202nd Session Opens with Uncertainty

Freshman Psychological Tests

The possibility of another war and military service loomed over students as the 1950-1951 school year began at Washington and Lee University. While the world crisis had not greatly affected the student body, the question "Will I be able to complete the year?" was often heard.

Enrollment-wise, Washington and Lee, as it started its 202nd session, still boasted a large cosmopolitan student body. Although the enrollment included students from almost every state and 13 foreign countries, total enrollment had dropped to 1147, 90 below last year's figure.

This reduction was seen as resulting from the unusually large graduating class of last year and not selective service or the recall of reservists. Only six students who had planned to continue their education at Washington and Lee failed to register for the current session because of military service. Seven others were recalled to active duty during September and October.

But the possibility of a change was not discounted. Dean of Students Frank J. Gilliam said the University will possibly lose a limited number of students and members of the faculty, but most students have received or will receive draft deferments until June 1951. However, any adverse change in the world situation could upset these calculations.

The University, like the rest of the United States, is preparing itself for the possibility of war. President Francis Pendleton Gaines has filed an application with the Department of the Army for the establishment of an ROTC unit on the campus. (For full details, see page 7.)

Because of the uncertainty marking the current school session, the University has temporarily dismissed a previously announced policy for the reduction of the freshman class to 270 students. This is the desirable number for the available dormitory facilities.

A decline in the number of applications for admittance to the University was experienced this year. But Dean Gilliam reported that the percentage was lower at W. and L. than at most institutions in the country. Despite the decline in applications, W. and L. had no difficulty in matriculating 302 freshmen, the average number in the postwar years.

Dean Gilliam attributed the reduced number to the increase in tuition, which is now $450. "As our tuition has gone up we have had to realize that we have to draw students from prep school graduates who can afford to pay," the dean said.

As evidence, Dean Gilliam pointed out that the freshman class includes seven graduates of Taft, nine of Choate, and 12 of Mercersburg, "a number far larger than we have ever had from these schools."

Washington and Lee University this year became the first men's college in the South to install the College Entrance Examination Board tests. "Our step was a very wise one," Dean Gilliam stated. "It has helped our reputation by moving Washington and Lee into the group with very high standards as far as admission is concerned."

The freshman class mirrors the cosmopolitan student body. Members come from 34 states and eight foreign countries.

Of the 302 freshmen, 251 were pledged by the 17 fraternities on the campus. About 35 of the remaining freshmen became members of the Campus Club, a social club for non-fraternity men which was organized last year.

The decline in the number of veterans on the campus, a trend noticed for the past two years, has continued, with only 175 now enrolled. This compares with 359 veterans last year and 624 the previous year. Only six veterans are included in the freshman class, which had nine last year.

The decline in enrollment was only slightly felt in the Law School. Last year 222 students were registered for law courses; this year there are 214.

Three innovations became effective with the opening of the current school year.

Freshman Camp was shifted from Camp Powhatan to Natural Bridge this year because the camp site had been abandoned by its owners. Dean Gilliam said the University regretted losing the rustic atmosphere of Camp Powhatan, but the switch in sites was compensated by the increased number of freshmen who were able to attend the orientation program and the administration of eating and sleeping arrangements by the Natural Bridge management. Facilities available permitted 200 freshmen, 50 more than last year, to attend the camp, and it is hoped that this number will be enlarged next year.

A one-year program of advanced scholarship, designed as a fifth year of undergraduate study for men interested in supplementary education on the graduate level began this Fall. Students registered for the fifth year are encouraged to explore new fields of study for which they did not have time during their first four years and to continue research in those fields which appealed to them as undergraduates.

Freshman Camp, 1950, at Natural Bridge

In effect for the first time this year is a cooperative arrangement between Washington and Lee, Carnegie Tech and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute to enable students to obtain a broad general education before specializing in the field of engineering. Under this plan, students will attend W. and L. for three years followed by a two-year attendance at either Carnegie Tech or R. P. I.

New faculty members include Dr. Walter Elder, who comes from Oxford University in England as assistant professor of English, and William C. Hunt, who left a teaching position at the University of Pennsylvania to become assistant professor of chemistry at W. and L.

The Glee Club has a new director this year. He is Gordon Page, associate professor of music at Mary Baldwin College.

Missing from the Washington and Lee faculty for the first time since 1915 is Dr. Robert H. Tucker, former dean of the University and recently lecturer in economics, who announced his retirement at the end of the 201st term last June.

The Law School will raise its minimum entrance requirements beginning with the 1951-52 school year, but the change is not expected to affect many students.

Dean Clayton Epes Williams says students will be required to have three years of academic school credit before they will be admitted into Law School. A minimum of two years is now required.

Most law students, however, apply for admittance after completing three years of undergraduate study, Dean Williams explains. Only two students with the minimum two years credit applied for admittance this year.

Two New Courses Added to Curriculum

A cinderblock building was added to the Washington and Lee scene last Summer to meet the needs of the Geology and Biology Departments for additional facilities. Situated behind the Science Building, the structure includes two laboratories, two offices, two storage rooms, and a lavatory. The building, 100x30 feet, cost $16,000, and another $4,000 was used to purchase equipment. Each instruction room is equipped with gas heat blowers, fluorescent lighting fixtures and movie projectors. The military geology and topography class is shown above in one of the rooms.

The international unrest was reflected at Washington and Lee this Fall by the addition of a Russian language course and the reinstallation of a military geology and topography course in the curriculum.

Although neither course had been scheduled for instruction during the current school year, the faculty, acting on the recommendations of the instructors concerned, voted the additions to the curriculum after the outbreak of the Korean fighting.

Student response was good despite the brief notice of the addition of the courses to the academic program. Nine students and five auditors, of which two are faculty members, are in the language class, and 24 students are enrolled in the military geology course. Two students are taking both subjects.

The Russian course includes two semesters of study for which six semester hours credit will be given. Only students who have excelled in previous language work are eligible to take the course.

Military geology and topography is a one-semester course which carries three semester hours credit. The only prerequisite is junior or senior standing.

The military geology course is taught by Dr. Marcellus H. Stow, chairman of the department of geology, who introduced the subject at Washington and Lee in 1941. Dr. Stow is revising the course to include materials and methods not used previously.

Washington and Lee students who took the original course were given important assignments by the Army and Navy in photo interpretation, some of them drawing assignments as instructors in this field of military operations. Dr. Stow served as Deputy Director of the War Production Board's mining division in World War II.

The Russian language course includes the study of grammar and pronunciation, to be followed by reading of short stories and other works of the pre-Soviet period. It is taught by Dr. William W. Pusey, III, head of the department of German.

Dr. Pusey began studying Russian with a Linguaphone course in 1948 and the following year attended the summer school of languages conducted by Colby College in Maine.

He says the course has more than a military aspect. "Students of the Russian language will get a first-hand insight into the thought and life of the Soviet people and an elementary facility in reading and speaking a difficult and complicated language," Dr. Pusey states.

Dr. Pusey says he hopes student interest will increase and the course can be kept in the curriculum.

The military geology course, as outlined by Dr. Stow, includes instruction in the influence of topographic features, such as mountains, valleys, plains and plateaus on military tactics; the employment of aerial photographs in military operations; the use of stereoscopes in photo interpretation; the construction and use of military maps; and the art of devising topographic maps from aerial photographs for use in military operations.

One of the important aspects of the course is the study of the geology, topography and strategic military resources of Russia. The department possesses a rare set of Russian geological maps which will supply valuable information for this part of the course.

"Rocks and rock structures play an important part in modern military operations," Dr. Stow explains. "In addition to such complexities as their relation to en-

Application for ROTC Unit Is Filed

Washington and Lee University, after 202 years, may soon add a program of military training to its curriculum.

A Senior Reserve Officers' Training Corps unit will be established on the campus if and when the Department of the Army approves an application from the University. The application was filed September 2 with Second Army Headquarters, Fort Meade, Maryland.

A decision by the Army is expected before June 30, 1951. If the petition receives approval, the program will be installed in the University's curriculum for the 1951-52 school session.

The move to secure a training program was made in light of the current world crisis and the expected long range mobilization in the United States. If present regulations remain unchanged, a student enrolled in the program will be exempted from military service, provided he agrees to serve on active duty in the Army upon graduation.

The application was filed by President Francis Pendleton Gaines on the recommendation of the Special Faculty Committee on Military Training and with the approval of the Board of Trustees. The committee was appointed this Summer by President Gaines.

Members of the committee are Professor Charles P. Light, Jr., professor of the law faculty, chairman; Dr. L. W. Adams, dean of the School of Commerce; Frank J. Gilliam, dean of students; Dr. W. W. Pusey, professor of German; and Dr. W. A. Jenks, assistant professor of history.

The application has received the full endorsement of United States Senators Harry F. Byrd and A. Willis Robertson and Representative Burr P. Harrison of the Seventh Congressional District.

If the Army approves an ROTC

unit for Washington and Lee, enrollment in the program will be voluntary and uniforms will be worn by the students only when actively engaged in training. The program, for which appropriate academic credit will be given, includes classroom instruction and field training. It is understood that field training will be held on any available athletic field.

Based on the latest information regarding the Army's ROTC policy, the program at Washington and Lee, if established, will be organized as a Senior Division of the ROTC. The program will cover four years of military training, divided into a basic course for freshmen and sophomores and an advanced course for juniors and seniors. Students transferring from military schools who have completed the basic course will be eligible to enroll in the advanced course.

Dr. Kenneth Porter Stevens, head of the biology department, came to Washington and Lee in 1946. Previously he served in a similar capacity at Central College, Fayette, Missouri.

Dr. Stevens, since his arrival, has been active in University activities. He was elected secretary of the Virginia Gamma Chapter, Phi Beta Kappa, in 1948, a position he still holds. He was a member of the President's Advisory Committee and the Faculty Executive Committee in 1948 and served as chairman of the faculty discussion group in 1949. He is chairman of the Pre-Med Committee and a member of the Committee on Courses and Degrees.

The biology professor was born in 1893 in Danbury, Conn. He received a bachelor of arts degree from Wesleyan University in 1918. After graduation he served with the medical corps at the base hospital, Camp Upton, N. Y. Dr. Stevens returned to Wesleyan upon discharge and completed work on a master of arts degree in 1920.

Dr. Stevens continued his studies at Yale in 1920, at the same time serving as a biology instructor at Wesleyan University. The following year he was an instructor at New York Military Academy. From 1921-1923 Dr. Stevens held a Maule Scholarship at Princeton, from where he received a doctor of philosophy degree in 1927.

Dr. Stevens received an appointment to the faculty of Princeton in 1924 as an instructor in biology and was named an assistant professor in 1927. In 1931 he left Princeton to become professor and head of the department of biology at Central College, the position he held when he accepted the appointment at Washington and Lee. University Exhibits Art Masterpieces

Washington and Lee University, notable for important art acquisitions of its own, Monday, October 30, opened its doors to an overflow crowd for a Southern premiere of Renaissance masterpieces on long-term loan from the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

More than 1,000 artists, art students, critics and less intense enthusiasts from a broad Southern area packed into McCormick Library to view a collection of works by such masters as Rembrandt, Goya, Bruegel and Lippi.

The loan exhibit, generally considered one of the most important ever to be seen in the South, will remain at Washington and Lee for several months. Some of the paintings may be seen here for as long as three years.

In a gallery talk given at the premiere viewing, Leslie Cheek, Jr., director of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, likened developments of today with important discoveries and trends featuring the Renaissance period. He was introduced by Dean James G. Leyburn.

Artists attending the premiere volunteered great praise of the selection of paintings made by Dr. Marion Junkin, head of the Washington and Lee Fine Arts Department.

The complete list of paintings in the exhibit is as follows:

Riegel Completes Survey of Germany

Germans will undoubtedly try to make an accelerated pace in the resumption of political autonomy a condition of German re-armament.

This is foreseen by O. W. Riegel, director of the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation, who completed a survey this summer of public opinion studies in Germany. Mr. Riegel returned to Lexington September 22, the opening day of the new school year.

"Most Germans are still fed up with war," Mr. Riegel states. "They don't like to look forward to the possibility of a general war that might be fought on German soil or a conflict that might take the form of a civil war with Germans of the East Zone."

"On the other hand, the Germans are still a disciplined and nationalistic people," he says. "They are also opportunistic, in the sense that they will take advantage of any chance to regain sovereignty and power, which is understandable. I don't believe that there will be any serious difficulty in re-arming Germans if they have the confidence that they are on the winning side. American policy now seems to be directed to proving to the West Germans that they are on the winning side without any doubt."

Mr. Riegel, who is well known in the field of public opinion and propaganda, spent three months in Germany this summer making the survey for the Department of State. He served with the Office of War Information, Overseas Branch, during World War II, and was Public Affairs Officer for the Department of State in Hungary immediately after the war. He is the author of "Mobilizing for Chaos" and other studies of communications and propaganda.

During the summer survey trip Mr. Riegel visited every university in the three western zones, and interviewed political, educational and labor leaders and "the man on the street." Among the political leaders interviewed was Ernest Reuter, mayor of the west sectors of Berlin. He also attended sessions of the Berlin municipal council and the parliament of the Federal Republic at Bonn.

Professor Riegel was in Germany at the outbreak of war in Korea. He says that the German reaction was naturally one of increased anxiety, as the parallel with Germany was unmistakable. Of special interest was the rapid increase in disturbing rumors, many of which were doubtless of East Zone origin.

"Of course, some confidence has returned," Mr. Riegel states, "but insecurity regarding the future is a more or less permanent condition of German life."

Mr. Riegel was impressed by the efficient and open-handed cooperation given to him in his survey by British and French as well as American officials. He says every possible facility was made available.

While in Europe, Mr. Riegel had reunions with two alumni of Washington and Lee University. They are Manning Williams, editor of "Ost Problem," a periodical on Russian problems produced under the auspices of the Office of the United States High Commissioner for Germany, and Tom Durrance, head of public relations for ECA in Copenhagen, Denmark.

Dr. Tucker Honored in Richmond

Eloquence flowed like water in Richmond the night of September 26 when more than 75 Washington and Lee alumni from the Richmond area gathered to pay tribute to Dr. Robert H. Tucker, retired Dean of the University.

Eight speakers, representing fields in which the distinguished economist and educator was active during his 35 years of association with Washington and Lee, spoke warmly and at times movingly of Dr. Tucker's work. At their conclusion, Dr. Morrison Hutcheson, Richmond physician and a W. and L. trustee, presented the guest with a handsome picture of the Washington College group as a memento.

In a graceful speech of acknowledgement Dr. Tucker testified to his great happiness during his 35 years in Lexington, beginning in 1915 and ending with his removal to Richmond this year. "I am convinced that no institution in America has a finer group of young men in its student body than has ours," he said at one point. He also expressed the hope that "before I die I may meet the gentleman who has been described here tonight."

William B. Jacobs, outgoing president of the Richmond chapter, presided at the meeting, and Parke Rouse, Jr., program chairman, introduced the eight testimonial speakers. They were:

C. H. Morrissett, State Tax Commissioner, who spoke on "Dr. Tucker's Service to Virginia's Government."

Dr. William H. Stauffer, director of research of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce, who spoke on "Dr. Tucker's Service to the State Chamber of Commerce."

F. James (Jimmy) Barnes, II, planning consultant of the State Division of Planning and Economic Research, who spoke on

"Dr. Tucker's Service to the Taxpayer."

Virginius Dabney, editor of The Times-Dispatch, who spoke on "Dr. Tucker's Service to the Press."

Dr. Walter L. Carson, pastor of Richmond's First Presbyterian Church, who spoke on "Dr. Tucker's Service to Washington and Lee's Administration."

Dr. John Newton Thomas, dean of graduate studies at Union Theological Seminary, who spoke on "Dr. Tucker's Service to His Students."

Almand Coleman, professor of accounting at Washington and Lee, who presented a message from the University, and spoke on "Dr. Tucker's Service to Education."

Mr. Morrissett, Dr. Carson, Dr. Thomas, and Professor Coleman are alumni of Washington and Lee; Dr. Carson and Dr. Thomas are trustees; and Mr. Barnes is well remembered as a former member of the political science faculty.

In addition to the personal tributes, messages were read from Governor John S. Battle, Senator Harry F. Byrd, President Colgate W. Darden, Jr., of the University of Virginia, and Hon. William M. Tuck. They pointed out that Dr. Tucker served them and advised them most generously and efficiently during their terms as Governor. Mr. Tuck noted that Dr. Tucker had been of invaluable assistance to each of Virginia's eight Governors since 1920.

DR. TUCKER IS HONORED—Guest of honor at a testimonial dinner of Richmond alumni on September 26 was Dr. Robert H. Tucker (seated, center), former Professor of Economics and Dean of the University. Standing, left to right, are four of the eight speakers who paid tribute to "Fightin' Bob." They are F. James Barnes, II, formerly of the political science faculty and now of the State Division of Planning and Economic Development; Dr. Raymond Pinchbeck, of the University of Richmond; Dr. W. H. Stauffer, of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce; and C. H. Morrissett, State Tax Commissioner. Seated with Dr. Tucker is Dr. Morrison Hutcheson, Richmond physician and a Washington and Lee trustee, who presented the retired dean with a gift from the alumni chapter.

Korean Casualties

Thomas Payne Wilson, who graduated in February 1950 with the B. A. degree, was killed in Korea on September 1, 1950. This information was received from his family, whose home is at 235 Sycamore Street, Staunton, Virginia.

Lieut. Paul J. B. Murphy, Jr., 46, was wounded in Korea and is now recovering in a hospital in Japan. He was promoted from second to first lieutenant shortly before the patrol action in which he was wounded.

Lieutenant Murphy was a member of a mechanized patrol caught by snipers. He received a shattered wrist. He was flown from Kimpo Airfield to Japan and was in a hospital within 20 hours after he was shot. He is expected to remain in the hospital for several months. Lieutenant Murphy is the son of Col. Paul J. B. Murphy, '14, College Park, Staunton, Virginia.

Cpl. James Crawford Hitz, '49, was wounded in action in Korea on the 17th of August, 1950. He was shot by a single rifle bullet, at medium range, in the lower right leg. The projectile entered just to one side of the shin-bone, slanted upward, split and came out in two pieces from the upper, inside, right calf. In a letter to his

Cliff Woodrum, '09 Died October 6

Clifton A. Woodrum, who served Virginia as Congressman for 22 years, died October 6 in Washington, D. C. Mr. Woodrum suffered an attack of coronary thrombosis in his apartment in Washington and died several hours later.

Mr. Woodrum was born in Roanoke, Virginia, on April 27, 1887. After leaving the Washington and Lee Law School he practiced law in Roanoke until 1917, at which time he was named to the bench of Hustings Court and presided over the court until he entered Congress in 1923. Since leaving Congress in 1945, he had been serving as president of the American Plant Food Council.

Mr. Woodrum was first elected to Congress in 1923 from Virginia's Sixth District, and served continuously until his retirement in 1945. Appointed to the Appropriations Committee in 1929, it was in this capacity that he became one of the most influential members of the House. As ranking majority leader and action chairman of the committee during months of gigantic spending for national defense, he was instrumental in piloting huge appropriations through the House.

He is survived by his wife; a son, Clifton A. Woodrum, Jr., LL. B., '33; and a daughter, Miss Anne Woodrum, all of Roanoke.

Dean Williams says the Law School is raising its standards to conform to the requirements of the American Bar Association which will go into effect in 1952. The Association of American Law Schools is expected to make similar requirements at a meeting in December. The W. and L. Law School is approved by both associations.

The 1950 Coaching Staff

Four new coaches were added to the Washington and Lee athletic staff this Fall. They are Russ Crane, line coach of the football team and wrestling and track coach; Floyd Scott Hamilton, varsity basketball, freshman football and assistant baseball coach; Wilson Fewster, lacrosse and soccer coach and physical education instructor; and John M. Sisley, assistant to the director of athletics and head trainer.

Russ Crane has been a sports enthusiast for the greater part of his life, either as a player or coach, but he has developed other talents as well. Included in his storybook background were flings at concert singing and professional boxing.

Crane was familiar with W. and L. athletics before his appointment. Many of the teams he coached at the University of Richmond performed against the Generals and he worked with the late Archie Mathis, W. and L. wrestling coach from 1929-42, during World War II.

He was a two letterman in athletics at the University of Illinois, from where he was graduated in 1939. His play at guard won him All-American recognition in 1927 and 1929. He also was a member of the wrestling team.

After graduation Crane began a tour of coaching and other jobs. He spent five years at Mississippi State College; moved to the University of Richmond in 1935; and in 1938 accepted a coaching position at Ohio University.

The war interrupted his coaching career and in 1942 he entered the Navy Air Corps as a physical fitness instructor. It was in this capacity that Crane worked with the late Coach Mathis. Coach Crane later transferred to the Pacific theater of operations and was beachmaster in the assaults on Luzon, Iwo Jima and Okinawa. He was discharged in 1945 with the rank of Lieutenant Commander.

Crane returned to Ohio University after his discharge, but soon moved back to the University of Richmond. At 44 years of age, he has coached football, wrestling, track and boxing teams.

Coach Crane is married and has two children.

Floyd Scott "Scotty" Hamilton, at 28, is one of the youngest head coaches at a major college in the country. He hopes he will also be one of the most successful.

"Scotty" likes to play basketball as well as coach. He often scrimmages with the team and plans to rejoin the Roanoke Rebels, one of Virginia's top independent teams, whenever his duties allow.

Basketball has been the coach's interest since he can remember. Although he played football at West Virginia University, it was basketball in which he excelled. "Scotty" was named on NEA's All-America squad in 1943 and played in the National Invitational Tournament in Madison Square Garden the same year.

After graduation in 1943 "Scotty" entered the Navy and starred for several service teams. He played with the championship Great Lakes Naval Training Station team, the Bainbridge Navy team, and served as assistant coach and player with the Fleet City squad in California.

"Scotty" was lured into professional basketball action after his discharge. He spent one season with the San Diego Dons and joined the Roanoke Rebels while coaching three sports at Welch (W. Va.) High School. He was one of the factors in the Generals' two losses to the Rebels last season.

"Scotty" is married and has three children.

Wilson Fewster came to W. and L. as a coach and has taken up the role of student as a sideline.

Fewster left Johns Hopkins University in his senior year to accept the coaching positions at W. and L. He expects to receive a bachelor of arts degree in life science this June.

Fewster was an outstanding lacrosse player during his four years at Johns Hopkins. In 1947 and 1948 he won All-American recognition as a midfielder. He also played baseball.

The young coach (24 years old) made his presence felt as soon as he arrived on the campus. His soccer team is enjoying one of its best seasons on record.

John M. "Red" Sisley was a W. and L. man long before he joined the athletic staff. He is an alumnus by virtue of 18 semester hours credit he acquired while serving with the Army's School of Special Services during World War II and was married in Lee Memorial Chapel to a Lexington girl, the former Marjorie Fitzpatrick.

Red began his athletic training in high school as a student assistant. He went to the University of Illinois in 1934 as assistant trainer and the following year enrolled as a student. Financial circumstances prevented continuous attendance at Illinois, and he spent the next seven years constantly changing status from student to trainer, to professional ice skater and coach.

He entered the Army in 1942 and was sent to Washington and Lee as instructor in athletics and recreation in the Army's School for Special Services. He later became Chief of Physical Conditioning at McGuire General Hospital and at the Army's medical center, Walter Reed Hospital.

After his discharge in 1946 with the rank of Major, "Red" returned to Illinois to complete work on a B. S. degree in physical education. At the same time he served as assistant athletic trainer.

"Red" was engaged in sales promotion work before accepting the W. and L. post. He is 36 years old.

The professor is a member of the Virginia Academy of Science and Alpha Epsilon Delta, national honorary pre-medical fraternity. He served as national vice-president of the group and was editor of The Scalpel, its journal, from 1938-1942.

He is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Chi social fraternity.

Our New Type Face

The Alumni Magazine now has its own exclusive type face. The text of this issue (except for the class notes) is set in a new type face called MONTICELLO. The set of 10-point matrices for use on the Linotype typesetting machine was presented to the Journalism Laboratory Press by the Mergenthaler Linotype Company. The design was recut especially for the Princeton University Press to be used in printing the Papers of Thomas Jefferson and thus was called MONTICELLO. The presentation of the matrices to the University was made to C. Harold Lauck, director of the Journalism Laboratory Press, in a special ceremony at the meeting of the Virginia Press Association last summer. It is planned for the present that the new type will be used only in The Alumni Magazine.—Editor

An eloquent telegram from Dr. Gaines asked: "Permit me to join other friends of Robert Tucker in expressing my admiration for a great gentleman, a great scholar, a great soul, whose contribution to this University and to his state is enduring and significant in largest measure." Tributes were also read from Lieutenant Governor L. Preston Collins and Congressman Burr P. Harrison.

Following the testimonial dinner, a business session was held at which Frank Jones, '37, was elected president succeeding Bill Jacobs, '29. V. Cassel Adamson, '39, was advanced from secretary to vice-president, Edward Boze, '36, was named secretary, and Adrian Bendheim, '42, was re-elected treasurer.

Before his retirement, President Jacobs recognized the presence of Kenneth P. Lane, who was elected president of the Washington and Lee Alumni Association at finals last June. Ken spoke briefly, as did Almand Coleman, who was invited by Frank Jones to give a close-up of the football team and its prospects for the season. He paid tribute to Coach Barclay and other members of his staff and to the squad.

Southern Conference Champions, 1950

W. and L. supporters, who in the past had to be content to wait for "next season," realized their hopes when the Generals of 1950, laden with seniors who would not be around for another campaign, won the Southern Conference championship.

The Generals won the right to wear the crown for the first time since 1934, and the second in the history of the University, by rolling over six Conference opponents and posting an 8-2 record for the season—the best showing of the Blue and White since 1914. W. and L. was rated among the top 20 football powers in the nation.

Most of the victories came by decisive scores while the two losses, to Virginia and Tennessee, marred the record only in the sense of final scores. Virginia snatched the game in the last two minutes of play on a desperation pass, and Tennessee, one of the top ten squads in the country, squeezed through by a one-touchdown margin.

Operating from George Barclay's split-T formation, the Big Blue generated a devastating offense which rolled almost two miles overland. The team's highly rated passing attack was seldom unfolded, for the ground attack, one of the best in the country, usually was sufficient. Against ten rivals, W. and L. averaged 299.6 yards on the ground per game.

The defensive team was not outdone by the ball-movers, however. The Blue and White was also found among the top ten defensive teams in the nation.

The club broke the scoring record set by the 1914 Generals. The 1950 Big Blue ran up a total of 318 points for the season. The old record was 302 points.

Leading the team for the second year was quarterback Gil Bocetti, whose superb signal calling and all-around play won him the title of "coach on the field" from opposing mentors. Besides being named to the first string all-State and all-Southern Conference teams, Gil was awarded the Roanoke (Virginia) Touchdown Club's trophy as the best college football player in Virginia.

But the Blue and White was not a one-man team. Sharing the backfield chores with Bocetti were Walt Michaels, a line-crushing fullback who was one of the leading scorers in the Conference and an all-State and all-Southern Conference selection; Jim Stark, a hard-running halfback who was chosen to the third all-State team; and Ray Leister, a triple-threat halfback.

The line was bolstered by the highest-scoring guard in the Conference, Buck Conard, first string all-State and named to the Charlotte News all-Southern; Co-captain Joe McCutcheon at center, first string all-State and second string Conference selection; and Co-captain Don Fergusson at tackle, second team all-State and honorable mention all-Southern Conference choice.

Other players receiving recognition were tackle Charles Smith, third team all-State; end Talbot Trammell, tackle Mike Radulovic, and guard Johnny Kay, honorable mention selections, all-State; and end Bob Thomas, honorable mention, all-Southern Conference.

Here is a resume of the games played by the champions of the Southern Conference:

Furman—The Generals opened the season with a 27-6 victory over Furman. The teams were almost evenly matched in the first half, leaving the field tied, 6-6. But W. and L., held in check during the opening half by several fumbles, overpowered the visitors after the intermission with a potent ground attack. The Big Blue ripped through the defenses for three more touchdowns, and only eight fumbles prevented the game from becoming a complete run-away.

West Virginia—W. and L. welcomed West Virginia into the the Southern Conference with a 26-7 drubbing. The Mountaineers, coached by former W. and L. mentor Art "Pappy" Lewis, found their aerial circus ineffective against the Generals. Gil Bocetti led the team to three touchdowns in the first half and personally accounted for the final six points on a 34-yard sprint in the first minute of the third quarter. Bocetti's brilliant signal-calling, faking, running and passing won him "Back of the Week" honors. The game, which marked the Blue and White's fifth victory over the Mountaineers in the 55-year-old rivalry, was played away from Laidley Field, Charleston, West Virginia, for the first time in the history of the series. More than 20,000 spectators saw the game in Lynchburg.

The Citadel—For the third straight week the Generals ground out more than 300 yards total offense and copped their third league win. The Citadel offense seldom cracked the forward wall of the Big Blue and managed to produce only one scoring threat. W. and L. scored in the second, third and fourth quarters. One of the touchdowns was made by Jim Stark, his first touchdown in four years of varsity competition. Stark also excelled defensively and was named "Back of the Week."

Virginia—Lady Luck sided with Virginia as the Generals went down to their first defeat of the season, 26-21. The Wahos turned an interception into the deciding touchdown in the last minute of play. After spotting the Wa-hoos seven points, the Blue and White raged back for three touchdowns and a 21-13 lead at intermission. Neither team mounted a scoring drive in the third period, but in the final quarter, Virginia, aided by a questionable interference ruling, crossed the W. and L. goal line and ran the score to 21-20. The Generals took the kickoff and drove for three first downs to their 45. On a play called from the bench, Bocetti fired a pass which was intercepted. The Wahos tallied the deciding touchdown on the next play. The Generals did not give up, however, and almost scored again. A 55-yard pass in the last 20 seconds from Bocetti slipped through the arms of end Tal Trammell, who had a clear field to the goal line.

Gil Bocetti, All-Southern Conference, 1950

Walt Michaels, who smashed through Virginia's defenses time after time and upset several scoring plays from his line-backer position, was selected "Back of the Week." The game was played in the Tobacco Bowl in Richmond before more than 20,000 spectators.

Davidson—The Virginia defeat did not affect the Generals' game, as Davidson discovered the following week. W. and L. spoiled the homecoming celebration with a 47-12 rout of its fourth Conference foe. The scoring was well split, seven men tallying six pointers.

Tennessee—A four-touchdown underdog, the Generals invaded the Southeastern Conference to meet the highly touted Volunteers. The team was not impressed by the rave notices of the Vols and almost produced the upset of the year. Tennessee scored all its touchdowns in the first half, two on long runs, an interception and a blocked punt. W. and L. tallied a touchdown in the first period and had another drive stopped on the five-yard line by a penalty. The Vols held a 27-6 lead at half-time.

The Big Blue played most of the game without the services of Bocetti, who was carried off the field on a stretcher in the opening quarter. Dave Waters, used solely as safety man in the past two years, filled the post admirably. He directed the team to two touchdowns in the last period. The Big Blue's touchdown output equaled the 20 points scored against Tennessee by Mississippi State, Alabama, and Duke.

The Blue and White had the best of the Vols in every department but the final score. W. and L. racked up 19 first downs against eight and had a total offense of 326 yards, 251 on the ground, against 171. Waters and Buck Conard were named the "Stars of the Week" for their performances.

V. P. I.—Hapless V. P. I., aided by rain and mud, won the disinction of being the only team to hold the Big Blue to less than 300 yards total offense. But the Gobblers won little else as the Generals took a 25-7 victory before a soaked Homecoming crowd of 6,000 spectators. The visitors held a 7-6 lead at the start of the second quarter, but relinquished it shortly thereafter as the hard-charging Blue and White line constantly had them in the hole. Tackle Charlie Smith blocked a punt and guard Buck Conard fell on it in the end zone for six points. Later in the game Smith tackled a Gobbler ball-carrier who fumbled. Dave Hedge fell on it for the score. On the try for extra point, fullback Michaels passed to Conard, who ran his season's total to seven points.

Delaware—Playing the last of the four-game series with Delaware, W. and L. overpowered the Blue Hens, 32-0. The Hens were never in the game as they dropped their third game of the series. Delaware never penetrated the mid-field marker as its longest gain of the game, a 12-yard run, was nullified by a penalty.

Louisville—The Generals held a 27-6 lead going into the fourth quarter and then held on desperately as the team which the previous week tied a strong Miami eleven scored three times before the final whistle. W. and L. scored once in the final quarter when Bocetti sneaked over after a 54-yard return of an interception by line-backer Paul Giordani. The "Lineman of the Week" honor was given to Co-captain Joe McCutcheon for his fine play.

Richmond—The Big Blue won the Conference championship by romping over Richmond, 67-7, in the Thanksgiving Day game. Although the team got off to a slow start, the outcome was never in doubt. The team scored seven points in the first quarter, 34 points in the second period, and 26 points in the final half. Only Coach Barclay's shifting of the line-up and free use of substitutes held the score below the 100-point mark.

Although varsity football dominated the Fall sports scene, soccer, cross-country and freshman football drew considerable attention. But only the soccer team could boast of an impressive record.

Under a new coach, Wilson Fewster, the booters had one of their finest seasons in years, laying claim to the state championship title. The squad defeated Roanoke College, 5-1 and 1-0; tied Virginia, 1-1, in two overtime periods; lost to Maryland, 6-0; beat North Carolina State, 2-0; Virginia, 3-2; lost to Duke, 4-1; and defeated R. P. I., 4-1.

The cross-country team this year was but a skeleton of its former self. The team, which last year ended up in second place in state competition, lost all its meets and finished last in the Big Six meet. Only four men were on the squad, since several veterans failed to report, and Captain Echols Hansbarger was lost to the team on doctor's orders.

The freshman football team had one of its worst seasons on record. It lost all its games. Despite the showing, the Brigadiers fought gamely and usually gave a good account of themselves. With only 25 players reporting in September, Coach "Scotty" Hamilton was constantly seeking a starting eleven as injuries took their toll.

Several of the freshmen exhibited varsity grade talent and should be pushing some upperclassmen for starting berths next year. Coach Hamilton expects Ciro Barcellona, a hard-charging fullback, to move up with ease. Center Bill McHenry, who was lost for the season because of an injury he received in the Fork Union encounter, is another bright prospect. Others expected to hold varsity posts next season are Jay Heckman, end; Don Dailey, halfback; and Ray Pszczolkowski, guard.

THE "WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY" Sleeping Car, now in service of the Norfolk and Western Railway Company, has six double bedrooms and ten roomettes. It is modern in every detail, with the latest air conditioning and lighting features. This car, and 9 others like it, was built for the Norfolk and Western by the Budd Company of Philadelphia, Pa. An innovation on these cars is the improved air conditioning system which circulates 100% fresh, conditioned air for passengers at all times. This new system was worked out by the Budd Company and the Norfolk and Western. In addition, there is an individual control apparatus in each bedroom or roomette which permits the passenger to regulate the temperature to suit himself. The car has new type wheel fittings for smoother riding and more efficient sound insulation. The "Washington and Lee" is now being operated between Roanoke and Columbus. However, the new cars are operated interchangeably on various districts of the railroad.

BALTIMORE

The alumni of Baltimore held their fall meeting on the evening of November 10 at the Park Plaza Hotel. This being the eve of the Washington and Lee-University of Delaware game to be played in Wilmington, football was the main topic of the night. Backfield Coach Carl Wise represented the University and gave an excellent talk on the team and its successful season.

A short business session was held and officers elected for the coming year as follows: Frank C. Brooks, '46, president; Jim O'Conner, '44, secretary; Henry Lederer, '49, treasurer. An executive committee, consisting of W. Carrol Mead, '25, Larry Galloway, '43, and Bob Hoyt, '39, was also elected.

Kanawha County Airport, with 50 members present, on November 8, 1950.

"Scotty" Hamilton, head basketball coach and freshman football coach, represented the University. Football pictures of the Tennessee and Davidson games were shown.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Following the Davidson football game, 75 alumni met for a banquet at the Selwyn Hotel in Charlotte, North Carolina.

President Francis P. Gaines was the principal speaker and in the course of his remarks said: "In these days of collectivism, institutions like Washington and Lee and Davidson College, with their independence of thought, are democracy's last citadels." He stressed the fact that in the 200 years of its history, Washington and Lee had never accepted federal aid "and never will."

Harry K. (Cy) Young, alumni secretary, and Head Coach George Barclay were also present and spoke, and players Gil Bocetti and Walt Michaels also attended.

Wilton Garretson, '28, president of the local alumni chapter, presided.

CLEVELAND

The summer meeting of the Cleveland Washington and Lee Alumni group was held on August 24 in the Cypress Room of the Hotel Hollenden to introduce the nine Cuyahoga County boys entering Washington and Lee as freshmen this Fall. Undergraduates present, led by Jim Foltz, '53, advised freshmen in connection with entering school, particularly explaining fraternity rushing.

A general business meeting was held following the general meeting. Alumni present were Dr. J. W. Battle, '34, Bill Murray, '41, Dan Sherby, '31, Alan Britton, '42, Roy Prentiss, '44, Jack Watson, '40, Charles F. Clarke, '38, "Buz" Fraier, '48, Dick McLaughlin, '35, Clinton Van Vliet, '41, Sam McChesney, '38, president, and Tom Stilwell, '44, treasurer. To lighten the burden of President McChesney, Clinton Van Vliet was elected secretary. Discussion on widening the group to include all alumni in Northern Ohio was made and it is hoped that alumni not on the mailing list, who would be willing to attend at least one of the four regular meetings per year, will contact Clinton Van Vliet at 1500 B. Northern Ohio alumni, described by visiting speaker Dr. Walter A. Flick as "one of the most effective and enthusiastic chapters in the nation," held a fall meeting in Cleveland on Sunday, October 29, following mass attendance at the Cleveland Browns-Pittsburgh Steelers pro football game.

Alumni and their wives were guests of Dan Sherby, '31, co-owner of the Cleveland Browns, at the Sunday afternoon game and derived an extra thrill by hearing the Cleveland band dedicate to them a rendition of the "Washington and Lee Swing."

More than 50 attended the dinner meeting at the Cleveland Hotel when Dr. Flick, who is head of the psychology department at the University, addressed the group. Sam McChesney, '38, president of the local chapter, presided. Movies of the opening football game with Furman University were shown.

LOUISVILLE

One of the largest and most cosmopolitan alumni gatherings ever to attend a Washington and Lee conclave celebrated the return of the Generals into Kentucky with a football breakfast at Louisville's Pendennis Club just before the University of Louisville game on November 18.

Nearly 400 revelled in the gay hospitality of the Louisville alumni chapter party and then rode out to the duPont Stadium to see the Generals lick Louisville, 33-28, in a real thriller.

From as far as St. Louis, Charleston, all over Ohio and Illinois, and every corner of the Blue Grass State, the Minks came into the Falls City to give glaring evidence of the enthusiasm a winning football team can generate.

At the alumni breakfast they heard talks by Alumni Secretary Cy Young, who pointed to the 1950 Generals as a team of great character and academic purposefulness. Coach George Barclay thanked the Louisville alumni for what he termed "the greatest and most enthusiastic alumni support I have ever seen at any school."

Barclay, a University of North Carolina graduate, said, "I have never seen anything like this marvelous turnout and I have been connected with five other prominent colleges."

Alumni were treated to boutonnières and their wives and lady friends to corsages. Several handsome door prizes were awarded.

In addition to the breakfast at the Pendennis Club, the Louisville alumni presented each member of the Washington and Lee team and coaching staff with a silk cravat, a real old "school tie" in blue and white.

Retiring President A. T. Bishop, Jr., '41, and incoming President A. P. Bondurant, '28, presided.

The North Texas Association held its annual meeting on Thursday, November 2, at the Baker Hotel in Dallas. A Band at Last Undergraduates returning for the 1950-51 academic year discovered a new activity to which they could devote their spare time—a student band.

This organization was active during the first months of the school session, adding color and spirit to the Generals' football campaign.

The band made an impressive debut at the pep rally preceding the Homecoming game. W. and L.'s first student band since the war drew plaudits from alumni and students attending the pre-game ceremonies. The performance elicited the following comment from The Ring-tum Phi, student newspaper:

"For the first time since the war a student band took the stand and tied the rally into a homogenous demonstration. There's no denying it; they were good . . . No one had realized how badly a band had been needed at W. and L. until they took over at the celebration."

The resurrection of the student band from its World War II inspired coma was the work of two undergraduates—Benno Forman, a junior from Roanoke, Virginia, and John Benjamin Rankin, Jr., a sophomore from Norfolk, Virginia. Through their efforts 30 musically inclined students were persuaded to form the band, instruments were borrowed, and funds solicited from the Inter-Fraternity Council.

The musicians are operating on a financial shoe-string, but they are determined to make the organization self-supporting and to perpetuate the musical rebirth on the campus. They hope to raise enough money to purchase music, instruments and uniforms through two tentatively scheduled concerts. The band also plans to perform at basketball games to be played in Lexington.

The limited supply of borrowed instruments has thus far restricted the size of the band, but a 40-45 piece group is envisioned in the near future. The musicians are using improvised uniforms of gray flannel slacks and blue blazers.

The group is headed by Benno Forman, who was elected student director at the organizational meeting. Sam Bucholtz, Jr., a sophomore from Edgewood Circle, Jacksonville, Florida, is librarian.

C. Henry Cohen, LL. B., 1934, attorney for the Public Housing Administration in the Richmond, Va., area, has accepted the executive directorship of the Spartanburg, S. C., Housing Authority, and will assume his new post soon.

Department of History Presented with Portraits

William H. Daniel, of the class of 1938, a businessman of Tulsa, Oklahoma, has presented to Washington and Lee through its history department a complete set of pictures of all the Presidents of the United States from Washington to Franklin D. Roosevelt. The presentation was made by Bill in memory of his father, the late Richard Tevia Daniel, who collected the pictures as a hobby during a lifetime interest in American political history.

Each of the 31 pictures is framed, and they have all been hung in the corridor just outside of the history classrooms. These pictures are greatly appreciated by the history department. Nearly every day students are seen examining them, perhaps with the idea of identifying the individual whose actions they have been studying in the adjoining classrooms.
