THE ALUMNI FUND is your fund. Organized and directed by the alumni themselves, it provides the channel through which all men of Washington and Lee can express their confidence in, and contribute to the well being of their Alma Mater. And further, the appeal is made only once a year. Your Class Agent is doing an unselfish and loyal job for the University. He will do his part. Do your part by replying to his letter.

THE COVER

Many pictures have been made of the annual Academic procession as it approached Lee Chapel down the center walk from Washington Hall. This picture was made from a new angle. For the first time the commencement exercises were held at a spot on the campus, in front of the President's home, where shade was provided for all. A most impressive ceremony.

The 203rd Commencement

Dr. Gaines was the principal speaker at the graduating exercises, held under the shade of the trees on the campus in front of the president's house on Friday, June 6. He told a class of 195 graduating seniors that the "bugles" which were calling them to the service of their country in this day of peril, were also changing the purposes of education.

Honorary doctorate degrees were conferred on W. Turner Catledge, newly appointed executive managing editor of the New York Times and Kennon C. Whittle, LL.B., '14, Justice of the Virginia Supreme Court. Mr. Catledge received a Doctor of Letters degree and Judge Whittle, whose father, Judge Stafford C. Whittle, '69, was similarly honored 34 years ago, received a Doctor of Laws degree.

Dr. Gaines announced the receipt of several substantial gifts by the university and disclosed that the University Board of Trustees, recognizing "competence and devotion," had ordered a general five per cent salary increase for faculty and staff. In this connection Dr. Gaines said the University had received another gift, the residual interest in a trust fund amounting to $43,780, from Mrs. Alfred I. DuPont of Jacksonville, Florida. Washington and Lee now has 85 per cent of two trust funds established by Mrs. duPont, its own share running well over $800,000. A gift of $25,000 from Maurice Cafritz of Washington toward a new building and gifts totaling $20,000 for development of the Journalism Department. The Alumni Fund total for this year was reported to be $33,000.

Commenting on the troubled world conditions, Dr. Gaines told the graduates, "If this were a conventional time, and I could give you a traditional blessing, how happy I would be. Bugles, however, are sounding for you, and these bugles cannot be ignored. And the sounding of the trumpets," he added, "are changing the purposes of education."

"American education has been indicted for being an instrument for the realization of personal ambition," Dr. Gaines said. Now personal ambition has to be placed second by the college graduate.

There are twenty-six sons of alumni in the 1952 Senior Class. Above are twenty-two of them with their fathers.

A New Setting for Graduation Exercises

Furthermore, education can no longer be considered "an exquisite instrument for escapism." The best definition of education today is the biblical quotation, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." But before the human mind knows the truth to make it free there are great commandments to be kept and loyalties to be achieved. Spiritual commitment must run ahead of personal ambition.

The valedictorian of the 1952 class was Henry W. Jones, Jr., son of Henry W. Jones, '24.

tional attraction to the ceremony was the University's famed colonnade and historic red brick buildings—a pictorial and historical backdrop to the scenic setting.

And I can't help but believe that just as surely as the name of ROBERT E. LEE was on the lips of President Francis P. Gaines, of Washington and Lee, when he delivered his annual address following presentation of diplomas, and as surely as the grave of this famous Southern General is located in nearby Lee Chapel on the campus, so his spirit pervaded those recent graduation ceremonies.

Students who spend four years in the environs of that University, at least in my opinion, can't help but have an opportunity to absorb some of the best traditions of the South, (held sacred at W. and L.) and learn, at least in part, the principles that made General Lee, this University's president following the War between the States, one of the greatest heroes of American history. And I say that advisedly, having watched three Miami students—Ed Ellis, Talbot Trammell and my own son, Lynn Lummus, get their diplomas in the above mentioned historic setting.

W. and L. Men Receive Degrees at Harvard

The following Washington and Lee graduates received advanced degrees from Harvard University at commencement exercises on June 19, 1952:

David D. Bien, A.B., '51—Master of Arts.

Edward B. Tenney, B.S. '50—Master of Business Administration.

William McKee Kinnard, A.B. '49—Bachelor of Laws.

Robert R. Reid, Jr., A.B. '49—Bachelor of Laws, cum laude.

Graduation Grandeur

By MARTHA LUMMUS

There's a special grandeur about a graduation held on the campus of a university, in the shade of trees that are centuries old. Perhaps it's the spaciousness of the out-of-doors, the sunshine, the singing of birds, that combine to make such ceremonies so impressive.

The particular graduation of which I speak and which I traveled to Virginia to witness, was at Washington and Lee. An addi-

500 Alumni Return for 1952 Finals

Some 500 alumni of Washington and Lee returned to the campus for Finals, June 4-6. Among them were a number of the 26 fathers who had sons in the graduating class.

Starting with the Alumni Smoker, held in the Student Union on the evening of June 4, followed by the Senior Ball, the festivities continued on Thursday with meetings of the University Board of Trustees in the morning; the Alumni Luncheon on the back campus at noon and the meeting of the General Alumni Association in Washington Chapel at 2:00 p.m. The reception of President and Mrs. Gaines for alumni, seniors and guests preceded the Final Ball. Graduation exercises were held on the campus in front of the President's house at eleven o'clock on Friday, June 6.

of Trustees of the Association held in the Alumni offices on Thursday, June 5. Mr. Buford is president of the Shenandoah Life Insurance Company. He succeeds Kenneth P. Lane, '36, of Richmond, who has held the office for the past two years.

Other alumni officers elected were: Hugh J. Bonino, '36, of Providence, Rhode Island, vice-president, and Arch Sproul, '37, of Staunton, treasurer.

The annual meeting of the General Alumni Association, held at 2:00 p.m. Thursday, heard an informal welcoming address by President Francis P. Gaines. Dean James G. Leyburn of the University praised the faculty and said that academic standards were being raised continuously. He emphasized how much the Carnegie study grants had meant to faculty members and said that the University hoped to continue this program.

Dean of Students Frank J. Gilliam told the alumni that Washington and Lee was the only Southern college which required the college boards entrance examinations and said this requirement was working out exceedingly well.

Football Coach Carl Wise expressed appreciation of the cooperation of the administration. He said his principal objective was to field a team of representative Washington and Lee students and

PAUL C. BUFORD, B.A. '13, LL.B. '15, has been a member of the Alumni Board of Trustees for the past two years. President of Shenandoah Life Insurance Company of Roanoke, Virginia; practiced law continuously in Roanoke from 1915 until he became president of the above Company. He was married to Anne Warren in 1924 and they have four children, Anne (now Mrs. Beverley Berkeley, Jr.), Guy Warren, Paul C., Jr., and Susan Buford. hoped to win as many games as he could with such a team.

Mr. Buford paid tribute to the services of Athletic Director Richard A. Smith, who had just relinquished his post as baseball coach after 29 years of service. Mr. Smith, of course, will continue as athletic director.

The alumni secretary, Harry K. Young, read a report of satisfactory progress for the Association and the best year it has had.

Wyatt C. Hedrick, '10, of Fort Worth, Texas; Stewart Buxton, '36, of Memphis, Tennessee; and W. L. Webster, '12, Schenectady,

New York, were named to the association board of trustees. Randolph Rouse, '39, of Washington, and Charles Davidson, '32, of Lexington, were named alumni representatives on the university athletic committee.

Report of the Alumni Secretary

Last year I reported to you that your Alumni Association had had its best year since my incumbency as secretary, and my hopes were that it would continue to grow and that I could make similar reports of steady progress from year to year.

I repeat the statement, the Association has had its best year and this applies to all phases of alumni activity. In my travels during the year, which included many miles and many parts of the country, I do not believe that I have ever found among our alumni a greater interest in the affairs of the University. Practically all of our organized chapters have held from one to three meetings during the year—all well attended. A representative from the University has been present in almost every case.

The interest of our far-flung alumni is not confined to the past accomplishments or present activities of Washington and Lee but is vitally concerned with its future. I believe our mail—other than letters pertaining to the Fund—has been heavier than I have ever known it to be, mainly filled with inquiries from alumni in connection with the education of their sons and other boys they think are good Washington and Lee prospects. I know of no greater service an alumnus can render than to send us the right kind of boy. This year there are approximately 100 sons of alumni in our student body, 26 of them graduated in June, and the valedictorian of the 1952 class is the son of a member of the the class of '24-A.

Nearly all of our alumni chapters now have committees whose sole purpose is to interest in the University boys graduating from their local high and preparatory schools. Our Cleveland, Ohio, Chapter is a good example of how a well-organized alumni group can serve the University. Their "prospective-student committee" visits each local high and preparatory school in the area at least twice a year. Our freshman class entering the fall of 1950 had nine boys from the Cleveland area.

We feel that our Student-Alumni Relations Program is progressing here on the campus. And we know the present student body is better acquainted with the activities of the Alumni Association than ever before. Prior to the inauguration of this program, I doubt seriously if any young alumnus had a true picture of the objectives of the Association, and its means of realizing these objectives, until he was out of college at least five years. The results of this program are reflected in the many calls we have from student organizations looking for assistance and information. Further, 23 per cent of the total contributors to our 1951 Alumni Fund came from the last ten classes to graduate. We feel, then, that our program of educating students in their future responsibilities has caught on—and that we may count on them in the years to come.

Routine office procedure remains at the same busy peak—the volume of which seems to be increasing daily. There is always a deadline to be met for Magazine copy, or it is time for an all-out mailing to the alumni list—and then there are the ever-present changes of addresses to be made through the files. Any of you who have visited the office lately have no doubt noticed that new files and equipment are gradually crowding us into all corners of the room. If our

A generous portion of the March Alumni Magazine was devoted to the report on our 1951 Alumni Fund. In addition to this report, it carried the analysis of our Fund through the period of its existence, 1933-1951. We pointed out that development had been slow but that progress had been steady. The $40,490.24 received in 1951 exceeded by $12,000 any previous year.

The Alumni Board decided that all money received from the 1951 Fund should be handed to the Trustees of the University and expended at the direction of the University Board of Trustees. We think in these uncertain times it was a wise decision.

In spite of the progress we have made, we are far behind other colleges of similar size in annual giving. The amount of money re-

WYATT CEPHAS HEDRICK, B.A. '10. Architect and Engineer—has designed some of the country's outstanding industrial buildings, including the Shamrock Hotel in Houston, Texas. He also has extensive ranch holdings in Texas. He was married to Mildred Sterling in 1925 and they have three daughters, Pauline (now Mrs. Coffee), Mildred and Jean. At Washington and Lee he was a member of Phi Gamma Delta, social fraternity, and Theta Nu Epsilon. Address: 1005 First National Bank Building, Fort Worth, Texas ceived last year was most encouraging when we consider that only 1,958 alumni, out of our total of 10,327, contributed to the Fund. Our analysis showed that a total of 5,468 alumni have contributed to the Fund at one time or another. At a minimum, 4,000 of this number should be responding annually. This is not too much to expect—the percentage of givers to many other college funds far exceeds this number.

I would like to say something about each of our 86 class agents, because any credit for our results belongs to them, but you will understand that it cannot be fully said in a report of this kind. They all did a grand job and my experience in working with this fine group was most pleasant. I should also like to include my thanks to the several hundred alumni who have served in the past as class agents. To them must go a lot of credit for building the Fund on a firm foundation without which the present structure could not exist.

Our 1952 Fund is progressing satisfactorily. We are running some $3,000 or $4,000 behind a comparative date of last year. However, we are happy to report to you the number of contributors at this time is running along about as last year.

The financial situation of the University has not changed materially from last year and surveys show that one-half of all our private liberal arts institutions are now operating in the red. Many of them are dipping into their endowment capital. We don't want this to happen at Washington and Lee. The best preventive we know of is concerted annual giving by the alumni through the class agents.

* * *

In closing this report, I want to thank your Alumni Board of Trustees for the fine cooperation they have given the alumni staff. Especially do I thank your president, Kenneth P. Lane. His guidance and interest have been a constant inspiration to us. We are happy that the by-laws of the Association provide that the past president serve one year as a member of the Alumni Board of Trustees.

Dr. Hancock Retires From Teaching Career

One of the most prominent professors of Washington and Lee University won't take his usual place in the classroom next fall when the school opens its 204th academic year. For Dr. Glover D. Hancock, first dean of the School of Commerce, has retired from all teaching duties after 42 years.

"From now on it's fishing, golfing and relaxing," Dr. Hancock says, "in addition to as much reading as I can cram in."

Although officially retired as dean of the Commerce School in 1949, Dr. Hancock continued teaching a class or two until the close of this year's second term.

President Francis P. Gaines said Dean Hancock now takes his place among the men whose contribution of life has been as important as any other factor in the honorable tradition of Washington and Lee.

William F. Barron, Jr., '52

Dr. Hancock came to Washington and Lee in 1910 when there were only two commerce professors on the faculty. In 1920 he was chosen to head the new School of Commerce and Administration, the first school in the South to offer a commerce curriculum on the collegiate level.

Since then, thousands of students have taken Dr. Hancock's courses in money and banking and other fields. Many of them now hold top executive posts throughout the world.

A friend recently mentioned to Dr. Hancock that now he has retired, he ought to be able to begin having a good time. But the former dean replied, with a characteristic smile: "What do you mean by having a good time? That's exactly what I've been having these past 42 years—and getting paid for it, too."

Schuchart Appointed As Director of Utilities

P. M. SCHUCHART, who has had a comprehensive background of more than a score of years in the Bell System and Independent telephone industry and for the past 15 months has been the chief of the Wire Communications Branch of the Federal Civil Defense Administration, was appointed May 20, by the Florida Railroad and Public Utilities Commission as Director of its Utilities Division, a newly created post, effective June 15.

In his new position, Mr. Schuchart will be responsible for the service and tariff phases of the utilities in Florida—telephone, telegraph, electric light and power, and gas. He is resigning from the FCDA staff June 11.

Mr. Schuchart joined the FCDA in February, 1951, at the request of former Florida Governor Millard Caldwell, shortly after the latter was named FCDA Administrator. As Chief of the Wire Communications Branch, he has been serving as liaison between the FCDA and the communications industry of the nation.

Recently he completed arrangements for the establishment of the Federal Civil Defense national TWX network, which links the national FCDA headquarters with nine regional offices and the 48 state control centers. One of his last projects was taking over the operation and responsibility by FCDA of the civil air raid warning network with key points in every state and most of the leading cities, and he is spending this week in the Rocky Mountain area for the completion of the transition of the nationwide network to the FCDA from the Air Force. He also has been active in the development of transfer relays for the rapid provision of alternate routes and services by telephone in the event of an emergency. During his FCDA service he has been a lecturer on wire communications at the Civil Defense Staff College at Olney, Maryland.

Mr. Schuchart started his telephone career with the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania immediately after his graduation in 1926 from Washington and Lee University. He continued his association with the Bell System until World War II. During the war he served as civilian telephone engineer in the Signal Corps with the headquarters of the Third Service Command, and in this assignment was responsible for the traffic operation of all the posts in the command, which embraced Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania. As a result of his accomplishments he was awarded the Certificate of Commendation, the highest award possible at Service Command level.

At the conclusion of his work with the Signal Corps in 1946, Mr. Schuchart was appointed by the Central Telephone Co. as General Traffic Manager and Traffic engineer, with headquarters at the Virginia Telephone & Telegraph Co. at Charlottesville, Virginia. A year later, he was transferred to Tallahassee as General Manager of the Southeastern Telephone Co. Mr. Schuchart has been author of several articles in technical journals on telephone traffic and engineering. He has also been a speaker at several state Independent telephone association conventions.

1952 Calyx Dedicated To "Hig" Williams

The 1952 Washington and Lee Calyx is dedicated to PROFESSOR JOHN HIGGINS WILLIAMS, B.A. '24; M.A. '28, as follows:

"In every university there are certain professors who are remembered as men long after the knowledge they imparted has become muddled and faded. This does not mean that they have failed in their primary objective, for by our association with them we gain lessons in human relations far more valuable than the abstract fragments of learning with which they sought to inoculate us. The man to whom we dedicate this yearbook is that sort of professor. He has been able to preserve the student outlook which he acquired during his own undergraduate days at Washington and Lee and to inject it into his teaching and his extra-academic relations with students. His interest in campus affairs has been manifested by his twenty-five years of service on the Publications Board and by his unflagging participation as a faculty member of ODK. His warm, man-to-man manner toward the individual student has endeared him to those who know him and has fostered an ideal faculty-student relationship. This easygoing familiarity has bred no contempt but rather sincere respect and genuine fondness among a large part of the student body. Their attitude toward him has been summed up innumerable times in words similar to these—"No one should go through W. and L. without taking a Hig course."

"We join with his other admirers in dedicating this 1952 Calyx to Mr. John Higgins Williams."

Local Chapter Meeting

NEW YORK

The New York Alumni Association Chapter held its Annual Spring Dinner Dance on Friday evening, April 25, at the Hotel Warwick. Accommodations at the Warwick included a foyer cocktail lounge, the Pine Room for dinner, and dancing in the mirrored Warwick Room. Roger Stanley and his three-piece orchestra played roving music during the dinner and for dancing later. An interesting item in this connection is that Jerry Shard and his orchestra who had made a sensational recording of "The Swing" and "Yes Sir, That's My Baby," were playing in the Raleigh Room downstairs, during the alumni party. The hotel, glad to cash in on an opportunity for publicity, had Jerry Shard pose under the Washington and Lee banner. The girls in the picture are Gloria Grimley, daughter of Roy Grimley, '21, and Mrs. Harry Newman, wife of Harry Newman, '49, and niece of W. J. L. Patton, '21.

The attendance was remarkably good considering New York had one of the worst rain storms of the year all that day and night.

The annual picnic of the chapter was held on Saturday, June 28, at "Sunlit Farm," summer home of Emmett Poindexter, '20.

Information on these events was handled by H. R. "Dick" Sandstrom, '41, Chairman and, starting well in advance, attractive notices were mailed to all alumni in the area once a month.

Amos Bolen Returns To the Practice of Law

AMOS A. BOLEN has been made a member of the recently reorganized law firm of Fitzpatrick, Marshall, Huddleston and Bolen, formerly Fitzpatrick, Stickling, Marshall and Huddleston of Huntington, West Virginia. For the past year he has been vice-president and general manager of Robertson-Henry and associated construction companies. Prior to that time he was associated in general practice with Fitzpatrick, Stricking, Marshall and Huddleston, devoting the greater part of his time to railroad, utility and other corporate matters.

Mr. Bolen, a member of local, state and American Bar Associations, and who is admitted to practice in state and federal courts, including the United States Supreme Court, received his A.B. degree from Washington and Lee in '34, and LL.B. in '37, graduating magna cum laude and was valedictorian of the class of '34.
