College Trustees

(THE PRESIDENT'S PAGE)

RECENTLY I was struck with curious force by a pair of sentences occurring in an article furnished by Margaret Culkin Banning to Survey Graphic. They read: "Students leave college thinking affectionately of the faculty. But what student ever leaves thinking affectionately of a trustee?"

"Is it possible?" I said. No, not for Washington and Lee. Yet my experience leads me to observe that of various American groupings, college trustees are sometimes least understood for the full measure of their service, for their full contribution.

* * *

Since this session started, a trustee committee met here on the campus. The four trustees who were present traveled respectively 100, 300, 400, and 500 miles to attend that committee meeting. For at least two of them the occasion involved more than one day's time. They are all men of large professional or business committals. They lost the time from their profession or business, came here—incidentally at their own expense—gave careful, patient consideration to the affairs of the institution committed to them and their colleagues.

It struck me that if Washington and Lee had been compelled to pay for the services of these men, as clients or business firms would have paid for such services,—well, the budget for the current year would certainly be out of balance.

* * *

They sat in careful study of probably twenty matters, some of them phases of relatively great importance, some of them matters of minor consequence. To every detail these men brought their fine conscience, their best intelligence, often their expert professional knowledge. No client, however much he may have been disposed to pay, could have commanded more of what these men had to give. Yet this was just a routine committee meeting.

At about the same time, another trustee, executive of one of the truly notable American businesses, was making a comprehensive study of a small group of endowment securities, a little lot of odds and ends, things that possibly should be kept, possibly should be sold; and if these were sold, then came the question of what should be bought. I remember that one item was made up of seven shares of a certain stock, a little fraction of a gift to us. Yet this busy and most important man of the world was going over this portfolio with utmost diligence.

This enumeration of the unselfish devotion and helpfulness of trustees might be carried on indefinitely. I recall, for example, a committee meeting during the summer when the Governor of a state laid down all duties of his office that he might give that full day to the duties of this committee of Washington and Lee directors.

I know one of our Board, an extremely busy man, for whom a trip to a meeting means a minimum of three days out of his office. I could tell a somewhat similar story of every member of the present board.

All trustees, I suppose, if they have a sense of honor, an imperative to keep faith, are anxious to do their duty. They are mindful of the trust involved, of the benefactors who have left hard-earned gifts in sweet confidence that the successive governors of the institution will administer wisely the benefaction, of great traditions handed down through the generations and enriched by sacrifices of the generations that must be sustained. It is truly no light obligation accepted when one becomes a trustee. The very word is a solemn, commanding, spiritually imperious implication.

* * *

Yet all who love Washington and Lee realize, I am sure, that not only its progress but—what is sometimes more important—the maintenance of its strength and the steadfastness of its purpose are in the last analysis to be credited to the board of its ultimate control. It is a matter of great fortune for this institution that it has such a board.

Eighty-two Sons of Alumni Enrolled

WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY officially reopened its doors on the sixteenth of September, 1940, when the freshmen, returning from the now-traditional camp in Arnold's Valley swarmed into their new dormitory which was not quite finished but ready to receive them. For the next few days they and the upper-classmen registered, and then there was the usual opening ceremony in the gymnasium on Friday, September 20, which meant that once again this university was in session.

Like everyone and everything else, Washington and Lee was under the shadow of war. The registration did not fall off badly, but it was far from increasing as young men turned their eyes toward Conscription, ROTC, Naval Reserves, the Air Corps and the Marines. It was pointed out dramatically by Dean Robert H. Tucker that up until May 7 of this year, applications were far ahead of even last year which was particularly good. After that date they steadily fell off. Realizing the need of National Defense, and recognizing the blackness of the hour, the college strongly hopes for an ROTC unit next year.

Figures show about the usual number in the college group. There are 931 students in school this year as the session begins of which 288 are new men. The Law School records 104. This will give the university an enrollment which well accords with the ideal of 900-925 set some years ago.

Geographically these boys come from almost everywhere as they usually do.

The freshman camp put in its best year in history with a total membership of 144, who swam, hiked, played games, and learned about the fellowship they were about to enter. Those who watched the thermometer on the nights of the encampment believed that the whole group would be severely frost-bitten, but Frank J. Gilliam, dean of students and director of the camp, reports that the blankets were sufficient and that only the people in town noticed the cold. Outstanding events were an exciting baseball game in which the freshmen beat the councillors 18-17 and the remarkable performance of Bill Guthrie, brother of Charles Guthrie, 1939, in the name contest wherein Bill remembered 139 out of the 139 names of those in camp submitted to him.

The changes in the faculty this year are numerous, but most of them are not permanent, as many of the regular faculty are on leave of absence for one year or more.

Charles Porterfield Light, professor of Law is in Washington where he has been called, in the war-time emergency, for work in the judge-advocate's office.

George Junkin Irwin, assistant professor in the department of modern languages, will be studying at Columbia this year.

Lemuel Lee Hill, assistant professor in the department of biology is taking a year's leave for further study.

Robert Haynes Gray, assistant professor of Economics and Commerce is to study at Columbia.

Richard Powell Carter, instructor in Journalism, will be at the same university for further work in his field.

Harry Melvin Philpott, who has been carrying on the work of Religious Director, is to take graduate work at Yale.

George Stuyvesant Jackson, assistant professor of English, will be studying at Columbia.

Filling vacancies on the faculty for 1940 are the following:

Lewis W. Adams, who was instructor at Washington and Lee from 1926-1929 and instructor at Cornell from 1923-1924 will undertake part of the duties formerly performed by George Winston Smith, and will be assistant professor of Economics. Recently Mr. Adams has been head of the statistical department of a New York brokerage firm. Mr. Adams has a master's degree from the University of North Carolina.

Taking the place of Mr. Irwin will be G. Francis Drake of Ohio who will be instructor in French. Mr. Drake is a graduate of Princeton.

Taking the place of Mr. Jackson in the English department is George Foster, who has been studying for a Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina.

George E. Hobbs, B.S. in Commerce and LL.B. of the University of North Carolina, will be instructor in

Plenty of Snap in Old Rubber Arm

BEING a baseball fan from way back, we must admit regret that interest in college sports has shifted so radically from baseball to football. Of course football is a great game and full of thrills and drama, but there was never anything in football like two strikes and three balls and a man on base and the score tied 0-0. (Obviously we go back to the day when every hit wasn't a home run.)

This article is a sort of baseball reminiscence—the story of a man who pitched for Washington and Lee in 1908, kept right on pitching for other teams, and is not only still pitching at the age of 54 but is doing a fine job of it; so, since no football player could last that long, we baseball fans can still claim something—even in the fall when the papers are so full of the latest college football stars that it's getting so we can hardly find the World's Series!

So this afternoon we were looking through some old Calyxes and for the 1908 issue we read, "again baseball had held the center of student interest"; but the 1909 edition commented: "baseball has again vied with some success against the enthusiasm for football."

All this was prophetic, but it has little to do with Thomas Edward ("Lefty") George who has outlasted a lot of things in the sports world and might even outlast football. In 1908, he and Harry Rechtenwald came to Washington and Lee as pitcher and catcher respectively, George "standing the batters of the Southern colleges on their respective ears."

In 1940—August 16 to be exact—"Lefty" was still standing them on their ears. On that date, at the age of 54, he pitched for the York (Pennsylvania) club in the New York-Pennsylvania League against Trenton and won by a score of 3-2. And the game went twelve innings! It has been frequently said of Mr. George that he has a "rubber arm," and it's a pity that pitchers nowadays haven't inherited one. He used to pitch game after game and win it without feeling fatigue afterward; and at his present age he emerged from his winning battle against the Trenton Senators, saying, "I'm feeling fine.

I'm not the least bit tired and there's no sign of soreness in the old arm."

The old arm has had plenty of practice. "Lefty" George broke into organized baseball in 1904—thirty-four years ago—with the Pittsburgh Collegians. If a member of the team, which was managed by Dick Guy, wasn't a collegian, the manager would make him one; so George was sent to East Liberty Academy and then to Washington and Lee. He subsequently pitched for Altoona, the Boston Nationals, the Trenton Tri-State Leaguers, York, Indianapolis, the St. Louis and Cleveland Americans, Toledo, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Columbus, Boston again, and Minneapolis. He quit league baseball in 1921 to pitch for the York Chain Company team and settled down there to raise his family. In 1923, he returned to organized baseball with York in the NYPA League and in the next 11 years won something like 150 games. In 1925, he won 27 and lost 7. In 1924 he struck out 161 batters for a league record. He also set a mark of 16 straight wins and 46 consecutive scoreless innings. When York lost its franchise in 1933, he returned to the sandlots, and last year he pitched in a county league. Now he's back fooling 'em in the league again.

According to the 1909 Calyx the Washington and Lee season had not been too encouraging in spite of a splendid flurry of victories after mid-season, but they set off this slight note of discouragement by a note about the re-

Thomas Edward (Lefty) George

The Ugly Club

By JAS. LEWIS HOWE

ALL WORK and no play makes Jack a dull boy" was a proverb taken seriously to heart by the students of the later days of Washington College and the early days of Washington and Lee University. Something was needed to relieve the tedium of Commencement Week, with its five days of speech-making beginning with the Baccalaureate Sermon on Sunday and ending with the Address before the Literary Societies, following the Graduation exercises on Thursday. The UGLY CLUB was one phase of the effervescence of some four hundred students, from all parts of the South, at the close of nine months of pretty severe college work.

On April Fool's Day, 1867, a group of students gathered to select by "common consent" nine speakers under the name of UGLY CLUB, who should stage during Commencement Week a celebration, humorous and satirical, to relieve the more serious exercises of the Week.

There is extant no account of the first celebration, but it met with such approval on the part of the students that for a decade it became a feature of "Finals." The speakers were denominated; Ugly Man, Pretty Man, Vain Man, Ladies' Man, Lazy Man, The Blow, Little Man, The Bore, and Critic. The only glimpse we have of the celebration of 1868 is furnished by Senator Wickham: "Nelse Campbell, afterwards the distinguished Circuit Judge in West Virginia, Hon. Nelson Campbell, was 'The Baby.' He weighed about 290, was six feet four, and was given a stick of candy just about as tall as he was, with a curved handle."

Regarding the next celebration, that of June, 1869, we are more fortunate, especially in having a photograph, which is here reproduced, of the participants. This has been furnished and the individuals identified by Senator Wickham. We also have records in the Southern Collegian, which was just completing its Volume 1, and in the Lexington Gazette, which gave a full account of the exercises. The Collegian of April 3, 1869, says: "THE UGLY CLUB. In accordance with an ancient practice the election for the honours of the UGLY CLUB was held on the evening of the 1st of April, which resulted as follows:

- Ugly Man.....Frank Page. (a 5th year man)
- Pretty Man.....Edmund Berkeley. (a senior)
- Vain Man.....Gabriel Santini. (a freshman)
- Ladies' Man.....J. Sheppard Clark. (a junior)
- Lazy Man.....S. Z. Ammen. (a junior)
- The Blow.....John Barlow. (a sophomore)

* His name is so given by Senator Wickham, and also in the Catalogs of 1867 and 1869; in Catalog of 1868 it is given, J. Sheppard Clarke; in that of 1870 as James Shepherd Clark, and in that of 1871 as J. S. Clark.

 The Bore..... ————— ?
 Critic.....Hill Carter. (a junior)

“These gentlemen are now left to their own reflections. If they wish to be funny in their speeches let them devote about six hours every day to wit, and by June they will become intolerably so.”

Drawing from the rather flowery account in the Gazette, we may obtain a glimpse of a typical “celebration.” “Mr. Gurley, the President, introduced with grace and humour Mr. Frank Page, the ‘Ugly Man,’ and his seven confreres of the honoured nine. How Mr. Page defended the large and respectable class he had been elected to represent; how Wit sparkled and Humour smiled, and Truth spoke, could only be well told in Mr. P’s words, and then only with Mr. P. to tell it. The ‘Pretty Man,’ Mr. Edmund Berkeley, invoked the Muse, and evidently she could do nothing less and nothing else than Crockett’s coon, ‘come down.’ * * * The ‘Little Man,’ Mr. R. W. Preston, proclaimed himself the pet of Waltz & Finster, (their advertisement in the Collegian offers ‘A large supply of Wines, Liquors, Havana, German and Domestic Cigars, Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, &c.’), and declared a purpose to spend a season at Saratoga and Newport, give himself to New York during the autumnal months, sojourn amid the savannas of the South in the winter, visit Paris, and settle at—Jacktown! * * * we may take up without delay the case of the ‘Lazy Man,’ though none but a lineal descendant of the Welsh giants would undertake such a thing with good hope of success. Mr. S. Z. Ammen has the proportions of an Alderman or Abbot, and proves beyond a reasonable doubt that a man need not forswear their potatoes in order to be fat. We hope he will always be sure he is right before he becomes the advocate of any cause: for the logic of Monday evening begets the fear that he may make the worse appear the better reason.”

It may be noted that Mr. Ammen, who while in College was considered “the most intellectual collegian,” became later the distinguished editor of the Baltimore Sun; J. Sheppard Clarke became editor of El Comercio, a Spanish business organ published in New York; and the father of Gabriel Santini some three years later founded the Santini Medal for the best essay in the Southern Collegian.

The celebration of 1870 was distinguished by a poem by the Ugly Man, Mr. Noah B. Feagin, entitled “Maid and Beef of Athens,” worth quoting in part:

“Beef of Athens, ere we part,
 Give, oh, give my muse a start;
 Let her now inspire me well,
 And of thy toughness nobly tell.
 Hear my song, consummate bore;
 Soon my jaws shall ache no more.

By those cattle unconfined,
 So lean and lame, so old and blind;
 By the bones that hold their meat
 Which is far too tough to eat;
 By these I vow forevermore
 Rockbridge beef I’ll eat no more.

Let it be boil’d, bak’d or fri’d,
 Stew’d or hash’d, hoof, horn and hide,
 Flavor’d to a high extent
 With every kind of condiment
 Still, I vow as once before,
 Rockbridge beef I’ll eat no more.

Beef of Athens, I am done,
 A word that you have never known,—
 Dun or raw, what boots it now,
 Since I leave this tough old cow
 To the student and cadet
 Whose hunger’s keen,—teeth well set:
 You bet.”

The celebration of this year was marred by the collapse of the speaker’s stand by the crowd pressing against it, and several of the small boys close to it were injured, one having his leg broken. Happily none of the lamps used for illumination exploded.

In 1871, the election meeting of April 1st was described in the Collegian as decidedly boisterous; unfortunately no account of the celebration can be found, but that it must have been pretty rank may be inferred from a resolution of the Faculty that hereafter all speeches must be submitted to them before delivery. That something was evidently ‘in the air’ may be guessed from a reference in the Collegian a propos of the Ugly Club election of 1872 wherein we read: “We would advise the speakers to refrain from old jokes upon the town, the old maids, and Rockbridge beef. We would also request of the gentlemen to be as careful as they can in their jokes. Nothing which approaches in the least to indelicacy should be allowed by them to go into their speeches. It does not take. * * *” However the resolution of the Faculty and the suggestions of the Collegian seem to have been of no avail, and the 1872 celebration resulted two days after in the disbarment by the Faculty of the ‘Ladies’ Man’ from the University. Two years later, however, at the earnest solicitation of the Alumni Association of his home city the censure was removed.

The following year, 1873, there seems to have been no celebration of the Ugly Club, but in 1874 the Club was revived and for two Commencements was a very attractive if perhaps rather tame feature of Finals. Of the 1875 celebration the Collegian says: "it was the best that we have had for years,—speeches short and funny. May its repetition in coming years be as successful, is the wish of all." It did not, however, inspire sufficient interest to bring about a celebration in 1876, and while one was held in 1877, it was not considered of sufficient importance for the Collegian to devote over fifteen lines to it. The 1877 celebration was the swan-song of the Ugly Club; the attendance at the University was rapidly approaching an all-time low, which was reached in 1881, when only 96 students were enrolled. Several of the Greek Letter Fraternities had surrendered their Charters, there were not enough students to go around, and all extra-curriculum activities waned. Nothing resembling the Ugly Club has since appeared upon the campus. For ten years it played its part, at times well, at times ill, often affording innocent amusement but more often with too much sting and vulgarity, ill suited to the traditions of Washington and Lee. Requiescat in pace!

"Such Is the Kingdom" by Tom Sugrue, 1930

SUCH IS THE KINGDOM. By Thomas Sugrue. New York: Henry Holt and Co., 1940.

Alumni who remember how Tom Sugrue revived the Southern Collegian, edited the Calyx, wrote the Troubadour shows, and did any other job with the pen, serious or comic, that needed to be done during his four years at Lexington, will not be surprised that he is a professional writer or that he has just published one of the most beautifully written novels of modern times. The story of how he came to write it is all compact of tragedy, romance, and melodrama. On the Herald Tribune Tom learned to discipline his once too flowery style. Eventually he became Associate Editor of the American Magazine, was publishing in several class magazines, had ghosted a best-selling travel book, was making a reputation and ten thousand a year.

Then, when he was not quite thirty, fate struck him with her heaviest artillery. He was smitten down with arthritis, unable to get out of bed, unable to move his legs or his left arm. But the brain and the right arm remained, and he wrote with a pencil, in continual pain, a book the leading quality of which is its gusto, its vitality, its magnificent affirmation of life.

Sugrue is Irish, and the book is a story of the Irish people on Kelly Hill in his home town about 1910. The central character is a little boy, Jamie O'Mahaney, who, in his seventh year, awakens to the facts of God, and sin, and death, and love. The academic critic might be tempted to say that, sympathetic and penetrating as is the treatment of Jamie, the spotlight is not sufficiently focused on him. But the truth is that as Atlanta is the heroine of Gone with the Wind, so Kelly Hill is the protagonist of Such Is the Kingdom. The magnificent midnight fight of Dermot O'Mahaney and Potatoes Burke, with The Black O'Flaherty and Meadowlegs Fahy as audience; the ironic meditation of Dr. Delehanty on the respective virtues of his old mare and his wife, "The fairest note that was ever plucked from the strings of the harp of Maguire"; the rich account of the wake of the O'Mahaney, where the characters of the whole community perform at their best until they are roared down by the crashing epithets of that golden-hearted girl, Mrs. Dirty-mouth McCluskey—these are the things one remembers most vividly, and in them little Jamie has a minor part. And, faith, why not, with him nothing but a child?

The gifts of Sugrue are those of the very great writer. The first is for characterization. The reader of this book will simply not forget Whip McVey, or Mallick O'Mahaney, or Blackie O'Flaherty, or J. Francis Corrigan, Undertaker, or Martin Brady, Saloon-keeper, or Wake-master Dineen, or Dr. Delehanty, or Aunt Judy, or Mrs. McCluskey, or even Gumshoe Gannon of the police. They are created beings who live and breathe and are unforgettable.

The second gift of Sugrue, which he shares with the greatest artists, is his profound sense of the tragic destiny and the comic richness of mankind. The book is full of comedy, low and high, and yet it broods upon ultimate things.

A third great gift of Sugrue's is the gusto, the vitality, the zest with which he treats his theme and brings it alive.

And the fourth quality is his prose style. With the single exception of Steinbeck, he writes the best prose this reviewer has seen in a decade. The efflorescence of his younger style has become a restrained richness or a whetted blade, according to the occasion.

One well may say with Stephen Vincent Benet, who read the book in manuscript for the publishers:

"I think it is a highly promising piece of work—more than promising—genuine and human. It has both the dirt and the high imagination. . . . I am all for Mr. Sugrue."

Twenty Years a Mayor

DOWN in Gulfport, Mississippi, there lives a Washington and Lee alumnus who was known in college, according to the 1915 Calyx, as "G-port Joe." Today there must be few dissenting voices in calling him Gulfport's outstanding citizen.

The above-mentioned Calyx speaks of him as that "unusual combination" of a good athlete and a good student, and the ability he showed as a law student here from 1913-1915 has certainly gone along with him in later life, for today he is not only the operator of the Coca Cola Bottling Company in his home city, but he owns and operates a successful military school, is one of the directors of a college, and, to top it all off, has been Mayor of Gulfport continuously for sixteen years! It is surely no surprise that he has been awarded cups for outstanding community service by both the Elks and the Chamber of Commerce.

Joseph William Milner was born in Columbiana, Alabama, on the 23rd day of January, 1882. His family moved from that town when he was a few years old to Anniston, Alabama, then to Gulfport, when he was thirteen. He went through the Gulfport High School, three years at the Marion Military Institute at Marion, Alabama, and then entered Washington and Lee. For the university he played baseball and football while also making a fine record studying law. He was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma and of White Friars. He took his LL.B. and then passed the Mississippi and Alabama bar examinations. For a few months in 1916 he was a lawyer, having formed a legal partnership with the firm of Saxon and Acuff in Shelby County, Alabama. He was then called home by the illness of his father, after whose death in 1916 he took over the Coca Cola business which he has operated ever since.

In 1924 he was elected Mayor of Gulfport, which town has not wished to select another one in sixteen years of good government. This year he was elected for another four-year term without opposition.

In 1934 he became interested in the Gulf Coast Military Academy, a military high school, which annually enrolls some three hundred and fifty boys. Mr. Milner is now president of the company operating the school, and chairman of the board. The military academy is an unusually good one, having an honor rating with the United States War Department. It might be added that the academy sends some of its graduates each year to Washington and Lee.

The Hon. Joseph William Milner, 1915

You might think that the interests listed above would be enough for any one man, or even two, but Mayor Milner's activities do not stop there by any means. He is a director of Gulf Park College which is situated in Gulfport and is a junior college of high standing and a nationwide patronage. He is also a director in the Hancock Bank; and charter member and past president of the Gulfport Kiwanis Club. In addition he is a member of the executive board of the American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages, the national organization of the bottling industry. And he still has time to watch football games, play golf, and go fishing and hunting occasionally!

An award for community service was certainly merited by this citizen, a credit to his city and his alma mater.

W. F. MOORE, 1892, was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas by Governor O'Daniel last spring. He is to serve the remainder of the term of the late C. M. Cureton and will then stand for election.

Mr. Moore, a descendant of one of Texas' oldest families, took a law degree from the University of Texas. At Washington and Lee he was a Latin scholar, at the University of Texas a debater and incidentally the founder of Texas' first football team. For forty-five years he practiced law in the town of Paris and gained statewide recognition for his work as leading counsel in the famous McDonald case in which he recovered more than a million dollars for the University of Texas.

New Buildings

THOSE who noticed the story in our issue of last May concerning the rebuilding of the library and the two dormitories may wish to know how the work is progressing. The answer right now would seem to be "not too well"—because of circumstances beyond the university's control. For one thing, supplies were held up during the summer, and the contractors were not able to get material when it was needed. More important, however, was the weather, which in Lexington this summer is said to have consisted almost entirely of rain.

However, when we returned here this fall, we could see unmistakable signs that a great deal had been accomplished even at that. The library dome—its most characteristic part—has disappeared, and the building has grown to about twice its former size. There are new pillars going up on the campus side where the front steps used to be. The inside, however, appears to contain practically nothing at all. (This was in September.)

The library would have been farther along, but it was obvious that whatever else happened the dormitory would have to be finished by the opening of school unless we wanted to continue freshman camp on the baseball field. Hence the main effort has been with the dormitory construction. You would be amazed at the result if you were to stand right now on Washington Street where it goes down back of the gymnasium and see the really vast-appearing stretch of building caused by the connecting wing between the two old dorms. This wall has a portico in the middle where an arch brings one into what will be the attractive new courtyard. All in all, it looks fine, and the rooms, modern and attractive, ought to be an immense improvement from the point of view of their future occupants.

The only trouble we can report is that to dry out the new plaster, the college heat has had to be turned on in the dorms and everywhere else, and if you can imagine working in an office in Lexington in early September with a radiator blazing at your elbow, you will know where we are now!

K. I. MCKAY, 1904, was elected chairman of the Board of Trustees of the University of Tampa last spring. Since being admitted to the Florida bar in 1904, Mr. McKay has been a prominent attorney in Tampa and has taken a keen interest in the university's development.

DR. WILLIAM MOSELEY BROWN, 1914, was the Washington and Lee representative at the inauguration of the new president of Hunter College,

About Our Cover

THE COVER of this issue of the Alumni Magazine is the first published picture of the new Dormitories. It was taken by student Tom Fleming. We hope to follow this with both interior and exterior views of the Dormitories and the new McCormick Library, which will be ready for occupancy January first. The frontispiece is a closeup of the center arch of the dormitories.

IT'S NOT SURPRISING for a man to capitalize on his college ball-playing after he graduates, but usually it's done in the big leagues. Apparently not given to the usual, however, Kenneth Routon, 1932, much better known when he was at Washington and Lee as "Big Island," or simply "Big," seems to have used his outstanding ability as a shortstop to get into the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

After graduation, "Big Island" became player-manager for the Craddock-Terry team in Lynchburg, and the story is that while this club was playing against the F.B.I. team, the G-Men were so impressed with his ability that they asked him to play for them. He accepted the offer, took a night-school course in law, passed the District of Columbia bar exams, and was officially named an agent of the Bureau. After a six weeks' course of training at Quantico, he will join the department.

DAVID D. JOHNSON, 1921, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, who is vice-president of the Republic Pipe Line Company and Duval Pipe Line Company, secretary-treasurer of the Hiawatha Oil and Gas Company, and a director of these and other oil concerns, was recently elected to the Board of Directors of the Colonial Trust Company, a Pittsburgh bank.

Commemorative Plates

The Plates which were ordered last December from the Wedgwood Company in England have not been received in this country. The samples were received in the Alumni Office during the summer. We have been informed by the Wedgwood representatives in Boston that the plates are being manufactured and will be delivered just as soon as war conditions make this possible. They are still receiving Wedgwood china, and assure us that they expect delivery.

The Generals of 1940

By LEA BOOTH, Director of Sports Information

JUST as baseball leagues through the nation split their seasons into two halves, so might the 1940 football Generals theoretically divide their high-voltage, ten-game schedule. With a count of two and three booked on the Washington and Lee sports ledger (including one foul), the Generals, to persist with our baseball jargon, are far from out and should reach home standing up. The mythical home we mention deals with final percentages of victories against defeats.

Any sports scribe can apply his biased fingers to the keyboard and say that neither scores, nor the statistics, tell the truth about a ball game. Believe us, that may be even more accentuated in regard to the lurid record of this year's W. and L. football forces.

For example we offer the outstanding "gyp" ever accorded a Washington and Lee football team—that suffered at the hands of an official in the fully-publicized George Washington University game at Homecoming.

Coaches here have tried to forget it, have quite logically insisted that the team put it away and face the grim future, but nevertheless, the incident involving the referee's decision against the Generals on October 12 is still being debated in Lexington's Monday Morning Coaches Society.

CAPTAIN JACK MANGAN
Center

As highly incensed over the adverse verdict of Referee Dutch Eberts of Catholic University as anyone directly or indirectly involved were the several alumni who have shown definite interest with written protests which have reached Lexington.

For those scattered alumni who were not fortunate enough to have witnessed the terrific encounter with GW's fine eleven on Homecoming Day, it might be appropriate to briefly review the facts as seen from the press box, as gathered later in authoritative conversation, and as depicted by the infallible motion pictures of the game.

Shifted from the tailback post to a position at the so-called wingback (listed in line-ups as Left Halfback), Dick Pinck, the Paterson, N. J., runner, stabbed a pass from sophomore Johnny Ligon in the second quarter and sprinted seventy-odd yards for the first touchdown. In the third period, the superior weight and reserve strength of the potent Colonials began to smother the Generals' fire. Following two rapid GW touchdowns and trailing by 7-13, Pinck recovered a fumble on the visitors' thirty-yard line and the second W-L scoring drive was culminated when burly Frank Socha, the Generals' nervy sophomore fullback, battered through the line for the tying touchdown. Socha, cool as one of Doc Flick's home-grown cucumbers, booted his second placement for the extra point.

The Colonials, paced by an official timekeeper who announced four-and-a-half minutes to play, launched a power-laden drive on their own 35 and three minutes later were knocking hard at the Generals' door, finally scoring on a 23-yard off-tackle dash by Ed Wilamoski.

Receiving the kickoff with one minute remaining, the loyal determination which Coach Tex Tilson always seems to be able to instill into his men began to assert itself. Their line-up studded with reserve material, the dramatic Generals started a drive deep in their own territory, and abetted by several lengthy penalties forced on the GWs for their own reckless roughness, Tilson's club bounded right back into the ball game.

Joe Baugher, the stubby-legged reserve tailback, rocketed a sharp pass to Simmons Trueheart, the Generals' veteran end, for a thirteen-yard gain and a first down on the GW three-yard line.

Dan Justice, the Lynchburg lad who quite appropriately scored the first touchdown last year in his home city's beautiful new stadium, arose from obscurity into sensational fame on the following two plays.

With bare seconds remaining, "the Chief" wormed through from the three-yard line but both sides were off-side and a new play was ordered with the game officially over. (Note: The fact that time remained for one play previous to the offsides made another effort legal). So Justice—and the name is ironical here—set himself for another try.

The pass was good and the Lynchburger drove straight into his own right guard, dove head-first over the mass and landed in the end zone with the head linesman rushing in with arm raised to indicate the score.

But (and don't we hate that word)! Referee Eberts refused to flash the same signal and came in to veto the decision, calling for the ball on the one-foot line, later (and much too much later) bellowing that Justice's knee had touched the ground and the ball was downed automatically just short of scoring territory.

The usually serene collegiate atmosphere which all alumni can remember as Lexington, was stirred to terrific intensity. Motion pictures were rushed through the developing process and for all amount of figuring, not one single observer has been able to detect a flaw in the final touchdown drive of one Dan Justice.

Governor Price, after viewing the movies at a recent meeting of the Richmond alumni chapter and after talking with the calm, quiet-spoken fullback personally, issued a public statement to a Richmond newspaper defying the official's ruling. Chauncey Durden, sports editor of The Times-Dispatch in Richmond, ran the picture off for himself on four occasions and rendered the same comment. Cawthon Bowen, sports editor of the nearby Roanoke Times, carried a series of still photos taken from the movie film, showing foundation for the unprecedented "crying" which emanated from the W. and L. campus.

But in spite of all manner of maneuvering the issue, the game has been docketed, once and for all, as George Washington 20, W. and L. 14.

Progressing chronologically from there, fortunately the mental effect of the fierce battle waged against the opponents from Washington was favorable. The last-ditch fighters from Lexington moved into Richmond the following Saturday for their first conference and "Big Six" argument of the season—the all-important Richmond University battle.

Thwarted in several previous scoring attempts, the Generals called upon the same Frank Socha who had performed so heroically in the GW contest. After Dick Pinck had engulfed a Richmond pass on the Spiders' 40-yard line with three minutes to play, the Boys in Blue pilfered the Richmond defensive for several aerial gains down to the three-yard line.

Socha, glorified on the preceding Saturday, tore onto the playing field like an enraged bull let out of his pasture. Carrying instructions to bang the line until it gave, Socha smashed through a hole but the Generals were set back to the eight-yard line on a penalty. Johnny Ligon, who had directed the passing attack which set up the scoring possibility, let the leather slide from his fingers and recovered back on the sixteen.

Into the game came Justice, likewise sharer in the spotlight the week before. Justice actually did put his knee on the ground at this point, and rubbed his hands for the pass from center. With Justice holding, Socha arched a field goal from the 26-yard line and the Generals were in, 3-0, with forty seconds left in the ball game.

As a result, a tired and shell-shocked squad entered the VPI classic billed as the "never a dull climax" Generals. But many more photo finishes and no ordinary nerves could withstand it.

Re-tracing the steps taken by Tilson's 1940 edition, the squad opened on September 21 with an impressive 26-0 triumph over a perennially scrappy Hampden-Sydney team.

On the following Saturday, Vanderbilt's vastly-improved bruisers were forced to an aerial game before out-distancing the game Generals, 19-0. Vandy tallied with a minute remaining in the first half after being battled right off their own ground, and this score was maneuvered only by a long pass into the end zone.

Kentucky's alert Wildcats victimized the courageous Blue fighters, 47-12, when the Generals were unfortunate enough to catch the flying Kentuckians on the day they were destined to "get right."

But, here is where the score does not indicate the drift of the tide. The out-classed Generals counted twice against the Wildcats' first-string eleven, something that neither Vanderbilt, George Washington, St. Xavier nor ily been a "ripper." Two touchdowns, both by the barest of margins within twenty seconds, might have demoralized any other football club, but a Lexington, Ky., newspaper described the situation with an observant headline crediting the Generals with having "Put Up a Good Scrap."

Washington and Lee is facing the toughest schedule in a decade this year with a squad numbering 22 sophomores among its total 38 men. The coaching staff has shown untold patience in developing these sophs into front-line attackers. As one battered rookie expressed it, "we may not have won a lot of 'em, but we have learned some football that might pay big dividends later in the season." And that is, in this writer's humble opinion, an able summary of the facts. Meeting Vanderbilt, Kentucky, and George Washington on successive week-ends might easily have wrecked anybody's football team. But not the Generals. They came right back to gain a top-flight position in the state and Southern Conference the following week-end in Richmond and they'll be in there battling right up through the final minute of the Maryland game, November 30.

Sophomores must learn the hard way. Many local observers have commented on the terrific pressure under which the squad has worked. In lieu of the schedule, the Generals buckled down on September 2, dug in and stuck

Baldwin-Wallace were able to accomplish. Two stirring goalward marches featured the pair of W. & L. touchdowns, and had it not been for a score in the last ten seconds of the first half and a touchdown jaunt by Noah Mullins, Kentucky's great halfback, on the opening kickoff of the second half the ball game might have eas-to its guns in one of the most active campaigns ever remembered here. Gruelling scrimmages have brought injuries but how other than by scrimmaging could the schedule be attempted? The boys have digested their difficulties and never uttered a murmur. It should "pay dividends before this season is over."

Remaining games after the VPI contest at Lynchburg will send the Big Blue scampering across the Alleghenies to Charleston on November 2 for the annual affair with West Virginia's tough Mountaineers. The following week-end they go to Charlottesville to renew the rivalry with, needless to say, the University of Virginia. Thence to Chattanooga and a game with Sewanee. An open date follows before the finale with Maryland on November 30 at College Park.

Prior to games with Maryland and Virginia Tech, Washington and Lee's undefeated and untied Brigadiers had posted victories over Staunton Military, Virginia frosh, and the Richmond frosh.

Eddie Marx, an exceedingly promising tailback from New Britain, Conn., home of Captain Jack Mangan, John Rulevich, Bill Gray and Roy Fabian of the varsity, was chosen to captain the Brigs in the opener at S.M.A. Marx was the recipient of a grave bit of misfortune when he broke his leg in the first quarter of the game, thereby retiring until spring practice begins.

Guard

Frank Di Loreto, one of the best looking tackle prospects in recent years who also lists New Britain as home, was on the receiving end of a well-placed exhibition of clipping in the Virginia contest and has missed recent sessions. Paul Cavaliere is a third frosh footballer from New Britain.

General Items

Manager of this year's varsity is Jim Price, Jr., son of another distinguished W. and L. alumnus, Governor James H. Price of Virginia. . . . The varsity's Joe Baugher has a kid brother, Harry, performing brilliantly in the freshman backfield this year. . . . Jim Daves, a sophomore end, is a nephew of the colorful Ralph (Decoy) Daves who played end at W. & L. in '23, '24, '25. Uncle Ralph, who now manages the Lexington theaters, played side-by-side with Tex Tilson. . . . Among the new alumni are five members of last year's football squad. Captain Dick Boisseau, the all-state and all-Southern tackle, has just announced his engagement to his college romance partner, Miss Barbara Higgins of Front Royal who attended neighboring Hollins. Dick is working with the Federal Housing Administration in Washington. . . . Kelly Litteral, regular tackle on last year's squad, is working in Ashland, Ky. . . . Francis (Slugger) Sugrue, brother of W. and L.'s Tom Sugrue, is on the staff of The New York Herald-Tribune. . . . Jim Lindsey, the roly-poly all-state guard of the 1939 squad is back in town doing "graduate work" and playing pro football with the Roanoke club of the Dixie League. . . . Ronnie Thompson, halfback and captain of the '39 baseballers, is teaching and coaching all sports at the Hot Springs, Va., high school. . . . Balfour Mattox, a sophomore back, is a nephew of the famous Mattox brothers who helped give Washington and Lee a place in the athletic sun. . . . Captain Jack Mangan, the fiery little center whom coaches have considered the best in the state for two years, has made a large percentage of the tackles this year but nary a bad heave from center. His teammates swear by him.

In Memoriam

DR. JAMES HARDY DILLARD, of the class of 1876, died on the second of August, 1940, in Charlottesville. A nationally-known educator, he was chiefly noted for his work on behalf of the negro.

Dr. Dillard was born in Nansmond County, Virginia. After graduation with an M.A. degree, he was made assistant professor of mathematics at Washington and Lee and taught here from 1876-1877. After serving as principal of Rodman School of Norfolk and Norfolk Academy, he taught at Washington University in St. Louis and was dean of the academic colleges at Tulane from 1904-1907. He held honorary degrees from Washington and Lee, Tulane, and Harvard.

In 1937 Dr. Dillard was presented with the Roosevelt Medal for "sixty years of wise and devoted work in behalf of the American negro." He also held the Harmon Foundation gold medal, presented to him in 1928 with $500 for the promotion of good relations between the races and for improving negro educational facilities in the South.

He was president of the Jeans Foundation for the improvement of negro education from 1907-1931; director and later president of the John F. Slater funds, now known as the Southern Educational Foundation; founder of the Southern University Race Commission which assisted many negroes to obtain higher education; American representative on the East African Commission in 1914 which studied the negro in Africa; president of the National Conference of Church Clubs; member of the general education board; and rector of the College of William and Mary.

He is survived by his second wife and nine children.

MR. EDMUND DE MONTEL, who was a law school graduate of the class of 1879, died on the eleventh of February at his home in Hondo, Texas. He had practiced law in Medina County for more than sixty years. He was born in Castroville and practiced law there as well as in San Antonio before settling in Hondo. His legal specialty was land law, and he was an outstanding expert in this field.

He is survived by his wife, three sons, two daughters, and one sister.

* * *

STEPHEN D. TIMERLAKE, JR., 1895, died suddenly in Staunton, Virginia, on September 18. Since graduation

he had practiced law in Staunton, and was one of the best-known attorneys in western Virginia.

Mr. Timberlake was born in Staunton in 1874 and was prepared for college at the Staunton Military Academy of which he was president at the time of his death. Between 1904 and 1908 he was city attorney of Staunton, and he appeared in many leading state and federal cases. Of recent years, having abandoned the Democratic party, he was one of the most prominent leaders among the Jeffersonian Democrats. This fall he made the principal speech at a meeting of the Staunton-Augusta Willkie Democratic club.

He is survived by his widow and two children.

FEDERAL JUDGE HEARTSILL RAGON, LL.B. 1908, died suddenly at his home in Fort Smith, Arkansas, on September 15. He was fifty-five years old.

Judge Ragon was born in Dublin, Arkansas, and attended the College of the Ozarks and the University of Arkansas before taking his law degree here. After beginning practice in Clarksville, Arkansas, he ran successfully for the state legislature in which he served from 1911-1913. From 1916-1920 he was District Prosecuting Attorney. He was then elected, in 1923, to the United States House of Representatives where he served for ten years. When President Roosevelt appointed him to the federal bench for the Western District of Arkansas, he was a member of the House Ways and Means Committee and known as an expert on tax questions. He resigned to take the judgeship in 1933.

LEIGH WILLIAMS, 1932, one of the finest all-round athletes ever to attend Washington and Lee or any other school, died on July 11th at his home in Norfolk after a lingering illness.

No one who was in any way connected with Washington and Lee during his career here could fail to remember Leigh Williams. Those who were not in school at the time will recall him, perhaps, as an athlete only, but those who were here will think of him not only as a great athlete but as an exceptional personality.

For Washington and Lee he played end on the football team, center in basketball, first base in baseball; and ran the 440 in track; and when he graduated he had won 12 letters. A Norfolk columnist spoke of him as "the last of the great all-round college stars in the Old Dominion."

An exceptionally popular man here, he was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma, Sigma, and O.D.K. On leaving Lexington, after one year as freshman football coach, Leigh took a job as head coach at the Augusta Military Academy. He gave up coaching after a few years and at the time of his death was a member of the insurance firm of Moore and Williams in Norfolk. He was also active there as football official and as a member of the Optimists Club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Knowing that he had not long to live, Leigh was said by his friends in Norfolk to be perfectly cheerful and to show courage seldom matched, and this, to those who knew Leigh Williams is as it naturally would have been.

His wife, his parents, and one sister survive him.

John M. Glenn '79, Honored

MR. JOHN M. GLENN, of the class of 1879, recently received the Leslie Dana Gold Medal awarded annually by Mr. Leslie Dana of St. Louis through the St. Louis Society for the Blind for outstanding achievements in the prevention of blindness and the conservation of vision. The medal, a greatly-prized award in the field of public health, is given upon recommendation of the Association for Research in Ophthalmology.

Mr. Glenn, a native of Baltimore and a lawyer, was honored chiefly on account of his work with the Society for the Prevention of Blindness. He has been one of the board of directors for thirty years and became honorary vice-president in 1938. In the early years of the organization he did a great deal toward obtaining necessary funds.

After receiving his M.A. here in 1879, Mr. Glenn studied two years at Johns Hopkins and received his LL.B. from the University of Maryland in 1882. He was given an honorary M.A. by Hopkins in 1902 and an honorary LL.D. by Washington and Lee in 1907.

The alumni office recently received the following announcement from THOMAS JEAN ELLIS of the class of 1923:

"Thomas Jean Ellis, formerly of Miami, announces his resignation as an assistant attorney general of Florida and the opening of a new office for the practice of law and equity in the State and Federal courts and for representations before the State Boards and Commissions, at rooms 23-24-25, Centennial Building, Tallahassee, Florida, Telephone 813. W. P. (Paul) Shelley, Jr., of Tallahassee, will be an associate."

Kenneth C. Whittle '14, New Head of Virginia Bar Association

NEW PRESIDENT of the Virginia Bar Association, elected at the organization's annual meeting at White Sulphur Springs on August 10, is KENNON C. WHITTLE of Martinsville, Virginia, who has previously served the association as chairman of its executive committee.

A lifelong resident of Martinsville, where he was born October 12, 1891, Mr. Whittle was educated in Martinsville Public Schools and at Washington and Lee University, where he graduated in law in 1914. Admitted to the Virginia bar the same year, he has been engaged in the general practice of law, both criminal and civil, at Martinsville for the past twenty-six years.

While a student at Washington and Lee Mr. Whittle was a member of Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity, Phi Delta Phi, White Friar, and other college organizations.

He is a member of the Democratic State Central Committee and was a delegate to the Democratic Convention in Chicago in 1932. In 1933 he served on the convention to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment.

Mr. Whittle has been active in the civic and social affairs of Martinsville, and is a member of the Knights of Pythias, the Kiwanis Club, and the Masons. During the World War he rendered service in the 6th Virginia Coast Artillery Corps.

He is married and has two children. His father, Judge S. G. Whittle, was also a graduate of the Washington and Lee Law School.

BILLY HOYT, 1932, is back at Hopkins this winter as a Fellow. He is preparing his dissertation for publication, and then will begin a new research project. He is conducting research for the Maryland Historical Society. The fourth and last installment of his documentary articles on Washington and Lee in 1834, will appear in the October issue of the Virginia Magazine of History. He has had other articles this year in the Maryland Historical Magazine and in New York History.

A New Treasurer and Financial System

THE LOSS to the university occasioned by the death of Mr. Paul M. Penick last March would be difficult to estimate because, as most alumni know, his activities in behalf of Washington and Lee were far more numerous and varied than those which an ordinary college treasurer is called upon to perform. To fill his place would be correspondingly difficult. Yet it did not probably require long deliberation on the part of the trustees to come to the conclusion at their final meeting that if anyone could carry on the treasurer's office, it would be Earl S. Mattingly, 1925, who, since 1920, has been Washington and Lee's very capable registrar.

For the present, Mr. Mattingly is continuing as registrar as well as treasurer. To carry on duties in the office of registrar, however, that he could not possibly undertake under the circumstances, an assistant registrar has been appointed. The holder of this office is W. Magruder Drake, A.B. of 1936 and M.A. of 1937. Recent graduates will remember Drake as an outstanding student here for five years, a member of Delta Tau Delta and of Phi Beta Kappa. Alumni of an earlier period may recall his father, Mr. Winbourn Drake of the class of 1897, or possibly his mother, the former Miss Mildred Myers who was a Lexington girl. Since 1937, the new assistant registrar has been working with the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, a sort of experience which should help him in his new work.

To write a great deal about Mr. Mattingly would be largely superfluous, as there must be few readers of the Magazine who are not personally acquainted with him. He has been here since 1916 and has acted as registrar since 1920. The efficiency with which his office was carried on has become almost proverbial; his memory for students' names and faces is well-known to be amazing, while his popularity with them is deserved. His new title will be Secretary and Treasurer of the University, and he will also take Mr. Penick's place as secretary of the Board of Trustees and of their executive committee. As registrar, he is secretary to the faculty, so that he is about everything at once, as you can see!

In connection with this new arrangement in university affairs, it should also be of interest to many alumni to learn about the recently-devised method of handling the endowment. In the hands of the State-Planters Bank and Trust Company of Richmond will be placed all real estate and real estate mortgage holdings of the university. The bank will act as fiscal agent of Washington and Lee, its trust departments servicing the loans and real estate, and remitting the net income to the treasurer. The bank has also agreed to undertake a survey of all holdings of this kind and will report its findings to the Board of Trustees this fall with recommendations for changes and improvements.

As to the part of the endowment which is in the form of securities, these will remain, as they have been for the past few years, in charge of the United States Trust Company of New York. This firm for many years handled the investments of the Doremus estate and since this bequest of nearly two million dollars came to the university several years ago, the United States Trust has continued to handle the estate for the college. This arrangement will be continued, and other stocks and bonds held by the university have been turned over to the New York company.

Of special interest to fraternity members among the alumni will be the disposition of the loans which Washington and Lee has made to several fraternity groups in the past. These, according to Mr. Mattingly, will be kept in charge of the treasurer.

All in all, the funds of your alma mater are in good and capable hands. What they need now is a very considerable increase, for which all of us may fervently hope.

Among those listed as passing the Maryland State Bar Examinations given in June was CHARLES AWDRY THOMPSON, A.B. '36, second in rating of 76, and CALVERT THOMAS, B.S., '38.

M. F. BAUGHER, LL.B. 1925, of West Palm Beach, Florida, representing the Palm Beach Fishing Club, triumphed over a competition of 5,000 entries in the sixth annual Silver Sailfish Derby. His eight-foot, six-inch fish taken on light tackle won him the award for the longest fish (among 898 taken) and the light-tackle prize.

Local Alumni Association Notes

Charlotte

AT AN enthusiastic dinner meeting in Charlotte, North Carolina, on July 29, about twenty-five local alumni listened to speeches by football coaches Tex Tilson and Riley Smith, and elected two new officers.

John L. Crist, 1913, was elected to succeed Philip F. Howerton as president. Mr. Howerton refused offers of renomination and turned the meeting over to Thomas M. Glasgow, 1912, who presided during the election in which Mr. Crist was chosen without opposition.

The new secretary-treasurer will be A. Murat Willis, 1938.

The new president emphasized as his policy a strong backing of the university's athletic program and work for a Washington and Lee-Davidson football game each year, preferably in Charlotte.

The chapter hopes for a meeting this fall which will be attended by Cy Young and President Gaines.

Appalachian

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Appalachian Association of Washington and Lee University Alumni at Hungry Mother State Park Friday evening, Governor Homer Holt, of West Virginia, was the guest speaker. He was introduced by L. P. Collins, of Marion, former member of the house of delegates, a former classmate of Governor Holt, who spoke of the university.

Other speakers were Coach Tex Tilson and his assistant Riley Smith. Senator Fred Parks of Abingdon, and L. P. Collins also spoke briefly. At a business meeting held in the park shelter the following officers were elected: L. P. Collins, president, and Charles S. Wassum, both of Marion, secretary and treasurer.

The banquet was held at Hemlock Haven near the park with 65 members and guests attending. The association includes Southwest Virginia from Roanoke to Bristol.

Weddings

1926

RICHARD HALLIDAY, (who later graduated from Dartmouth), was married recently in Las Vegas, Nevada, to Miss Mary Martin, the film star who won her way into the movies by singing "My Heart Belongs to Daddy." Halliday is at present a film studio story editor for Paramount in Hollywood.

1932

RICHARD BLAIR SKEEN, Phi Delta Theta, was married on the eighth of last June to Miss Evelyn Burroughs Delaney. The wedding took place in St. James Episcopal Church in Alexandria, Louisiana.

CLAXTON EDMONDS ALLEN, JR., B.A., was married to Miss Helen McCreery Barker of New York City on October 4.

RUGELEY PIERSON DEVAN, JR., married Miss Jane Mayer on September 14 in the First Presbyterian Church of Charleston, West Virginia. DeVan, Phi Kappa Sigma and Phi Beta Kappa, is in the insurance business in Charleston, in which, after a brilliant record in the commerce school, he should succeed unusually well.

1936

EDWARD ANGUS POWELL, Phi Kappa Sigma, who managed our football team a few years back was married on the thirty-first of August to Miss Helen Elizabeth Bryson. The ceremonies took place in the Winnetka Congregational Church at Winnetka, Illinois.

JOSEPH JOHN PETTE, Pi Kappa Phi, a few years ago captain of basketball and baseball, and halfback on the football team, married Miss Arline Veronica Strembel on October 12 in St. Agnes Roman Catholic Church, Rockville Center, Long Island. Mr. and Mrs. Pette will be at home after November 10 at 14 Strathmere Lane, Rockville Center.

WADE HAMPTON HATTEN, JR., Sigma Nu, was married in Gulfport, Mississippi, to Miss Gladys Jayn Legg. The wedding took place on August 25.

Announcement has been received in the Alumni Office of the marriage of WILLIAM FRANCIS SAUNDERS, B.S. '38, LL.B. '40, and Miss Ann Sutherland Price on October 5, at Montvale, New Jersey. Mr. and Mrs. Saunders attended the Washington and Lee Homecoming on October 12.

ROBERT ALBRECHT NICHOLSON, Phi Kappa Sigma, and late editor of The Ring-tum Phi, married Miss Jean Louise Rankin in San Diego, California, on the sixteenth of June. The couple will be at home with the Second Battalion, Tenth Marines, in San Diego.

WILLIAM ARTHUR BEETON, a recent graduate of the Naval Air School at Pensacola, has been designated a naval aviator and has been commissioned an ensign in the U. S. Navy. He has reported for duty with Patrol Squadron 52 at Charleston, South Carolina. He is a native of Lexington, Virginia.

RALPH H. SMITH and Miss Mary Elinor Tauber were married on October 26 at the Bellefonte Country Club in Ashland, Kentucky.

1940

GANAHL WALKER, JR., Sigma Nu, was married to Miss Sarah Wood Cheney on July 15. The wedding took place in the First Presbyterian Church at San Antonio, Texas.

1941

CRAWFORD ELLIS HINDERMANN, ex-1941, married Miss Nancy Powers in Christ Church Cathedral, New Orleans, Louisiana, on the eighteenth of June.

New Arrivals

THE ALUMNI OFFICE had the pleasure of receiving announcements of three recent additions to alumni families:

CARL B. KNIGHT, 1926, and Mrs. Knight, announce the arrival of Carol Hamilton Knight on June 17. The Knights live in Big Stone Gap, Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. V. A. SNOW became the parents of Lois Douglas Snow on July 20. Mr. Snow is a member of the class of 1939, and the family lives at 325 S. Peterson Street, Louisville, Kentucky.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. GEORGE E. BURKS, 1927, a daughter, Elizabeth Hereford Burks, on February 7, 1940.

THE REVEREND MR. R. ALLEN BROWN, 1909, pastor of the Havre de Grace, Maryland, Presbyterian Church, is Moderator of the Baltimore Presbytery. He received his degree here in law, but after a few years' practice went into the ministry.

JOHN G. HERNDON, 1911, represented Washington and Lee University at the inauguration of President Morley of Harvard College on October 19, 1940.

markable success of the new pitcher, George, who was the only bright spot of the year, apparently. He must have been missed the following season.

Thomas Edward George was hailed all over the country last summer for his really remarkable performance of winning an overtime game in an important minor league at the age of 54, and the Alumni Magazine takes pleasure in repeating the story of a former student who can keep on performing with a rubber arm when many of the arms and legs in modern organized baseball seem to be made of glass. We hope he keeps on (to quote the same article) "until his arm drops off—which will be never!"

THE appointment of CAVETT ROBERT, LL.B. 1933, as a vice-president of the Arizona Edison Company, Inc., was announced recently. Mr. Robert, a brother-in-law of President Gaines, practiced law with the firm of Beekman, Bogue, Stephens and Black in New York City from 1933 to 1936, and for a year was connected with the district attorney's office in New York, during the famous rackets investigation. Early in 1937 he went to Arizona and was associated for a time with the law firm of Ellinwood and Ross in Phoenix. He began his connection with Arizona Edison in September, 1937, as manager of their new business department.

Opening of the 192nd Session

Commerce. He was for three years Assistant in Business Law at the University of North Carolina.

As instructor in Modern Civilization, Horace S. Merrill, A.B. of the University of Wisconsin, will undertake other courses formerly taught by Mr. Smith.

In Biology, taking the place of Mr. Hill, will be Lincoln C. Pettit, with the rank of instructor.

Mr. Carter's place as instructor in Journalism and director of university publicity will be taken by Latham B. Weber, 1939, while Lea Booth, 1939, will handle the athletic publicity in particular.

As director of religious activities in place of Mr. Philpott will be James Denny Wilcher, A.B. and B.D. of Yale.

Mr. Light's position in the Law School will be handled by Chas. V. Laughlin.

John Robert Taylor, M.S. has returned from a leave of absence to his duties in the department of Chemistry.

Class Notes

1869

E. W. WILLIAMS has a new address at 1313 Laurel Street, Pine Bluff, Arkansas. He signs his letter, "Your 90 year old General Lee boy." The Alumni Office is more than proud to have him on our rolls. Captain Ed has always been an enthusiastic and helpful alumnus, and writes, in his own hand, an interesting letter reminiscent of his life here as a student under General Lee.

1874

BISHOP JAMES R. WINCHESTER is now retired and lives with his daughter at 1538 Estes Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. His continued interest in everything pertaining to Washington and Lee is deeply appreciated by the Alumni Office.
