About Our Cover

The view on the front cover this time is one that we have never published before and suspect no one else has. It shows the east entrance to the campus with the gates in memory of the soldiers of World War I in the background. Particularly to be noticed is the growth of the handsome hedges of boxwood, planted there by the Garden Club of Virginia, for which club this picture was made.

The photograph is by the Ewing Studios of Lexington.

Summer Experiment, 1942

(THE PRESIDENT'S PAGE)

"AND how is the summer school?"—That's a question that is frequently asked of us who are here on the campus. To that inquiry, I address some observations.

* * *

In the first place, we are trying to insist that ours is not a "summer school." This term has fairly definite significance in the American thinking. It implies usually considerable variation of the teaching process. The average "summer school" of an American institution introduces new features, new teachers, new courses, work or recreation designed partly for the summer mood.

* * *

Our summer work is literally the University in continuing session. Every course offered is a regular Washington and Lee course; every teacher is a regular Washington and Lee teacher; and the vast majority of the students are regular Washington and Lee students.

* * *

The statistics indicate that the enrollment for the first term of the summer session is 290. Of this number thirty are summer students only; and in this thirty are twenty-four women. All other students are the regular Washington and Lee men, including about twenty freshmen who elected to enter in June rather than in September.

* * *

Everybody, so far as I can learn, is gratified with the quality of the work. The tempo is quickened—it might be said, though I should not urge this point, that the work is a little harder than in the regular session. But the earnestness of the students is unmistakable.

In normal times, there are certain advantages in summer work. Of course, there are the disadvantages, but certainly there are two potential gains. One of these is in the matter of concentration; our courses are meeting five times a week and in the second term will meet six times a week, and the students keep the subject matter more consistently on their minds. Another probable gain in the summer study is found in the absence of many distractions, many of them intrinsically valuable in themselves, which crowd the regular nine months.

* * *

But this time is not normal. Our boys are here, almost without exception, in order to graduate more quickly and thus be prepared sooner for some responsible relation to the cause of our Country.

* * *

This fact is important, and it ought to be strongly emphasized, that the Government itself has recognized the importance of trained men for the present emergency and has provided wisely that gifted boys may continue their college program, subject to various conditions, until graduation. With full patriotic conscience, a boy may go steadfastly on in his college work so that when he does serve, he will serve more effectively.

* * *

There is a powerful obligation on the boy who follows this course, however, to get his preparation as quickly and as thoroughly as possible. The Washington and Lee boys in our summer term are living up to this implicit injunction.

How Can We Save the "Old Blue"?

JUST how serious is the intention of the officials of Washington and Lee to tear down the Old Blue Hotel we are not in a position to know, but that such a plan has been recently considered is beyond doubt.

The building is certainly in wretched condition right now. Though a few students occupied it last year, everyone seems to have come to the conclusion that no one else should live in it until improvements have been made. Furthermore, it has been allowed to deteriorate to such an extent that engineers even fear it may collapse. The quaint and beautiful old porch on the front appears not to have been painted in years, and everything about the property gives evidence of decay.

Under such circumstances, any repairs that were undertaken would have to be thoroughgoing—just as radical as were those performed on the main building in 1936—and the cost would be between twenty and thirty thousand dollars. Since it can be demonstrated by simple arithmetic that to tear the structure down and build anew would be cheaper than to repair it, the suggestion has been made that the Old Blue be razed at once and a new building be put up in its place when the time comes for such things to be done.

In spite of the cogency of such argument, we sometimes doubt that arithmetic, however simple, can always be applied. As a building, the Old Blue may be junk. There are far newer, sounder, and more expensive ones at Duke or the University of Texas. Yet some of the more important factors which distinguish Washington and Lee from thousands of brand new universities or even a large assortment of cow colleges all over this country are age, tradition, and beauty. Therefore, we submit that the Old Blue, by several years the oldest building on the Washington and Lee campus, should be preserved at all costs, because it partakes of all three of these factors to a marked degree. It is the sort of thing represented by the Old Blue that may even be said to constitute our chief raison d'être.

With all this in view, we are quoting with great pleasure the excellent editorial which appeared in a recent issue of the Rockbridge County News. It was written by Matthew K. Paxton, '18, who knows his Lexington, and it seems to us that it furnishes in itself sufficient cause for keeping the Old Blue intact. We ought to add that determining the exact date of a structure of this kind is difficult and that there is a bare possibility that the original tavern may have been built even earlier—in 1785 to be exact. Following is Mr. Paxton's article:

THE OLD BLUE HOTEL

"The old Blue Hotel, known also at times as East Dormitory, belonging to Washington and Lee University and located on the east end of the campus along Main Street, was the first licensed tavern in Rockbridge County. During its historic past it has doubtless housed thousands of travelers who moved along the Valley Pike, the great roadway by which pioneers went to the West and Southwest from the earlier populated east. Andrew Jackson doubtless passed by this tavern and may have stopped there on his way from Tennessee to the White House.

"A substantial building was standing on this property as early as 1817, according to historical data compiled by Mrs. Charles McCulloch. February 12, 1817, one Jacob Clyce who owned large properties in the county was the highest bidder for one-half an acre near the town of Lexington, one eighth of a mile northeast of the Court House, adjoining the college lands. The price paid was $1050, which would indicate valuable improvements which undoubtedly constitute part of the present Blue Hotel Building.

"In 1819 the buildings and land were assessed at $1,578.36, of which the buildings were valued at $1,100. Incidentally, the tax on this property that year was $1.43.

"Jacob Clyce, however, was not satisfied with the state of the buildings and evidently with the idea of opening an inn at the very gates of the town of Lexington, made improvements prior to the year 1827 when the buildings were assessed at $2,000, it being noted that $900 had been added. During these years Clyce had acquired more land, including the meadows across the highway. The $900 added at this time is thought to have represented the present front and facade of the Blue Hotel. He also spent $200 on adjoining lots which were most likely stables where the Whiting Service Station now stands.

"In 1834 Jacob Clyce borrowed money through a deed of trust on this property which gives such description that one can almost reconstruct the tavern property. The deed reads: "Three certain lotts lying in the Town of Lexington, to-wit: the Tavern Lott, on which said Clyce now resides, and keeps a tavern, the lott on which the Tavern stables now stand, adjoining the above-mentioned lott also the meadow lott opposite on which his shop stands and adjoining Preston's lands." A lot of furnishings for the inn and several slaves are included in the security.

"Jacob Clyce himself was a carpenter. It seems probable, however, that Colonel John Jordan, the most extensive contractor during the day in Rockbridge, had something to do with planning of at least the front part of this old property with its slender Ionian pillars and the lunette in the attic to grace its facade. Three ages are visible in the brick building. The front Main Street addition is of the English basement style with the handsome parlors on the second floor. The large room entered beneath the porch on the street level would have been the bar and lobby with room enough for all sorts and conditions of men stopping for refreshments.

"The first record of a license to keep an ordinary was issued here at the May Court of 1829 to Jacob Clyce as 'a man of good character, not addicted to drunkenness or gambling.' For this he paid $18.00. The tavern was conducted after 1840 by Jesse F. Clyce, Jacob's son, and in 1845 it was issued in the name of the 'Western Inn.' In 1848 it became the 'Exchange Hotel' and bore the name when purchased by Washington and Lee University from the heirs of James H. Clyce in 1871. James F. Clyce's appraisal recorded March 22, 1853, lists a quantity of wares for his 'ordinary,' including 1200 'segars' and numerous bottles of champagne and barrels of whiskey and brandy.

"The 'Old Blue' is indeed one of Lexington's most historic, interesting and beautiful buildings. It is said to be in bad repair and now stands vacant. If anything would happen to 'Old Blue' it would be a calamity."

When we were talking with Cy Young on this subject the other day, he made what to us seemed a marvelous suggestion. Why not reconstruct the Old Blue as it ought to be and then use it for the Alumni Headquarters which your Association has been so long anxious to acquire. It would make a place for returning alumni to use as their own home when they are here: there could be a few bedrooms; there would be facilities for entertainment. It is a need which has been felt a long time, and what place in Lexington could possibly be more convenient or appropriate for the purpose?

As everyone is aware, there isn't a thing that could be done about it right now when the government cannot permit construction of this kind. But that situation isn't going to last forever. During the interim, if there are any parts of the building so weak that they might fall in, they could surely be temporarily propped up. Certainly a coat of paint here and there would not be out of the question. And in the meanwhile, why couldn't the alumni start collecting the funds for an eventual reconstruction?

Save a tradition and acquire a home. When this war is over, the country is going to need all the anchors it has to those things of the past that represent our best traditions, because we are likely to be adrift in a very strange and perilous sea. Washington and Lee represents one of these traditions, and in that tradition the Old Blue is not without importance.

We have never invited letters, but we'd be glad to hear from anyone on this subject.

EDWARD M. RILEY, '31, received his Ph.D. in History at the University of Southern California in June.

The Old Blue Hotel which is being abandoned after at least 125 years. Must it be torn down, or can it be restored as alumni headquarters?

Glee Club Wins Regional Contest

John G. Varner, Director

The contest, open to all college glee clubs in the country, is sponsored by Fred Waring, the orchestra leader, in conjunction with his Chesterfield program, and since the finals were broadcast from New York, over 108 stations in the NBC chain, it is probable that a great many alumni heard the performance of the young men representing their alma mater. The regional contests were held by means of recordings, made locally at the various colleges and sent on to be heard by Waring in New York. Our club, in the final regional competition, "defeated" Temple and the University of Maryland.

There were eight colleges in the national finals, The University of Rochester, Duke, Elmhurst, the University of Oklahoma, Dartmouth, Purdue, and Redlands, being the others. The all-round prize went to Rochester, but our organization received plenty of honorable mention. Rochester, after all, is a big school with one of the most important schools of music in the country.

Much of the credit for the Glee Club's outstanding achievement should go to Professor John G. Varner, director of the club since 1938. During his four years of directorship, Mr. Varner has built up an interest in choral singing which is probably matched on few campuses. Believing that prima donnas, as he calls them, only disturb the perfect co-ordination and team-work which are the secret of choral singing, Mr. Varner selects boys with average voices and then trains them as a unit. The result has been an organization which is a far cry from CONTINUING its excellent record of the past few years, the Washington and Lee Glee Club, in competition with some of the biggest colleges in the country, won the Fred Waring contest in its region, the middle Atlantic states. As some readers will remember, this was not the first time our club had such success, since they won a similar regional contest in Washington in 1939.

what some of us old fellows recall as the rather childish rag-time glee and mandolin clubs of other days. These boys sing serious classics, and under such expert direction as they get, they receive and deserve serious musical consideration.

To many alumni, we are sure, it means more to see their college making a national name for itself in activities of this grade than in the razzle-dazzle of big-time athletics. Congratulations are decidedly in order for Mr. Varner and the forty boys who sang themselves and their college to fame.

HIRAM DOW, '08, says that the three members of the Board of Bar Examiners of the state of New Mexico have a semi-annual chuckle among themselves when they meet to give examinations because all of them: Mr. Dow, Pat Hamilton, '24, and A. H. McCleod, '29, are Washington and Lee alumni. Mr. Dow notes further that Dean Sadler, '09, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, is also a graduate.

THIS spring a handsome portrait of Miss Annie Jo White, for many years librarian of Washington and Lee, was presented to the University by an anonymous donor. It was painted by Miss Harriet Burdette who has done many portraits for the college, and represents Miss Annie at her desk in about 1903 or 1904. It now hangs in the library browsing room, which is a memorial to her. The legend attached to it reads: "In memory of Miss Annie White, presented by Friends from Texas."

JOHN SPEIGHT HUNTER, JR., '04, graduated from the Southeast Air Corps Training Center at Turner Field, Georgia, on the 23rd day of May, 1942, and is now a lieutenant in the Army Air Corps.

Raymond L. ("Cannon Ball") Beuhring, '14, Huntington, West Virginia, lawyer, will be remembered as an outstanding fullback on the Generals' teams of 1911-14. He is now class agent for '41-L.

The One Hundred Ninety-Third Finals

IT WAS difficult to resist the contrast between the finals of 1942 and those of 1932. The boys of ten years ago faced a chaotic future because they didn't know what they were going to do. The few of them who had jobs were lucky exceptions. Most had no prospects, and some were actually in idleness for a long time.

This year things were more chaotic, but there was no problem of the shape of the immediate future. It was only a choice of the Army, the Navy, the Marines, or the flying services of any one of them.

With such a future, there was a certain solemnity about the one hundred ninety-third Finals, a solemnity that spread even to the gayest of Finals activities.

Few alumni returned. Transportation was hardly available, for such purposes. Those in attendance came, for the most part, from nearby. We could only hope that those necessarily absent were here in spirit.

The fact that the commencement exercises began at six in the afternoon, doubtless for the first time in history, was one of the minor details which emphasized the seriousness of the moment, characterized here by the "accelerated curriculum." Another was the date, May 26th, after a driving semester, concluded with one week of two-hour exams instead of two weeks of three-hour exams. There was no time to fool around with commencement ceremonies. To its own consternation, the faculty met at 8.00 a.m. the morning of Finals to make the official awards, and even then felt pressed for time with the printers awaiting these decisions before going to press with the program.

In spite of all this, the 193rd Finals were successful.

In all, 173 students received degrees of various kinds, a drop of only six from last year. Five honorary degrees were awarded. Exercises were indoors this time, but the diminished size of the crowd made this arrangement satisfactory.

Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, Washington, D. C., delivered the baccalaureate sermon; there were the customary entertainments, including the President's reception, and the alumni smoker with which the annual meeting was combined this year. The Final Ball was not neglected and went all night as always. Dr. Gaines delivered the commencement address. Paul Baker was valedictorian.

All in all, except for the prevailing seriousness of the mood and the dearth of visitors, this year's Commencement Day was indistinguishable from any of the others.

Honorary degrees were conferred as follows: Dr. William Jackson Humphreys, '88, physicist and professor emeritus of physics and meteorology at George Washington University, Doctor of Science, Dr. Edward Luther Green, '92, professor of ancient languages, University of South Carolina, Doctor of Literature, the Reverend Mr. J. Lindsay Patton, '22, rector of St. Mark's Church, Berkeley, California, Doctor of Divinity, J. G. de R.

Hamilton, professor of history at the University of North Carolina, Doctor of Letters.

Scholarships and awards were distributed as follows:

Campus Comment

By MAL DEANS, '43

SUMMER SCHOOL has come to Washington and Lee for the first time, and with it have come a few lady students, a twilight softball league, and an extra amount of hard work.

The summer enrollment is less than a third of normal, and consists of mainly a serious-minded group intent on getting all the education possible before joining one of the nation's numerous service branches. Their social activities have been curtailed somewhat with all the girls' colleges being closed, and the work is noticeably harder; but the complaints heard are few and far between.

The most unique feature of the summer session is the girls of course, but they have not seemed to deter Washington and Lee men from their work, for the library is as full every afternoon and evening as it usually is during the regular sessions—despite the small number of students.

"Cy" Twombly has given Washington and Lee an excellent intramural sports program for the summer, which is highlighted by a twilight softball league consisting of seven teams. Games are played nightly at seven o'clock, and the interest shown so far has been excellent. Twombly has also instituted an intramural golf program and a tennis tournament. The swimming pool is open every afternoon; the tennis courts are getting a lot of use, and Cap'n Dick Smith has organized a summer baseball team. So the opportunities for sports are numerous and varied.

Social life has naturally undergone a letdown because of all the girls at Hollins, Macon, Baldwin, Sweet Briar and the rest being gone, but a Christian Council group is making the best of the situation with a series of social affairs including informal dances at the Student Union, hayrides, and picnics.

As yet the expected shortage of women has not been very noticeable, what with the coeds, town girls, and weekend visitors around.

A vacancy was left in the Summer Executive Committee when vice-president of the student body, Felix Smart, failed to return to school. Clifford Day, senior committeeman was moved up to fill this position, and the executive committee then elected another senior, Jim Walker, to fill Day's old position.

Lack of advertisers made the publication of the Ring-tum Phi, semi-weekly campus newspaper, impossible this summer, and in order to furnish the students with a publication, Joe Ellis, editor of the Ring-tum Phi, with the collaboration of some of his staff members, has been putting out a weekly 3-page mimeographed bulletin called "The Campus."

All in all, Washington and Lee is not noticeably different from its usual self. The honor system, conventional dress, the fraternities, The Corner Store, the buildings, the faculty, and that undefinable spirit among the students are still here. All this is Washington and Lee, and we are not letting Hitler, Mussolini, or the two-faced Japs take it away from us.

Additions to List of Alumni in Service

As of July 1, 1942

NOTE: In compliance with the requests of the military and naval authorities, we have refrained from giving any information about Washington and Lee men in the armed forces save their class and branch of service. However, the Alumni Office is vitally interested in other pertinent data, such as rank, station, permanent home address, or other address from which mail will be forwarded, special activities, etc.

It is our policy to keep as close a connection as possible with our alumni in this time of stress, and any information concerning alumni in service will be greatly appreciated by this office.

North Texas Chapter Gives Bonds to Alma Mater

BECAUSE of the emergency, the North Texas Chapter called off its annual meeting and banquet and in place of it asked the members to send annual dues which would be invested in War Bonds to be given to Washington and Lee. A large number of members contributed dues of $2.00 or more, and as a result the University has received two twenty-five dollar bonds and seven dollars in War Stamps.

We cannot refrain from congratulating the North Texas chapter on this scheme which we suggest could be followed by others.

P. K. YONGE, '39, has been studying at the law school of the University of Florida since his graduation and has certainly compiled an enviable record for himself there. He has been elected to Phi Kappa Phi, Bule Key, and the Honor Court as representative of the law school. In addition, he was president of the Phi Delta Phi law fraternity and president of the John Marshall Law Association—an extension of the Florida Bar Association. Besides these extra-curricular honors, he, with one other student of his class, has made the highest scholastic average since the present system of grading was instituted in 1929.

Dr. Gaines Speaks at New York Chapter Luncheon

THE New York alumni met at a luncheon held at the New York Chamber of Commerce Building on May 6th. The meeting featured an address by President Gaines. Among those in attendance were the following:

*More contributors than last year.
 ***More contributors and more money.

NOTE: The above report of the 1942 Alumni Fund represents the largest number of contributors and largest amount of money, on this date, since the inception of the Class Agent Plan in 1933. There are approximately 300 men who contributed last year from whom we have not heard. It is not too late to write to your class agent, or, if you prefer, send your check direct to the Alumni Office.

Minutes of the General Meeting

FOR the first time, as far back as anyone can remember, this meeting was not held on the Washington and Lee campus, the reason being that the usual alumni luncheon was cancelled on account of the small number of alumni who could return for Finals. Instead of the customary luncheon held on the campus for alumni, their wives and friends, and the graduating class and their families, a Dutch luncheon for alumni only was given at the Mayflower Hotel. It was thought best that the meeting be held in the hotel immediately following the luncheon. There were some sixty alumni present.

On motion, the reading of the minutes of the last meeting was dispensed with.

The next order of business was reports of committees. Mr. Stuart Moore, '14, local alumni representative on the Athletic Committee, gave a very interesting report on the athletic situation in general, and how the athletic program might function under war conditions.

Mr. Ki Williams reported for the Nominating Committee. The following men were presented by this committee and unanimously elected, there being no nominations from the floor, to fill the two existing vacancies on the Alumni Board: John L. Crist, '13, and Richard T. Edwards, '33; as alumni representatives on the Athletic Committee, Stuart Moore, '14, and W. C. Raftery, '15.

The Secretary gave his annual report on the year's work of the Alumni Office, and it was accepted.

Under new business, there was a very lengthy discussion of the decision of the University to admit women to the first summer session held at Washington and Lee. A motion was made by E. C. Caffrey that the Association go on record as against the admission of women to the University at any time in the future. This motion was thoroughly discussed, and before it was put to a vote,

C. S. Glasgow offered the following substitute motion: "Without criticism of the administration, trustees or faculty, the Alumni Association goes on record as against the admission of women to the University at any time in the future." This substitute motion was also discussed at length and before it was put to a vote, M. W. Paxton made the following amended motion to the substitute motion: "That no women be admitted to the University at any regular term of the University."

The Chair ruled that the amendment to the substitute motion should be placed before the meeting before the original or substitute motions. This amendment to the substitute motion was voted upon and carried by a large majority. At this point, Mr. Caffrey was asked by the Chair to re-state his original motion, in order that it might be placed before the meeting. Mr. Caffrey did so, and his motion also carried by a large majority.

Due to the conflicts brought about by the necessity of a shortened Finals, Dr. Gaines sent his regrets to the meeting for not being able to extend his usual welcome to alumni.

The Chair recognized the presence of Mr. R. B. Campbell, Class of 1879, as the oldest alumnus present. Mr. Campbell responded with a few well-chosen words of appreciation.

The last order of business was the President's report, given orally by Mr. Morrison. He stressed the difficulties of the Association functioning under war conditions, but felt that the Association had been successful in spite of this, and emphasized the necessity of all alumni giving as much support as possible to the University during this emergency.

There being no further business, the meeting adjourned.

Annual Report of the Secretary

THE MOST used word on the Washington and Lee campus since December 7, 1941, has been "accelerate." I see no need to stop the use of it now, and will therefore accelerate this annual report.

At the opening of college in September, this year gave promise of being the most active one from an alumni standpoint in our history, but the declaration of war immediately placed a different aspect on things, as it did to practically every other normal activity. In spite of this, however, we feel that the year has not been a total loss. Under severe handicaps we have tried to carry on. It is true that our local associations have not had as many meetings as in the past, and your secretary, not having an "X" card, has not been able to visit as many chapters as he would have liked. The meetings that have been held were good ones and at most of them there has been a representative of the University present. As you would judge, these representatives tried to present how the University was functioning under war conditions. This information has been disseminated among all alumni through several bulletins written by Dr. Gaines, and through the Alumni Magazine.

I reported to you last year that in my opinion the biggest step forward made by the Association since the inception of the Class Agent Plan was the starting of a program of student-alumni relations. In spite of working on a smaller budget, we have been able to continue this program, and there are many concrete results to show that it is bearing fruit. I repeat that the obvious objective of a college or university is to prepare students for their life's work; the objective of this program is to prepare students for their life as Alumni. On April 29th this year, your Association was again host to the Senior Class at their annual banquet. This has grown to be one of the most delightful and instructive social affairs of the year.

The war has presented many problems in connection with our work within the alumni office. Chief among them is the increase in the number of changes of addresses. So many of our alumni, both young and old, are entering the armed forces, often being stationed temporarily at a number of different posts. For instance, we have hundreds of requests for changes like the following: Business address—24-9-143 United States Naval Air Station, Jacksonville, Florida; Residence address 11 Pomme Rose Avenue, Port of Spain, Trinidad, British West Indies; Home address: 311 Marlboro Road, Englewood, N. J. And if this alumnus ever visits our office in years to come, looks at his card, and all of the above doesn't appear, he'll say "You have had the wrong address for me." But in spite of this, we are doing our best to keep up with the many alumni who are serving their country, a partial list of whom appeared in the May issue of the Alumni Magazine.

Last year, our annual meeting fell on June 6, at which time I stated that the report on the Alumni Fund was the largest we had ever had. The report before you exceeds that report both in the number contributing and the amount contributed; this in spite of the fact that our meeting is being held two weeks earlier than usual. The exact figures given at the meeting last year were 813 contributors for $6,073.40. This against 849 contributors for $7,269.18 in the report before you.

On February 5th, your Alumni Fund Committee met in Lexington. It was the consensus of opinion at that meeting that with everyone being called on to buy bonds, savings stamps, contribute to this drive and that, the fund this year was certainly in for tough sledding, and that we would be fortunate to even approach last year's figures. If this campaign continues as they have in the past, with a good number of late contributions coming in after June 1, we will undoubtedly have the best year the fund has known. And here let me express publicly my appreciation and that of the Fund Committee for the excellent work of the 80-odd class agents who have given their time and money to make this year the best. Many of them took on the work of class agent this year in addition to the many calls upon their services caused by the war.

In closing, I would also like to thank your president, John Morrison, and the Alumni Board of Trustees for the fine cooperation they have given me in these trying times.

BENTON McMILLIN WAKEFIELD, '41, graduated last May from the Naval Reserve Training School at Northwestern University, carrying with him a special sword of honor. It was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Gosselin of Joliet, Illinois, in memory of their son, Edward, who was killed in action aboard the U.S.S. Arizona in Pearl Harbor. Wakefield received it as "the midshipman standing highest in general excellence." Considering that there were 800 in the graduating class, Benton's award was no mean achievement.

JAMES B. ALLEY, '13, was recently elected a director of Manhattan Life Insurance Company. Mr. Alley, a lawyer and member of Auchincloss, Alley and Duncan formerly was a director of the Commodity Credit Corporation and director of the Export-Import Bank.

THE FOLLOWING letter in the hand of General Lee is in the possession of E. A. Rogers, of Atlanta:

Washington College, Va.
26th June, 1869

Dear Sir,

I take pleasure in stating to you that the Faculty commend your son, R. W. Rogers for the distinguished industry and success with which he has pursued his course of study during the past session.

Very respectfully yrs.

James Brian Bell, 1890-1942

PEOPLE all over the United States remember James Brian Bell as a great newspaperman, but in the Alumni Office we also remember him as something else: as an active and faithful alumnus of Washington and Lee University. We remember him when he used to come here to speak at assemblies and press conventions, and we remember him as president of the Washington alumni group. We remember the model reports of their meetings that he used to send in, and we wondered how in the world a man so busy as he, could possibly find time to write them.

But Mr. Bell found time to do more things than most people ever dream of in the 52 years of his life, a fact which emerges from the many high tributes paid to him in newspapers everywhere on the occasion of his sudden death on June 8th when he was stricken while watching a big-league baseball game.

A native of Gaffney, South Carolina, Mr. Bell started his newspaper career there at the age of 19, serving as correspondent for the Columbia (South Carolina) State. He attended two other colleges before he came here: Presbyterian College in South Carolina, and Davidson; but he always most emphatically claimed Washington and Lee as his alma mater. It was here that he felt truly at home; here, at finals, when he would often go down and stay with the boys at his fraternity house, Pi Kappa Alpha. It was at Washington and Lee that he was tapped for Omicron Delta Kappa and from this university that he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Literature in 1937.

His first job after graduation was as reporter, then as sports editor and news editor with the Columbia State. This position he held for fifteen years. Then, in 1924, the lure of a more important career became too great, and he joined the Associated Press staff in Atlanta. In 1925 he was made chief of the New Orleans bureau; then was sent to New York where he spent four years on the general staff. For six years, following his appointment in 1930, he was chief of the AP bureau in Los Angeles, after which he became news editor at San Francisco, with responsibility for Hawaii and the western states. Finally, in 1939, came his crowning triumph when the Associated Press made him chief of the all-important bureau in the national capital.

Brian Bell, '11, late AP executive

During his extremely active newspaper career, he made nationally famous what his friend Kirke L. Simpson referred to as "the simple legend: 'By Brian Bell.'" Over the years he directed the AP coverage of such memorable events as the Scopes Trial and the death of William Jennings Bryan; the sensational Hall-

Mills murder trial, and the take-off of Charles Lindbergh on his flight to Paris. For many years a sports writer and always a devotee of the game he was watching when the end came, he was equally at home in Presidential press conferences; and equally as efficient in the reporting of the one as of the other.

He was a man of many friends—friends whose liking grew from Bell's great charm of personality and whose respect was engendered by what Mr. Simpson called his "life-long service to the ideals of clean news and honorable competition." They mourn his death from one end of the country to the other and from the highest to the most humble. Public tribute was paid to him on the floor of Congress. Expressions of sympathy and praise were sent by such well-known figures as Cordell Hull, Harold L. Ickes, Claude R. Wickard, Justice James Francis Byrnes, Gene Tunney, and many others. One of the most fitting was given out by Stephen Early, secretary to President Roosevelt:

"I think I should say that we here today are all saddened by the news of the sudden death of Brian Bell.

"As chief of the bureau, Brian had enormous responsibilities, but none of them was ever too great for him. I think the press of the country as a whole and the country itself has lost a most valuable man at a most unfortunate time. I am certain I express the President's sorrow" (Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt were among the first to send condolences to Mrs. Bell) "because the President and I have known Brian Bell for more than a score of years as a fine friend."

One son, as well as his wife, survives him.

William Thomas Paxton, 1891

WILLIAM THOMAS PAXTON, postmaster and prominent citizen of Buena Vista, Virginia, died suddenly of a heart attack on June 19th at the age of 72.

After graduation here he established the W. T. Paxton Real Estate Company in Buena Vista in 1892 and remained in this business until he turned the company over to his son in 1934, the year he became postmaster.

He was prominently associated with the development of Buena Vista, serving on the city council for 40 years; a director of the First National Bank since 1895, and its vice-president for 38 years. He became president of the bank last November. He served in the state senate about 1915, was a charter member of the Buena Vista Rotary Club, a Mason, an Odd Fellow, and a member of the Junior Order U.A.M. He was a member of the Buena Vista Presbyterian Church.

Surviving are a son, two brothers, and three granddaughters.

William Edgar Waddell, 1896

WILLIAM EDGAR WADDELL died on June 2 in the hospital at Clifton Forge, Virginia, to which he had been recently taken from his home in Covington.

Mr. Waddell was born in Staunton on the 10th of May, 1875, but his family moved to Lexington when he was only eight.

Subsequent to his graduation from the University he went to Covington where he was engaged at first in the hardware business, then in the insurance business for forty years.

He is survived by his wife, two brothers, and three sisters.

1907

By DONALD W. M. MACCLUER
Class Agent

W. L. LORD—Woodberry Forest School, Woodberry Forest, Va. "As to news of myself, you don't have much in a school teacher's job. I am winding up twenty-five years of service in this particular place in June, and hope to be good for another decade. This is a congenial job and a lovely place to live. I can not help to quiet that suspicion of appearance, for I have grown horizontally and lost vertically, as my hair is de-parted in the middle. But I keep in good health, and my wife and I enjoy life. Our two children are away from us now, the daughter at college in Nashville, Tennessee, and the son in the engineering department of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, at Burbank, California."

DONALD W. M. MACCLUER—Rose City Presbyterian Church, N.E. Sandy and 44th streets, Portland, Oregon. "After college I took four years work in three at Auburn Seminary in Auburn, New York. We then went to Chieng Rai, Thailand (Siam), as missionaries. I got the jungle fever and was invalided home. Took the Third Presbyterian Church in Niagara Falls, New York, for a year. Then six years in Coldwater, Michigan. Then a year and a half as an assistant in the Central Presbyterian Church (U. S) in St. Louis, Missouri. For the past 21 years have been here in Rose City. Our church grew from 580 to 1350 and Sunday School from 475 to 1365, but has now dropped back to about 900. We dismissed two churches from our membership, and the depression years resulted in fewer children. We are in a district that is going into business, and we are becoming a downtown church. I have many odd jobs. Work hard all the time except Monday when I try to go fishing. The figures on my figure are as follows: Height, 6 ft. 1 1-2 in.; weight, 194; hair mostly a memory; chest, 43 in.; waist, 39 in. stripped. Bulge some but not too much. Have three married children, two girls and a boy, all in or near Los Angeles.

BEN SMITH is secretary and treasurer of Real Estate, Incorporated, 1120 Madison Street, Lynchburg, Virginia.

S. M. RAY, JR., is in the insurance business in Belton, Texas. His family has grown up and scattered into West Texas, the oldest son is teaching in Lubbock. His second son is with the Farm Security Administration in Amarillo, and his daughter is a junior at Mary Hardin Baylor College in Belton.

CLYDE L. GREEN is County Superintendent, Board of Education, Robeson County, Lumberton, North Carolina.

DOZIER DEVANE is a member of the firm of DeVane, Andrews and Patterson, Attorneys and Counsellors at Law, Florida Bank Building, Orlando, Florida.

He has had the job of class agent so many times that he is very appreciative of his own class agent's efforts along that line.

ERNEST OFFUTT is in the loan and insurance business, specializing in Federal Housing insured loans, 1019 15th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WHEARLEY M. JOHNSON operates The Clover Hill Farm, Manassas, Virginia. His oldest son is a senior in the Washington and Lee School of Journalism this year.

1912

TOMMY GLASGOW is president of Glasgow Stuart Company of Charlotte, North Carolina. He and his family were visitors to the campus during Finals.

PAUL A. ROCKWELL lives at 46 Forest Hill Drive, Asheville, North Carolina. He is one of the few people who have made a lifetime avocation of being a soldier—specifically a soldier of France. One of the first Americans to enlist with the French forces at the beginning of the World War, he re-enlisted at the outbreak of the Riff war in 1925, with the French Foreign Legion, and served in Africa. Now he has returned from service as an officer on the French General Staff in the present war.

W. L. ("PIN") WEBSTER writes on stationery of the New York State Golf Association, as he is a member of the Executive Committee. His address is 1044 State Street, Schenectady, New York.

LAWRENCE E. GOLDMAN is a member of the law firm of Goldman and Koenigsdorf, Rialto Building, Kansas City, Missouri. He has one son, who is studying medicine at the University of Kansas.

A. G. LIVELY is a member of the law firm of Burns and Lively, Burns Building, Lebanon, Virginia. His partner is Clarence C. Burns, LL.B., '01.

1913

ALEX SLOAN is with the Sloan Glass Company, manufacturers of Cut Glass-stemware, Cumberland, Maryland.

LEWIS TWYMAN is a loyal alumnus because he testifies to his membership in two classes at Washington and Lee, academic '13 and law '16. He was on the campus for the law '16 reunion.

GRADY DOAK DAVIDSON has recently changed his address from Harman, Virginia, to College Avenue, apartment 1, Bluefield, West Virginia.

KENNON C. WHITTLE announces a reorganization of his law firm, the new members being Hannibal N. Joyce, LL.B., '32, and William F. Stone, LL.B., '33, under the firm name of Whittle, Whittle, Joyce and Stone, Martinsville, Virginia.

WILLIAM MOSELEY BROWN is director of the Vick School of Applied Merchandising, 122 East 42nd Street, New York. He is serving his second year as president of the New York local alumni chapter.

JUDGE ARCHIBALD BUCHANAN, of Tazewell, Virginia, says: "There is plenty of reason for Washington and Lee alumni to be proud."

JIMMIE THORNTON is a member of the real estate and insurance firm of Fleming and Thornton, Huntsville, Alabama.

LEE BEUHRING, practicing law in Huntington, West Virginia, is interested in veterans and Masonic circles, and Washington and Lee football teams.

1915

CHARLES R. BEALL has been practicing law in Martinsburg, West Virginia, since serving two years in the Great War. He is married and has a son eight years old. During the last few years he has been active in civic matters.

JOSEPH BENJAMIN JOHNSON is farming near Manassas, Virginia. He has two sons.

1916

C. EDMUND WORTH is a member of the law firm of Worth, Bivens and Lively, First National Bank Building, Tampa, Florida. He says that Uncle Sam's military activity has reduced this to a one-man firm, as the navy has Mr. Bivens and the army Mr. Lively.

RUSSELL S. RHODES is still general manager of the Chamber of Commerce, Tulsa, Oklahoma. His daughter, Katherine, was a sophomore at Randolph Macon Women's college last year and expected to enroll this year in the University of Oklahoma for her junior and senior years.

BRUCE WOODRUFF is still a member of the law firm of Woodruff and Ward, Healey Building, Atlanta, Georgia. He has been practicing law in Atlanta practically ever since he finished his law course. He is married and has a son who is headed for Washington and Lee.

PEABODY HOWARD is district attorney general of Hamilton County, Chattanooga, Tennessee.

1924

By OTIS HOWE, Class Agent, 1940-41

JOHN HENDON is president of the Washington and Lee Alumni in Birmingham and has been very successful in the parking-lot business in that city. He is still a red-hot Washington and Lee supporter, in spite of being kept busy with civic interests in his own home town.

JOE HOPKINS writes again from Clarksdale, Mississippi, where he practices law when not representing his district in the State Senate. Joe is still one of our class bachelors, of which we have entirely too many.

ED HOWARD is lucky enough to be teaching at Washington and Lee. He writes that while they are concerned about the effect of the war on the enrollment, they will always carry on. Those who, like Ed, have the privilege of maintaining their contacts with the University, do not know how much the rest of us envy them that opportunity.

OTIS HOWE, your class agent, is engaged in the manufacture of hardwood lumber and in farming at Wabash, Arkansas, near Helena. We are just about seventy miles below Memphis, near the Mississippi River. Cotton is the principal crop of this section.

JIMMIE HUFF has had a new son at his house this year, Jimmie Junior, so he is a very proud father. He is still located in Columbus, Georgia, with the Flournoy Realty Company.

STUART McCORKLE is director of Municipal Research at the University of Texas. He was in Lexington twice this last year and was impressed with the improvements at Washington and Lee.

JOHN H. WILLIAMS is another member of our class who still keeps the home fires burning as a professor at Washington and Lee.

BILL MCKNIGHT now lives in Demarest, New Jersey, where he is interested in the manufacture of flavoring extracts and cosmetics. He has been married four years and takes an active interest in the New York Alumni meetings.

JOE McMATH practices medicine in Cincinnati, Ohio. We hear from him each year, but he doesn't tell us much about himself.

W. A. PEAVY still resides in Shreveport, Louisiana. He writes that he attended two other universities after leaving Washington and Lee and received degrees from both of them. Bill is now sales manager for the Peavy-Moore Lumber Company, Inc., of Shreveport, Louisiana, and Deweyville, Texas.

FRANCIS PLOWMAN wrote after an extended three weeks trip which brought him as far south as Memphis. He still resides in Wallingford, Pennsylvania.

NORFLEET TURNER, another outstanding class member, has made his mark as executive vice-president of the First National Bank of Memphis. He has a fine family and is always interested in the alumni meetings. The article about him in the Alumni Magazine was excellent.

1925

By BRUCE GANNOWAY, Class Agent

ED RIETZE has the Rietze Distributing Company, Louisville, Ky, wholesale distributors of Hotpoint Electrical Appliances. His only complaint is that he has trouble getting sufficient merchandise to take care of his needs. That's good news, Ed, and it's also good news to know that you and your wife have two children to add happiness to your home. It will be good to see you when you come down on that trip.

ALLAN SLOAN says that nothing important has happened to him during the past year other than that his wife presented him with a daughter on October 31, 1940. Well, a little baby can make a lot of things that would have been important fade into insignificance. Allan also has a son, three years old. Allan and I were both "born right" for war. We were too young for the last one, and just missed the draft by three months this time. But he is with the Jeff Hunt Road Machinery Company, in Columbia, South Carolina, supplying machines extensively in all phases of the Defense Program in South Carolina. By the way, he says that Irwin Stolz, '24, is his neighbor across the street.

HENRY HILL, in Louisville, is the agency associate of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company, having been with this company for 16 years this June. The first time I was in Henry's room at Washington and Lee was a few days after we got there. He mentioned that his father was in the Insurance business, and at the same time unpacked a dozen Manhattan shirts that he had just bought. I almost took up insurance myself, feeling that it must be a great business. As far as I know Henry will have the honor of having the first son to enter Washington and Lee from our class, for he now has a boy 14. His daughter will soon be 13, and is heading for Sweet Briar when the time comes. When Henry returned to Washington and Lee he got the same shock I experienced when I took my wife to show her those hallowed halls. They're beautiful, and safe, but you kind of miss the old worn stairs, the wide boards, and the initialed desks. The Louisville Alumni Association is very active, and had thirty boys at Washington and Lee this year.

TOM LYLE, living in Gary, Indiana, is the Chicago District Supervisor of the Factory Stores Company. He writes, "My company is in the Industrial Feeding business, serving the employees and executives of the steel mills. We have 23 stores here in the Chicago District." Tom has lived in Gary for five years, and has two children: Ann, 12 and a tow-headed son, 5.

Bo McMILLAN is in the ice and coal business in Athens, Tennessee, as well as agent for a motor transportation company. He and Mrs. McMillan have lived in Athens for 12 years, and have a boy, 11; and a girl, 9. Besides his regular work, Bo is president of the Kiwanis, county chairman of Christmas Seal Sales, and chairman of the Finance Committee of the Red Cross. Add to that his membership in the high school athletic council, and being an elder and treasurer of the Presbyterian Church, and Bo is a busy man.

1927

PRESTON MOORE is teaching in the department of history and political science at The Citadel, Charleston, South Carolina.

LUTHER MACKINNON is with the MacKinnon Hardwood Company, Greenville, Alabama.

LUTHER H. REDCAY has, for the past three years, been executive director of the Snyder County Board of Assistance, Selinsgrove, Pennsylvania. This is a civil service position responsible for administering all types of public assistance in the county for the department of Public Assistance in Pennsylvania. He is married and has two daughters aged ten and seven.
