Nixon supporters whoop it up for their man.

Gov. Kirk acknowledges convention cheers.

Mock Convention Says 'Nixon'!

It was late afternoon on Saturday, May 4. The colorful parade along the streets of Lexington the day before was a fond memory. The keynote address of Gov. Claude R. Kirk, Jr., of Florida was by then just a part of the record. So too were the address and presentation of the platform by former Gov. Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma. The gavel had been pounded thousands of times. The stirring nominating speeches and noisy demonstrations were over. The last banner had been waved, the last placard hoisted, the last balloon burst, and the last shower of confetti had settled among the debris cluttering the floor of Doremus Gymnasium. The balloting had begun and the Washington and Lee Mock Convention was coming to the moment of truth.

It came on the third ballot—Richard M. Nixon was the choice for the Republican nomination for President of the United States. A few minutes later the Washington and Lee delegates—playing their roles as realistically as humanly possible in this curious political year—picked Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois for the vice presidential nomination.

Mr. Nixon, attending the Kentucky Derby in Louisville, accepted the Mock Convention's nomination by telephone message, saying that "peace at home and peace abroad must be discussed in the campaign" and stressing that the Washington and Lee nomination "means a great deal to me." Then Convention Chairman Steven R. Saunders, senior from Elmont, N.Y., adjourned the two-day convention. It was all over—almost.

Almost—because the real test of how well the Washington and Lee students carried out their exercise in practical convention politics will come in August in Miami when the real Republican National Convention chooses a presidential candidate.

If the actual Republican delegates on the first ballot give Richard Nixon about 400 votes, Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York about 300, and scatter the remaining votes among favorite sons . . . and if on the second ballot Nixon moves within about 20 votes of the 667 needed for nomination and Rockefeller manages to come up with only about 440 . . . and if on the third ballot the switching begins in earnest and Nixon winds up with about 1,280 of the 1,333 votes, the Washington and Lee students will for the 10th time in 14 tries, and for the 5th time in a row, have picked the right candidate for President for the party out of power in much the same manner as the real convention.

Of course, if Mr. Nixon is the actual nominee—whether he wins on the first or whatever ballot—the Washington and Lee students will again have proved their uncanny political acuity.

The consensus after the convention was that the students chose correctly, staged a thoroughly realistic convention, deported themselves as gentlemen, and had a huge lot of fun. (A future issue of the Alumni Magazine will present the Mock Convention in greater detail in words and pictures.)

The SALUTARY CHEMISTRY of a SYMPOSIUM on SHAKESPEARE

SINCE 1959, THE INAUGURAL YEAR of the Arthur Graham Glasgow Endowment Program "to promote the art of expression by pen and tongue," the Glasgow Endowment Committee has sponsored the visits of many outstanding creative artists, including Katherine Anne Porter, John Ciardi, Merle Miller, William Humphrey, Edward Albee, Richard Eberhart, Robert Lowell, Howard Nemerov, Robert Penn Warren, Karl Shapiro, David Stacton and James Dickey. Not committed to any literary orthodoxy or rigid rubric by the liberal terms of the generous bequest, the Glasgow Committee has brought a stimulating series of poets, dramatists, and novelists to the campus for periods ranging from a few days to an entire academic year.

This year the Endowment Committee, composed of six faculty members with Professor Paxton Davis as chairman, continued its laudable pattern of innovation by arranging a Critical Symposium entitled "Approaches to Shakespeare."

For three days, February 13-15, four literary critics of international reputation—C. L. Barber, Kenneth Burke, Stanley Edgar Hyman, and L. C. Knights—confronted Washington and Lee students in a variety of contexts, from formal talks in Lee Chapel to informal seminars held at the Alumni House. The success of the Symposium was assured when it became eminently clear from the outset that our distinguished guests warmly welcomed the open format with its broad spectrum of opportunities for direct contact with the students. The salutary chemistry of the Symposium, then, was the happy result of getting the proper people in the proper places. Such a significant occasion deserves report as well as praise.

In one of his most durable essays, "The Function of Criticism at the Present Time," Matthew Arnold tells us that "criticism must be sincere, simple, flexible, ardent, ever widening its knowledge." It was precisely these qualities which the speakers so abundantly exhibited as they brought their various skills and strategies to bear on a prearranged common material, Shakespeare's major tragedies.

L. C. Knights, one-time enfant terrible of Shakespeare studies but now established as the King Edward VII Professor of English Literature at Cambridge University, opened the Symposium on Tuesday evening with a delightful and elegant delivery of his paper on "Shakespeare's Tragedies and the Question of Moral Judgment." No longer the radical who had decades ago assailed the "Character school" of Shakespearean criticism and its preeminent exponent, A. C. Bradley, in his now classic essay "How Many Children Had Lady Macbeth," Knights took a conservative position, defending the Arnoldian premise that literature should function morally as a "criticism of life." This recurrent assumption in Knights' important body of criticism finds clearest statement in his latest book, Further Explorations:

As for works of imaginative literature . . . we are interested in them because they all in different ways focus what

Arnold called 'the great question,—How to Live?'—they spring from a passionate interest in the general life and lead back to it.

Because Hamlet so sharply focuses "the great question," Knights emphasized the ethical relevance of this timeless study of a trapped, death-directed, and corrupted consciousness.

The speakers on Wednesday were Kenneth Burke and C. L. Barber. In the afternoon session the irrepressible and versatile Burke—esteemed critic, philosopher, novelist, poet, translator, rhetorician, and what have you—addressed himself to the subject of "King Lear: Its Form and its Psychosis." Presenting himself as a critic "prophecy after the fact" and employing his special critical vocabulary (accessible to interested readers in his "Dictionary of Pivotal Terms" in Counter-Statement), Burke stressed the central motif of abdication in Lear, or what he termed the "paradox of substance," the tendency for the characters to dissolve in their contexts and hence abdicate from their responsibilities. Burke thus gave his audience a suggestive formulation for organizing the parallel and contrasting forms of "abdication" in Shakespeare's masterwork. Resonating, interlocking levels of dissolution are manifold, from the concrete, tangible loss of clothing, sight, retainers, land, and life itself to the more abstract but nonetheless "felt" loss of identity, insight, the capacity for loyalty and love, and the meaning of life.

Burke viewed himself as a "systematic" and "entelechial" critic fulfilling his own set of perceptive possibilities; that is, theoretically he generated his insights from within a closed critical cosmos consistent with his concept of language as symbolic action and his definition of man as "the symbol-using animal, inventor of the negative, separated from his natural condition by instruments of his own making, goaded by the spirit of hierarchy and rotten with perfection." Burke, however, can not be accused of advocating private and provincial criticism; to the contrary he has asserted, "The main ideal of criticism, as I conceive it, is to use all that is there to use," and in practice he has admirably followed this open-door policy.

The final speakers, albeit in quite different ways, also practiced Burke's dictum: "to use all that is there to use." C. L. Barber's publications attest eloquently to his ability "to use all," particularly his Shakespeare's Festive Comedy in which he mined the rich anthropological lode of English folk-customs and ritual deriving from the Roman Saturnalia to brilliantly illuminate the structure, character, and theme of those plays conducive to this approach. In his paper on Hamlet Professor Barber tackled the vexing problem of the ghost's ambiguity, "Spirit of health, or goblin damned," and its tangency to Hamlet's moral dilemma. After providing a capsule summary of historical interpretations of the ghost and disagreeing with those who unequivocally assume the ghost to be a devil, Barber placed the issue of the ghost's identity as secondary to the moral implications of Hamlet's excessive attachment to the King-Father spectre. This inordinate worship Barber termed "destructive piety." Totally galvanized by the spirit at the outset, Hamlet, in order to "taint not [his own] spirit" and yet abide by the apparition's other injunctions, must cease to deify his father. Unlike Knights, Barber argued that after his sea-journey Hamlet has made a successful psychological and moral adjustment which allows him to forgive his parents for not being gods. Augmenting his thesis with spontaneous quotation of crucial speeches, Barber impressively anchored his argument in the text and demonstrated a refreshing enthusiasm for, and uncommon mastery of, his subject matter.

The speaker on Thursday afternoon was Stanley Edgar Hyman, ex-critic for The New Leader but best-known for his study of the makers and methods of modern literary criticism, The Armed Vision. The title of Hyman's paper, "Iago: Some Approaches to Motivation," announced his pluralistic and synthetic critical approach. In his historical review Hyman isolated five principal readings of the enigmatic antagonist: formalist (Iago as stage villain), theological (Iago as Satan), psychoanalytic (Iago as latent homosexual), Burkean (Iago as improvising artist), and history of ideas (Iago as Machiavel). Accepting the validity of all these Iagos, Hyman nevertheless professed a preference for the theological reading of Othello as a vestigial Morality play wherein the primary allegorical equivalencies become Iago as the Satanic Ancient-in-Evil, Desdemona as the Christ figure, and Othello, "the base Judean," as a type of Judas Iscariot. Pressed vigorously in the discussion period, Hyman seemed willing to admit those Iagos suggested by his audience which he had omitted in his catalogue.

In the last session, a panel discussion on Thursday evening, the participants devoted their energies to clarifying their respective critical stances, a process which tended to blur rather than to sharpen distinctions among the presuppositions and methodologies of the panelists. In fact, the discussion was remarkable for the unanimity of opinion it generated. All of the critics either explicitly or implicitly accepted the relevance of literature to life; all regarded literature, in Barber's phrase, as "an organ of culture" to be best understood and evaluated by the rigorous application of an informed, sensitive critical intelligence "using all that is there to use" rather than by arbitrary imposition of any doctrine formulae. All four critics revealed themselves to be de facto eclectics, practicing a policy of analytic synthesis and rewarding their auditors with insights as profound and perceptive as their minds could muster at the critical moment. In sum, the Glasgow Symposium demonstrated the superiority of Mind over Method and the enduring viability of the Arnoldian critical temper. Though the criticism was occasionally something less than "simple" and "flexible," it was always "sincere," "ardent," "ever widening . . . knowledge."

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

George Washington Ray, III, is an assistant professor of English at Washington and Lee. During the 1967-68 academic year he was on leave as a fellow in the Cooperative Program in the Humanities sponsored by Duke University and the University of North Carolina, continuing a critical study of the plays of George Chapman, playwright for the Elizabethan and Jacobean stage. He is a graduate of Wesleyan University, Colgate University, and the University of Rochester, from which he received his Ph.D. degree. He joined the Washington and Lee faculty in 1964.

ALUMNI WEEKEND 1968

ALUMNI WEEKEND 1968—April 26-27—brought to the campus more than 300 Washington and Lee alumni, their wives, and their guests.

The activities included two addresses by visiting lecturers, receptions, dinners, campus tours, a golf tournament, and several intercollegiate spring sports events.

Five returning classes—1918, 1928, 1943, 1953, and 1958—held reunion banquets. And at a Saturday morning business session of the Alumni Association, these officers were named: Frederick Bartenstein, Jr., '41, of Rahway, N. J., president; John L. Crist, Jr., '45, of Charlotte, N. C., vice president; and William C. Baker, Jr., '38, of Chicago, treasurer.

Mr. Bartenstein, administrative vice president of Merck & Co., Inc., and a lawyer, succeeded Dr. James W. Priest, '43, of Dayton, Ohio. Mr. Crist, an industrial developer and investor, succeeded Thomas C. Frost, Jr., '50, of San Antonio. Mr. Baker, a management consultant, succeeded John M. Jones, III, '37, of Greeneville, Tenn.

University President Robert E. R. Huntley addressed the returning alumni at a luncheon at Evans Dining Hall at noon Saturday. The alumni also heard the Hon. Albert V. Bryan, Circuit Judge, United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, deliver the annual John Randolph Tucker Lecture in Lee Chapel. They also had an opportunity to hear a talk by Dr. Kenneth E. Boulding, professor of economics at the University of Michigan and president of the American Economic Association. His subject was "Stable Peace as an Objective of National Policy."

Several fraternities held receptions and dinners for the alumni.

Law Association Meeting

JUDGE BRYAN delivers the Tucker Lecture in Lee Chapel.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Washington and Lee Law School Association, the law alumni organization, coincided this year with the Reunion Weekend of the Washington and Lee Alumni Association April 26-27.

The major event was the delivery of the annual John Randolph Tucker Lecture by the Hon. Albert V. Bryan of Alexandria, Va., Circuit Judge, United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Judge Bryan's lecture dealt with his proposals and alternatives for swifter processing of criminal appeals to protect the public as well as the accused. He called for reducing the time from the prevalent six months to about 25 days, suggesting more extensive use of oral presentation, the elimination of briefs or at least the submission of simultaneous briefs, the waiving of the printing of briefs, and screening out frivolous appeals at an early date in the process.

Judge Bryan's lecture in its final form will be published in the Washington and Lee Law Review.

During the business session, the Law Association elected the following officers: Marvin C. Bowling, Jr., '51, of Richmond, president; John G. Fox, '49, of Washington, D. C., vice president; Andrew McThenia, '63, of the Law School faculty, secretary-treasurer; Miss Louise Moore, Law Librarian, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Bowling succeeded Thomas R. McNamara, '52, of Norfolk, and Mr. Fox succeeded Mr. Bowling in the vice presidency.

Named to the Law Association Council were John F. Kay, Jr., '55, of Richmond, John Bell Towill, '29, of Augusta, Ga., Robert E. Glenn, '53, of Roanoke, Va., Samuel C. Davidson, '57, of Bethesda, Md., and Gilbert Bocetti, Jr., '54, of Greensboro, N. C.

NEW ALUMNI BOARD MEMBERS

EMIL C. RASSMAN, '41

Mr. Rassman of Midland, Texas, has long been prominent in legal and civic affairs in the Southwest. He is presently chairman of the Board of Regents of the senior colleges and university system of Texas and was recently reappointed to that office by Gov. John Connally. A graduate of the University of Texas Law School, Mr. Rassman is senior member of the law firm of Rassman, Gunter & Boldrick. He is a member of the American College of Trial Lawyers and the International Academy of Trial Lawyers. A devoted alumnus of Washington and Lee, he has served as class agent for the annual fund and as president of the West Texas alumni chapter. He is married to the former Annie de Montel, and they have a son, Neal, a student at Washington and Lee, and a daughter, Laura, a student at Stratford College in Danville, Va.

S. L. KOPALD, JR., '43

Mr. Kopald is executive vice president of Humko Products, Division of the National Dairy Products Corp., Memphis, Tenn. After receiving a degree in industrial administration from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, he served with the U. S. Army and was discharged in 1946 with the rank of captain. He joined Humko in 1946, and that same year married Mimi Daves of Lexington, Va., daughter of a prominent Lexingtonian, Ralph Daves. The Kopalds have four children. Mr. Kopald is presently a director of Union Planters National Bank, Youngtown, Inc., and Business Music Corp., all of Memphis. He is also a director of Ideal Mutual Insurance Co. of New York. He is also chairman of the Board of Governors of Hebrew Union College—the Jewish Institute of Religion, former director and chairman of the Memphis Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, former president of the Memphis Rotary Club, and director of the Community Chest and the American Red Cross.

RICHARD H. TURRELL, '49

Mr. Turrell is vice president of the Fiduciary Trust Co. of New York. Before joining the bank, he was with the Delaware, Lakawana Western Coal Co. and held the position of assistant to the president from 1953 to 1958. He also was with the brokerage firm of Auchincloss, Parker, and Redpath before joining Fiduciary in 1961. He has been very active in Washington and Lee alumni affairs, serving as president of the New York alumni chapter from 1964 to 1966. He is a Mason and a Shriner, and when he is not pursuing financial matters he enjoys golfing. He is married to the former Sally Ann Wolfe. They and their three sons live in Short Hills, N. J.

LYNCHBURG

■ LYNCHBURG ALUMNI honored E. P. "Cy" Twombly, retiring coach and Athletic Director, at a meeting Feb. 23 at the Boonesboro Country Club. Twombly was given the "Lynchburg Citation" which was presented by Bert Schewel, '41. Head football coach and newly named Athletic Director, Lee McLaughlin, paid tribute to Twombly, citing the fine records which many of Cy's teams have made. Several University officials attended, and the evening's highlight was a speech by Washington and Lee's President, Robert E. R. Huntley. S. James Thompson, Jr., '57, retiring chapter president, presided at the banquet meeting. A report from the nominating committee chairman placed Irving Lynn in the office of chapter president for 1968. His election was unanimous. Arrangements for the outstanding affair were made by John Alford, '57.

RICHMOND

■ THE RICHMOND CHAPTER and Washington and Lee University joined forces to honor the Washington and Lee members of the General Assembly of Virginia. The highly successful affair, one of the largest and finest in recent years, featured a formal dinner-dance at the Country Club of Virginia on Friday evening, March 1. University President and Mrs. Huntley, with Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Smith, '46, chapter president, were hosts to a group of 17 distinguished legislators and the Honorable Fred C. Pollard, lieutenant governor, who represented the Commonwealth in the absence of Governor Godwin. In addition to President Huntley the University was represented by nine members of the administration and their wives. William H. Adelloff, '57, vice president of the chapter, presented the members of the legislature. President Huntley introduced those from the campus, expressed Washington and Lee's pride in the work of the Washington and Lee members of the General Assembly and gave a brief report on the status of the University upon his assumption of its presidency. The formal dinner-dance, an annual affair of the chapter, was an outstanding event and thoroughly enjoyable to all.

NEW ORLEANS

■ AMONG THE ACTIVITIES prior to Mardi Gras was a meeting of the Alumni Chapter members at Delmonico's famous restaurant Feb. 2. The assembled members and their wives heard Bill Washburn, national executive secretary, report on the University and extend a special greeting from the new president of Washington and Lee, Robert E. R. Huntley. Chapter president, Dudley Flanders, '56, presided over the dinner meeting which also heard reports from John H. McMillan, '42, and Jimmy Hammett, '40, who had attended the Special Conference for Chapter Representatives on campus in October, 1967. University trustee, Joe Lykes, Jr., '41, extended official thanks to the chapter for its past services and urged its continued support of Washington and Lee. A motion was made and unanimously approved that the New Orleans chapter institute a system of voluntary chapter dues. Flanders adjourned the meeting with an announcement that a chapter directory would be compiled and distributed to each member.

LOUISVILLE

■ ARRIVING BY PULLMAN at the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Station, Dean Frank Gilliam and Bill Washburn were officially met by A. T. Bishop, Jr., '41, A. R. Boden, Jr., '52, and Charlie Castner, Jr., '52. The occasion was the celebration of Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, and a large number of alumni, friends, and their wives attended a beautiful reception and banquet in honor of the guests at the Louisville Country Club. Dean Gilliam was featured speaker. In the required absence of the chapter's president, John R. Farmer, '61, the meeting was expertly handled by Gus Boden. John H. Hardwick, '31, president of Louisville Trust Co., expressed welcome to Dean Gilliam from the chapter and introduced the guests. Gilliam's remarks about Washington and Lee were spliced with humorous stories about many of the alumni with whom he was so familiar over the years. The ladies and gentlemen had a truly memorable and enjoyable evening.

PENSACOLA

■ FRIDAY EVENING, Feb. 16, the Washington and Lee basketball squad met the University of West Florida on the courts of the Pensacola High School gym. While the Generals lost by a score of 65 to 84, the enthusiasm and support of the large gathering of alumni abounded on all sides. The festivities started with a party for all alumni at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherrill, '60, at 6:30 p.m. and, after the game, continued at a local night-spot, Rosie O'Grady's. Several members of the Mobile Chapter came over for the occasion.

SAN ANTONIO

■ THE EXECUTIVE SECRETARY, Bill Washburn, visited San Antonio Feb. 5. He visited the local high schools in connection with student recruitment. Also his San Antonio itinerary included a tour of HemisFair, conducted by Marshall Steves, '44, and Ganahl Walker, '40. Plans were made for "W&L Day at HemisFair—July 12." Local alumni honored Washburn with a lovely dinner at LaFonda of Oakhills. Election of officers was held, and Brentano Harnisch, '39, was named chapter president for the coming year.

HOUSTON

■ THE ALUMNI OF the Houston chapter entertained with cocktails and dinner Feb. 6, 1968, at the Briar Club. The featured guest for the occasion was Bill Washburn, alumni secretary. Washburn had visited the local high schools in the afternoon. His remarks addressed to the parents of current students as well as alumni was a "thumb-nail" report on the University. He advised the chapter of the plans on July 12 for a Washington and Lee Day at HemisFair and a committee consisting of Ben Ditto, Bob Davis, Tom Anderson, Gordon Gooch and Temple Webber was appointed to coordinate the effort. In a short business session the following were elected as officers of the chapter for the ensuing year: Temple Webber, president; Gordon Gooch, Foxy Benton, Buzzy Griffin, vice president.

WEST TEXAS

■ CONTINUING HIS Texas chapter visitations, Secretary Washburn attended an elegant meeting and reception in Midland, Texas. Alumni of the chapter were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Rassman at a cocktail party at the Midland Country Club on Feb. 9. It was Washburn's first visit to the West Texas Chapter, and the evening was remarkable. Many alumni and guests stayed at the club for dinner and dancing. The W&L Swing was featured by the orchestra throughout the evening and everyone joined in resounding song. Prior to dinner color slides of the campus were shown and many developments at Washington and Lee were discussed. President Rassman received the sincere thanks from all alumni for his active interest in recruiting students and for keeping alumni organized.

NORTH TEXAS

■ THE INN OF SIX FLAGS was the setting for an alumni meeting on Feb. 7. Alumni and parents of current students from the Dallas-Ft. Worth area joined to hear Bill Washburn, alumni secretary, who showed slides and gave a short University report. With C. M. "Pat" Patrick, Washburn had met with Dallas prospective students and was scheduled to visit the Ft. Worth high schools the next day with Clay Berry and Bob Collett. His remarks explained how alumni could help and did help with student recruitment. Special greetings were brought from the new president of the University, Robert E. R. Huntley. Washburn reported that President Huntley expected to visit Texas in July. Arrangements for the meeting were made by the chapter's president, Maury Purnell, Jr.

NEW YORK

■ IN THE RESPLENDENT style of Fifth Avenue and with the excitement of Broadway, the alumni of the New York Metropolitan area welcomed President Robert E. R. and Mrs. Huntley with a black-tie dinner on March 29. The outstanding affair was held at The Essex House on Central Park and began with a reception at 7 o'clock. Chapter President, Mel Hicks, Jr., '52, Emmett Poindexter, '20, and their ladies, together with the Huntleys, received one of the largest number of alumni in recent years. Also attending from Washington and Lee were Dean and Mrs. James Farrar, '49, Mr. and Mrs. James Whitehead, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parsons, '54, and Mr. and Mrs. William Washburn, '40. The featured speaker at the dinner was President Huntley who gave an overview of the University as he saw it upon assuming the presidency in February. His comments about and his analysis of Washington and Lee were eagerly received.

Chapter President Hicks, presided, and a committee of ladies headed by Mrs. Hicks had arranged attractive prizes for each table which were won on a simple game of chance. A small orchestra, including a roving violinist, furnished dinner music, and the hall resounded on several occasions with renditions of "The Swing." Words of thanks were expressed to Tom Perkins, '53, who had made the splendid arrangements with the hotel.

In a short business session, Richard Turrell, '49, reported for the nominating committee. Richard R. Warren, '57, of Scarsdale was named the new chapter president; six vice-presidents were named: E. Randolph Wootton, '64, W. L. Webster, '12, Richard Brunn, '42, Tom Perkins, '53, The Rev. Roper Sharmhart, '47, and Steve Calef, '62. Re-elected secretary-treasurer was Emmett Poindexter, '20, and nine members of the council were named.

Many of Washington and Lee's most distinguished alumni were present, and President and Mrs. Huntley expressed sincere thanks on behalf of the University for such an outstanding affair.

ARCHIBALD C. BUCHANAN

WASHINGTON and LEE MEN on the VIRGINIA BENCH

JOHN W. EGGLESTON

A RECENT STUDY HAS shown that judicial positions throughout the Commonwealth of Virginia are held to a large extent by graduates of Washington and Lee University.

The finding is pleasing and also somewhat surprising. Look at it in this context:

For many years the University has been distinguished for having one of "the most widely distributed student bodies geographically" of any of the men's colleges in the United States. The School of Law has reflected much the same characteristic, not only in the students in attendance, but very strongly in law graduates who are influential in their profession, in practice, and on the bench over the country as a whole. The large number of Washington and Lee men who are current judges in Virginia takes on added significance, therefore, when it is noted that the Washington and Lee Law School enrolls a far smaller number of students from Virginia than the state's other three schools of law.

At the top judicial level in the state, two of the seven justices of the State Supreme Court of Appeals are Washington and Lee graduates: Chief Justice John W. Eggleston, A.B. '06, M.A. '07, LL.B. '10, LL.D. '49, of Norfolk, who is also the chairman of the Judicial Council, and the president of the Judicial Conference; and Justice Archibald C. Buchanan, LL.B. '14 and LL.D. '49, of Tazewell.

Two alumni holding Federal judicial office in Virginia are both judges of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia, in Norfolk: Judge Walter E. Hoffman, LL.B. '31, and the recently elevated John C. A. MacKenzie, LL.B. '39.

Of the 58 Circuit Court Judges of the state, 10 hold their degrees from Washington and Lee. They are as follows:

4th Circuit (Amelia, Dinwiddie, Nottoway, and Powhatan counties, and the city of Petersburg): D. Carleton Mayes, LL.B. '47, of Dinwiddie. (Judge Mayes is also on the Judicial Conference.)

18th Circuit (Augusta, Highland, and Rockbridge counties, and the cities of Buena Vista, Lexington and Staunton): Paul A. Holstein, LL.B. '32, of Lexington.

21st Circuit (Carroll, Grayson, Pulaski, and Wythe counties): Jack M. Matthews, LL.B. '32, of Galax.

21st Circuit (Carroll, Grayson, Pulaski, and Wythe counties): Alexander M. Harman, LL.B. '44, of Pulaski.

23 Circuit (Smyth and Washington counties, and the city of Bristol): J. Aubrey Matthews, B.S. '42, LL.B. '48, of Marion.

33rd Circuit (Wise county): Macon M. Long, Jr., LL.B. '43, of St. Paul.

34th Circuit (Halifax, Lunenburg, and Mecklenburg counties, and the city of South Boston): Gus E. Mitchell, Jr., B.A. '30, LL.B. '31, of Halifax.

35th Circuit (Arlington county): Paul D. Brown, A.B. '41, LL.B. '43, of Arlington.

37th Circuit (Chesterfield county and city of Colonial Heights): Ernest P. Gates, LL.B. '50, of Chesterfield.

38th Circuit (City of Portsmouth): Henry W. Mackenzie, Jr., LL.B. '32, of Portsmouth.

The 16th Circuit Court is also presided over by a Washington and Lee alumnus who took his Law degree elsewhere, Arthur W. Sinclair, of the Academic Class of 1937.

Four of 11 Corporation Court judges are from Washington and Lee, as follows:

Alexandria: Wiley R. Wright, Jr., B.S. '54, LL.B. '56.

Lynchburg: O. Raymond Cundiff, LL.B. '33.

Martinsville: Frank I. Richardson, Jr., A.B. '51, LL.B. '56.

Newport News: Douglas M. Smith, B.A. '51, LL.B. '53.

Three alumni are judges in Hustings Courts:

R. Winston Bain, LL.B. '39, of Portsmouth.

Richard T. Edwards, A.B. '33, LL.B. '35, of Roanoke.

J. Randolph Tucker, Jr., LL.B. '48, of Richmond.

MACON M. LONG, JR.

A. CHRISTIAN COMPTON

ARTHUR W. SINCLAIR

HENRY W. MACKENZIE

City Courts of Record other than Corporation and Hustings Courts have two Washington and Lee judges:

Stanford Fellers, LL.B., '13, Law and Chancery Court, Roanoke.

A. Christian Compton, B.A. '50, LL.B. '53, Richmond.

A third jurist, Walter A. Page, of the Academic Class of 1939, presides over the Law and Chancery Court in Norfolk.

The following alumni, listed with their residences, are County Court Judges, for the counties named after their residences:

Henry M. Bandy, LL.B., '33, Norton, for Wise county.

B. Hunter Barrow, LL.B. '21, Dinwiddie, for Dinwiddie county.

James M. Davidson, Jr., B.A. '38, LL.B. '44, Lexington, for Rockbridge county.

Francis M. Hoge, LL.B. '34, Marion, for Smyth county.

Philip Kohen, LL.B. '21, Fincastle, for Botetourt county.

F. Nelson Light, LL.B. '42, Chatham, for Pittsylvania county.

Malcolm H. MacBryde, Jr., B.S. '26, LL.B. '29, Martinsville, for Henry county.

Leslie L. Mason, Jr., LL.B. '51, Powhatan, for Powhatan county.

Robert B. Spencer, LL.B. '51, Buckingham, for Buckingham county.

John W. Tisdale, LL.B. '21, Clarksville, for Mecklenburg county.

J. Taylor Williams, LL.B. '53, Cumberland, for Cumberland county.

Charles F. P. Crawley, of the Academic class of 1934, is the judge for the county of Appomattox.

Washington and Lee University takes justifiable pride in the accomplishments of these men and congratulates them upon the service they are rendering to the administration of justice and to the Commonwealth of Virginia.

(It is possible that the foregoing lists may have omitted unintentionally some Washington and Lee alumni on the Virginia bench. If so, the editors regret the omission.)

A LETTER FROM DEAN LIGHT

This letter is written on the day of Dean-emeritus Clayton E. Williams' death at the age of 77, during his forty-ninth consecutive year as a member of the Law Faculty of Washington and Lee University. Dean Williams was one of the great teachers of the law. His loss will be deeply felt not only in the University community and the State, but throughout the country by the hundreds of students he has taught or counseled while Dean of the School of Law from 1944 until 1960.

Among the numerous events scheduled during the spring of 1968 I wish to call particular attention to the Burks Moot Court Competition held on April 19 and to Law Day, April 27, when the John Randolph Tucker Lecture was delivered by the Honorable Albert V. Bryan of Alexandria, Virginia, Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. Law Day activities, including the annual meeting of the Law School Association, coincided this year with the Anniversary Class Reunions of the Academic and Law Classes of '18, '28, '43, '53 and '58.

I welcome this opportunity to extend sincere best wishes to President Robert E. R. Huntley with full confidence that the University will prosper under his able leadership. At the recent annual and most successful Law Wives Bridge Benefit I observed that by rights Dean Huntley should be speaking the words of welcome, but that my appearance for this purpose was somewhat lightened by the thought that not often is one privileged to succeed one's successor. Despite such privilege, candor impels me to say that my interim resumption of administrative duties has not lessened the enthusiasm with which I contemplate a return to full time teaching.

CHARLES P. LIGHT, JR., Dean

New Benchmarks In the History Of the Law School

By JEFF REIDER and ERIC SISLER

THE SCHOOL OF LAW of Washington and Lee University began its history in the summer of 1849 when the Hon. John W. Brockenbrough, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Virginia, announced that he planned to open a law school in the town of Lexington. According to the prospectus of the Lexington Law School, the session would open on October 29, 1849, and close on March 16, 1850. Two classes would be established, but would be offered concurrently so that an enterprising student could enroll in both classes without additional expense, thus completing the junior and senior courses in one year. The tuition was fixed at $60.00 per session, payable in advance. At the close of that first session, the Lexington Law School graduated five men.

The Lexington Law School, which was an immediate success, flourished and under the guidance of Judge Brockenbrough continued uninterrupted until the outbreak of the Civil War. The rolls of the school, published in 1881, indicated that 207 men attended its classes down to 1861. Although the school remained closed during the war years, it was promptly reopened on the first Monday of July, 1865, with a program much the same as before the war. It was at this time that Judge Brockenbrough, as a member of the Board of Trustees of Washington College, was instrumental in persuading General Robert E. Lee to become the President of Washington College. As part of President Lee's program of expansion for the College, the Lexington Law School became the affiliated Law School of Washington College.

In 1869 a report from the Trustees indicated that a single professor could no longer undertake all of the teaching and in addition noted the need for a broader curriculum and additional space. The committee concluded by recommending the appointment of two professors of law with salaries and prerequisites sufficient to attract the most impressive legal minds of the nation. The noble aspirations of the Trustees were fulfilled when, in 1870, John Randolph Tucker accepted a professorship of law. In 1873 Charles A. Graves was appointed as Assistant Professor and embarked upon a career which was to span 33 years. The combination of Tucker and Graves lasted only two years, for in 1874 Tucker was elected to Congress where he served in a most distinguished capacity until 1887.

Professor Graves directed the activities of the Law School most admirably, although the next 14 years showed little increase in enrollment or facilities. In 1881, after 13 years in Congress, John Randolph Tucker rejoined the faculty bringing much national prestige to the Washington and Lee School of Law.

The return of Tucker marked the beginning of a "Golden Age" during the closing decade of the century. In 1890 Professors Tucker and Graves appeared before the Board of Trustees with recommendations for improving and enlarging the Law School. Higher standards were initiated, new courses including Criminal Procedure, Admiralty Law, Insurance, and Agency were added to the curriculum. A third professor, John W. Davis, was appointed to the faculty in 1896. This appointment was timely, for unfortunately in 1897 John Randolph Tucker died after an illness of over a year.

Harry St. George Tucker, son of John Randolph Tucker, was chosen Professor of Law in 1897. A memorial fund was initiated and on June 13, 1899, the John Randolph Tucker memorial building became a reality as the cornerstone was laid with appropriate Masonic ceremonies. The building was completed in the spring of 1900, a large gray stone structure, described by the Lexington Gazette as presenting a "striking contrast" to the other college buildings.

By 1911-1912 the enrollment of the Law School had risen to 207. As early as 1902 the catalogue strongly recommended that a student have at least one year of academic work before engaging in the study of law, though this was not a requirement. In 1905, upon faculty recommendation, the Board of Trustees authorized that the Law degree take two years, and in 1906 the form of degree was changed from B.L. to LL.B.

In 1914-15 the trustees, influenced by the fact that most leading law schools in the country functioned under a three-year program, unanimously adopted a resolution which in effect instigated a three-year program at Washington and Lee, although this remained optional until 1920.

Following the First World War five full-time teachers comprised the faculty and the curriculum was modernized. At this time the Law School also adopted the "case method" of study, and in 1920 Washington and Lee Law School was admitted to the Association of American Law Schools. In 1923, two years of college work was required for admission, and it was of much significance that in this same year the American Bar Association gave Washington and Lee Law School a "Class A" rating, a classification enjoyed at the time by only 39 American law schools.

The faculty continued to increase in size and esteem, and by 1930 it included the late Professor Clayton E. Williams, (LL.B. Washington and Lee), who joined the faculty in 1919, Professor Charles P. Light, Jr., (LL.B. Harvard), Professor Raymond T. Johnson, (J.D. Chicago), Professor Charles R. McDowell, (LL.B. Yale), and William Hayward Moreland, who was appointed Dean in 1923 and served in that capacity until his death in 1944. This staff remained with the University through the thirties, and additions were made to the faculty in the persons of Professor Theodore A. Smedley (J.D., Northwestern) and Professor Charles V. Laughlin (J.S.D. Chicago).

In December of 1934 Tucker Hall was destroyed by fire. Plans were immediately made for a new structure more in accord with the architectural pattern of the Washington College group, the result being the present law school building.

The impact of the Second World War nearly necessitated the closing of the Law School as numerous students and faculty abandoned their studies to serve their country. However, at the war's conclusion an unprecedented number of students sought admittance to Tucker Hall. The late Professor Williams became Dean, and aided by a full complement of professors, the Law School once again became deserving of the excellent reputation it had enjoyed in previous years.

In the decades since the war, the Law School has moved rapidly forward in the area of legal education along much the same lines that contributed to the centennial of achievement that was celebrated in 1949. The important advantage of remaining small has been maintained in a day and age when double and treble student enrollment is common place. At the same time the faculty has consistently increased and the student-teacher ratio has known only continued improvement. The curriculum has been updated to meet the demands of a more complex society and its correlative, a more complex system of justice. The school has continued to enjoy faculty and leadership dedicated to furthering the achievements of their distinguished predecessors.

Certainly one of the most notable changes of the past 20 years has been in the curriculum of the law school. Total coverage of the many areas of the law has never been the goal at Washington and Lee; instead, emphasis is placed upon building the discipline and intellectual tools necessary to solve the diverse and unanticipated problems that will confront the practicing attorney. However, in response to the ever changing character of the law, the curriculum has been continually expanded to meet new horizons. Additional courses in Tax Law, Labor Law, International Law and International Business Transactions have been added to update the curriculum. More recently, in response to an SBA survey, two new courses, Jurisprudence and American Legal History, have been added to the curriculum this year. The prospects for the future are just as encouraging. The new accent, as explained by Dean Robert E. R. Huntley, will be an expansion of classes conducted by the seminar method. This method is one in which the student-teacher ratio is quite low, and in addition may include the elimination of the final examination, and the student is encouraged to do individual research and writing.

The building of a capable faculty has been another important project of the post war period. Between the years 1948 and 1963, the law school added seven new faculty members. In the fall of 1948 Edward S. Graves (LL.B. Harvard) began to donate his services to the law school. Shortly thereafter, in 1953, Professors Wilfred J. Ritz (S.J.D. Harvard) and James W. H. Stewart (LL.M. Harvard) joined the faculty. Five years later, our recent dean, Robert E. R. Huntley (LL.M. Harvard) became a member of the faculty.

In 1960 Clayton E. Williams retired from the deanship to assume the position as Distinguished Lecturer on the Law of Property, and Charles P. Light became the new Dean. During the seven years of Dean Light's tenure, three more faculty members joined the law school. Robert H. Gray (J.S.D. Columbia) and Robert K. Rushing (LL.B. University of Mississippi) in 1963 and in 1965 the Hon. James McC. Davidson, Jr. (LL.B. Washington and Lee) joined the faculty as lecturer on Domestic Relations.

This year marked another benchmark in the history of the law school. Dean Charles P. Light has joined his late distinguished colleague, Clayton E. Williams, as the second Dean Emeritus to continue teaching at the law school, and Robert E. R. Huntley became the new Dean. To continue past progress, two new professors, Lewis H. LaRue (LL.B. Harvard) and Andrew W. McThenia, Jr. (LL.B. Washington and Lee) became faculty members in the fall of 1967. In the spring of 1968 they were joined by two additional faculty members, Joseph E. Ulrich (LL.B. Washington and Lee) and William McC. Schildt (LL.B. Washington and Lee). Dean Robert Huntley was elevated to the presidency of the University and Dean Emeritus Charles P. Light, Jr. was appointed Acting Dean of the Law School until a new dean can be named.

Physically, the law school is also changing. This year the third floor classroom facilities and the Law Review facilities have been enlarged. However, these changes are only a portion of what the near future holds. At present several plans are being considered, their common purpose being a further enlargement of the Law School. This enlargement would include additional library space, additional study space in close proximity to the library, additional student activity space and new class and seminar rooms.

Yet, with all the change that has occurred since Judge Brockenbrough founded the Lexington Law School in 1849, there has remained a certain sense of continuity with past traditions. It is this continuity that has served as a guide for so many past achievements and it appears that this same force will continue to provide new roads into the future.

FOUR YOUNG MEN JOIN FACULTY

FOUR NEW FACULTY MEMBERS were added to the Law School this year. Two are natives of West Virginia, and one is originally from Maryland. All are very familiar with Washington and Lee as each one attended W&L in the past.

Mr. Andrew McThenia attended W&L for his undergraduate studies, during which time he distinguished himself as a student and a leader. Besides earning election to Phi Beta Kappa and graduating with an A.B. degree Magna Cum Laude, he was president of the Student Body. He was also a varsity football letterman and was elected to Omicron Delta Kappa. He graduated in 1958 after having been a foreign exchange student in International Business Training, and he continued his studies at Columbia University earning a M.A. in 1960. He returned to W&L and obtained his law degree in 1963. While in Law School he was chosen Editor in Chief of the Washington and Lee Law Review, and was elected to Order of the Coif.

Mr. McThenia was admitted to the Bar in Virginia and the District of Columbia, and went to work with the firm of Boothe, Dudley, Koontz, Blankingship and Stump in Alexandria, Va. He practiced with that firm for four and a half years, until he returned to W&L as an assistant professor this year. He is in charge of the newly formed Placement Program and is teaching Legal Bibliography, Secured Transactions, Legal Ethics, and Creditor's Rights.

Mr. Lewis LaRue also returned to his alma mater as an assistant professor of law. While an undergraduate at Washington and Lee in the late 1950's, Mr. LaRue was also very active in student affairs; he participated in such organizations as the Student Service Society and the Ring-tum Phi. As a political science major, he achieved many academic honors prior to his graduation in 1959. He continued his education at Harvard University receiving his LLB in 1962, and then he was admitted to practice in Virginia. While at W&L as an undergraduate, he enrolled in the Marine P.L.C. Program and was commissioned a Second Lieutenant upon graduating. While on active duty with the Marine Corps he worked extensively in the field of Criminal Law. Following his military obligation, he became a Trial Attorney for two divisions of the Justice Department in Washington, D. C. Working with the Civil Rights Division he was kept very busy with cases from the United States Court of Claims. He, therefore, brings a wide and varied practical legal background to W&L. He is teaching Property I and II, Civil Procedure II, and Local Government.

The first of the February faculty additions is Mr. William McC. Schildt, who is originally from Hagerstown, Md. He graduated from W&L undergraduate school in 1964. He attended law school in Maryland for a brief time, and upon graduation from the Law School this February he assumed teaching duties in Agency and Briefmaking and Oral Argument. He, too, was active at W&L, especially in serving as Editor of the Law Review last semester as well as being president of the Student Bar Association. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa.

The most recent addition to the Law Faculty is Mr. Joseph Edward Ulrich, a native of Louisville, Ky. After three years spent as an undergraduate at Washington and Lee, Mr. Ulrich spent three years studying law here; he graduated from the Law School in 1961. He immediately went to the Air Force JAG school spending three years in the service. After working with the firm of Washer and Kaplan in Louisville, he began work on his Masters in Law at Indiana University.

All these men are fine additions to the Law School faculty. Their knowledge and ability will allow the Law School to progress and continue to be the excellent school that it now is.

Law Review Features Guest Articles

By LES SMITH

A 28-YEAR-OLD TRADITION of distinguished legal journalism will be embodied in the fall 1967 and spring 1968 issues of The Washington and Lee Law Review. In a recent survey by the Denver Law Journal, the Washington and Lee Law Review ranked 10th out of 102 law reviews across the country for its helpfulness and value in the field of legal scholarship. This rating was determined on the basis of the responses from persons in the legal profession who have had occasion to read the Review.

This year, Mr. Lewis H. LaRue replaced Dr. Wilfred J. Ritz as Faculty Editor as the Review continued its high quality of accuracy and authoritativeness. Editor-in-Chief of the fall edition, Volume XXV, Number 1, was William M. Schildt who was ably assisted by a staff which included Ronald K. Ingoe, Michael L. Lowry, Bruce Jackson, Stafford W. Keegin (comment editors); Larry E. Hepler (articles); Wayne Tucker (research); and Charles M. Berger (book review).

The spring edition which is now being prepared is spearheaded by Ronald K. Ingoe, Editor-in-Chief. Serving on his staff is Gilbert Faulk, managing editor; Charles M. Berger, Bruce Jackson, Stafford W. Keegin, Michael L. Lowry (comment editors); Larry E. Hepler (articles); and Dean Vegosen (note editor).

The Review is published twice a year by the student staff under the supervision of the Board of Student Editors and the Board of Faculty Editors. Membership is based upon scholarship, and invitations are extended to students having a cumulative average of 80 or more for two consecutive semesters.

A highlight of the fall edition will be a contribution by Dr. Wilfred J. Ritz of the Washington and Lee Law faculty. Dr. Ritz's article will deal with the Ninth Amendment to the Constitution. It will discuss the historical intent and purpose of the amendment and suggest some of the purposes it might serve today. In addition, that issue will contain an article by Dr.

Charles F. Phillips, Jr., of the School of Commerce, Washington and Lee University, and co-author Harmon Haynes of the Federal Reserve Bank, Richmond, Virginia, which will present the results of a five-year survey on the effects of the Virginia Banking and Holding Companies statute since its enactment in 1962.

A special feature of the spring edition will be several lead articles. Sen. Phillip A. Hart of Michigan will discuss "Anti-Trust Legislation"; Dr. Charles V. Laughlin of the Washington and Lee law faculty will review "Labor Law in Virginia"; and William E. Knepper, a Columbus, Ohio, attorney, will discuss "The Automobile Compensation Controversy." There will also be a student note entitled "Revocation of Drivers' Licenses in Virginia."

As in past years, the range of student comment for both issues will be broad. The writers will examine such problems as the Miranda decision, ethical problems in light of a recent Virginia case, In re Ryder, and various other problem areas such as criminal law, civil rights, labor, insurance, tax, trade regulation, etc.

In order to assure the accuracy and completeness of these comments, there is an extensive procedure that is required of each writer. Each is assigned to a student editor who reviews the comment initially. The writer is then scheduled for class criticism where the comment is carefully checked to make certain that each proposition of law is supported by reliable authority and that all citations are accurate. Upon the approval of the student comment editor, the comment is forwarded to the editor-in-chief for his approval and that of the Faculty Editor. The objective is to secure an authoritative analysis of one single aspect of law that is worthy of publication in the Review.

The Book Review section will include book reviews by outside attorneys, professors and students of the law. The books are selected because of their interest to both lay readers and legal scholars.

LEGAL AID PROGRAM IS INITIATED

By PROFESSOR CHARLES V. LAUGHLIN

GILBERT FAULK, JAMES SLATTERY, Winston Matthews and Gordon Gay of the Washington and Lee Law School did interesting and useful work during the summer of 1967 with the Legal Aid Society of Roanoke Valley and the Southern Regional Education Board of Atlanta. They were joined by Gordon Shapiro and Daniel Chichester of the University of Virginia Law School for a total staff of six.

The Legal Aid Society of Roanoke Valley was established about a year ago to provide legal services for the poor. From its inception it has operated under the leadership of Mr. Arnold Schlossberg, General Counsel, an able and experienced lawyer. Financial support comes both from local sources and from funds provided by the Office of Economic Opportunity. The Southern Regional Education Board (S.R.E.B.) with headquarters in Atlanta was established by legislative action in 15 Southern states pursuant to a compact between those states. It exists for the purpose of giving technical aid and assistance to the creating states, their municipalities, educational institutions, and private companies in those states. The S.R.E.B. is financed by the creating states along with federal government subsidies.

Shortly after the formation of the Roanoke Valley Legal Aid Society, Mr. Schlossberg concluded that it would be mutually advantageous to employ several law students during the summer of 1967. Such a program was designed to give practical legal experience to the students, and to aid the society in its regular work as well as in the preparation of memoranda for future use. Simultaneously, S.R.E.B. established a program to use university students, including law students, as interns in connection with all phases of the current action against poverty. When each of these organizations became aware of the parallel activities planned by the other, the two programs were merged for operational purposes. For accounting reasons, one of the W&L law students was carried by S.R.E.B., but all six did the same work and operated as a team. Sandra Gay, the wife of Gordon Gay, acted as secretary for the group.

The work performed was divided into two phases: (1) work in the office of the Legal Aid Society in Roanoke, and (2) work involving legal research in the Washington and Lee Law Library. Both types of work were performed by the Washington and Lee interns upon a rotation basis: three men were always working in the Roanoke office and three worked under Professor Laughlin's supervision in Lexington. While in Roanoke, they worked under the supervision of Mr. Schlossberg and each was assigned to assist a staff attorney.

While working in the Roanoke office the interns were given a large amount of responsibility and were treated as members of the legal staff. They performed such duties as interviewing clients and witnesses, working with various offices of the community action group, helping staff investigators, writing letters for staff attorneys, picking up clients for court, drafting legal papers, accompanying attorneys to court, and researching and writing legal memoranda on various legal problems that arose.

Some examples of the various types of cases and legal problems the interns worked on are: divorce, support of wife, support of minors, landlord-tenant, detinue, custody, change of name, bankruptcy, extradition, petit larceny, hit and run, and driving under the influence of intoxicants.

The interns usually accompanied the staff attorneys to court when cases the interns had been working on were being tried. This allowed the intern to receive experience in observing the course of legal proceeding and at the same time proved to be helpful to the trial attorney. In some instances, the presiding judges invited the students into their chambers to hear arguments on instructions.

At Lexington the interns performed several important functions. They did legal research upon several important subjects to be used in connection with the future work of the Roanoke office. They prepared speeches to be used by Roanoke attorneys in connection with an educational program to acquaint members of the community, likely to need legal services, of the importance of consulting the Legal Aid office. They did research upon specific questions, currently relevant, submitted by the Roanoke office. The interns also worked upon several post-conviction cases in which there were genuine questions as to whether constitutional procedural rights had been violated. The students worked on a plan to establish a legal aid society in Lexington, which would involve cooperation between Washington and Lee students and members of the local bar. Their various studies included marriage, annulment, separation, divorce, other family matters, landlord-tenant, protection of judgment debtors, and a survey of the various welfare agencies operating in the Roanoke area. In addition, each member of the staff, while working in Lexington, had an opportunity to work on one of the post-conviction problems and to interview the prisoner involved.

So far as the writer has been able to ascertain, it was the consensus of the students concerned that the program was a definite success.

CHARLES VAILL LAUGHLIN holds the J. S. D. degree from the University of Chicago and has been a member of the Washington and Lee law faculty since 1940. The editors are grateful to him for this guest article.

Legal Research Aids More Attorneys

By MIKE MICHAELAES

Since its inception in the spring of 1965, the Legal Research Association has enjoyed continued success. This spring approximately 50 second and third year students were elected on the basis of their academic prowess to write for the Association. The structural function of the Association consists of dividing these writers into four groups, each of which is supervised by a Writing Director. The four Writing Directors for the spring are Jack Ford, Doug Knox, Jeff Reider, and Harry Roberts. They in turn are under the direction of Chairman Mike Michaelaes, who succeeded Carroll Klingelhofer. Professor J. W. H. Stewart is the faculty advisor, and Senior Bruce Mills is the Secretary-Treasurer.

The Association's function is to receive legal problems which are submitted by practicing attorneys throughout the southeastern part of the United States. When an attorney is confronted with a situation which he wants researched, he sends a statement of the facts to the Association. The initial task of the writers who are assigned to the problem is to determine the issues involved in the legal problem sent in. Then the writers thoroughly research the issues and prepare a memorandum which must be approved by the group Writing Director as well as by the Chairman. Once the memorandum satisfies the hierarchy of student supervisors, a criticism class is conducted by the Writing Director. By this time, all the writers in that group who have not actually helped in the research of that particular problem have checked the memorandum for citational and substantive errors. During the criticism class the memorandum is subjected to a severe test of comprehension and clarity.

Thus, within a strictly complied-with period of five weeks, a competent and comprehensive memorandum is prepared from an embryonic factual situation for which the attorney is charged a nominal fee of $2 a page.

This year the Legal Research Association has enjoyed its most prolific season. From a mailing list of 1,500 attorneys, memoranda on a panorama of topics have been prepared. These include such legals as probate, domestic relations, secured transactions, insurance, torts, contracts, and constitutional interpretation.

Two primary purposes are served by the Association. The first is that attorneys have a reliable source which will research matters that they themselves do not have the time to do. However, the second and most important purpose is the benefit that the writers themselves derive from participating in the program. In an academic atmosphere where law students are exposed only to theoretical problems, the Association gives them an opportunity to deal with real cases. Thus, the writer assumes a responsible role which develops self-confidence in his own work.

If practicing attorneys continue to support the Association in the manner in which they have this year, its future will be secure to offer this invaluable experience to more law students, thereby producing a better calibre of Washington and Lee Law School graduate.

SECOND STRAIGHT YEAR

Moot Court Team Reaches Finals

By CRAIG A. NIELSEN and COLIN M. GERSHON

FOR THE SECOND consecutive year, Washington and Lee's Moot Court Team placed first in the Sixth Region of the National Moot Court Competition. This region, one of 20 across the country, includes 10 law schools from Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

The National Moot Court Competition is sponsored annually by the Young Lawyers Committee of the New York City Bar Association. Each team submits a brief on either the petitioner's or respondent's case, whichever it chooses. Then in the competition each team draws at random which side of the case it will argue.

This year's team, selected last spring in the Burks Competition, was composed of Andrew E. Colclough, captain of the team and a senior from Arlington, Va., Dean K. Vegosen, an intermediate from Deal Park, N. J., Thomas Spencer, an intermediate from Lexington, Va., and William McC. Schildt, a senior from Hagerstown, Md.

Much of the fall was spent by the team in preparing a brief for the competition. They represented stockholders and bondholders of a corporation who sought pecuniary damages from a firm of public accountants who had certified certain false financial statements issued by the corporation. The issues, considered to the most intricate in many years, embraced not only the recently amended Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure but also novel application of sections 10(b) and 18(a) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

The regional competition, held in Richmond this year, saw Washington and Lee's Moot Court Team defeat teams from North Carolina College and Duke University in preliminary rounds. In the final round the team met for the second year in a row and defeated the University of Virginia. It was presided over by the Hon. Robert R. Mehri, Jr., federal district judge for the Eastern District of Virginia, the Hon. John D. Butzner, Jr., a member of the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, and the Hon. Harold Fleming Snead of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia.

The regional competition was judged on the basis of the quality of the brief, which counted one-third, and the oral argument, which counted two-thirds. On the brief the University of Virginia received a 90 to Washington and Lee's 88. It was in oral argument, however, that Washington and Lee truly distinguished itself, and was thereby chosen the champion of Region Six. Thomas Spencer was designated as presenting the best oral argument of the competition.

This regional triumph entitled the team to enter the finals in New York City in December. Unfortunately they were defeated in the early rounds by the University of Nebraska. Their work, however, is one of which Washington and Lee is truly proud.

Student Bar Association:

Busier Than Ever

By GEORGE RAGLAND

EVANS DINING HALL was the scene of the first Student Bar Association function of the new school year when the Association held an Orientation Dinner in honor of the 72 entering freshman law students September 22. The SBA officers were accompanied at the event by the President of the undergraduate Student Body, Richard Nash, who explained the functions of the four standing committees at Washington and Lee. President Huntley related the historical highlights in the development of the present Law School, and intermediate Pete Hendricks, an Executive Committee member, revealed the operation of the Honor System. Representatives from the Legal Research Association, the Law Review, and the Moot Court competition also gave enlightening talks on their respective organizations. The event was instituted for the first time this year for the purpose of facilitating newcomers in their adaptation to W&L.

During the summer the old SBA room was converted into the headquarters of the Law Review staff, with the result that several of the refreshment concessions which previously operated in that room were abolished, and the others were moved into the Student Lounge, where copies of the Wall Street Journal and the New York Times are available for student enjoyment. Each of the 177 SBA members is furnished also a free copy of the Law Review.

Three of the typewriters in the basement of the Law School were renovated recently through an appropriation of SBA funds, and they are now in excellent working condition. With the profits from its annual benefit card party, the Law Wives Association purchased two brand new typewriters which generously will be donated to the Law School and should be available for the use of all law students by next year.

Stemming largely from an idea promulgated by Ron Gates and his law class of 1969, the walls of both sides of the main hall on Tucker Hall's third floor now bear two permanent glass enclosures. Each contains a large calendar which sets forth each month those important upcoming events which are likely to be of interest to law students.

In the fall the Student Bar Association, pursuant to a 1964 recommendation by the American Bar Association, unanimously approved a motion to change its present degree from an LL.B. (Bachelor of Laws) to a J.D. (Juris Doctor). This progressive move was made in light of the apparent trend toward adoption of the J.D. degree, which is now awarded in approximately 50 per cent of the accredited law schools. The SBA's proposal was submitted to the faculty which, at last report, was "actively considering" it.

The annual Smoker in honor of the first-year class was held at the Sigma Nu fraternity house Wednesday night, October 11. The Thursday morning attendance sheets in class indicated that the party was again a tremendous success.

The various programs and committees fostered by the Association continue to evoke active participation from the members.

CURRICULUM COMMITTEE

In the spring of 1967, this interim committee submitted to the Law School student body a detailed questionnaire on which 163 students evaluated the present curriculum and presented their views on prospective changes in it. Although it is still too soon to realize any tangible results from the conclusions tabulated by the Committee, it is apparent that some existing courses need renovation, and that new elective courses in trial practice and securities and exchange law are highly desirable.

SPEAKER PROGRAM

Due to the efforts of Chairmen Al Byrne and Hunter Manson, the SBA was entertained on November 14 by a speech from Judge John D. Butzner, Jr., of the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. The speech was followed by a tea at the Alumni House given by the Law Wives. Judge Robert R. Merhige, Jr., of the Federal District Court in Richmond, honored Washington and Lee and members of the public by speaking to them in the Alumni House March 26. This event, too, culminated with informal discussion over refreshments supplied by the Law Wives. On April 15 the Student Bar Association Speaker Program ended its official program for the school year when it presented Mr. Armistead Boothe, a partner in the firm Boothe, Dudley, Koontz, Blankingship and Stump.

MOCK TRIAL

A fictional homicide occurred in Rockbridge County this past year, and the accused was brought to trial November 16 before The Honorable Judge Paul A. Holstein of the Eighteenth Judicial Circuit of Virginia. Co-chairmen Dunbar and Sisler of the Mock Trial Committee supervised the proceeding before a jury of local citizens. Jack Ford and Tom Coates adequately represented the defendant who was prosecuted ably by co-counsel John Peck and Bill Bobbitt. The second semester Mock Trial involves a criminal prosecution for rape and is docketed for hearing April 29 in the Circuit Court of Rockbridge County.

SOCIAL COMMITTEE

The dinner portion of the heretofore annual fall Dinner Dance was deleted from the activity this year, and Chairman Pete Hendricks guided the November 18 affair at the Robert E. Lee Hotel to success by preceding the dance with a lengthy, well-attended cocktail party. Varying from the customary routine of having a combo party each semester, Chairman Hendricks has planned for the Spring an SBA cookout with beer and hot dogs.

COLD EXAM COMMITTEE

Chairman George Parthemos and cohorts are presently examining the possibility of consolidating the three fraternity examination files into a central one accessible to all law students. The project would be carried out under the auspices of the SBA.

COORDINATING COMMITTEE

This new interim committee was formed this fall to serve as a liaison between faculty and students. Its members meet periodically with the Dean to discuss problems and matters of interest concerning the Law School. The four officers of the SBA, along with chairman Mike Lowry of the Grievance Committee; intermediate Ed Schiff, and freshman Bart Taylor comprise the membership of the Coordinating Committee.

TAX CLUB

In March a new club was started in the Law School for the purpose of familiarizing its members with problems in the area of federal taxation. Under the direction of Professor Stewart, the Tax Club already boasts a membership of about 20 students and it hopes to become very active in the near future.

Fraternities Enjoy Good Rush

PHI DELTA PHI

THIS YEAR'S OFFICERS of the Tucker Inn Chapter of Phi Delta Phi are George Ragland, Magister; Pete Hendricks, Exchequer; John Kelly, Clerk; and Kim Ladewig, Historian. Chuck Neustein was the Chapter's representative at the National Convention in Miami Beach last summer. Among other activities of the year, several members took a bus trip to the race track at Charles Town, W. Va., on March 9.

The outcome of rush this year can be termed highly successful. Twenty-six new members were brought in. They are: John Baldwin, Dick Bradford, Pete Carlson, Jim Cluverius, Mike Colo, Bob Cosel, Tom Cox, Ed Crosland, Harley Duane, Ted Feinour, Lewis Flynn, Tony Gleason, Guy Glenn, Bill Gudal, Leighton Houck, Dave Krogmann, Don McFall, Bruce MacFayden, Jerry Miller, Mosby Perrow, Norm Singer, Paul Stanton, Whit Thornton, Butch West, Jim Winn, and John Zink.

P.D.P. member, Robert E. R. Huntley, was appointed President of Washington and Lee University and his former position of Dean of the Law School is being temporarily filled by Dean Charles P. Light, also a P.D.P. member.

P.D.P. is able to boast several distinguished members this year. They include: Al Byrne, S.B.A. President; Mike Michaelles, President of Legal Research; Ron Ingoe, Editor of the Law Review; and Gil Faulk, Vice-President of the Student body.

PHI ALPHA DELTA

THE WALTER R. STAPLES CHAPTER of Phi Alpha Delta was established in 1912. The present officers are Drew Colclough, Justice; Ron Marks, Vice Justice; Dick Tanner, Treasurer; and Roy Harrell, Marshall.

This year's rush was felt to be successful when considering the overall number of freshmen joining fraternities. P.A.D. put on a good rush party which brought in 15 new members. They are: Collin Gershon, Tim Henry, Mike Herman, Jack Kirby, Dick Lasko, Jack Lintner, Steve McElroy, Frank Morrison, Craig Nielson, Sam Obenschain, Greg Otten, Jeff Twardy, Fox Urquhart, Bob Vinyard, and Phil Wallace.

Plans for this year include a new program of luncheons with outside speakers. The fraternity hopes to send several members to the national convention in Washington, D.C., next August. Also, the usual spring river party will be held.

Mr. Andrew W. McThenia, Class of 1963, joined the law faculty at Washington and Lee this year. Mr. McThenia among other things was editor of the Law Review when a student at Washington and Lee. Also another P.A.D. member, Mr. William Shildt, was added to the faculty. Both members have shown themselves to be dedicated to their new positions and have taken an active interest in P.A.D. affairs.

P.A.D. members continue to be active in various Law School functions. Those presently on the Law Review are: Bill Boardman, Larry Hepler, J. D. Humphries, Dave Redman, Jeff Rieder, and Ed Schiff. Drew Colclough participated in the Moot Court competition.

DELTA THETA PHI

THE BURKS SENATE CHAPTER of Delta Theta Phi is composed of 48 members this year. Many activities have been scheduled for this spring. Luncheons will be held every three weeks with speakers attending. Also, cook-out parties are planned for the coming months. The Delta Thets will sponsor their annual trip to the United States Supreme Court. Also, the Founder's Day Banquet was held in April.

This year officers are: Bill Winters, Dean; Dave Ross, Vice-Dean; Stu Denton, Keeper of the Door; Bill Tisinger, Exchequer; Carr Kinder, Tribune; John Paul, Master of the Ritual; and Danny Hall, Corresponding Secretary.

The rush party at which there was plenty of food and beer was attended by several alumni from the Washington, D. C., area. Fifteen new members were added to the chapter. They are: Dave Baird, Wayne Bell, Bob Bigham, Walter Borda, Bill Gershon, Ben Cummings, Dick DeFronzo, Steve Dix, Vaughan Griffin, John Luzis, John Patterson, Garland Rigney, Jack Roach, Aron Suna, and Bob Taylor.

Burks Senate has been fortunate in having as a faculty member, Professor Charles V. Laughlin. Professor Laughlin was instrumental in reactivating the chapter in 1958 and has since shown a great interest in its affairs.

LAW WIVES DONATE TYPEWRITERS

ABOUT 50 NEW LAW WIVES were added to the Association this year, bringing the total to 90 law wives at Washington and Lee. The officers for this fall were elected last spring; they included: Rendy Adams (Mrs. Dave), President; Pat Faulk (Mrs. Gil), Vice President; Susie Sisler (Mrs. Eric), Treasurer; Mate Tisinger (Mrs. Bill), Secretary; and Darlene Quinn (Mrs. John), Historian.

The Law Wives made preparations for their annual Benefit Card Party in the spring. They also had another very successful Fashion Show in which many of the members participated as models.

In addition to their major projects, the Law Wives have monthly meetings at which they often have guest speakers discussing a wide variety of topics of general interest. Aside from their domestic chores, many of the members are teachers and several do volunteer work in the community.

The Association began the second semester with the election of new officers who are: Pat Faulk, President; Pearl Adamson, Vice President; Ginny McLaughlin, Treasurer; Marty Baird, Secretary; and Carole Berger, Historian.

This semester's activities got promptly under way with a cocktail party for the faculty in February. The Benefit Card Party was held on March 8, and was a tremendous success with over 65 tables participating in the event. The proceeds of the party go toward the purchase of new typewriters for the Law School.

Other plans for the spring included a picnic for all the members, their husbands, and children at Goshen. Once again, the Law Wives Association has had a successful and most productive year, and continued success is inevitable.

THE PLACEMENT EFFORT at the Law School is functioning smoothly under the auspices of Professor Andrew W. McThenia, who was named Director of Placement last September. He is ably assisted by the Placement Committee of the Student Bar Association, and their combined efforts are augmented by the placement issue of The Lawyer.

Mr. McThenia has given the placement activities a new impetus and organization. He sees himself as a conduit through which the inquiries of students and employers flow and are channeled and coordinated so that interviews will ensue and, hopefully, jobs will be obtained. The effort is made to meet the needs of every student and employer on an individual basis. Mr. McThenia personally corresponds with as many prospective employers as possible to stimulate interest in our students and to encourage interviews on campus. The placement goal is envisioned as creating even closer ties with alumni and all interested employers so as to better serve their needs and those of the students.

Director Named

The Placement Committee of the Student Bar Association assists Mr. McThenia in every way possible. The Committee serves as a valuable instrument with which to measure student interest and response to the placement effort. It is their job to keep an up-to-date bulletin board where placement notices are prominently displayed. The Committee also assists in extending the Law School's hospitality to employers conducting interviews.

The placement issue of The Lawyer was begun in the fall of 1966, and the consensus is that it has been a tremendous success. The placement issue is to provide advance information to employers about students seeking positions. It is mailed to all Law School alumni, selected law firms, and to all employers who request it. The scope of the 1967 placement issue was enlarged and the present editors have plans afoot to further improve the next edition. It is their endeavor to continually improve the service rendered and they encourage comments from the recipients.

FRANK J. LOONEY, a retired lawyer who helped to frame the Louisiana State Constitution in 1921, died at his residence in Shreveport, La., Feb. 17, 1968. After obtaining his law degree at Washington and Lee he was admitted to the bar in the state of New York and entered practice there. After a short time he returned to Shreveport and was admitted to the Bar of Louisiana in July, 1894. Mr. Looney served in the Spanish-American War and in World War I. In 1966 he was awarded the Americanism Award of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. For many years Mr. Looney served as a member of the State Democratic Central Committee. He held membership in numerous legal, civic, fraternal and philanthropic organizations.

1898

ROBERT BASIL PRICE of Mexico, Mo., died December 28, 1967.

1910

ROBERT S. HUTCHESON, long time resident and businessman in Lexington, Va., died Feb. 5, 1968. Mr. Hutcheson had been in Rockbridge County and Lexington since World War I and was engaged in lumber and building supplies. He was also active as a farmer and cattle raiser.

JUDGE A. G. LIVELY, SR., died March 1, 1968, in a Lebanon, Va. hospital. He was judge of the 27th judicial circuit from 1927 to 1937, a member of the Lions Club and the Masonic Lodge. neer, died unexpectedly of a heart attack on April 17, 1968, in Wytheville, Va. He received his B.S. degree from Washington and Lee, and later his B.S. in Electrical Engineering from M.I.T., and his M.S. from Columbia University. He served for a year on the faculty of M.I.T. He was in the Army in World War I after graduation from Washington and Lee. He was a member of Phi Gamma Delta on the campus.

Mr. Sanders was in business in Bristol, Va., from 1926 to 1930; but during the major part of his active career he lived in Wytheville and was a consulting engineer in many engineering enterprises over the country.

He was a charter member and former president of the Wythe County Chamber of Commerce, a director of the First National Exchange Bank of Virginia, and former president of the Wytheville Rotary Club and, for the past five years, president of the Wythe Country Club.

Few alumni showed a more lasting, loyal devotion to Washington and Lee than Marion. This was demonstrated both in unusually generous giving and in participating constructively in many developments at the University. His interests were focused strongly on the living members of the Class of 1917, and he maintained active, personal contact with them. The highlight of the very successful 50th Anniversary Class Reunion in May, 1967, was the opening dinner given by Marion for the returning members of the class and their wives. He will be deeply missed, both by those of his college generation and the many in his home community with whom he was associated in helpful and unselfish service.

He is survived by his widow, Caroline Sharpe Sanders, and one son.

A composer is often thought of as one who sits down at the piano and meticulously picks out his melodies, penning the notes as he goes. Some do; some don't. Robert Stewart, professor of music at Washington and Lee, is one who doesn't. He conceives his music in his mind and then in the solitude of his study at home he puts the notes on paper. Often he does not actually "hear" his compositions until they are performed. In the scene above, Prof. Stewart is at work composing—and from such silence comes lovely sounds. He has more than 130 compositions to his credit; his "String Quartet No. 3" was recently performed to critical acclaim by the Lenox Quartet at the Regional Composers' Forum at the University of Alabama. While there, he was elected president of the Southeastern Composers' League—a tribute to a man and his music and an honor for Washington and Lee.
