated a National Historic Landmark. Dr. Ernest A. Connally, who made the presentation for the Department of Interior, National Park Service, reminded the audience of the second verse of "America" which speaks of "Thy woods and templed hills." He then went on to cite the Front Campus, with its classic architecture as a magnificent example of what the song writer had in mind.

On Saturday, October 13, Hal Clarke, '38A, vice president of the Alumni Association and Everett Tucker, '34A, met with Bill Washburn, '40A, alumni secretary, to work out the details of a "Distinguished Alumnus" award program. More about that program later.

It was my personal privilege to again attend the meeting of the University Board of Trustees that same morning. The Trustees had their usual busy agenda. Plans were approved for a loan of the Washington-Custis-Lee paintings to an art foundation for exhibition throughout the United States in connection with this nation's Bicentennial year, 1776. Locally supervised archaeological diggings in the area of Liberty Hall were approved.

Construction of three undergraduate housing units for 178 students was approved. The housing will be placed in the ravine of Woods Creek, downstream from the Footbridge, on the Wilson Field side of the ravine. The interior is planned for a combination of 4-and 5-bedroom apartments, each with single bedrooms. Rents will be adjusted to make the project self-supporting and will be at or below what many students are presently paying in the Lexington area. Additional units may be considered at a later date.

A model of the proposed new library was on display in the present library. The architect reported that the preliminary phase was substantially completed and he was instructed to proceed with working drawings.

Trustee Waller Dudley, who had met with a group of law students, reported on their concerns with respect to financial aid. Thirty per cent of the law students are receiving aid in some form. A grant recently received under the will of Walter McDonald was designated for law students loans, but the problem is a continuing one.

Dean Watt of the College reported that of the 38 graduates of 1973 who had applied for admission to medical schools, 27 or 71% had been accepted. The national average is under 30%. Faculty evaluation of the new curriculum indicated it was considered very satisfactory and that student performance had improved. The six-week term was widely appreciated. A student survey on the same subject was to be undertaken shortly.

Dean Steinheimer of the Law School reported that 88% of the 1973 graduating class had been placed by the time of graduation. This year an estimated 50 law firms and corporations will interview at Lexington for the 80 members of the senior law class.

Student body president, Doug Schwartz, reported on the orientation program for the Honor System used this fall for the freshman class. The system was discussed at freshman camp and in the dormitories. A mock Honor System trial was also presented. As Doug put it, the object was to "create a love, not a fear, of the Honor System" and to stress how it benefited all. For the first time, orientation in the Honor System was also conducted for new law students.

The Trustees meeting was the last one for Joe Birnie, who had reached the mandatory retirement age of 70. Each of us, as an alumnus, owes him a deep debt of gratitude for his long and dedicated service to the University. The Board also elected Ross Malone as rector, succeeding John Newton Thomas, who retires in January. Elected a Trustee was Edgar Shannon, who was nominated by vote of the alumni membership.

As I continue to share with you some of the experiences and personal viewpoints which flow from working on the Alumni Board, I again request you to share with me and the Board any thoughts, opinions or questions you may have. You may write me in care of the Alumni Office.

Sincerely,

Bill Hillier

Campus is officially dedicated as a National Historic Landmark

As usual, the weather was perfect. More than 500 guests gathered on the Front Campus in front of the two homes in which Robert E. Lee had lived while president of Washington College. The trustees were there; so were a number of newsmen; so were dignitaries from Virginia's educational, political, and cultural establishments.

They had come to honor, of all things, a dozen or so buildings—most of them dating to the first half of the 1800s, a collection of red-brick and whitewashed-wood structures “that, together, form one of the most dignified and beautiful college campuses in the nation,” as the National Park Service put it.

The Governor was there, Linwood Holton, himself a product (1944) of the institution which, he said, “has throughout its history fought to preserve, and strengthen, and uplift the ideals for which [Generals] Washington and Lee stood.”

The associate director of the Park Service, Dr. Ernest

An 1845 woodcut of Washington College that appeared in Henry Howe's Historical Collections of Virginia. In the foreground of this foreshortened view runs the Great Wagon Road, which linked Pennsylvania with the South.

The ceremony was preceded by a panel discussion in Lee Chapel on "Washington and Lee's Architecture, Past, Present, and Future." The panelists were Everett Fauber, Sr., the noted restoration architect; I. Taylor Sanders, the University historian; and Frederic Cox of Marcellus Wright, Cox & Cilimberg, principal architects for the capital portion of W&L's development program.

A. Connally, was there too. It is hardly a routine distinction that the Park Service and Interior Department have bestowed on Washington and Lee, he said: the Front Campus has been designated to receive the highest honor in the federal government's power to confer on a private site because "careful scholarship and rigorous comparative scrutiny" have found the Colonnade and flanking buildings to possess "a significance which transcends this Valley and the limits of the Commonwealth of Virginia . . . to possess historical significance to the whole nation—to all Americans everywhere."

And accepting the accolades on behalf of the University was the gracious and well-spoken rector of its Board, Dr. John Newton Thomas. Not only is the Landmark designation a first-order compliment to Washington and Lee, he said with tongue only half in cheek; it is also a sign of the government's "own discernment."

(The only unexpected turn came when, literally in the middle of Governor Holton's address, word began sweeping through the crowd of attending news reporters that rumors were rampant in Richmond and Washington that Holton was to be designated the new vice president; President Nixon had said, earlier in the day, that he would announce his nominee that night, and Holton had been invited to the White House for the announcement—in his capacity, as it turned out, as chairman of the Republican Governors' Conference. But the reporters were eager to speculate, and an Associated Press report triggered waves of it.)

After the ceremony members of the Board of Trustees were hosts to an hour-long reception (cider) on the lawn; later in the evening they were also hosts at the annual black-tie banquet of the Robert E. Lee Associates (fresh salmon, Liebfraumilch, a side of beef). Dr. Thomas was the after-dinner speaker; his topic was, aptly, "The Distinctive Contributions of Washington and Lee." (His remarks appear elsewhere in this magazine.)

The University's enduring traits are, he said, "academic excellence, concern for the individual, and the maintenance of high moral standards."

Antiques magazine features W&L buildings...and much more

The October issue of The Magazine Antiques carried two articles—one of them the cover feature—and an editorial about Washington and Lee, coinciding with ceremonies marking the designation of the Front Campus area as a National Historic Landmark.

The cover article is “The Buildings of Washington and Lee University,” an historical sketch concentrating principally on the ante bellum campus and its architecture. The article is by Parke S. Rouse, Jr., a 1937 W&L graduate who is executive director of The Jamestown Foundation and director of Virginia’s Bicentennial Commission.

Also appearing in the October Antiques is “The Reeves Collection of China Trade Porcelain at Washington and Lee University,” a review of the February première exhibition of pieces from the collection held at the High Museum of Art in Atlanta. The authors are Callie Huger Efir and Katherine Gross Farnham, authors of the catalogue for the High exhibition.

Both articles are accompanied by numerous illustrations—the Rouse article by a full-page color photo of Lee Chapel and 10 black-and-white scenes of the campus in the past and now; the Efir-Farnham article by nine color plates and four black-and-white photos. In addition, the editorial is accompanied by another full-color photograph of a piece from the Reeves collection.

All the color and several of the black-and-white photos were taken by Thomas C. Bradshaw, II, of Lexington, a commercial photographer who is, ironically, a graduate of Virginia Military Institute.

The cover photo of Washington Hall and the inside color photo of Lee Chapel are the same photos that appeared on the inside front and back covers of the booklet Washington and Lee University: A National Historic Landmark, mailed in October to all alumni and to other friends of the University.

The editorial, signed by Wendell Garrett, editor of Antiques, speaks of “the durability of Washington and Lee as an educational institution and its maturity as a cultural establishment of considerable magnitude”—characterized by “the majestic Greek revival facade of the old Washington College group” on the one hand and one of the majestic examples from the Reeves collection on the other.

“No other people ever demanded so much of its higher institutions of learning as have the American,” Garrett says. “None other was ever so well served by them.”

Single copies of the October Antiques can be purchased by alumni while supplies last for the cover price, $2 (postpaid), by writing Circulation Manager, The Magazine Antiques, 551 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017.

A NATIONAL HISTORIC LANDMARK WASHINGTON & LEE UNIVERSITY

Reproduced above in black and white (the original is in full color) is the cover of a commemorative booklet prepared in connection with the dedication of the Washington and Lee campus as a National Historic Landmark. The cover scene was taken from a 1857 print that hangs in the University Treasurer's Office. The booklet contains 46 photographs, four of them in full color. Some of the photographs were made a century ago. The pictures are complimented by a lively text on the architecture and history of Washington and Lee written by Robert S. Keefe, director of the Office of Public Information. Copies of the booklet were mailed to all alumni and friends in October. If you did not receive a copy or want additional copies, please write: Office of Publications, Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Virginia, 24450.

Shannon is elected a trustee after nomination by alumni

Dr. Edgar F. Shannon, Jr., a 1939 graduate of Washington and Lee and retiring president of the University of Virginia, has been elected to the Board of Trustees at Washington and Lee.

Shannon was nominated for the trusteeship by a vote of his fellow W&L alumni, and the Board confirmed his selection at its October meeting. The announcement was made on Homecoming and Alumni Reunion Weekend at W&L.

Also at the October meeting, four incumbent Trustees were re-elected to serve additional six-year terms on the board. The four are Ross L. Malone of New York, rector-elect; Lewis F. Powell, Jr., of Richmond; John M. Stemmons of Dallas, and Joseph T. Lykes, Jr., of New Orleans.

Under the comprehensive board reorganization of 1969, Trustees can serve a maximum of two consecutive six-year terms. (Trustees who have been off the board for a year or more are eligible to begin service again, however.)

Malone, the rector-elect (see related article), is vice president and general counsel of General Motors Corp. Powell is an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Stemmons is president of Industrial Properties Corp. in Dallas and chairman also of the Achievement Council, the volunteer group charged with primary responsibility for the University's decade-long $56-million Development Program. Lykes is president and chief executive officer of Lykes-Youngstown Corp. and chairman of the Achievement Council's business and industry committee. (As a member of the federal judiciary, Powell cannot participate actively in fund-raising programs.)

Shannon, whose father was professor of English at Washington and Lee from 1914 until his death in 1938, was a Rhodes Scholar, having been nominated by W&L. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa while a Washington and Lee student and has held Fulbright and Guggenheim fellowships as well.

Shannon was associate professor of English at Virginia when he was elected president of U.Va. in 1959. He will step down from that post next summer, returning full-time to the classroom. He is an authority on Tennyson.

Shannon has been president of the Virginia Association of Colleges and the Council of Southern Universities; president and chairman of the executive committee of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges; board member of the Southern Regional Education Board and the National Commission for Accrediting, and a member of the boards of visitors of both the U.S. Naval and the Air Force Academies.

He holds honorary doctorates from Washington and Lee (1959), Southwestern, Duke, Hampden-Sydney, Wake Forest, Centre, Jefferson Medical and Bridgewater.

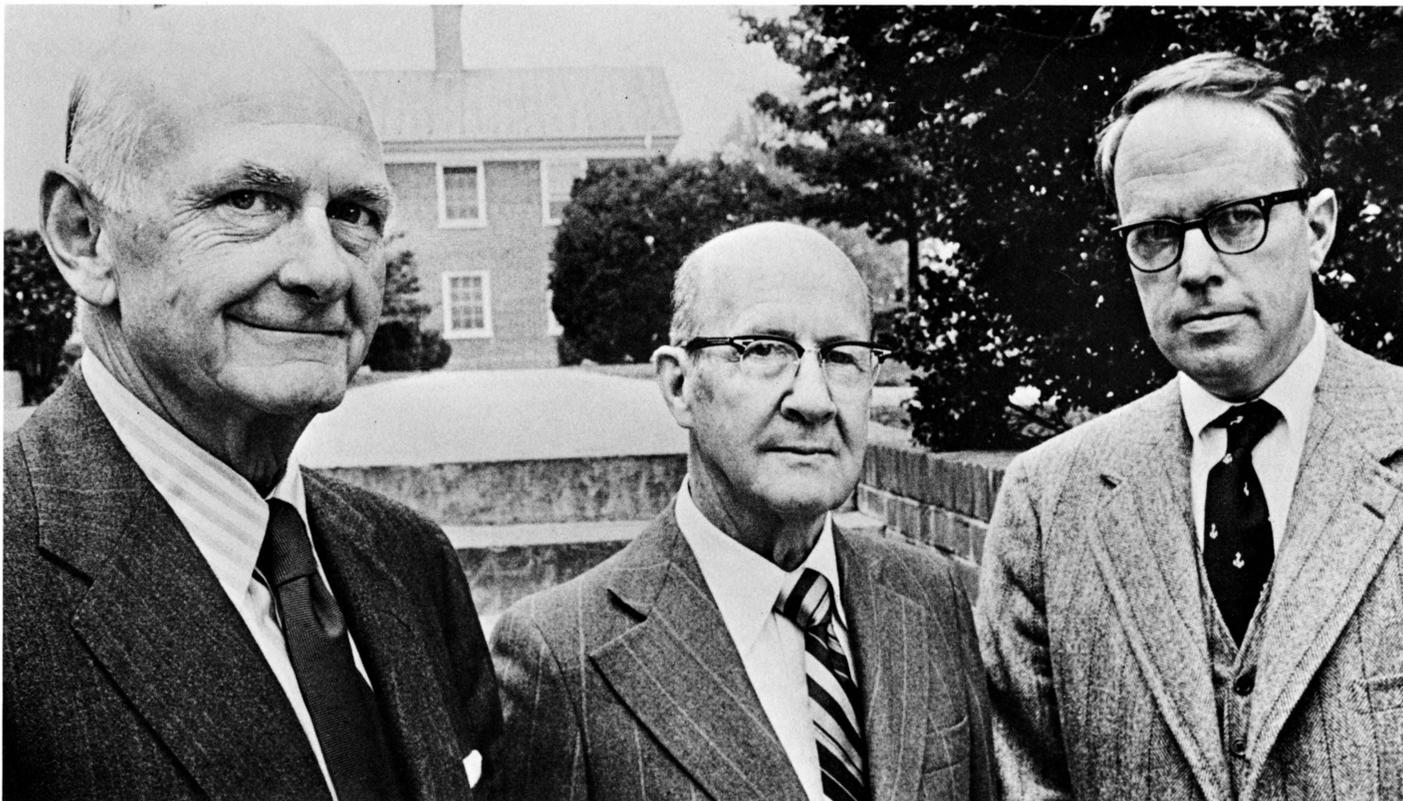

In 1967, Shannon was presented the Lynchburg Citation, the highest honor any W&L alumni chapter confers on a graduate of the University. The citation read in part:

"As president of the University of Virginia he has fulfilled his heritage of distinguished scholarship with vision, skill and integrity — by his example encouraging his colleagues and his students to higher academic attainment.

"As alumnus [of Washington and Lee], gentleman, and patriot, he has been loyal to noble traditions — but, naturally enough, 'not unmindful of the future'."

He is married to the former Eleanor Bosworth, and they have five daughters — Eleanor, Elizabeth, Lois, Susan and Virginia.

Malone is named rector, succeeding Dr. Thomas

Ross L. Malone, vice president and general counsel of General Motors Corp., has been elected rector of the Board of Trustees of Washington and Lee. He will assume the office formally at the Board's winter meeting in January.

The traditional title "rector" is the equivalent at Washington and Lee to chairman of the board. The term is traced back to the founding of Augusta Academy, from which the University evolved, in 1749.

As rector, Malone succeeds Dr. John Newton Thomas of Richmond. Dr. Thomas, professor emeritus of systematic theology at Union Theological Seminary, has been a W&L Trustee since 1938 and rector since 1970. Dr. Thomas is 70, the age for mandatory retirement from the Washington and Lee board. He will retire officially from the Board at its January meeting.

Retiring in October after completion of his second term of service was Joseph E. Birnie of Atlanta, a Trustee since 1961 and chairman of the Board's investments committee and its successor, the finance committee, since inception of the committee system in 1966.

Malone is a former president of the American Bar Association (1958-59) and deputy attorney general of the United States (1952-53). He was named vice president and general counsel of GM in 1967.

A native of Roswell, N. M., he received his law degree from Washington and Lee in 1932, and upon graduation began practicing law in his hometown. He and Mrs. Malone maintain their residence in Roswell, though they spend most of their time in New York City, where they have an apartment, and Detroit.

At 47, Malone was one of the youngest men ever elected ABA president. He is also past president of the American Bar Foundation, an arm of the ABA which supports research in the practice of law and administration of justice. He is a fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers and was a member of the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice. Malone is a trustee of Southern Methodist University, the New York University Law Foundation, and the Southwestern Legal Foundation.

He is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary leadership fraternity, and Sigma Nu, social fraternity. He holds honorary degrees from seven colleges and universities, including Washington and Lee (1958), William and Mary, and the Universities of New Mexico and British Columbia.

Birnie, the retiring Trustee, is chairman of the executive committee of the National Bank of Georgia, and has served as its president and board chairman as well. He is a 1927 alumnus of Washington and Lee and has been president of both the Richmond and Atlanta chapters of the W&L Alumni Association. In 1949, he was national treasurer of the University's Bicentennial fund-raising program.

A native of Greenville, S. C., Birnie began his career in banking as a clerk in the Alexander National Bank of St. Petersburg, Fla. Subsequently he went to work for the Bank of Virginia in Richmond, then in 1938 he joined the Bank of Georgia (now the National Bank of Georgia), becoming president and director in 1940. He is past national president of the Consumers Banking Association and past president of the Atlanta Symphony Association. He is a director of several businesses and of many other civic and charitable groups as well.

As chairman of the Washington and Lee Board's finance committee, Birnie persuaded his fellow Trustees to adopt the so-called "total rate of return" concept of investing, under which the University seeks a combination of capital growth and dividend income from its endowment according to exacting standards.

In a resolution adopted by the Board on the occasion of Birnie's retirement, it noted: "During a period of time when the gravest financial challenges were confronting American private higher education, Washington and Lee was fortunate to have in the forefront of its financial leadership a man with the broad experience and imaginative foresight of Joe Birnie. . . . Washington and Lee's sound stance in the wash of today's erratic financial currents can be linked directly to [his] effective trusteeship."

"The 12 years during which Joe Birnie was a member of the Board of Trustees were years of critically important decisions affecting the future of Washington and Lee. He took part in many spirited debates that accompanied the progress of a changing University through a changing world. A man of principle and integrity, the expressions of his views always commanded the greatest respect and consideration. . . . Throughout his service Joe Birnie brought a special measure of the gentility and charm of the Southern gentleman to a Board already abundantly endowed with such attributes."

The Trustees' resolution bestowed on Birnie "with admiration and affection" the title trustee emeritus.

The distinctive contributions of Washington and Lee

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Ever since I enrolled as a freshman in 1920, and even after I joined the Board of Trustees in 1938, I assumed that Washington and Lee possessed a built-in permanence, that, while it needed our help, the school endowed by Washington and led by Lee would somehow of itself endure here in the Great Valley as long as the Blue Ridge and the Alleghenies that create it. Recent years, however, have progressively deepened the sobering realization that the future of the University cannot be taken for granted, particularly when we are realistic about the financial problems of private institutions of higher education in contemporary American society. It is a simple fact that some of these institutions have already been forced to close, that others are in jeopardy and that all are under challenge.

I need not detail to this sophisticated audience the reasons—political, social, economic and cultural—for the threatening situation; but I urge you to consider the fact that the continued existence of Washington and Lee as we know it and dream for it rests, not on some intrinsic factor guaranteeing its perpetuity, but upon (1) the depth of our conviction of its worth and (2) our willingness to support that conviction financially.

The myth that Washington and Lee is a rich institution is precisely that—only a myth—and should never have been allowed to gain the wide credence it has enjoyed.

To be sure some of us would support Washington and Lee because we love her as our alma mater, or as that of our sons, but sentiment alone cannot endure without the conviction that the institution is needed and worthy. I should like to talk about some of the things on which that conviction rests. The founders of Washington and Lee were motivated by the desire to provide education for young people who would otherwise be denied it and by the concern that it be Christian in character. As President Huntley says, Washington and Lee began “in a minister’s study.” Today private institutions are no longer needed simply to provide education, inasmuch as the state in its fashion offers it all the way up to the university level. If Washington and Lee should close at the end of this session, there are public institutions which would welcome its students.

Hence we have to ask whether there are potential distinctive contributions of an independent university which make its support imperative in today’s world. What are the reasons that would justify the Governor’s call this afternoon for a dual system of higher education? I believe strongly that there are compelling reasons and your presence here encourages me to assume that you share my judgment.

What are these distinctive contributions? They lie primarily in the three areas of academic excellence, of concern for the individual and of the maintenance of high moral standards. I think Washington and Lee can justly claim that she is doing a superior job in all three of these areas.

As a private university independent of external control, we are free to seek academic excellence by setting the standards, designing the curriculum and using the methods best suited to generating in our students a desire for learning, scholarly habits and independence of thought. This involves a selective admissions policy which guarantees a student body capable of performing at high academic levels. (Incidentally, our athletic policy of non-subsidization frees us from the temptation to operate with a double standard in order to accommodate athletes unable to meet our academic requirements.)

Admittedly the Committee on Admissions has to make some painful denials and we have been accused of “elitism” and catering to “eggheads,” (unfairly I am convinced), but the alternative is to lower our standards to the levels of mediocrity which have become all too prevalent in our mass higher education. Our status as a private institution requires that we recognize academic excellence both as an essential justification of our existence and as our obligation to the society which sorely needs the kind of leadership that only such excellence can produce.

A second distinctive contribution a private institution can make is in the form of institutional concern for the individual. On our campus a religious tradition which sees each man as endowed by God with dignity, rights and responsibility, together with the freedom of a private institution to perpetuate this tradition, is reflected in the form of a special concern for each student. Our student body is deliberately kept small, so that the individual student is not lost in the mass but given the opportunity for personal friendship with other students and faculty members. Admittedly the student body is twice the size it was when I was a student but, in comparison with other institutions, it is even smaller today than it was then, and the Board of Trustees intends to keep it small.

“Academic excellence, concern for the individual, and . . . moral standards are the three-fold basis on which I would call for support of Washington and Lee as a private institution.”

Beginning with Freshman Orientation Week the University tries to prepare each man to get the most out of his years as a student. When he goes to class, he is taught not merely by the youngest members of the instructional staff, but by mature men who, while their productive scholarship is encouraged and welcomed, have come to Washington and Lee with the clear understanding that their prime function is teaching. We believe that good teaching has equal rights with creative scholarship. The fact that there is an 11 to 1 ratio between faculty and students makes possible small classes and individual attention to students not available in most institutions.

The University's interest in the individual is seen also in its emphasis on the physical fitness of each student. Here again our athletic policy makes a contribution, since the elimination of professionalism in athletics has greatly increased student participation: about 30% of our students take part in intercollegiate athletics and 80% in the intramural program. Some of us oldtimers hate to have to turn to an obscure article on the third page of the sports section to read about our football team, but at least our students are having fun and getting exercise.

Academic excellence, concern for the individual and, in the third place, moral standards are the three-fold basis on which I would call for support of Washington and Lee as a private institution.

However, before I speak of moral standards, let me refer to the “manners” which traditionally were associated with “morals,” the amenities which were the badge of high character and which, blended with character, made of a man a gentleman. I cannot but think nostalgically of the coat and tie tradition and the friendly greeting on the campus—or even of the “clean shirt” standard which the ODK Chapter tried to introduce in the Spring of 1923, only to find that students of that day would not give up the wearing of coats. Yes, I wish that dress and hair style were different and that the habit of speaking were revived. I find some comfort in the still favorable contrast with other campuses I know and I see a few heartening straws in the wind. Meantime, I hope the parents of students to whom the University traditionally stood in loco parentis will be kind enough to picture themselves in loco Universitatis, so that it may enjoy their sympathy with respect to the problems of student dress and other amenities.

After all, whatever be our regrets with regard to “manners” we shall surely agree that moral standards are far more important. As a private institution Washington and Lee has a special degree of freedom in the setting of its moral standards and enjoys a national reputation for the Honor System in which they are epitomized. “No one attends the University,” says The Catalogue, “without becoming aware of new dimensions of honor and integrity. . . . The Honor System, which is probably the most enduring and distinctive feature of student life, is administered entirely by elected student officials. Students take examinations without supervision; their word is respected; they may be sure of finding possessions where they left them a day or two before. The same code of honor that governs academic life guides personal life.”

The fact that the Honor System is not imposed upon the students but willingly espoused by them, despite the pervasive ethical relativism in American society, is to me nothing less than phenomenal. But I must add that its continued endurance, in my judgment, will depend ultimately upon the perpetuation of the religious faith in which it has traditionally been rooted. Moral standards finally wither in a spiritual desert.

Robert E. Lee, whom we on this campus sometimes come close to worshipping for what he was, never thought of himself except as a servant of the God he worshipped, nor did he extol the sacredness of honor except as a reflection of the divine will.

Be it ours to sustain the University for which Lee sacrificed, thankful for the freedom it offers to maintain honor and exalt God.

Washington-Custis-Lee portraits are restored and put on display

Sixteen 18th and 19th century portraits of extraordinary historical value from the Washington-Custis-Lee family collections at the University have been on special display in Lee Chapel, since Oct. 12.

The paintings were all recently restored, several by the late Russell Quandt of Alexandria and others by Bruce Etchison who assumed responsibility for the restoration project after Mr. Quandt's death.

Included in the exhibition — which was prepared by the University in connection with ceremonies designating its Front Campus as a National Historic Landmark — are the priceless portraits of George Washington in the uniform of the Virginia militia (1772), the first portrait of Washington painted from life, and of the Marquis de Lafayette (1779), painted as a gift for Washington. Both paintings are by Charles Willson Peale.

The University plans to share the exhibit with museums and other institutions as part of its program in celebration of the National Bicentennial.

Also on display in the Chapel is the famous portrait of Robert E. Lee by Theodore Pine (after a photograph, 1904).

Other paintings on display are the portraits of Daniel Parke Custis, Martha Washington's first husband, by John Wollaston (1757); Martha Custis (later Mrs. George Washington), also by Wollaston (1757); John Parke and Martha Custis, the children of Mrs. Washington by her first marriage and George Washington's stepchildren, also by Wollaston (1760); Frances Parke Custis, whose son was Martha Washington's first husband, by an unknown artist (about 1725).

Also, John Custis IV, known as "Tulip" Custis, father of Martha Washington's first husband, also by an unknown artist (about 1725); Anne Hill Carter Lee, mother of Gen. R. E. Lee, by an unknown artist (last quarter, 18th century); Lt. and Mrs. Robert E. Lee by William Edward West (shortly after their marriage in 1831 — this is the first portrait ever painted of Lee); Elizabeth Parke Custis, granddaughter of Mrs. George Washington, by Robert Edge Pine (18th century);

Also, William Fitzhugh of Chatham, grandfather of Mrs. Robert E. Lee, by an unknown artist (1800), and two portraits of George Washington Parke Custis of Arlington, Mrs. R. E. Lee's father, one painted by Junius Brutus Stearns and the other by Robert Edge Pine, both painted in the late 18th or early 19th century.

Many of the portraits were bequeathed to the University by George Washington Custis Lee and Mary Custis Lee, the children of R. E. Lee, and by Mrs. George Bolling Lee, widow of his grandson.

The restoration of the paintings was made possible by a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Lanier Sr. of West Point, Ga., and grants from the Fair Foundation of Tyler, Tex., and the Virginia Commission on the Arts and Humanities, administrators of funds provided by the National Endowment for Arts and Humanities.

Architect's rendering of new student apartments.

Work begins on new student apartments

Work began in October on a $1.4-million project at Washington and Lee University to construct 40 student apartment units accommodating 178 students. The apartments are expected to be completed and ready for occupancy in September, 1974.

The apartment complex — to be located in the Woods Creek area of the campus, between the Historic Front Campus and the new law building, Lewis Hall, now under construction on University land just to the west — will consist of three buildings, two with 17 units each and one with six.

General contractor for the project is George W. Kane, Inc., of Henderson, N. C. Kane is also the principal contractor for Lewis Hall.

The apartments will be in three-, four- and five-man units. Each unit will have individual bedrooms with a common living room and kitchen and dining area. All will have balconies, and all will be air-conditioned, furnished, and carpeted.

Designed by the Richmond firm of Marcellus Wright, Cox & Gilimberg, the buildings will have a textured finish of rough weathered wood to blend with the rustic, wooded site. Griswold, Winters, Swain & Mullin of Pittsburgh, Pa., are landscape architects for the project. Both firms have been fully involved in planning and design for the other elements in the capital portion of Washington and Lee's decade-long $56-million development program.

The basic contract price for construction is $1.05 million. Furnishings and other costs and fees are expected to bring the total project cost to $1,391,500.

University officials said the project is being undertaken in response to consistently expressed needs on the part of Washington and Lee's student body for an attractive, on-campus alternative to traditional upperclass living patterns. Only 112 upperclassmen and law students can now be accommodated in University housing. Some 1,000 other upperclassmen and law students live in apartments, private homes and other accommodations in Lexington, Rockbridge County and the vicinity.

Surveys of housing preferences taken each year among the student body by Washington and Lee planning officials have demonstrated a sustained desire for on-campus apartments. More campus apartments may be built later in the decade if substantial student housing requirements remain unfilled.

Only freshmen are required to live in University housing. Two dormitories, one for undergraduate sophomores, juniors and seniors and another for law students, were opened in 1959 and accommodate a total of 84 students. No other on-campus housing for upperclass and law students is now provided.

Rental rates for the apartments will be fixed at a later time when more exact figures on the costs of construction, financing, furnishing and maintenance become available. University officials expect the rentals to be competitive with costs of off-campus living now paid by a majority of Washington and Lee students.

Luce Foundation includes W&L in graduate Asian studies program

The Henry Luce Foundation, Inc., of New York has designated Washington and Lee as one of 60 colleges and universities in America to participate in an innovative, multi-million dollar postgraduate Asian studies program.

The new undertaking, to be known as the Luce Scholars Program, will provide a select group of young Americans the opportunity of spending a year in Asia, working in the context of widely varied professional interests, according to Henry Luce, III, president of the Luce Foundation.

The program is unique in that it will not include Asian specialists or international affairs experts; instead, it favors young men and women whose potential lies in fields unrelated to Asian specialties, Luce said.

In the Luce Foundation's recently issued annual report, Luce said the innovative program is designed to give "a greater number of Americans of leadership potential a firsthand familiarity with Asia at a flexible and formative time in their careers."

Luce Scholars will be required to possess at least the bachelor's degree and to have given evidence of exceptional leadership ability. Motivation for future accomplishment and a strong career direction are listed by the foundation as further criteria for selection.

Three regional panels of distinguished leaders will make the final selection of the 15 Luce Scholars each year. The first Luce Scholars will begin their year in Asia in the autumn of 1974.

Each Luce Scholar will receive a basic stipend of $9,000 and transportation.

The Luce Foundation, whose assets total almost $74 million, was created in 1936 by the late Henry R. Luce, co-founder and editor-in-chief of Time Inc.

Dr. W. W. Pusey, III, chairman of the Chinese studies program.

Since Mr. Luce's death in 1967 the Foundation has granted almost $12 million to specific projects in the fields of theology, higher education — both here and in the Far East — and public affairs.

The Luce Scholars Program complements an increasingly significant emphasis on Far Eastern studies at Washington and Lee in recent years, University President Robert E. R. Huntley said.

Language courses in Mandarin have been added to the curriculum, together with a new course in Chinese literature in translation, he said. A six-week Spring Term study-abroad program will take a group of Washington and Lee students to Japan for the first time in 1974, and an exchange program with a college in Hong Kong has been adopted as well.

In addition, a grant from the Babcock Foundation beginning Jan. 1 will support development of a Chinese Studies Program in politics, economics, art, language and literature.

Washington and Lee is the only Virginia institution selected to participate in the new Luce Scholars Program. Other cooperating colleges and universities include Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Vanderbilt, Duke, Amherst, Williams, Johns Hopkins, Southern California, and Michigan.

Chinese Studies Adviser

Dr. Hans Bielenstein, chairman of the Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures at Columbia University, New York, visited the campus for two days in October to advise on the development of a program in Chinese studies at Washington and Lee.

The program, supported by a two-year grant totaling $30,000 from the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation of Winston-Salem, announced late last May, will focus on Chinese civilization, language, history, and political and economic considerations. Both mainland China and Taiwan are included.

Currently courses are offered in elementary and intermediate Mandarin Chinese, in Chinese literature in translation, Chinese Brush painting, and Oriental art; a survey of the major religious traditions of China is included in a course in comparative religion.

According to Dr. William W. Pusey, III, head of the German Department, who is serving as program chairman, additional courses in the area are under active consideration. Thus, Dr. Bielenstein's visit was particularly timely, since it enabled him to discuss a wide range of possibilities with interested faculty members and students.

Other related developments—although not falling under the Babcock Foundation Grant—are the establishment of the Jock A. R. Stewart Fund for the purchase of books on the history, art, and culture of China; a modest exchange program with Chung Chi University in Hong Kong (which has brought one student to us from there this year); programs approved or planned in Japan and Taiwan during the short term; and a course in Japanese civilization given this fall by the Religion Department.

Dr. Pusey said that if student interest and support warrant, it may be possible in the future to offer a major in Chinese studies or in Far Eastern studies.

Enrollment Drops Slightly

A total of 1,639 students registered in September as Washington and Lee began its 224th academic year, according to figures compiled by Col. Harold S. Head, University registrar.

The total represented a drop of 45 from last year's enrollment total, when a record number of students entered for the first time as well as returned, bringing the overall size of the student body considerably beyond the level the University desired.

Of the 1973 total, 1,387 students enrolled in the undergraduate divisions, including 367 freshmen (down from last year's unexpected record, 386), and 18 women students who will attend W&L for all or part of the current year under the Eight-College Exchange Program. Total enrollment in the School of Law was 252, down from last year's 265, as an entering class of 82 replaced last year's record third-year class of 100.

More than 1,400 young men applied for admission to the 1973 undergraduate freshman class — four applicants for every available space — and more than 1,400 also applied for the 82 places in the entering law-school class — 18 applications for every opening.

McDonald Loan Fund

A $100,000 loan fund for students in Washington and Lee's School of Law has been established by a bequest from Walter A. McDonald of Cincinnati, a University trustee from 1945 to 1961 who died last July 28.

Under terms of Mr. McDonald's will, loans will be made from the fund to deserving second- and third-year law students designated by the dean of the law school. Repayment is to be required within 10 years of graduation according to terms and interest rates to be specified by Washington and Lee's student financial aid administrators.

McDonald was the retired chairman of the board of McDonald Printing Co. of Cincinnati. He was a 1910 graduate of Washington and Lee's School of Law and was instrumental in establishing the "class agent" system for the W&L Alumni Fund in 1932 while he was president of the University's alumni association.

He was founder of the Walter and George McDonald Foundation, a benefactor of educational institutions. In 1959 Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, named him a Knight of Malta, recognizing outstanding character and achievement.

The McDonald bequest brings to more than $11.3 million the amount committed toward the law school portion of Washington and Lee's ongoing development program for the 1970's. In all, $14.5 million is to be raised for the law program.

Overall, $22 million has been committed to date in all categories of the development program — from alumni, parents, foundations, and businesses—against an initial goal of $36 million by 1976 and $56 million by the end of the decade.

Med Applicants Do Well

Twenty-seven W&L men who applied for admission to medical school in 1973 were accepted. This was an average of 71 per cent compared with the national average of just 30 per cent.

Eleven of the Washington and Lee men were Phi Beta Kappa graduates, according to the report of the Pre-Medical Committee. Some medical schools reported an 80-to-1 ratio of applicants to openings in the 1973 entering class.

Faculty Salary Leader

Washington and Lee continues to rank high among the nation's colleges and universities in terms of faculty compensation as compiled and reported by the American Association of University Professors.

The AAUP's 1972-73 survey showed

W&L with a median compensation (includes salary plus fringe benefits) of $15,100. That was considerably higher than the figure at any other four-year, non-Ph.D.-granting institution in the South and higher than all but a handful of comparable institutions in the nation.

Washington and Lee was rated 1, 1, 1, 1 plus in compensation computations by rank. The averages were $22,500 for full professor; $17,300 for associate professor; $13,600 for assistant professor; and $12,100 for instructor.

The national averages by rank for the 1,242 institutions surveyed were $22,237, $16,771, $13,890, and $11,136. The averages for four-year colleges in W&L's particular category by rank were $17,700, $13,330, $11,220, and $9,640. W&L exceeded all of the averages in its category.

Adequate compensation is a priority item in W&L's annual budget, and its high ranking among comparable institutions enables it to attract and retain an excellent faculty dedicated to the teaching of undergraduates.

New University Historian

I. Taylor Sanders II, assistant professor of history, has been appointed University historian. He succeeds the late Ollinger Crenshaw, historian of the University for more than two decades. Dr. Crenshaw died March 19, 1970, less than a year after Random House published his major work, General Lee's College, and the post as historian remained vacant until Sanders' appointment.

Sanders is a B.A. graduate of Centre College and holds the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Virginia. He is a consultant to the Virginia Historic Landmarks Commission and has prepared several reports and articles for that agency. He is also the author of a number of articles on historic preservation and is currently editing a volume of the Rockbridge County Historical Society's proceedings, to be published early next year.

As University historian, Sanders will carry out and direct extensive historical research, including the acquisitions and interpretation of significant documentary materials related to the development of the institution since its establishment in 1749.

He will also serve as a member of Washington and Lee's National Bicentennial Committee and will represent the University in other matters related to its own history and its role in America's national development.

Glass Memorial Scholarships

Memorial scholarship endowments in the names of Carter Glass, Jr., and Powell Glass have been established at Washington and Lee University by The Lynchburg News and Daily Advance, the newspapers with which both men were associated for their entire professional careers. The scholarships created by the two new endowment funds will aid journalism students at Washington and Lee.

Powell Glass, a 1907 B.A. graduate of the University, was general manager and publisher of The News and Advance. Carter Glass, Jr., a 1913 Washington and Lee graduate, was for many years editor of The Advance.

The Powell Glass scholarship will be conferred annually as an honor award to the journalism major at Washington and Lee who, in the judgment of the journalism faculty, achieved the most outstanding record during the academic year preceding the one in which the scholarship is to be held. Financial need will not be a consideration in naming the recipient of the Powell Glass scholarship.

The Carter Glass scholarship will be awarded annually to a student chosen by the Committee on Student Financial Aid whose career interest is in newspaper journalism. Preference in designating the Carter Glass scholarship recipient will be given to residents of Virginia.

The same student will be eligible to hold either scholarship for more than one year, but the decision as to the recipients will be made on a year-to-year basis.

The Powell Glass and Carter Glass, Jr., endowments are the second and third journalism scholarship programs established in the Glass name at Washington and Lee. A fund in honor of the memory of the late Carter Glass, secretary of the treasury under President Woodrow Wilson and subsequently United States Senator from Virginia, was created at Washington and Lee in 1947.

Poems by Barritt

C. Westbrook Barritt, professor of romance languages at W&L, is the author of a 50-page book of poetry, Scrimshaw and Other Poems, published this fall by Vantage Press of New York.

Barritt, a 1943 graduate of the University, dedicated the book to his daughter, Julia, who died in 1968 at the age of 12 from cystic fibrosis. The poems deal with a wide variety of subjects and personal thoughts and are an expression of Barritt's belief that "poetry writing is an attempt to make the abstract (love, hope, time, and death) concrete and specific."

After graduating from W&L, Barritt spent three years in the army and returned to W&L to teach in 1952 after receiving his Ph.D. degree from the University of Virginia. His principal fields are Spanish and Spanish literature.

Barritt's book, his first published work of poetry, may be ordered from the Washington and Lee Bookstore. The price is $3.75. The bookstore gives W&L alumni a 10% discount on all book purchases.

Two Dean Promotions

Two members of the W&L administration have been promoted to the rank of associate dean. Dr. Robert W. McAhren has been named associate dean of the College, and Kenneth P. Lane, Jr., has been named associate dean of students. Each was previously an assistant dean, Lane since 1970, and McAhren since 1971.

McAhren is an associate professor of American history and holds the Ph.D. degree from the University of Texas. He joined the W&L faculty in 1966.

Lane is a 1964 graduate of W&L and also holds a degree from the Union Theological Seminary in New York. He is director of the Early-Fielding University Center at W&L and is also director of W&L's student volunteer services program.

Rainey Joins Staff

The Rev. Lutrelle D. Rainey, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Lexington, has been named assistant in the office of the dean of students at Washington and Lee University and lecturer in sociology.

Rainey holds the B.A. degree from Virginia Union University and two master's degrees, one from Pittsburgh Theological Seminary and another from the University of Pittsburgh's School of Social Work.

Prior to his installation as pastor of Lexington's First Baptist Church this fall, he was executive director of the Charles City-New Kent County (Va.) social service agency and, before then, project director of the Randolph urban renewal project in Richmond.

The new W&L head catalogue librarian is Jean Eisenhauer, cataloguer at the University of Wisconsin Law Library prior to joining the W&L law staff.

W&L Shares Lilly Program

The University has been designated one of 59 private liberal-arts colleges in the United States to participate in a new million-dollar program, sponsored by the Lilly Endowment of Indianapolis, designed to bring the campus and the non-academic world closer together.

The program — to be administered by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation of Princeton, N.J. — will place prominent men and women in a variety of fields on college campuses for a week or more at a time. The visiting lecturers, to be designated Woodrow Wilson Senior Fellows, will be drawn from business, industry, finance, diplomacy, conservation, journalism, and other professions.

The Lilly Foundation's executive vice president, Landrum Bolling, said the three-year, $1-million grant is designed to "promote greater contact, understanding and sharing of ideas and experiences" between the academic community and other sectors of society. The Wilson Foundation has designated 58 fellows for the current academic year.

Washington and Lee is one of three colleges in Virginia designated to participate in the project. The others are Randolph-Macon Woman's College, and Mary Baldwin College.

Five Research Papers

Five research papers by Washington and Lee students and professors—three in psychology and two in chemistry — were delivered at the 1973 annual meeting of the Virginia Academy of Science. Topics and authors were:

"Effects of Entorhinal Lesions on Eating, Drinking and Activity" by Gregory Croghan, a junior from Annandale, Va., and Richard Shepard, a special student from Baltimore, under the sponsorship of Dr. Leonard E. Jarrard, professor of psychology and head of the department;

"Effects of REM Deprivation and REM Rebound on Retention," by William B. Wells, a junior from Birmingham, under the sponsorship of Dr. David G. Elmes, associate psychology professor;

"On the Synthesis of 1,6 Cyclodecane-dione as a Synthetic Intermediate," by Mark E. Skellenger, a 1973 graduate from Houston, Fred W. Frick, a senior from Monticello, Ind., and Peter H. Jones, a senior from Houston, under the sponsorship of Dr. J. Keith Shillington, professor of chemistry;

"Bicyclic Alkenes by the Wittig Reaction," by Dr. George S. Whitney, also a chemistry professor.

Dr. Elmes, who is on leave of absence this year to conduct research at the University of Michigan, was secretary of the psychology section for the 1973 V.A.S. meeting.

Dr. Edward F. Turner, professor of physics and department head at Washington and Lee, is immediate past president of the Virginia Academy and was a guest of honor at several events.

A Riegel Reminiscence

Reminiscences of Paris in the 1920's by a retired Washington and Lee journalism professor appear in the first issue of a new magazine, Lost Generation Journal.

The article is by O. W. Riegel, who retired in June after 43 years on the Washington and Lee journalism faculty. Lost Generation Journal is a new publication which seeks to publish the diaries and recollections of American expatriots in France in the years just after World War I.

Riegel's memoir notes that the principal motive for the temporary emigration to Paris of "a large number of exceptionally articulate Americans" seemed to have been "simple exuberance, vitality, and curiosity of youth" — coupled with "a feeling of emotional, intellectual and cultural deprivation." The image of Paris that became fashionable at the time was, Riegel points out, "determined largely by the most articulate Americans, the word-men."

"The experience of Europe sharpened my sense of American nationality," he says in his reminiscence, "and my interest in the currents of American cultural and political life."

Riegel, a graduate of Wisconsin and Columbia, worked on the Paris edition of the Chicago Tribune — "for one simple reason: I ran out of money" — before joining the W&L faculty in 1930.

Lewis Art Exhibit

Thirteen paintings from the Sydney and Frances Lewis Collection of Contemporary Art were on display during October in the duPont Gallery.

The paintings included original works by Roy Lichtenstein, Cy Twombly, Andy Warhol and Tom Wesselmann. Twombly is a Washington and Lee alumnus, and his father, E. P. Twombly, Sr., was the university's athletic director for many years and is still golf coach.

Other artists whose works will be on loan from the Lewises are John Clem Clarke, Allan D'Arcangelo, Jim Dine, Richard Estes, Ralph Goings, Robert Goodnough, Alfred Leslie, Richard McLean, and John Salt.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are widely known for their collections of contemporary art. They have been major benefactors of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in the field.

Mr. Lewis, a 1940 Washington and Lee graduate, is a member of the University Board of Trustees. He and Mrs. Lewis are the donors of $9 million to the law school portion of Washington and Lee's ongoing development program.

Record VFIC Contributions

A record sum, $1,318,000, was contributed last year by Virginia businesses to the state's privately supported four-year colleges through the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges (VFIC), the organization has reported.

The announcement came from T. Justin Moore, president of Virginia Electric and Power Co., the VFIC's newly elected chairman of the board, and Luther W. White, III, president of Randolph-Macon College and a 1949 W&L law graduate, newly elected president of the VFIC.

Their report said almost 1,000 corporations contributed to the state's private institutions through the VFIC. The $1.3-million total amounts to approximately $1,200 for each faculty member in the VFIC's 12 member institutions, they noted. Washington & Lee's share was $101,391.

In addition to Moore and White, the new chairman and president, other officers elected for the coming year were Robert E. R. Huntley, president of Washington and Lee University, vice president, and Preston C. Carruthers, president of Preston Construction Corp., Arlington, and chairman of the State Board of Education, vice chairman of the VFIC board.

Others elected to the VFIC board are H. Hiter Harris, Jr., president of Southern Bankshares, Inc. in Richmond; Richard W. Wiltshire, president of Home Beneficial Life Insurance Co., also of Richmond; Thomas F. Chilcote, president of Emory & Henry College; Joshua P. Darden, Jr. of Norfolk, president of Colonial Chevrolet Corp.; W. Wright

Harrison of Norfolk, chairman of the board of Virginia National Bank; Waldo G. Miles, a Bristol attorney; John D. Munford of Franklin, vice president and general manager of Union Camp Corp.; Lloyd U. Noland, Jr. of Newport News, chairman of the board of the Noland Co. and Chester I. Starkey, president of Commonwealth Gas Distribution Corp. of Petersburg.

DeVogt Heads School Unit

Dr. John F. DeVogt, professor of administration and head of the department in the School of Commerce, Economics and Politics, is the president of the Virginia School Boards Association for the 1973-74 year. He was elected at the association's annual convention, held in Norfolk in October. He will serve a one-year term as head of the federation.

Dr. DeVogt is a member of Lexington's City School Board and was its chairman until earlier this year. He served as legislative committee chairman of the state school board group prior to his election as its president.

He is a B.A. and Ph.D. graduate of the University of North Carolina and joined the W&L faculty in 1962. In addition to his civic service on the city school board, Dr. DeVogt is professionally active as vice president and program chairman of the Southern Management Association.

Homecoming and Fall Reunions, 1973

Approximately 250 alumni and their guests returned to the W&L campus on the weekend of Oct. 19-20 for Fall Class Reunions and Homecoming. The weekend honored the Classes of 1928, 1938, 1943, 1953, and 1968. There was a gala round of social events including cocktail parties and the anniversary class banquets on Saturday evening. The returning alumni also heard an in-depth panel discussion on "Financing the University" conducted in Lee Chapel by President Robert E. R. Huntley, Treasurer James W. Whitehead, and Director of Development Farris Hotchkiss. The weather was perfect and the fall foliage in full array. The only untoward note was a Homecoming football loss, 35-17, to Western Maryland.

Chapter News

PENINSULA. President and Mrs. Robert E. R. Huntley were guests of honor at a reception and dinner on Aug. 9 at the Huntington Club in Newport News. The occasion also welcomed the three freshmen from the area who entered W&L this fall, two of whom were present, I. Leake Wornom, III, and Philip Hatchett. Also present were a number of current students and parents. President and Mrs. Huntley were accompanied by their three daughters, Martha, Katie, and Jane, who were attending their first W&L alumni meeting. The President reported on the affairs of the University, with special reference to the question of coeducation. Presiding was Frank S. Beazlie, Jr., '40, out-going chapter president. During a brief business session the following officers were elected: Dr. B. Voss Neal, '51, president; Charles R. Spencer, Jr., '59, vice president; and Benjamin A. Williams, '42, secretary-treasurer. President Neal adjourned the meeting with an expression of thanks for the attendance of the Huntley family and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Washburn. He announced that the new officers would make plans soon for another chapter meeting.

Randy Rouse, Master of the Fox Hounds

Randolph D. (Randy) Rouse of Arlington, Va., was the subject of a crisp feature article in the sports section of the Sept. 20, 1973, edition of the Washington Post. The reason: Rouse has been the organizer of the last 13 of the 16 annual Fairfax Steeplechase Races and another one was coming up in two days. Said the article, the steeplechase "just wouldn't be the same without Randy Rouse" and went on, "under his guidance, the steeplechase races have become to the horsy set what a ticket on the 50-yard line is to a football fan; the only place to be." Rouse is Master of the Fox Hounds, president of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, chairman of the Fairfax Race Association, and, according to the article, "just about one of the most affable, if not the only millionaire on his block." Rouse, in the article, tells how he worked his way through Washington and Lee during the depression years on a scholarship and a few part-time jobs. He graduated in 1939. He is now a builder-developer-banker-farmer and hotel-and-restaurant owner. The article said he has applied his business acumen to raising, training, and racing his 16 horses. He said he has no idea how many trophies and awards he has amassed over the years, but there "are just a mess of them." Rouse spent six months with other race association members planning the steeplechase. This included handling the average attendance of 8,000, some 60-odd horses, officials, jockeys, and equipment. Rouse, an expert rider, is also a central figure in the annual Thanksgiving Day fox hunt in the area. He noted that there are 8 million horse owners in the country, and added, "There is a tremendous interest in horses and fox hunting today. There are foxes all over this area. The only problem is, you rarely ever catch one."
