ALUMNI TO NOMINATE
TRUSTEE

■ Washington and Lee alumni will have the opportunity soon to nominate an alumnus for election to the University Board of Trustees on a term membership basis.

The concept of a term alumni member was approved in principle by the Board of Trustees at its October meeting. The Board subsequently will expand its membership to accommodate the revolving alumni member.

The Board invited the Alumni Board of Directors to proceed with its plan for nominating the alumnus to be presented for election by the Trustees. As outlined by Alumni Association President Fred Bartenstein, the plan provides for a nominee to be selected by mail ballot by alumni of record. They will vote for one of five candidates chosen by the Alumni Board of Directors.

Alumni representation, in the view of the Trustees, will involve alumni more positively in the University's programs and policies, and will open an additional channel of communication between alumni and the Board of Trustees.

The mechanics of the election are being worked out by the Alumni Board of Directors. Alumni will be notified by mail about the procedures to be followed.

WARNER ELECTED NEW

■ John W. Warner, a partner in the Washington, D. C. law firm of Hogan & Hartson, has been elected to membership on the Board of Trustees of Washington and Lee, according to an announcement by Dr. Huston St. Clair, rector of the board.

Warner, 41, is a 1949 graduate of the University, with a B.S. degree in physics-engineering. He received his LL.B. degree from the University of Virginia Law School in 1953.

Warner is the son of a distinguished Washington and Lee alumnus, the late Dr. John W. Warner, who received his B.A. degree in 1903 and later practiced medicine in Washington, D. C. Since 1961, a special endowment known as the J. W. Warner, M.D. Scholarship Fund has provided financial aid to deserving Washington and Lee upperclassmen majoring in pre-medical study who "possess those exceptional qualifications, academic and otherwise, needed to accept the immense responsibility and challenge of serving mankind through medicine."

Washington and Lee's new trustee was admitted to the Bar of the District of Columbia in 1953, serving first as law clerk to the Honorable E. Barrett Prettyman, former chief judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, and then joining the law firm of McKenny, Flannery, & Craighill.

From 1955 to 1960, Warner was an assistant U. S. Attorney for the District of Columbia, serving in all trial and appellate divisions of the U. S. Attorney's Office, and concluding with two years in the Criminal Division trial staff for the U. S. District Court.

Later in 1960, Warner joined Hogan & Hartson as an associate in the firm's banking-corporate department. He became a general partner in 1964.

In 1960, Warner established the "Prettyman Internship Program" at Georgetown University, a pilot project to provide qualified counsel for indigent criminal defendants. Each year, six honor graduates from leading law schools were selected for a course of study in trial practice, and upon admission to a Bar these students regularly accepted court appointments as defense counsel, a requisite for the Master's Degree awarded by Georgetown University.

After five years of successful operation under funding by Mr. and Mrs. Warner, the Georgetown program was enlarged and taken over by the Ford Foundation.

Earlier this year, Warner was elected to the Board of Trustees of the District of Columbia Bar Foundation. He also serves as a member of the Corporate and Banking Committee of the D. C. Bar Association. He is a member of the American Bar Association, and he is affiliated with the World Peace Through Law Center and the Foreign Policy Association.

Warner brings to Washington and Lee's board experience gained as a member of the Board of Trustees of George Washington University. In addition to the two university board memberships, he serves on the governing board of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation (the Episcopal Cathedral, Mount St. Albans, Washington, D. C.), and he is a trustee of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond.

He also has served on the boards of the D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross, the Federal City Council, Beauvoir School, and the United Givers Fund for the District of Columbia. He is a director and former chairman of the executive committee of the Greater Washington Investors, Inc., a publicly-owned investment company.

Warner's military service includes duty as a U. S. Navy enlisted man from 1944 to 1946, and commissioned service as a Marine first lieutenant communications officer with Marine Air Group 33 in Korea in 1950 and 1951.

Warner is married to the former Catherine Conover Mellon of Upper-ville, Va. They now reside in Washington with their three children—John, IV 6, Virginia 8, and Mary 9.

SATURDAY CLASSES ABOLISHED

ON THE MATTER OF MARIJUANA

LAW SCHOOL GIFT

■ The University's faculty has adopted a five-day week class schedule for undergraduates, the change to become effective at the start of the second semester in February.

The plan affects some 1,270 students, and most likely will affect about 185 more if the School of Law adopts it after a study now under way.

The five-day week of classes, Monday through Friday, will replace the current six-day schedule with its unpopular Saturday morning meetings.

To compensate for the lost morning of classes, the faculty has lengthened periods from 50 minutes to 55 minutes, with a five-minute break. Morning classes will now start at 8 a.m., rather than the previous 8:25, and will end at the usual 1 p.m. hour.

Afternoon classes and laboratories remain the same, from 2 p.m. to 4:40 p.m.

Among the reasons cited for adopting the five-day week were its general acceptance in today's society, a desire to make a full Saturday available to faculty and students for study and leisure, and the fact that traveling Washington and Lee athletic teams would not have to miss as much school.

■ Speaking before a special University assembly in early December, President Robert E. R. Huntley called for each student to "make a responsible individual decision" against the use of marijuana so that "the University will not be diverted from those things which are truly important."

In what he termed was a personal statement, he said he was not prompted by an event or series of events on this campus, but by information regarding the "growing acceptance of marijuana among students."

Huntley suggested a number of reasons why restraint should be practiced, citing the drug's illegality, its counter-productive tendencies, and its nature as a vice.

Huntley hoped that the use of marijuana would not become a serious problem on the Washington and Lee campus, thereby "causing us to be preoccupied with a situation that would divert us from the important tasks we face."

■ A distribution of $128,309 has been received by the University as its share in the estate of the late Jasper J. Barrett of San Diego, Calif., a 1910 graduate of the School of Law.

President Robert E. R. Huntley said the University will, in accordance with wishes expressed in Barrett's will, use the bequest to establish and maintain within the School of Law's library a special collection dealing with probate law, trusts, estate planning, taxation, and related subjects.

Any remaining portion of the bequest not required for library purposes will be used to establish one or more scholarships for deserving law students, President Huntley added.

Barrett, who engaged in private practice in San Diego, died two years ago at the age of 85. He was a native of Maury, Va., and practiced law in Astoria, Ore. before locating in San Diego.

Law School Dean Roy L. Steinheimer said that actual expenditure of the Barrett funds will wait upon completion of a study now under way regarding expanded physical facilities for the Law School. With current enrollment nearly 200 students, classroom and library space in Tucker Hall has become inadequate, Dean Steinheimer said.

The current study, which includes analysis of curricular offerings and the optimum Law School enrollment, is expected to suggest the kind of physical facilities needed to accommodate the school adequately, Dean Steinheimer added.

HINKLE AND HALFORD
CANDIDATES FOR
RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS

The School of Law was one of four areas of high-priority physical requirements cited by President Huntley in his recent inaugural remarks. Others include the gymnasium, the School of Commerce and Administration, and the Library.

■ Two outstanding seniors were endorsed for Rhodes Scholarships by the University faculty.

Both Samuel D. Hinkle, IV of Shelbyville, Ky. and M. Lee Halford, Jr. of Richardson, Tex. have a lot in common, including long lists of impressive credentials, both academic and extra-curricular.

They were entered from their native states in the competition with scholars from a number of other U. S. colleges and universities for the coveted scholarships to England's Oxford University.

Top scholar in his class, Hinkle has made straight A's throughout his 3½ years at Washington and Lee. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and received its Sophomore Award for Scholarship. He has played varsity football for four years and is captain of the track team, where last year he had the best marks in the 440, mile relay, 440 relay, and 100- and 220-yard dashes.

Hinkle is chairman of the 1969 CONTACT symposium, which annually brings national figures to the campus for lectures and discussion with students. He is a dormitory counselor, vice president of Omicron Delta Kappa leadership fraternity, secretary of the Varsity Club, an officer in Delta Tau Delta social fraternity, and has served on the student government executive committee.

Halford ranks third in his class academically and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa. As a member of the student government executive committee, he headed committees which advised the University's Board of Trustees in the selection of a new president, and dealt with changes in the examination schedule and with University housing and development.

A pitcher on the Generals' varsity baseball team, Halford has won letters the last two years. He also has been president of the Young Democrats, and treasurer of his class and of Beta Theta Pi social fraternity.

Credentials such as these led Dr. James G. Leyburn, chairman of the Rhodes Scholarship committee, to comment that "if the nominating committees find other candidates superior to these men, we can only say that the United States is handsomely supplied with splendid young men."

If selected by the Rhodes Scholarship committee, both Hinkle and Halford would have studied "Modern Greats," a program embracing philosophy, politics, and economics.

Washington and Lee has had eight Rhodes Scholars, the last one Timothy A. Vanderver, Jr. of Birmingham, Ala., who was selected in 1964.

CAMPUS SPEAKERS NOTED

CONTACT SPEAKERS NAMED

LEE ASSOCIATES CHAIRMAN

Campus speaker Robert Bierstedt

■ Several distinguished speakers have made appearances at the University since the start of the school year. A list of the lecturers and their topics follows: Prof. O. W. Riegel of the Department of Journalism and Communications—an analysis of Czechoslovakia and the current situation in Eastern Europe; Lawrence Speiser, director of the American Civil Liberties Union's Washington office—"Law and Order—Courts, Cops, Crime, Confessions and Crackpots"; James Q. Wilson, professor of government at Harvard—"Crime in the Streets: What to do Until the Doctor Comes"; Robert Bierstedt, head of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at New York University—"Sociology and Humane Learning"; Ascher H. Shapiro, head of the Department of Mechanical Engineering at MIT—"Peristaltic Pumping and Ureteral Function"; Nathan A. Scott, professor of theology and literature at the University of Chicago—"The 'Conscience' of the New Literature"; Edouard Morot-Sir, cultural counselor to the French Embassy in the United States—"L'Education Francaise et son rayonnement"; Otis Pease, chairman of the history department at the University of Washington—"The Reformer and the Politician in Recent American Politics"; and Samuel E. Carpenter, chairman of the Republican Party of Virginia—comments on the 1969 gubernatorial race in Virginia and opportunities for young people in the Republican Party.

■ Several nationally prominent men will add to the speaker list in the near future. South Dakota Sen. George McGovern and civil rights leader Charles Evers will talk and meet with students in February, appearing at the four-day student-sponsored symposium, CONTACT.

Also on the program will be Philippe Labro, one of France's leading journalist and a Washington and Lee alumnus, and Dr. John R. Silber, dean of students at the University of Texas.

Plans are under way to obtain several other prominent persons for the symposium, said Sam D. Hinkle, IV, a senior from Shelbyville, Ky. and chairman of the CONTACT committee for the student Interfraternity Council, which sponsors the event.

CONTACT was initiated in 1965 as an annual symposium on public issues. Since then, it has debated the problems of the cities, the "Establishment," and the Republican Party, and has brought such men as Sen. Barry Goldwater, Sen. Thruston Morton, author Tom Wolfe, the New York Times' Tom Wicker, author Claude Brown, Alabama's Richmond Flowers, and former CORE director James Farmer to the campus.

The theme for the 1968 symposium will be "Power."

In April, Clark Kerr, president of the University of California at Berkeley during the widespread student unrest there several years ago, will be in Lexington to discuss "Higher Education and Its Discontents."

His appearance at Jackson Memorial Hall on the VMI campus is being sponsored jointly by Washington and Lee and VMI through the visiting scholars program of the University Center in Virginia.

■ Pittsburgh industrialist David D. Johnson has been appointed chairman of the Robert E. Lee Associates, a recently-organized association of devoted and generous friends of Washington and Lee.

Johnson's appointment as the group's first chairman was made by the University's Board of Trustees, which earlier this year established the Lee Associates to recognize and honor its most loyal benefactors.

The Lee Associates provide not only substantial financial support but a large measure of leadership and counsel to the University's development program.

Johnson is secretary and a director of Benedum-Trees Oil Co. in Pittsburgh and serves as vice president and director of the Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation. He is a director of the Pittsburgh National Bank.

A 1921 graduate of Washington and Lee, Johnson received his law degree from the University two years later. He is a former president of the Alumni Association and served as vice chairman of the Alumni House Campaign in 1965-66.

FRATERNITY DONATES $100 TO UNITED FUND

Scruggs, whose son, Richard, Jr., is a junior majoring in physics-engineering, was named at the annual council meeting held in connection with the 14th Parents' Weekend Nov. 1-3.

The council sponsors the annual weekend, along with the University. The three-day event, which this year was attended by a record number of 1,300 parents and guests, enables parents to meet their son's professors, attend classes, tour the campus, view departmental displays, and observe numerous other activities.

Scruggs is president of Vulcan Metals Co. in Birmingham. As chairman, he will preside during Parents' Weekend next fall at the annual council meeting and the "Report to Parents" session.

Scruggs succeeds John F. Carrere, Sr. of New Orleans, who has two sons at the University—senior John, Jr. and sophomore Michael.

■ A faster computer with broadened capabilities for research and other activities has been installed at the University.

The new 1130 replaces the 1620 model, which was in use at Washington and Lee since early 1962. Both are manufactured by IBM.

Dr. John H. Wise, chairman of the University's computer committee, said the latest machine will provide increased storage capabilities, have a faster computing speed, and provide additional programming features.

With its magnetic disc memory bank, the new computer will be used for some research projects previously impractical, Dr. Wise said. It also will be possible to operate the computer by remote control from campus locations other than the computer center building.

Washington and Lee first installed IBM machines in 1960 for use in registration, grade reports, and other statistical data. In 1962, the 1620 was installed, the first of its kind in a Virginia college. It shared its work load about equally between administrative functions, such as student records and monthly payrolls, and classwork and research activities.

■ Recent exhibitions in duPont Art Gallery have included sculpture by David Hall, instructor in fine arts; monoprints by Ray Prohaska, artist-in-residence; abstract paintings and drawings by artist Robert M. Sajnowski; photographs by E. Howard Hamersley, Jr. of the Roanoke Times; and a collection of contemporary Japanese prints from the Roten Galleries of Baltimore.

■ Delta Upsilon social fraternity donated $100 to the Lexington United Fund in place of the usual Homecoming display this fall.

In a prepared news release announcing its decision, the fraternity noted that the average display costs more than $100. "With the lack of any brilliant idea for a display, the brothers decided that their money could be better used being donated to a charitable organization," the fraternity said.

orate papier-mache Homecoming displays in front of their houses, usually depicting the demise of the opposing football team. The Washington and Lee Alumni Association awards prizes each year for the best displays.

■ Sandy Zimmerman, a senior commerce major from Larchmont, N. Y., has been named acting station manager of the University's FM radio station, WLUR.

He replaces, for a temporary but indefinite period, station manager Charles E. Winston, instructor in journalism who is recovering from emergency eye surgery at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Prof. Paxton Davis, chairman of the Department of Journalism and Communications, says Zimmerman's appointment carries "full authority" over day-to-day operations.

■ A freak broadcast signal that permits an alumnus in Lynchburg to hear the University's low power FM educational radio station has been translated into an annual gift of some $2,700 for support of the station's activities.

Richard E. Gooch, a 1930 graduate of Washington and Lee and a former Lynchburg radio broadcasting executive, has established an endowment which will be applied toward yearly operating expenses and equipment purchase for WLUR-FM.

A laboratory of the Department of Journalism and Communications, WLUR broadcasts nightly during the week from 7 to 11 p.m. and on Saturdays from 1 to 9 p.m. It began operation in February, 1967.

Gooch says that WLUR's signal comes to his Lynchburg home "clear as a bell," but he knows of no others in Lynchburg who receive the station, clear or otherwise. The 10-watt station would normally have a broadcast range of about two miles from its antenna on the top of Reid Hall.

Gooch, for whom radio and tape recording now constitute an active hobby, tapes most of WLUR's transmissions. Because of his background in broadcasting and his close ties with Washington and Lee, Gooch is a frequent visitor to the campus studios of WLUR and serves as an unofficial adviser to station manager Charles E. Winston.

Gooch and others at the University are at a loss to explain the reason behind his steady, strong reception of WLUR more than 40 miles from Lexington, although freak bounces of signals are known to occur occasionally in both radio and television transmissions.

Whatever the reason, Winston and Prof. Paxton Davis, head of the Department of Journalism and Communications—appreciative of Gooch's interest and support—hope the phenomenon continues.

■ The 1968-69 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges will list the names of 27 Washington and Lee University students.

The publication annually lists the country's most outstanding campus leaders. Those named are chosen for their academic achievement, community service, and leadership in extracurricular activities and future potential.

Law seniors are Nathan V. Hendricks III, Short Hills, N. J.; James D. Humphries III, Plantation, Fla.; Randy H. Lee, Seattle, Wash.; David W. Redmond, Bloomfield, Conn.; Edward F. Schiff, Bronx, N. Y.; Eric L. Sisler, Bound Brook, N. J.; Dean V. Vegosen, Deal Park, N. J.; Joseph L. Churchill of Roanoke, Va.

Undergraduate seniors include Willis M. Ball III, Jacksonville, Fla.; Robert O. Bauer Jr., Largo, Fla.; William J. Brown, Midland, Tex.; John F. Carrere Jr., New Orleans; Clark H. Carter, Baltimore, Md.; Herbert W. Crenshaw Jr., Forest City, N. C.; Lucien B. Crosland, Short Hills, N. J.; Mark R. Eaker, Dallas; M. Lee Halford Jr., Richardson, Tex.; Samuel D. Hinkle IV, Shelbyville, Ky.; Ronald B. Kessler, Philadelphia; James J. Livesay, Houston; John E. Passavant III, Beaver, Pa.; Michael W. Pustay, Bergenfield, N. J.; Gary D. Silverfield, Columbia, S. C.; Judson H. Simmons, Atlanta; Charles E. Stewart, Baltimore; Addison G. Wilson, Charleston, S. C.; Neil S. Kessler of Richmond, Va.

STUDENTS UNDERTAKE RESEARCH

■ Forty-two students are undertaking research projects at Washington and Lee this year under the University's unique program of grants-in-aid—the Robert E. Lee Research Program.

In the sciences, a student uses the University telescope to study magnetic storms on the sun, and another is busy identifying plants found on the Washington and Lee campus. A student artist works with his professor in preparing an art instruction book.

In the School of Commerce and Administration, an economic major studies the merger of the Penn-Central Railroad. One student, David W. Hardee III of Greenville, N. C., is undertaking two projects—a study of the Negro in marketing strategy for his commerce professor, and a Southeast Asian bibliography for his instructor in history.

What makes the research projects unique is that they are often on the graduate school level, yet undertaken by undergraduates who work closely with their professors. The projects may originate with the student or with a faculty member who wants a student assistant to help in one of his research undertakings. No course credit is given.

There is probably no program quite like it on any other college campus. It was begun in 1960 through a gift of more than $250,000 from an alumnus, the late Dr. Gustavus Benz Capito of Charleston, W. Va. Other funds have since been used to supplement it.

Since it was begun, more than 500 students have participated in over 400 projects, receiving grants-in-aid ranging from less than $100 to nearly $1,000 for several students working together on a single project.

A native New Yorker, he graduated from Penn State University and now is a senior law student at Washington and Lee. His next stop will be in New Orleans, where he will be law clerk to Federal Judge John Minor Wisdom of the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals, a Trustee of the University.

Judge Wisdom's offer is quite an honor for a person still in law school, not to mention the advantage of starting a legal profession that near the top. Schiff is president of the Student Bar Association and will be editor-in-chief of the Washington and Lee Law Review during the second semester.

■ A program of films made by students at the University has been compiled for showing at area colleges, particularly those with cinema clubs.

Entitled "An Evening of Washington and Lee Films," the program was put together by Prof. O. W. Riegel of the Department of Journalism and Communications. They were made by his students as a class project for a course in the history, techniques, and effects of motion pictures.

Prof. Riegel introduces the movies with a short resume of filmmaking at the University. The program was first presented at Hollins, sponsored by the Cinema Club there.

Five films made up the initial program, dating to Barton de Palma's "Gray Rain" (1959). Others are Warren Stewart's "A Young Man's Fancy" and Roger Redman's "Botany US 5," both made in 1967, and two made just last spring, "The Lurk" by Ed Dodd and "Om," by Don Ellis.

■ Christopher H. Mills, a senior from Denver, has been awarded a Rotary Foundation Fellowship for a year's study in France.

Mills will spend the 1969-70 academic session at the University of Grenoble. He will live with a local Rotary family there, under the program's goal of promoting and encouraging international understanding and good will.

An honor roll and dean's list student, Mills is active in debating, is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Eta Sigma honorary fraternities for scholarship, and a participant in the Robert E. Lee Research Program.

■ Keith Shillington's latest accomplishment—simply the latest among many—is an adaptation of a Greek tragedy for presentation on the stage.

Shillington—chemistry professor, amateur actor, crowner of Homecoming Queens, and definitely an Irishman—"freely adapted" Euripides' The Bacchantes for presentation in mid-December by the Troubadours, the University theatrical group.

Writing in his spare time from duties as professor of chemistry, Shillington spent approximately two months on his version of the play.

He described it as "freely adapted for publication" and "not a translation." A literal translation, he pointed out, leads to stilted English, whereas the original was in lyrical Greek language.

"What I did was to recast the play in theatrical English poetry. As I wrote I had in mind an actor standing on the stage and reciting these lines," he said.

Since Shillington does not read Greek, he relied on other translations, plus one original Greek version heavily footnoted in English. He read them thoroughly, almost memorizing each one.

Since strict adherence to scholarship was not his primary aim, Shillington was able to trim and mold the play to make it more easily understood to modern audiences.

Copies of Shillington's work have been printed by Mrs. Betty Munger, manager of the Washington and Lee Bookstore, and will be sold there.

■ Virginia's history from the end of the Civil War to the election of Gov. Harry F. Byrd is the subject of a new book by Washington and Lee University Prof. Allen W. Moger.

Virginia: Bourbonism to Byrd, 1870-1925 went on sale December 11.

The book details debt policy and the neglect of the new "free public schools" which brought William Mahone and his Readjuster Party to control from 1879-83, thus forcing a complete reorganization of the Conservative-Democratic Party into the Democratic organization so familiar to present-day Virginians—the strongest and most famous political group in the state's history.

Prominent in the story is the career of Thomas Staples Martin, who fashioned the organization known for over two decades as the "Martin machine" and who was succeeded, after his death in 1919, by Harry F. Byrd as the organization's leader.

Dr. Moger has many close ties to his native Virginia. He was born in Eclipse in Nansemond County and grew up in Newport News. He is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College in Ashland and received his master's and Ph.D. degrees at Columbia University.

A recent article in the Richmond Times-Dispatch said: "All in all, Virginia: Bourbonism to Byrd is a scholarly and readable work which makes a genuine contribution to our understanding of a significant era."

■ Dr. James G. Leyburn of the Department of Sociology is one of the major contributors to the first comprehensive reference work of the social sciences to appear in more than 30 years.

His article, a biography of William Graham Sumner, is contained in the International Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences, a 17-volume reference work that represents seven years of scholarly collaboration by 1,505 social science specialists from 33 nations.

The new encyclopedia, published by The Macmillan Co. and The Free Press, provides a codification of present knowledge and theory in the social sciences and related fields. It covers all the principal disciplines, including anthropology, economics, geography, history, political science, psychiatry, psychology, sociology, and statistics.

The book is Brazil South: Its Conquest and Settlement, by Moyses Vellinho.

In addition to translating the work, Dr. and Mrs. Barrett added more than 60 notes to explain terms of reference unfamiliar to the general American reader, plus a bibliography and an index.

The preface for Vellinho's work was written by Erico Verissimo, one of Brazil's major novelists, for whom the Barretts have translated works for publication in English.

A former public affairs officer in Colombia and Ecuador, Dr. Barrett is the author of two textbooks and numerous articles on Spanish and Portuguese literature. He joined the Washington and Lee Department of Romance Languages in 1948 and became department head in 1960.

NEW BOOKS (Con't)—

ALUMNI CHAPTER NEWS

ALUMNI FUND REPORT

FLU HITS CAMPUS

His Elementary Quantitative Chemistry will be published next summer by W. H. Freeman & Co., and a new textbook on inorganic chemistry will be published in the summer of 1970 by McGraw-Hill Book Co. Both will contain approximately 350 printed pages.

They will be Dr. Gilreath's fourth and fifth textbooks. A laboratory manual, Experimental Procedures in Elementary Qualitative Analysis, was published earlier this year and is in use in many college classrooms.

Dr. Gilreath's earlier textbooks on qualitative analysis and inorganic chemistry were published in 1954 and 1958, respectively. He joined the Washington and Lee faculty in 1946 and has headed the department since 1955.

■ Alumni chapters from coast to coast have been busy during the first part of the year, some carrying on the usual order of business, one rejuvenating itself, and two meeting for the first time.

The beefed-up schedule is part of an enthusiastic campaign by the University and its alumni to provide greater communication between the two. President Huntley is a frequent guest at chapter meetings, and his candid and forthright remarks concerning University activities, policies, and problems have drawn spirited response.

Since September, regular meetings have been held in Danville (Va.), Washington, D. C., Chicago, Cleveland, New Orleans, Norfolk (Tidewater Chapter), San Francisco (Northern California Chapter), Greensboro (Piedmont Chapter), and Baltimore.

"Rejuvenation Day" was the term given the Philadelphia meeting on Nov. 20. Outgoing president Rody Davies explained the need for revitalizing the organizational structure of the chapter and pumping new ideas into it, while new president Arthur Blank announced the appointment of a board of directors, a chapter directory, a stepped-up student recruitment program, and a visit by President Huntley in the spring.

New chapters were organized in South Carolina and California. In the Palmetto State, a large alumni representation from the Columbia-Sumter-Camden-Orangeburg area gathered to form the Palmetto Chapter, with William M. Bowen its first president. Eugene M. Anderson, Jr. will be the first secretary.

In Los Angeles, a year of planning culminated in the formation of the Southern California Chapter. Frank McCormick will serve as the new president, assisted by vice president and secretary Rogers Cox. Cox was instrumental for much of the ground work in organizing the chapter.

■ As of December 21, 1968, the 1968-69 Alumni Fund had received $88,775 from 1,102 contributors. The dollar amount of gifts was slightly ahead of the amount tabulated during the same period last year.

The Class Agent program will begin in January, and many alumni are expected to respond generously. The fund fiscal year ends June 30, 1969; a pledge made before this date may be paid during the 1969 calendar year.

Last year the fund received $277,771.34 from 3,946 contributors. The goal this year is $300,000. An increase in the number of contributors and new dedication to University needs will bring about fulfillment of this goal.

Semper Idem?

That a gentleman does not lie, cheat, or steal is a Washington and Lee tradition. Simply, it is the Honor System, a century-old institution in itself that has been accepted without question, perhaps because of fear but most of all out of respect for its excellence of ideal and spirit, these many years.

Now there are questions, most of them concerning jurisdiction and procedural matters. The main issues specifically deal with vagueness in how far the Honor System extends and what mechanics should be followed during an honor case.

Senior Neil Kessler, Friday edition editor of the Ring-tum Phi, takes a brief look at the situation in an article that should be of particular interest to alumni.

For 100 years, Washington and Lee students have attempted to govern their curricular and individual lives by a set of principles called the Honor System. Based upon the ideal that every member of the student body is ipso facto a gentleman and will live as a gentleman, the System seldom has been challenged, and its form has remained practically intact since its inception.

Throughout this school year, though, there have been severe challenges to certain aspects of the Honor System. In particular, questions concerning the jurisdiction of the System have been raised—does it pertain just to work which will be graded, or does it involve all facets of life while attending Washington and Lee?

The functioning of the System's procedure also has come under examination. Should the Executive Committee be the proper channel to determine whether the Honor System has been violated? Is there anything wrong with the procedure before an open trial, where a student may appeal the EC's decision only before students and faculty?

Two such open trials within the past three years have caused considerable anxiety, consternation, and alarm, and possibly a lack of confidence in the Executive Committee.

Freshman law student H. William Walker, Jr. wrote in the Ring-tum Phi not long ago his thoughts about jurisdiction: "... why do we cling tenaciously to an ideal (being a gentleman in daily social conduct as well as daily classroom conduct) which we do not even attempt to realize? Common conduct defines our repudiation of these century-old norms, yet we insist on paying them lip service... If we are not going to govern our social conduct by the traditional norms, then let us stop echoing these norms."

This does not mean that Mr. Walker and other students who agree with him want to set up a system of social amorality. What it does mean is that many students are hypocritical in claiming to follow the Honor System per se, falling short in such practices as purchasing liquor at the ABC store before they are 21, asking a friend for the spelling of a word without giving proper credit in a paper, or walking into a big weekend concert without paying.

In addition, Walker wanted to show that some students apparently even doubted that the Honor System really worked. He quoted facts from a 1966 poll, printed in the Ring-tum Phi, by Robert E. Lee, Jr. Although Lee's results were approximate, they showed some falterings in the System. The poll was based on the answers of juniors and seniors in three fraternities—one whose academic standing was consistently near the top, one consistently in the middle, and one consistently at the bottom.

Seventy-seven per cent of those polled admitted violations of what they considered to be "the letter of the law." Of these, only 36 per cent felt they had violated "the spirit of the system." On another matter, just 37 per cent said they would report fraternity brothers they saw committing a violation, but 66 per cent claimed they would report someone they did not know or like.

Therefore, it appears that some Washington and Lee students fail to measure up to the social and legal standards they claim to follow through the Honor System.

Larry Honig, Tuesday edition editor of the Ring-tum Phi, expresses hope that the current problems can be worked out: "Its (Honor System) implementation may fall short of success," he states, "but these weaknesses can be worked out by the Executive Committee."

Already, Jay Passavant, president of the Student Body, has appointed two committees to study the Honor System. One committee will review the jurisdictional limits of the System, studying and evaluating existing policies affecting such matters as off-campus and out-of-University offenses — where the applicability of the Honor System is now in question.

A second committee is especially designed to evaluate procedures of the System. Its members include Intermediate Law Representative Pete Hendricks, University President Robert E. R. Huntley, Assistant Professor of Law Andrew W. McThenia, and Mr. Passavant.

Reports from these committees have not yet been filed. However, the two groups are going over all problems of the Honor System from every aspect. For example, amendments to the Student Body constitution which would guarantee due process for the accused in honor cases were proposed to the Executive Committee by myself, but now have been referred to the study committees for consideration.

The Honor System is coming under its closest scrutiny in history. Although changes are bound to come out of the studies now under way, they certainly will not weaken the System or cause it to become extinct. On the contrary, these changes will be made only with the intentions of strengthening it. The Honor System, already fully established by tradition, must change with a changing Student Body or be left behind to stagnate in its own weaknesses.

FOOTBALL ACHES AND PAINS

■ What may have been the most successful non-successful football season in recent years has just been completed.

The Generals, who could tie just one game in their first five outings (and that a 0-0 Homecoming deadlock against Hampden-Sydney), came roaring back to take three of their last four games.

Responsible for the early-season sluggishness was a bundle of maladies you wouldn't wish on your mother-in-law. Such as . . .

Halfback Luke Crosland—Suffered torn knee ligaments in the Guilford game, the opener, and later underwent surgery. Out for the year.

Linebacker John Wolf—Aggravated old knee injury in Guilford contest, same knee that required an operation last winter. Played later on, but not up to par.

Defensive back Don Sharpe—Pulled out of the Randolph-Macon game with, you guessed it, a knee injury. Sat out a few games, played sporadically later.

Defensive back Lee Graham—Pulled out of the Randolph-Macon encounter with, oh no, a knee injury that forced him to miss several succeeding games. Came back later, but not with same efficiency.

Linebacker Drew Kumpuris—Had his chest slightly caved in during Macon game, missed the next one with Centre. Recovered to do a fine job.

Defensive end Scott Mackenzie—Had to be carried off the field after fifth play against Lafayette, and he never saw another minute of action. It was his knee!

Offensive tackle Tom Mullenix—Broke his hand at mid-season. He watched next games from the sidelines in street clothes.

Defensive back Jay Dorman—Just about the saddest story going. He strained his knee in a scrimmage before the start of the 1967 season, preventing him from playing at all. The injury never came around, and Jay, although dressing, failed to make it into any game this year, either.

Then there was the schedule, something head coach Buck Leslie termed "the toughest opposition we've had since I came here." It was particularly mean right at the outset, a time when W&L could ill afford such bad luck.

For in addition to the injuries, the Generals had to assimilate quickly to a new coach. Sometimes, it can be pulled off, often not. But Leslie's leadership and determined spirit paid off later on, as W&L regrouped and started winning.

■ Washington and Lee flanker Bucky Cunningham set several new pass-catching records as the Generals ended their football season with an over-all 3-5-1 mark and a 2-2 record in the College Athletic Conference, good for a third-place tie.

Cunningham's 44 receptions this year for 532 yards brought his career total to 88 catches for an even 1,000 yards, both new standards at the University. A senior from Houston, Tex., his feats are remarkable, since he didn't try out for football until his junior year, and then he played in only the last six games.

Kumpuris, have been named to the Virginia All-Small College football team dominated by Randolph-Macon and Emory and Henry with nine performers each.

The Generals had a plethora of honorable mention selections, including offensive tackle Tom McJunkin, center Thunder Thornton, quarterback Chuck Kuhn, fullback Doug Gossman, defensive tackle Britt McJunkin, middle guard John Harris, and linebacker John Wolf.

■ Captains for the 1969 fall sports season have been announced by the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics and Physical Education. In football, they include linebacker Dean Kumpuris of Little Rock, Ark., offensive tackle Tom McJunkin of Charleston, W. Va., and center Michael "Thunder" Thornton of Huntington, W. Va.

The soccer team will be led by fullback Doug Clarke of Houston, Tex. and lineman John Yow of Marietta, Ga., while the cross-country squad will be commanded by Dave Haydu of Fairfield, Conn. and Paul Wilber of Salisbury, Md.

All are rising seniors, except Wilber, a rising junior.

■ Washington and Lee will host the 1970 North-South All-Star Lacrosse Game, pitting the best lacrosse players in the country against each other.

Word that the University's bid for the game had been approved was received by W&L lacrosse head coach Dick Szlasa from Dick Gerber, chairman of the game and lacrosse coach at the University of Massachusetts.

The opposing North and South squads will be drawn from 79 schools which play lacrosse, ranging as far west as the Air Force Academy in Colorado. The game will be played in early June, with the exact date to be set later.

This year's North-South game will be held in Baltimore on June 13, sponsored jointly by Baltimore University, Towson State College, and Loyola University.

BASKETBALL TEAM
OVERCOMES PRE-SEASON
DOUBTS

■ What once had been termed a season of question all of a sudden has become a year of plenty for the University's hard-charging basketball team.

The Generals, after an initial opening-game 78-71 home court setback to Randolph-Macon, then won eight straight to sail into the Christmas holiday break with their best record at that time since Verne Canfield has been head coach.

The last two victories came in the first Washington and Lee Invitational Tournament on Dec. 19-20, an 89-65 first-round win over Shepherd and an 87-75 championship game victory over Bloomsburg State (Pa.).

The tourney crown capped an outstanding first half-season of play, proving W&L has overcome the problems it faced before the campaign started. The No. 1 issue at that point was the absence of starting forward Mal Wesselink, a 6-6 outside shooter, believe it or not, who transferred to the University of Maryland.

Issue No. 2 was the absence of starting guard John Carrere, who opted not to play this winter.

Issue No. 3 was the absence of team captain Rob Bauer, whose chronic knee injury finally forced him to abandon the sport. An All-State performer as a freshman three years ago, Bauer underwent surgery to relieve the trouble, but the knee never came back to playing condition.

The Generals had plenty of talent left, though. Junior forward Mel Cartwright and junior center Mike Neer immediately took charge—Cartwright faking and driving the baseline for points underneath, and Neer grabbing a rebound and putting it back up and in.

They do it with such ease. The 6-5 Cartwright owns a patent on his now-famous one-on-one moves, to the extent he was averaging 21.4 points (hitting 59.5 per cent of his floor shots) at the break. He sank his 1,000th career point in the Lynchburg game on Dec. 10.

Neer, the tall and rangy 6-7 pivot man, is a perfect complement to Cartwright. When he jumps, he goes out of sight, and when he shoots, he has to aim downward. He is the ideal argument for the 12-foot basket.

To date, Neer is averaging 17.1 a game, hitting on 53.5 per cent of his field attempts.

Those two guys now make it easy to believe W&L is in line for its third conference championship in a row, then, possibly, a berth in the NCAA regional playoffs. But the Generals have some tough opposition still to come, including that big game with Navy, so they're not home free yet.

AAP TOP OFFICIALS ARE WASHINGTON AND LEE ALUMNI

■ Three top officials currently serving the Association of American Physicians happen to be Washington and Lee men. At the spring meeting of the organization, Dr. A. McGehee Harvey, '30, the outgoing president, turned the gavel over to new president Dr. Robert H. Williams, '29.

Its origin dating back to the late 19th century, the organization has a current membership of some 300 of the most distinguished physicians and scientists in the nation.

A native of Little Rock, Dr. Harvey is physician-in-chief and professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins University. He is a member of the Physiological Society of Great Britain, the American Society of Clinical Investigation, a Fellow of the American College of Physicians, and belongs to the Baltimore City Medical Society. He is an author and co-author of more than 130 professional articles and publications, and he holds an honorary degree from Washington and Lee.

Dr. Williams, a native of Savannah, Tenn., is professor of medicine at the University of Washington. He was chairman of the Department of Medicine from 1948 to 1963, and he, too, has a wide range of professional interests. He was principal founder of the Western Association of Physicians, the Medical Intersociety Council, the Research Society Council, and the Medical Student Research Society at the University of Washington. He is also a contributor to textbooks, and he has published numerous professional works.

Dr. Smith was born in Easley, S. C. His medical training began at Harvard, and he currently is chairman of the Department of Medicine and is physician-in-chief at the University of California at San Francisco. He is a consultant in medicine at Ft. Miley and Mt. Zion Hospitals in that city. Dr. Smith is active in many distinguished professional associations, and has been active in the publication of professional works.

Class Notes

W. ROSS McCAIN is one of Hartford's (Conn.) leading citizens. Mr. McCain, an Arkansas-born lawyer, worked his way up to president in one of America's leading firms, the Aetna Insurance Co. He moved to Hartford in 1919, and is leaving his mark on the community in many areas—business, civic, and social. McCain, who retired as Aetna's president in 1950, still has one foot in the business world—he is a voting trustee of the Mechanics Savings Bank, and is an honorary director of the Connecticut Bank and Trust Company and the Connecticut Mutual Insurance Company. Until recently, he played golf two or three times a week at the Hartford Golf Club. Following graduation in 1898, McCain went abroad for the next two years, studying and traveling in Germany and France. Upon his return to Arkansas, he began preparing for a career in law. Although he was admitted to the bar in 1903, he never practiced that profession. He was a state agent in Arkansas for Aetna Insurance Co. from 1911 to 1919, when he was called to the home office in Hartford. There, he worked his way through the ranks and was named president in 1933. Recently the Hartford Courant ran an article about McCain—the community leader.

The nation's first endowed professorship in a new medical specialty has been established at the University of Cincinnati by WALTER A. McDONALD. The gift, from the Walter A. and George McDonald Foundation, establishes a chair in immunology and connective tissue diseases. Current activities of the medical division are in-patient care and research in arthritis, allergy, and kidney transplantation.

super-annuated professor of law at the University of Miami. Since 1959, he has been serving in the court of Appeals or the Supreme Court of Appeals as a retired Justice. He maintains offices in the Law School Library at the University.

1920

CARL K. GILCHRIST is Director of Public Relations at Morris Harvey College in Charleston, W. Va. He is also chairman of the Charleston Civic Center Board.

In June, 1968, C. G. GORDON MOSS retired from the faculty of Longwood College in Farmville, Va.

A tribute on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of the Mental Hospital Institutes of the American Psychiatric Association was made to DR. DANIEL BLAIN. Dr. Blain, the first medical director of the Association, created and convened the first Mental Hospital Institute in April, 1949. The Association provides a forum in which those who work in mental hospitals can express their needs publicly, exchange and enhance their knowledge, and strengthen their will to cope with their problems. Dr. Blain also initiated the APA Mental Hospital Service and its journal for sharing psychiatric information. As commissioner of mental hygiene in California and now as superintendent of the Philadelphia State Hospital, Dr. Blain continues his tireless efforts in behalf of the mentally handicapped. At the anniversary meeting in Washington, D. C. on October 2, 1968, Dr. Blain was presented an illuminated scroll for the outstanding work which he has done.

A master plan to re-develop downtown Chattanooga, Tenn. is nearing completion, and A. C. BRYAN, a leading real estate appraiser and mortgage loan consultant, has been named to coordinate the dramatic venture. The announcement was made by the Downtown Development Committee of the Greater Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce, which has worked for more than two and one-half years on this program. Bryan, who began work for the committee as manager-coordinator on a full-time basis last August 15, is recognized as one of the top men in the country in real estate appraisal work and mortgage investments. He went to Chattanooga from the servicing office of Prudential Insurance Co. in 1934, and a year later joined Provident Life and Accident Co. When he retired from Provident, he was vice-president of the Mortgage Loan Department, and the holder of an excellent reputation for sound business judgment. Bryan is a member of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, a former member
