THE COVER

Army uniforms will again be the order of the day when the R. O. T. C. Unit appears on the campus next Fall. The natty dress of today's "Doughfoot" is a far cry from that of Company B of Washington and Lee's S. A. T. C. of 1918.

Crisis and Challenge

(The President's Page)

That's the word now universally applied to colleges, notably to colleges exclusively for men—"crisis." Everybody knows the reason, though perhaps we feel it most acutely. If the defense of our country requires a mobilized force of three or four million men, then that requirement will be in part at the expense of college enrollment. Tuition fees will drop, programs of instruction will shrink, educational aspiration in some measure will be suspended.

As I write these words the confusion of it all is yet unresolved. Until federal legislation or some unquestioned pronouncement has been made, nobody knows exactly what future we face. We at Washington and Lee have the promise of a unit of ROTC, but even we do not know exactly what that will mean. How many boys can be served? What assurance of continuity of study will be given them? What of the proposed preferential quota of 75,000 others who may be permitted to enter? Of the boys who accept military service, how long will the term be, and what encouragement will then be offered for resumption of educational effort? What minimum age will be adopted for drafting or inducting American boys? The unanswered questions multiply in our troubled minds.

As I write these words—if I may repeat—I know only one thing, that drastic economies must be effected if we don't want to bequeath to the future a crippling debt. We might have a student body next year of 400 or we might have a student body of 800—but that number will certainly fall far below our enrollment of the last five years. A corresponding decrease in revenue must follow.

Because this University never "mushroomed" in flamboyant foolishness of pedagogical venture, that urgency of reduction is particularly difficult. We are required to dispense with desirable or advantageous things—never with the fol-de-rol of any institutional extravagance. One of the little ironies is that each phase of the dispensable has staunch supporters.

But crisis is not new in Washington and Lee history. It was crisis when William Graham collected the wreckage in the post Revolutionary period; it was more than crisis when Robert Lee gathered the shattered fragments of the late sixties. Our own memories are fresh enough to recall that it was crisis during World War II. We give our praise to God that each crisis was a challenge to the loyalty of the faithful, and that the challenge was successfully met.

I wish you could walk with me, though I might be in sombre thought, over your ancient campus and watch the students of 1951. I hold them in immeasurable admiration. I hope I can recognize greatness at the age of 20 as well as at the age of 60. These are the children of the abnormal, the yet undisclosed destiny. But they have done their little immemorial academic chores, hunting for the square root of a bunch of confused x 's or chasing some venturesome image of Shakespeare's brain. With light denied them, at least in phases of the splendor of hope, these young men have been faithful in little things. May God make them rulers over great things.

It is this thought that commands me. The country must be saved, but it is the promise of such boys, their capacities and their character, that make the country worth saving. To serve such boys, to sustain the long tradition of leadership furnished, is a laudatory ambition for any college, and certainly for Washington and Lee. God grant that we may find the friends who will help.

President

Over 1000 alumni attended the 'Gator Bowl Breakfast at the Roosevelt Hotel on New Year's Day.

Many Alumni at 'Gator Bowl

The facts of the Generals' 20-7 loss of the 'Gator Bowl game to the Cowboys of Wyoming have received ample coverage in the press, but as yet no recognition has been given to the work which made the game possible or of the benefits the University derived from the team's participation in the New Year's Day spectacle.

More than 2000 students, friends of the University and alumni, representing every class from 1899 to the present, gathered in Jacksonville to support the Big Blue and celebrate the first appearance of a Washington and Lee football team in a major bowl. Entertainment for this record crowd was sponsored by the Jacksonville Alumni Chapter, the highlight being a breakfast-lunch-"brunch" in the Roosevelt Hotel prior to the game. H. K. (Cy) Young, Alumni Secretary, termed it "the biggest event of its kind in our history. The Jacksonville chapter did a grand job in arranging this affair and others for the football team, and deserves our heartiest thanks." He cited many individuals who shared in making the arrangements, including Rhydon Latham, '28, president; Charlie Smith, '32, secretary; Bob Avent, '32, in charge of registration; Jack Ball, '32; and Ely Fink, '35.

Although the visitors saw the Generals lose, they watched what sports writers have called the most thrilling of all 'Gator Bowl games. The manner in which the representatives of the University bore the loss and their sportsmanship increased appreciably the reputation of Washington and Lee. Indicative of this are the following excerpts from a column written by Arnold Finnefrock, sports editor of the Florida Times-Union, in which he quotes from a letter from Lea Booth, University director of publicity, and The Ring-tum Phi, student newspaper:

“Relaying the ‘Gator game from 60 minutes to zero,’ writes Lea Booth, ‘the concensus among our coaches and players seems to indicate that they were overtrained and had reached a peak of sharpness about four days prior to the game. . . The wonderful treatment we received . . . just makes our miserable performance on New Year’s Day seem all the more pathetic. We feel that our team owed a debt of gratitude to all the Jacksonville supporters who were pulling for the Generals. We welched on that, I’m afraid.’”

Mr. Finnefrock replied that the team did not do too badly in the statistics department although the scoreboard might indicate otherwise. “In behalf of ourself and our staff, we make a courtly bow to Mr. Booth and in return we can only say that we appreciate the aid he gave us and express the wish that W. and L. will make a more successful trip to our town,” the sports editor wrote.

“Whenever we grow despondent over things which happen in the sports world and fear that the spirit of sportsmanship and good will between athletic antagonists has been lost and become only something that people talk about on the knife and fork circuit, our hopes are raised by such expressions vouchsafed by Booth . . . And they are restored irretrievably by the following editorial from The Ring-tum Phi, W. and L. student publication, under the headline of ‘No Sour Grapes,’ which was sent to us by Joseph M. Glickstein, Jacksonville attorney, ’20.

“As to the final outcome of the game it is no news to anyone that the Generals finished on the short end of a 20-7 score. We were lucky enough to view the game, and in our humble opinion W. and L. played a clean, hard-fought game, showed the absence of Full-back Walt Michaels (the team’s leading scorer and ace line-backer was stricken with appendicitis on Christmas Eve), and was defeated by a slightly superior outfit. The Generals didn’t play at their mid-season best, but that was not the sole cause for their loss. Wyoming had a great football squad, well coached and well trained, and in that and that alone lies the answer to the final score. There are no sour grapes connected with the year's post-mortem"

This is the 'Gator Bowl story. But until now the story of how the Generals were invited to appear in the game has not been told.

The Champions of the Southern Conference, on the basis of their splendid 8 won, 2 lost record, merited some recognition, but without the aid of newspapermen, football coaches, alumni and other friends, the Generals would probably not have performed on New Year's Day. The first indication that the Blue and White was being considered for a post-season contest came from the selection committee of the newly inaugurated Presidential Cup game, sponsored by the American Legion of Washington, D. C. This was only a "feeler" and nothing more came of it, but it indicated the possibility of a bowl bid.

On November 23 the Big Blue romped over Richmond, 67-7, to clinch the Conference title. The prospects for a bowl bid appeared good.

During the following days, Mr. Booth and Mr. Young ran up telephone tolls soliciting support from influential friends. A few of the men who responded were Lawrence Leonard, sports editor of the Richmond News-Leader; Chauncey Durden, sports editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch; Shelley Rolfe, sports editor for the Times-Dispatch; General Bob Neyland, football coach and athletic director at the University of Tennessee; and Carl Snively, football coach, University of North Carolina.

Of special interest is Coach Neyland's near-successful effort to put the Blue and White in the Orange Bowl at Miami. On the strength of his recommendation to the selection committee of the Orange Bowl, the Generals ended up as third choice for that contest.

Meanwhile, the Blue and White was invited to appear in the Valley Bowl at Stockton, California, against the College of the Pacific.

What is wrong with this picture? Nothing, if you are looking for three former All-Southern Conference basketball players. They were corralled at Jacksonville by their coach, Cy Young. Left to right: Bill Borries, '39, Bob Spessard, '38, and Charlie Smith, '35.

Negotiations were broken off, however, because of commitments to the Jacksonville alumni who had worked untiringly for a bid from the 'Gator Bowl group. (Officials of the College of the Pacific have since requested a game during the regular season.)

On December 5, the Generals were invited to play in the 'Gator Bowl. Here's the story of the day's happenings, as found in the mental diary of Lea Booth:

Just before noon, reports trickled into various offices that the selection committee of the 'Gator Bowl was meeting and that the Generals stood a good chance of receiving a bid. From the various offices poured Mr. Booth; Mr. Young; Tom Wilson, associate dean of students; Red Sisley, assistant to the athletic director and head trainer; and Cap'n Richard (Dick) Smith. A Phone Watchers' Society was hastily formed and it held its first and final meeting—a rather long one—in the office of the athletic director. A smoky vigil of more than two hours duration was rewarded at 2:15 p.m. when Edgar Jones, chairman of the selection committee, telephoned. He did not commit the officials to an invitation but requested that Cap'n Dick be authorized to inform him later in the afternoon whether the Generals would be able to play if an invitation were extended.

The notes of the publicity director indicate that the Phone Watchers' Society disbanded in haste immediately afterwards. Within the next two hours they had secured approval for the squad's acceptance from President Francis P. Gaines; the Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics of the Board of Trustees; and the University Committee on Athletics. In the meantime, Cap'n Dick had commenced tabulating expenses.

At 4:30 p.m. Mr. Jones phoned again and invited Washington and Lee to appear as host team. When he asked against whom the Generals would like to play, the members of the PWS chorused, "Virginia." Mr. Jones sympathized but said it would be impossible to match two Virginia teams, and requested that news of the bid be withheld until the official announcement from Jacksonville. This was forthcoming within an hour, followed by news of the selection of the Cowboys of Wyoming as the opponent.

And with a notation about the permanent disbanding of the PWS, Mr. Booth ends his diary.

ROTC Unit for Campus Approved

By HENRY STERN, '51

Washington and Lee was given another opportunity to serve the United States when the Department of the Army approved the University's application for a Reserve Officers Training unit for the campus.

The University, beginning in September when the unit will be activated, will offer students an opportunity for military training while attending classes. The Army Department authorized the establishment of a unit which will specialize in training reserve officers for the Transportation Corps. This was the first choice of the University officials because of the possible correlation with the half dozen courses in transportation offered in the School of Commerce.

Washington and Lee was among 33 colleges and universities whose applications were accepted by the Army in January. About 120 applications were considered.

The professor of Military Science and Tactics at Virginia Military Institute, Lt. Col. Stewart L. Weinerth, U. S. Army, was designated as sponsor for the Washington and Lee unit. An announcement by the Army Department of a PMS&T for Washington and Lee is expected to be made soon. He is due to arrive in Lexington in April or May.

Definite information on the organization of the military training program and requirements for participation will be unavailable until after the arrival of the professor of Military Science and Tactics.

President Francis Pendleton Gaines submitted the application last September on recommendation of the Special Faculty Committee on Military Training with the approval of the University Board of Trustees. Professor Charles P. Light, Jr. of the Law School is chairman of the committee.

In applying for the unit, President Gaines wrote: "In the present world crisis, our faculty and our trustees have come to a definite conclusion that any institution which purposes education for young men has a fixed obligation to provide, if possible, training for the services of their country as well as for the fulfillment of personal and cultural aspirations."

Establishment of the ROTC on the campus is seen as the solution to the enrollment problem created by Selective Service and the possible passage by Congress of the universal military training and service bill. According to latest information available, a member of the ROTC is exempted from the draft until completion of his college studies, provided he does satisfactory academic and ROTC work and agrees to serve two years on active duty with the Army after graduation.

Dean of Students Frank J. Gilliam says the possibility that a student can complete his college education without interruption for military service will aid the University greatly in securing a representative enrollment in the future. He estimates a student body of at least 300 under the worst conditions and a possible 700 under the most favorable for the next school year.

"What could best be called 'informed speculation' seems to indicate that all colleges will face a period of greatly depleted enrollment for at least the next two years; but afterwards, barring all-out war, enrollment should climb back to normal with the military training program operating," he says.

Participation in the ROTC program will be voluntary. It includes both classroom and outdoor instruction for which appropriate academic credit will be given. Because of the type of unit to be set up on the campus elaborate physical equipment will not be needed. Maximum emphasis will be given to classroom instruction in transportation problems. Drills will be conducted on the athletic fields.

It is believed that the ROTC will not greatly affect the conventional style of clothing worn by students. Uniforms will probably be worn only when actively engaged in training.

The program includes four years of training, two years of basic and two years of advanced work. Upon completion of training, a student will receive a commission of second lieutenant in the U. S. Army Reserve.

Although the majority of students who will participate next year will be freshmen, the program presumably will be offered to all qualified upperclassmen. According to information received from Second Army Headquarters, a sophomore who has had one or more years of official military training, such as basic ROTC work in prep or high school, will be eligible to take the second year of basic provided as many as five students can qualify for it. The first year of advanced work would be given if as many as five juniors and second year law students who could qualify on the basis of at least two years of basic ROTC training or the equivalent should enroll. Six months of active service in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines or Coast Guard is considered equivalent to a year of basic ROTC work. No commitment has been made as yet about offering any of the second year of advanced work here this Fall.

Under current regulations any upperclassman, even without pre-

On the Campus

While the uncertainty of the day was being reflected in discussions of a possible accelerated academic program, life at W. and L. settled down to the routine affairs usually associated with the campus: Omicron Delta Kappa held its annual "tapping" ceremony; plans were made for another Religious Emphasis Week; and the fraternities initiated another large number of freshmen.

President Francis P. Gaines, in an assembly February 15, told the student body that the University is considering an accelerated program for the summer months "if it should be advantageous to a sizeable group." He said the final decision will depend on the nature of the draft legislation Congress is expected to vote on soon.

The president made this announcement as students were voting on the question of the establishment of an Air Force ROTC unit on the campus.

The announcement culminated several weeks of speculation which was highlighted by informal polls of classes by several instructors. An accelerated program was also considered by the Faculty Discussion Group, but no conclusion was reached.

Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership fraternity, which was founded on the campus in 1914, bestowed the University's highest honor on 12 students, three alumni, two faculty members and a Virginia industrialist in an assembly held December 15.

The fraternity admitted to membership Walter McElreath, Class of '94, Atlanta attorney, former Georgia legislator and author of a leading study of the Georgia state constitution; Harry L. Shuey, Class of '24, of Morgantown, N. C., one of North Carolina's foremost industrialists and president of the Morgantown Furniture Manufacturing Company; Sherman Ballard, Class of '21, Peterstown, W. Va., attorney; and Wert Faulkner, graduate of VMI, president of the Virginia Manufacturers Association, and general manager of the James Lees & Sons Company at Glasgow.

Faculty members tapped were Dr. W. W. Pusey, III, head of the German Department; and Football Coach George Barclay.

Students who were honored for their outstanding campus activity include Upton Beall of Helena, Ark.; John Boardman of Columbus, Ohio; Charles Bradshaw of Memphis, Tenn.; William Cogar of Charlestown, W. Va.; Chris Compton of Ashland, Va.; William Gordon Iler of Vincennes, Ind.; David Kerr of London, Eng.; Hunter Lane of Germantown, Tenn.; Joe McCutcheon of Charleston, W. Va.; Jack Marsh of Harrisonburg, Va.; Mike Radulovic of McKeesport, Pa.; and David Ryer of Glydon, Md.

The Christian Council will bring to the campus six leaders in the fields of religion, education, science and business for the annual Religious Emphasis Week, March 6, 7, and 8.

The men who will lead the students in the religious conference are Dr. Theodore M. Greene of Yale University, an authority on the philosophy of religion and a member of the Commission of Christian Scholars of the Federal Council of Churches in America; Dr. Edward McGrady, head of the biology department of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., and senior biologist on the Atomic Energy Commission; Father Justin D. McClun of the Richmond, Va., diocese; Rabbi Malcolm H. Stern of the Temple Ohel Sholom Congregation in Norfolk, Va.; S. D. Williams, a senior lawyer of the Lynchburg, Va., firm of Williams, Robinson and Hackett; and Clem D. Johnston of Roanoke, a director of the National Chamber of Commerce and a past-president of the group.

The chief address will be made by Dr. Greene at a University assembly March 6. His topic will be "The Challenge of Our Times." Voluntary assemblies and discussion groups will be held during the remainder of the conference.

The 17 social fraternities on the campus, taking advantage of a lowered academic average required for initiation, jumped their number of new members to 192 freshmen.

The new faculty ruling, passed a few days before the initiation rites, allowed an estimated 50 more pledges to become fraternity brothers than was expected. Four houses—Zeta Beta Tau, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Epsilon Pi, and Lambda Chi Alpha—initiated all their pledges under the lowered grade ratio requirement.

The new ruling lowered the grade point ratio from .5 (equivalent to 3 C's and 2 D's) to .06 (equivalent to 3 C's, one D, and one F). The ruling is effective only for this year, however.

Reasons cited for the faculty action are the mounting loss of students to the services, the financial handicaps to fraternities unless new men replace them, and the possible closer ties to W. and L. membership in a fraternity will give to students who are expected to return to college after their military service.

Thirty-two students have left the University since September, 1950, for military reasons, reports Registrar Charles L. Green.

Another duPont Gift

Gifts totaling $1,850,000 by Mrs. Alfred I. duPont to three Southern colleges were announced by her attorney in Jacksonville, Florida, on January 2, 1951.

The gifts represent 22,000 shares of the E. I. duPont de Nemours common stock which are in lifetime annuities held by 33 persons ranging in age from 54 to 86.

Washington and Lee University and the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., each will receive 35 per cent of the gift. Hollins College, in Virginia, will receive the remainder.

As each person holding one of the 33 annuities dies, the interest from the annuity will pass automatically to the schools. When the last of the annuitants dies, the principal will be divided among the three schools.

The present market value of Washington and Lee's remainder interest in the trust is approximately $445,000, but because the funds are held in annuity, the final amount that each school will receive will probably be in excess of this figure.

CLASSROOM PROFILE . . .

Dr. William Webb Pusey, III, head of the German Department, was appointed to the Washington and Lee faculty in 1939. Except for a three-year period during the second world war, in which he served in the Navy, he has been influential in campus life and activities in the town of Lexington.

The contributions of Dr. Pusey to the University and the students were recognized recently by Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership society, when it tapped the professor for membership.

Most of Dr. Pusey's extra-curricular work was done in faculty committees. In 1941 he served on the Executive Committee on the Faculty and following his Navy service he served on the President's Advisory Committee for three years and on the Bicentennial Committee. He was chairman of the Faculty Discussion Group in 1946-1947, and president of the Faculty Committee on Student Functions from 1947-1950. He is currently a member of the Scholarship Committee. In addition, Dr. Pusey is president of the Lexington-Rockbridge County Community Chest

The German professor was born on November 16, 1910, in Wilmington, Delaware. He received a bachelor of science degree in German from Haverford College in 1932, where he was elected a member of Phi Beta Kappa. The following year he completed work on a master of arts degree at Harvard.

Dr. William W. Pusey, III

Dr. Pusey was awarded an exchange scholarship by the Institute of International Education in 1934 and spent the next year attending Bonn University in Germany.

Upon returning from his studies abroad, Dr. Pusey accepted the position of assistant in German at Columbia University and in 1937 he was appointed instructor in German and Humanities. Columbia awarded him a Ph. D. degree in 1939, after which he came to Washington and Lee as associate professor and head of the German Department.

Dr. Pusey married the former Miss Mary Hope Smith in 1940. They have two children, Mary Faith and Diana Enid.

The war interrupted his teaching.

Journalism at Washington and Lee

Washington and Lee's department of journalism, known as the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation in commemoration of General Lee's pioneering work in the field of collegiate training for journalism, combines a liberal education with realistic pre-professional training.

The liberal arts emphasis at Washington and Lee is reflected in the instruction offered in the journalism division, which stresses a social science approach to the study of communications media, as well as in the wide choice of elective subjects which are available to journalism students.

The journalism program is based on a belief that the so-called mass media, such as the press, radio, and motion pictures, play a primary role in our social and political life, with a continuing impact that is a paramount influence in thinking and behavior. An understanding of the traditions, methods, and effects of these mass media is therefore essential for an understanding of present-day society, and such knowledge is especially essential for young men who plan careers in journalism or related fields.

This emphasis is reflected in courses offered by the department on such subjects as history and principles of journalism, public opinion and propaganda, critical evaluation of radio and film, public relations, and law of the press.

At the same time, the department offers professional or technical courses, limited in number but intensive in content, to give students a practical, first-hand knowledge of the tools of communication. Such technical courses include reporting, radio practice, advertising, newspaper editing and design, photography, and newspaper management. The aim of the program is to develop students with a wide background knowledge and the ability to apply it. The pre-professional journalism major must prove that he has this preparation before he is graduated.

Practical ability is developed and tested in a number of ways. The course in reporting, for instance, is organized like the editorial staff of a metropolitan newspaper, complete with editor and reporters. The news editor, a major of proven ability, supervises a "beat" system which covers all news sources in Rockbridge County. By the end of the year, each student has come into contact many times with all major news sources in the county.

Stories gathered by reporters are turned over to the instructor for criticism, and to the staff of the "Home Edition," a 15-minute news program broadcast five times weekly over the Lexington radio station (WREL) by students in the journalism department's Radio Laboratory.

Home Edition serves the community as the sole local daily source of news of the county, and is one of the most popular sustaining programs of the station. About half of the broadcast time is devoted to local news; national and sports news, edited and processed for radio by the student staff, comes from the Associated Press.

The journalism major obtains further practical experience through an internship program. In cooperation with newspapers, majors have an opportunity to work on the staff of a newspaper during the summer between their junior and senior years. Last summer majors were employed on newspapers in Lynchburg, Richmond, Marion, Warrenton, Greensboro, Newport News, and other places.

Practical experience is also offered by the Roanoke newspapers. Students visit the newspaper plant annually and from time to time assist the professional staffs of the two newspapers.

Candidates for the professional Certificate in Journalism must pass a comprehensive examination in journalism and social science fields, an aptitude test, and have a reading knowledge of one foreign language.

The educational program of the foundation has received the approval of both editors and publishers. This is shown by the continuous excess in the demand for, over the supply of, graduates. So far no graduate has been without an opportunity for employment.

The foundation has also been recognized by the Accrediting Committee of the American Council on Education for Journalism, which represents numerous publishers' associations. The foundation is one of the 39 schools of journalism in the United States accredited by the committee.

The Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation is named in honor of General Robert E. Lee, who is credited with installing the first program for journalism education in the United States during his presidency of Washington College.

In 1869 a program was started for the education of "young men proposing to make printing and journalism their life work and profession." This training was short lived, for in 1878, because of financial difficulties and the death of General Lee, the journalism program was allowed to lapse.

But General Lee's idea never died. The journalism program was re-established in 1925 as the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation by the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, whose members conducted a financial drive to raise an endowment fund. The campaign raised more than $70,-

Foreign Students on Campus

An international character was given Washington and Lee University's student body last September with the enrollment of 17 students representing 13 foreign countries and two territories of the United States.

Although several foreign students are usually included among the student body, this is probably the largest number ever found on the campus at the same time. Of this number, six entered with the freshman class.

Alumni and friends of the University are responsible for the presence of the students at the University. Three were admitted under the government's student exchange program. The exchange students, with one exception, will study at Washington and Lee until June when they will return to their native lands. The others plan to get degrees from the University.

Exchange students are selected from student applicants of foreign nations and placed at an American college or university by the Institute of International Education which administers the government's program. The students remain in the United States for a year. The government pays their traveling expenses and allots money for laundry and other expenses. The University has supplemented this financial aid with scholarships covering tuition and room, and the Interfraternity Council furnishes board under a two-week rotation system among the 17 social fraternities.

The concensus of the group indicates that assimilation into student life was not too difficult. The English language proved to be a slight handicap at first to some, but they overcame this problem. Thirteen are members of a fraternity.

Helmut Heinrich Huber, 22-year-old native of Neuberg an der Donau, Germany, says he is lucky. An exchange student originally scheduled to remain in the United States for a year, he is now in his second year at Washington and Lee and hopes to obtain a B.A. degree in German in June, 1952.

Helmut explains his luck this way: "I thought I'd like to stay longer soon after I came. I started sending letters to the Department of State, Congressmen and Senators last Spring—even the professors and students helped me. Miss Mildred Alphin of Lexington volunteered to pay my traveling expenses home and give me room and board, since I would have to forego the government's financial help if I stayed longer than a year.

"I didn't hear anything about my request for an extension of the visa for several months and so I got ready to leave. I had sent books and clothes home when the State Department called me and said I could stay. It was during examination week."

The student from Germany has done well scholastically in his three semesters at the University, making Dean's List twice and the Honor Roll once. He earns spending money by working part-time at the University Supply Store.

Helmut says it took him two months to get used to speaking English but now finds it easier to express himself in English than his native tongue. "Mr. Stephenson (Buford Stuart Stephenson, assistant professor of German) once asked me in class how to say something in German. I didn't know."

John Alden Williamson, II, was born at Niagara Falls, N. Y., but moved to Chesire, England, in 1946 when his father was transferred by his business firm.

Now a sophomore, John enrolled at Washington and Lee "Because I didn't want to go to U. Va." He was living in Charlottesville with his grandmother at the time. She suggested attending Washington and Lee and John has been on the campus since.

Twenty years old, John is studying for a B. S. degree in business administration. He is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Herwig Rudolph Johann Brandstetter did not learn the English language until two months after his arrival. But it did not take half as long for him to get acquainted.

During his first day in Lexington, over a dish of ice cream at McCrum's, the exchange student from Graz, Styria-Austria, made friends with a stranger who turned out to be J. M. "Red" Sisley, assistant to the athletic director and head trainer for the Generals. Mr. Sisley took him on a tour of Lexington and later arranged for "Johnny" to become one of the managers of the football team. He took his first plane ride when the team traveled to Louisville, Ky.

"I'm very happy to be in America because I can broaden my mind and get to know how other people act," he says. "I would like to know more people and their customs and tell the people at home about them."

"Johnny's" visa is valid until December and he plans to stay in this country until then and get a job. He wants to earn enough money to buy a motorcycle to take back home.

To Surse Taylor Pierpont of Rio de Janiero, Brazil, Washington and Lee was a compromise. He now thinks he gained as a result.

It was back in 1949 while Surse was in his last year at Baylor School, Chattanooga, Tenn. He thought of enrolling at Vanderbilt but his father liked Princeton. He says each thought the other's choice was too extreme and they settled on Washington and Lee at the suggestion of Frank Taylor

Mitchell, class of '25. Surse says his father visited the campus last summer and has converted.

A freshman, 19 years old, he is majoring in history. He is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Jan Van Mac Hauen, 19, an exchange student from Copenhagen, Denmark, was amazed at the honor system he discovered at the University. In his native land a distinction is made between cheating and stealing.

"The worst thing you can do at home is report another student for cheating. But stealing is a different thing," he states. "Then you take care of it between yourselves and make the guilty student report himself."

Jan prefers the honor system he discovered on the campus. "You're treated like adults with honor," the Dane says.

Peter Edward Forkgen, 21, a native of Karachi, Pakistan, had one minor difficulty when he arrived in Lexington almost four years ago. That was when a group of freshmen told his roommate, who knew only that "Pete" was from Pakistan, that "Pete" was a member of a head-hunting tribe from the hills. However, it took only a few minutes for "Pete" to give his worried roommate a correct impression.

Twenty-one years old, "Pete" will be graduated in June as a geology major. He hopes to spend some time in Caracas, Venezuela, with his aunt and uncle who recommended he attend the University.

He is a member of Sigma Nu fraternity, Pi Alpha Mu, honorary sophomore society, and the Cotillion Club and has appeared in several productions of the Troubadours.

The Mohler brothers, Alexander Byron, II, and Michael Phillip, had no difficulty in choosing the college to attend. Their father, Byron C. Mohler, of Mexico City, Mexico, is an alumnus, class of '25.

Alexander, 20, is a junior, and "Mike," 18, is a freshman. Both are commerce majors. They are members of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

The brothers, having heard their father speak often of Washington and Lee, say the University has equaled their expectations, except on one matter. They agree that too much emphasis is placed by the students on individual fraternities at the expense of school spirit.

Alexander plans to return to Mexico City after graduation, but "Mike," who will try out for the baseball team, would like to play professional ball.

Jacques d'Eprenesnil, 21-year-old sophomore from Paris, France, wants to remain in the United States. He will take the final examination for citizenship in September.

Jacques attended McDonogh Prep School near Baltimore, Md., and sat through several conversations about colleges. Several of his friends indicated Washington and Lee to be their preference, and he was convinced that he should apply for admission. He is majoring in Spanish.

He is trying to overcome a French accent and he says his stay in the South has already affected his speech. Last summer when he visited his parents an acquaintance told him he was speaking French with a Southern accent.

Rogelio de la Guardia of Panama City, Panama, returned from his summer vacation with a wife. The 21-year-old junior married Mireya Morgan of his home town September 1.

Married life and studying has been no problem to Roy, as he is known on the campus. He says it is merely a matter of dividing his time properly.

Roy applied for admission to Washington and Lee at the suggestion of his biology instructor at Augusta Military Academy, Charles Eugene Savedge, class of '47.

He wants to start a hardware business in Panama City after he receives a B. S. degree in business administration. He is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

Orest Niemanis, 21, of Riga, Latvia, now calls Brooklyn, N. Y., his home. His family immigrated to the United States in 1949 after several years of life in a German displaced persons camp.

Orest is majoring in journalism and wants to become a foreign correspondent. He speaks the English, Russian, German, and Latvian languages fluently. He earns spending money by tutoring other students in foreign languages. A junior, he is a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity.

David Lester Linn of Honolulu, Hawaii, discovered a number of students who had misconceptions about the territory. Dave says they have been straightened out, though. "I drove 'em crazy talking about Hawaii," he explains.

Dave is a freshman and is working for a B. S. degree in commerce. He applied for admission to Washington and Lee on the recommendation of Bob Hite, class of '47, and his high school principal.

Dave is 18 years old. He is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Humberto Jose Llorens, a freshman from San Turce, Puerto Rico, tells a story to explain why he finds dating at Washington and Lee unusual. Shortly after his arrival, he hitch-hiked to Hollins College for a date. He says he walked 10 miles before getting a ride.

"Bert," as his friends have nicknamed him, entered the University at the suggestion of a friend of his father, Pedro Antonio Rodriguez, class of '41. "The University has more than lived up to expectations," he says.

He is majoring in business administration. He is a member of Pi Kappa Psi fraternity.

John S. Baily, a senior law student, is another student who came to the University at the advice of alumni. They are Claude Porterfield Light, class of '06, and Charles Daniel Forrer, Jr., class of '49.

John, 24 years old, was born in the United States but his home is now Caripito, Venezuela. He served two years in the Air Corps after completing prep school and was graduated from Marietta College in 1949.

He has not decided his future plans yet but will either get a job with an oil company in South America or practice law.

David Clement Gordon Kerr is known on the campus as a "wheel." A senior majoring in humanities, Dave is listed in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities," is a member of ODK, editor of the '51 Calyx, president of the Interfraternity Council, and a dorm councilor, to list but a few of his activities. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

Twenty-one years old, Dave was born in Hamburg, Germany, of American parents. He moved with his parents to Belgium in 1936 and to London, England, his present home, in 1939.

He attended Kent School, Kent, Conn., when he began thinking about attending college. At the suggestion of friends and Joseph T. Lykes, '09, member of the Board of Trustees, he selected Washington and Lee.

Stanley Ying Chan Lau, a senior law student from Honolulu, Hawaii, re-entered Washington and Lee this February after studying for a year at George Washington University. Stanley began law school at W. and L. but transferred after spending a few months in Europe.

He says he likes Washington and Lee life. "You feel at home. The friendliness and the honor system are great," he states.

Stanley is a veteran of World War II. He is 28 years old.

Jaroslav Adolph Drabek of Jackson Heights, N. Y., is a refugee from the iron curtain. A native of Czechoslovakia, Jaroslav fled with his parents and brother on skis over the mountains to Western Germany two months after the Communist coup.

That was in 1948. A few months later the Drabek family arrived in the United States. Jaroslav's father works for the "Voice of America."

Although he knew no English when he landed in New York, Jaroslav learned quickly and completed his last year of high school in 1949. He applied for admission to Washington and Lee and was awarded a scholarship.

Nineteen years old, he is a member of Sigma Nu fraternity.

William Francis Mills of Nueva Gerona, Isle of Pines, Cuba, withdrew from the University in January. A member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, William was a freshman law student.

ing career in 1942 when he began a three-year tour of service with the U. S. Navy as lieutenant (j.g.), lieutenant and lieutenant commander. Dr. Pusey was stationed in Washington, London and Berlin.

After being discharged in 1945, Dr. Pusey returned to Washington and Lee where he was made a full professor in 1947. He has since increased his field of instruction to include the Russian language course which was added to the curriculum last September.

Dr. Pusey is the author of "Louis-Sebastian Mercier in Germany," published in 1939, and an article which appeared in the Germanic Review in 1948, "The Reception of Thomas Wolfe's Novels in Germany." He has also written numerous book reviews for scholarly periodicals and was a co-editor of "Readings in Military German" which appeared in 1943.

000 in money and printing equipment.

The publishers are still supporting the foundation. Besides individual contributions of money and equipment, publishers have just started a campaign among themselves to raise money for the construction of a building which will house all of the foundation's facilities. Three publishers have each pledged $5,000 at this writing. The campaign is sponsored by Carter Glass, Jr., class of '13, of the Lynchburg News, and John D. Ewing of the Shreveport Times.

The foundation, the only school of journalism in Virginia, has gained national recognition through its efforts to recognize and further journalistic quality. A journalism lecture series, bringing to the campus outstanding men of the profession, is presented annually by the foundation with the help of the Roanoke Times Fund.

The Washington and Lee chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism fraternity, rewards achievement by men in the profession annually.

The Southern Interscholastic Press Association, founded at W. and L. in 1925, meets on the campus each spring to participate in discussions on journalism subjects. Last year nearly 500 high school students from 13 states attended the three-day convention.

The foundation also acts as host to professional conventions. Editorial writers of Virginia, for example, met at Washington and Lee last winter for a professional seminar.

The faculty includes:

Professor O. W. Riegel, director of the foundation, who is an authority in the field of public opinion and propaganda, an author, a former newspaperman and foreign correspondent. Professor Riegel also has served in various capacities for the United States government.

Assistant Professor Charles O. Voigt, a former West Coast newspaperman and publisher.

C. Harold Lauck, director of the Journalism Press Laboratory, who holds several awards in the field of typography.

Herbert Patchin, a noted amateur photographer, who instructs the photography class.

The '51 Edition of Fancy Dress

The revelry of La Fiesta de Los Torros attracted gaily costumed matadors and picadors and their señoritas to the 1951 Fancy Dress Ball, set in the romantic days of early nineteenth century Spain which inspired Bizet's opera, "Carmen."

The Spanish fiesta motif was carried throughout the ball's figure, a pageant-like scheme with participants emerging from the pages of a book at one end of Doremus Gymnasium and continuing through a "typical Spanish town" to the bull fighting arena at the opposite end. Spanish shops lined the path which was illuminated by three-dimensional lamp posts.

Carmen, the provocative cigarette girl of the opera, and Escamillo, the dashing toreador—Miss Patricia Kelly of Larchmont, N. Y., and Howard Bratches, a senior from White Plains, N. Y., president of the dance set—led the promenade. And as Carmen gave orchestra leader Skitch Henderson her famous red rose, the 45th Fancy Dress Ball was on for more than 450 couples who celebrated the festival of the bulls in a light, gay setting of caricature.

Skitch Henderson and his orchestra continued the social event of the year the following afternoon, February 3, with a two-hour concert. That night the caballeros and señoritas of the previous evening attired formally for a three-hour dance which concluded another of Washington and Lee's gala Fancy Dress Balls.

According to incomplete tabulation, the dance set was a financial success, a pattern that was begun last year under the four dance-set ticket plan. Expenses were reduced to a minimum by a corps of students which prepared the decorations.

Students in charge of arrangements were Jack Ellis of Ashland, Va., costumes; John Wallace Kay of Charleston, W. Va., decorations; Sol Wachtler of Hollywood, Fla., figure; Hunter Lane of Germantown, Tenn., publicity; and Frazier Reams, Jr., of Toledo, Ohio, co-ordinator.

Midwinter Sports Resumé

By HENRY STERN, '51

The Generals' mid-winter sports carnival got off to a slow start with the basketball season but picked up speed with winning teams in swimming and wrestling.

Before the season began no one expected the Comets to turn many heads. And they surprised no one. Playing under the fourth coach in as many years, Floyd "Scotty" Hamilton, the basketeers turned in an 8 won, 17 lost record.

Hamilton was beset with troubles the day he called the first practice. Three of his regulars played in the 'Gator Bowl game and missed part of the season's play. By the time they reported, the Blue and White was mired in the lower division of the Southern Conference and only partially recovered. An All-State center, Bob Goldsmith, was ineligible to play this season because of lack of cuts.

But the story of the basketball team is not all one of tears, for a 23-year-old forward, Captain Jay Handlan, was back again to plague opponents with his set shots. Although playing on a losing ball club, the junior from Wheeling, W. Va., was one of the nation's leading scorers and established five new scoring records.

Adept at swishing the nets for two-pointers from anywhere on the floor as he is at sinking foul shots (he holds the national foul-shooting record of 18 in 18 attempts), Jay put 30 shots through the hoop and scored six free throws against Furman. His 66 points set a new Conference, state, VMI Fieldhouse and University scoring mark for one game. He also established a new University record for the season with a 656-point output. He held the previous record, 406.

The 6'2" forward averaged 26.2 points in 25 games, the second highest average in the country. His average of 27.6 markers in 18 games led the Conference. He was first in the nation in foul shots, making 158 in 184 attempts, or 85.9 per cent.

Jay, a World War II veteran majoring in education, is more than a phenomenal scorer. According to his coach, Jay is one of the best ball handlers playing the game. And he is a "clean" player. In the 25 contests this season, he had only 71 fouls called against him.

An All-State selection in the previous two years, "Jay-bird" was a repeater this year and also was named to the All-Southern Conference team and honorable mention All-America by the United Press and Colliers magazine.

Unless the world situation interferes, Jay Handlan will be back for another season. Coach Hamilton says he is not sorry.

The freshman basketball team enjoyed one of its finest records in the past few years. Led by a 20 plus point per game center, James Chandler Rich of Welch, W. Va., the Brigadiers posted an 8 won, 2 lost record.

The perennially strong wrestling squad traded championships with neighboring VMI this season. The Generals took the Conference dual meet crown from the Keydets by sweeping through four league matches, but relinquished their three-year dominance over the Conference tournament to VMI.

The Generals took second place in the tournament with 23 points behind VMI, which had ended second to the Blue and White for three years, with 29. The matmen won six of their eight matches, losing to Navy and by a one-point margin to Virginia.

And so ended the wrestling careers at Washington and Lee of five grapplers who had maintained the Generals' command over the Conference for three years. Coach Russ Crane will lose through graduation Ted Lonergan, champion in the 128-pound division in 1948 and 1949, and in the 137-weight for the past two years; Joe Sconce, champion of the 137-pound division in 1948 and 1949, and runner-up in the 145-pound division in the past two years; Ken Finley, champion of the 145-pound weight in 1948 and 1949, and runner-up in the 157-pound division for the past two years; Jerry Jack, heavy-weight champion in 1950; and Morgan Lear, 175-pound entry.

Coach Crane, faced with the loss of these key performers, is counting on his freshman wrestlers for next year to aid Howie Davis, winner of the 121 division in 1950, and runner-up in the 123 weight this year. The freshman grapplers won two of their six meets.

Coach Cy Twombly ended his 30th year as swimming coach with another winning team. His tankmen defeated Georgetown, William and Mary, and Catholic University and lost to VPI.

His squad was centered around Parker Smith in the dashes, Bill Reid in the 220 and 440, and Alec DeVolpi in the breaststroke, all sophomores, and Ray Leister, a junior, in the diving events.

Student Politics at the University

Never expect a college man to be a slave to simplicity. For the men who delve into the complex mysteries of the world's great minds are tuned to a different wave-length.

Washington and Lee University's campus politics this year is a point in question. In this "precinct," where so many of the nation's leading political figures attended their first caucuses and began forming their soapbox stances, the current political question has more faces than the Penagon building.

Election day, held late in October, displayed a tranquil atmosphere. But behind the actual X-ing of the ballots were the echoes of grumbling, complicated maneuvers and secret meetings.

In a nutshell, the story behind the scene is a conventional one: The attack against the party in power by the party out of power.

At Washington and Lee, the political bickering and beckoning began last spring. It was evident at the time that the cult of the simple was in for a going over.

As per the student body constitution, the convention to nominate candidates for student offices convened. Its success was immediate—at least for the type of person who is always restless to close a meeting. Almost before the gavel had rapped the meeting to order, the delegates voted to adjourn.

How did this happen? While the party currently out of power seldom controls the elections, it nevertheless holds a majority of the delegates to the convention. So, as a protest against the perennial champions of the other party, the "out" group voted an immediate adjournment.

That maneuver brought only a brief halt to the processes of government. The student body executive committee put their heads together and ruled the adjournment was not according to Hoyle. A second convention was ordered, but the "outers" would have no fires built under them. The second meeting followed almost identically the pattern of the first.

By that time, the calendar called a truce by directing the students' attentions to exams. Faced with the possibility of an officerless student body, the administration stepped into the breach with a slate of officers to serve until elections could be held.

With the opening of the school year this fall, this "hot potato" of student life was dug up and juggled again. Back-room talk that would make the senior version wonder about its monopoly on smoke continued. Plans and counter-plans flew as thick as flying saucers and seemed just about as acceptable to one side or the other. Leaders of each party met among themselves and with representatives of the other party, but couldn't agree.

Meanwhile, according to campus gossip, the party out of power decided to flex its muscles by boycotting various campus organizations. Immediate objective of this slight was to be the campus tax, which supports all campus publications and dramatics. Another rumor persisted that a boycott of the elections, which by this time had been set, was the latest brain-child of the "outs."

But rumors so often are just that, and these seemed to be of the same nature. On the eve of the elections, the party leaders for the "outs" declared their party would be a party to the election. Future plans, however, were to be kept to themselves, they said.

So the election was held, quietly and without any hint of the boycotts, gab, smoke and delaying tactics that had preceded it. The tally showed the "ins" were in again.

Dr. Henry Louis Smith Dies

Dr. Henry Louis Smith, president of Washington and Lee University from 1912 to 1929 and since then president emeritus, died at his home in Greensboro, N. C., early Tuesday morning, February 27. He was 91 years of age and had been ill about three months.

A widely known educator, scientist and lecturer, Dr. Smith was credited with taking the first X-ray picture in the United States. He entered the teaching field as professor of physics at Davidson College in 1887 and early became interested in the Roentgen ray.

During World War I, Dr. Smith invented a method of showering Austria and Germany with balloon-carried propaganda messages. The method was adopted by the War College, and he was awarded the prize of the American Security League.

Dr. Smith was born in Greensboro July 30, 1859, a son of the Rev. J. Henry Smith and his wife, the former Miss Mary Kelly Watson of Charlottesville. He was graduated from Davidson College with an A. B. degree in 1881 and an M. A. in 1886. In 1890 he received a Ph. D. from the University of Virginia. In 1899 the University of North Carolina conferred upon him the honorary degree of LL. D.

In 1901 he became president of Davidson College, moving to the presidency of Washington and Lee eleven years later. During his presidency here the School of Journalism, conceived of by General Robert E. Lee, became a reality. The Doremus bequest and other large sums of money were also received by the University and the faculty considerably enlarged.

After his retirement in 1929, Dr. Smith returned to Greensboro where he continued in much demand as a speaker and lecturer. He was an elder in the First Presbyterian Church at Greensboro, and in the Lexington church while here.

He was president of the Virginia Association of Colleges in 1914-15; member of the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences, North Carolina and Virginia Academies of Science, Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa and Phi Delta Theta.

Dr. Smith was married Aug. 4, 1896, to Miss Julia Lorraine Dupuy of Davidson, who survives him with the following children: Miss Helen L. Smith, Mrs. Robert Merritt, Dr. O. Norris Smith, '29, and Frank S. Smith, '32, of Greensboro; Raymond D. Smith, '22, of Chappacqua, N. Y., and Miss Julia D. Smith of Ann Arbor, Mich. His oldest son, J. Henry Smith, '19, died in the service in World War I.

Funeral services were conducted at the First Presbyterian Church in Greensboro with burial in Greensboro's Forest Lawn Cemetery. Attending from Washington and Lee were Dean Frank J. Gilliam, Treasurer E. S. Mattingly and Professor R. N. Latture.

Class Rings Presented to Football Players

It is very unusual for a football player to be awarded a monogram four years in succession. On Washington and Lee's Southern Conference championship team of 1950 there were eleven members of the squad who had received this honor. At the time of their entering as freshmen Southern Conference rules permitted them to participate on the varsity team.

The Alumni Board of Trustees at its fall meeting voted to honor

With the Local Chapters

ATLANTA, GEORGIA

The Atlanta Alumni Chapter held a luncheon meeting at the Piedmont Hotel December 28, 1950, with Willis Everett, '20, president of the local chapter, presiding. Guests of the chapter were students now enrolled at the University, who were home for the holidays. Bruce F. Woodruff, '16, made the welcoming address, and Jim Paradies, a student, gave a short talk bringing the alumni up to date on campus activities. A movie of the Washington and Lee-Davidson game was shown, and plans were made for a mass exodus to Jacksonville aboard a special Eastern Air Lines plane, "The 'Gator Bowl Special."

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

The Louisville Chapter of the Washington and Lee Alumni Association met at the Pendennis Club at 7:30 p.m., February 24. The meeting was attended by approximately 50 alumni and their wives. The University was represented by Dr. William M. Hinton, '29. The dinner was preceded by a social hour and followed by a dance at the club. Plans were made for future meetings.

NORTHWEST LOUISIANA

Northwest Louisiana alumni held a dinner meeting on January 19 at the Shreveport Country Club, with some fifty alumni and their wives present. E. Alton Sartor, Jr., '38, president of the local chapter, presided, and Dean Frank J. Gilliam represented the University as the principal speaker.

An unusual feature of the gathering was the fine decorations. Four of the courses of study at the University were represented by decorations at various places on the table. Decorations representing the Law School consisted of a set of balance scales, a black derby, and several issues of the Washington and Lee Law Review. The school of journalism was indicated by several copies of The Ring-tum Phi, copies of Shenandoah, and a box of type. A chemistry set, paints, brushes, easel and palette symbolized the school of arts and sciences. The school of commerce was indicated by an adding machine, a copy of Poors,' several annual corporation statements, a copy of CCH Tax Guide, and a sheaf of blank internal revenue tax forms.

Officers for the coming year are E. A. Sartor, Jr., '38, President; J. W. Hammett, '40, Vice-President; and T. Haller Jackson, Jr., '48, Secretary.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

The St. Louis local alumni chapter met at the Mayfair Hotel for their annual Christmas luncheon on December 27, with fifteen alumni present and students now attending the University, home for the holidays, together with several prospective students seriously considering entering the University next Fall. Douglas Remmers, '39, president of the local chapter, presided.

The Tri-State Chapter of the Washington and Lee Alumni Association met at the Hotel Governor Cabell, Huntington, West Virginia, at 6:30 p.m., February 26. A social hour preceded the dinner. W. Roy Campbell, '19, presided, and Pete Gibson, '13, served as toastmaster. Dr. W. M. Hinton, '29, represented the University. At a short business meeting following officers were elected to serve for a term of two years; H. P. Henshaw, '39, President; Joe R. Massey, '49, Vice-President; J. E. Scheifly, '48, Secretary; and J. O. Porter, '48, Treasurer. Approximately 40 alumni were present.

The annual mid-winter dinner meeting of the Philadelphia Alumni Chapter of Washington and Lee was held at The Warwick Hotel on Washington's Birthday, February 22nd. In spite of the flu epidemic, there was a good turnout of 26 alumni with some of their wives. Classes from 1912 to 1943 were represented.

Lea Booth, Director of Public Relations, was to have represented the University. However, he was involved in a most unfortunate automobile accident several weeks before the meeting and was laid up with a fractured hip. Cy Young, Alumni Secretary, took his place and gave a report on the present happenings on campus and of the more serious problems of the future to be met by the University.

It was a nice party and everyone had a good time.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Approximately one hundred alumni and their wives assembled for luncheon on January 13th in the Chantilly Room of the Hamilton Hotel in Washington, D. C., to honor Dr. Francis P. Gaines, President of the University. Harry J. Breithaupt, Jr., '36, president of the District of Columbia local alumni chapter, presided and reported on the past year's activities. Dr. Gaines was introduced by Elwood H. Seal, '16, a past president of the group, and spoke informally on recent developments at Washington and Lee. Richard T. Wright, '42, was elected president of the District of Columbia alumni group for the coming year. Other new officers elected were: Vice-President, Frank L. Price, '36, and Secretary-Treasurer, Bill Marsteller, '41.

Report of the 1950 Alumni Fund

Coming as somewhat of an anti-climax to the strenuous efforts of the Bicentennial Fund, we feel that the results of the 1950 Alumni Fund are a definite triumph. The total of $28,610.50 exceeds by $2,000 the largest amount of money received in the 18 years of the Fund. The Fund has shown a steady and healthy growth since its inception. However, the percentage of contributors is not so encouraging—less than 20 per cent contributing in 1950. Our goal for 1951 is 25 per cent.

On the inside cover of this issue of the Magazine you will find listed the names of the 1951 Class Agents. These men have unselfishly accepted this service. In early April you will receive a letter from your Class Agent. Do your part by giving him an immediate response. We realize that you, like all of us, are constantly besieged by requests for money, but we are sure a little serious consideration on your part will lead to the conclusion that the Washington and Lee Alumni Fund rates a high position on your annual giving program.

ROTC for Campus

vious military training, will be eligible for the first year of basic work if he can show a legitimate academic program which will take four years to complete. For example, Dean Gilliam points out, a student who is now a sophomore in academic school and plans to take three years of law following the 1951-52 school session will be permitted to participate in the program. He indicates, however, that all present rules are subject to change, depending upon the action of Congress on current proposals affecting the ROTC program.

The University is awaiting information regarding the possibility of immediate registration of students who wish to return to the campus next Fall. "While no official encouragement has been given us to anticipate that boys entering as freshmen next Fall can register in advance for the ROTC, some hope has been expressed that such registration may possibly be available for men already on the campus who have had previous official military training," Dean Gilliam states.

Although it will be the first military training program undertaken by the University in peacetime, this will not be the first ROTC unit formed here. An ROTC unit was established at Washington and Lee following the declaration of war by the United States in 1917. However, this was an emergency program which became the Student Army Training Corps in 1918. The Reserve Officers Training Corps, as it is organized at present, was not established until 1919-20.

Ranny Rouse, Builder

Randolph D. Rouse, B. S. '39, is taking a big part in Northern Virginia's house building boom. Just three years ago he started from scratch and today he has three companies of his own, is building a $2,000,000 housing project in Fairfax County and is planning another. Washington and Lee gave him schooling in business administration; the Navy a "postgraduate" course in such work as planning advance base facilities, and Northern Virginia a big market for houses. Today he is employing about 200 workers, is building 270 housing units and is making plans for about 200 more. The houses range in price from $10,000 to $20,000. He borrows a couple of millions—then goes out to help his men do the work. This work, from ditch-digging to running a bulldozer, is the part he says he likes best. After graduation here in 1939 he worked for a time with the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company and later with the duPont rayon plant at Waynesboro, Virginia. He joined the Navy in 1942.

He recently gave a most interesting talk on his business experience to the local chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, professional commerce fraternity, and was initiated as the first honorary member of the chapter. Address: Valley Vista Apartments, 2032 Belmont Road, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Robert E. Eschan is now associated with his father in the retail jewelry business, located in the Daniel Boone Hotel Building in Charleston, West Virginia.

W. S. Allen is now publishing The Valley Leader at Narrows, Virginia, having sold the New Castle Record. Bill was the subject of a feature story in the magazine section of the Richmond, Virginia, Times-Dispatch on December 31, telling how Bill bought and converted a filling station (with a supply of gasoline on hand) into a newspaper plant. Bill is quoted as saying, "As a filling station operator I'm a flop, but I hope to do better with our new publication." The piece carried pix of Bill and Mrs. Allen, and of the converted station. Bill writes, "My wife and I are fast becoming all-around printers, although we have two men in the shop. I do the advertising and bigger story coverage, etc., and Mabel is my business manager, circulation manager and local and social writer. We put on our first issue on February 1; it surely looks good to see 'Volume 1, Number 1' on the front page."

Alfred K. Walter has joined the staff of the Lancaster, Pennsylvania, New Era. His first post-graduate job was with the Greensboro, North Carolina, Record. He writes, "I have been south of that line longer than I realized; I can hardly understand the folks here and I was born in the next county."
