The President's Page

On Valentine's eve, when I write these notes, we seem to be midway between two high spots of this memorable year, December 31 when the first phase of our Bicentennial Campaign closed and April when the culminating cycle of Bicentennial celebrations begins. Of many topics I should fervently wish to present, I choose only two or three.

* * * * *

The dominant emotion in my heart is gratitude, a humble gratitude with rich corollaries of inspiration and dedication, for all who made possible the achievement of that first phase of the Bicentennial Campaign. Dr. Desha's report, printed elsewhere in this issue, gives interesting details of the response from donors which enabled us to claim the generous participating sum proposed by the General Education Board.

My thanks, stirring within my heart as representative of a great institution and as an individual who loves it devotedly, are everlasting to all who made possible that result—to the contributors, nearly four thousand of them, to the committees who assumed the burden in a hundred communities, to all friends who spoke an influential word in our behalf, to the class-agents who gave their energies of the past year to emphasizing the opportunity.

* * * * *

Speaking of class-agents reminds me of this fact; I hope all alumni understand the program for the current year. The Bicentennial goal has not, of course, been fully attained. The class-agent plan will be resumed but with this important provision, that alumni who wish to make further or new contribution to the permanent assets (the Bicentennial Fund) may do so through the class-agent plan. May many alumni add to the substantial donations of last year!

It would be easy and it would be engaging for me to write this whole sketch upon the service of those permanent funds. For example, the generosity of our friends has guaranteed for us that approximately 100 fine boys can attend the University every year from this time forever without paying tuition fees; this happy consequence follows the building up of scholarship funds, and this consequence is the first factor we considered in raising tuition, an inevitable step in the period of sky-rocketing cost.

* * * * *

But the enlargement of permanent funds means more, I suspect, than any one of us can now understand. The security of the independent institution of higher learning now promises to be one of our major safeguards of freedom. In a society that seems to move with terrible constancy in the direction of collectivism, with agencies and institutions and organizations clamoring for governmental sustaining and thereby surrendering at least in posse control to government authorities, the independent institution for training leadership, devoted to public welfare but free of political domination, may prove one of the final citadels of the liberty Americans must always cherish. The point would stand vast elaboration here, but I think its pertinence is self-evident to all thoughtful friends of higher education.

* * * * *

Returning to the local program, I repeat our warm invitation to all alumni to return for the great alumni reunion, June 16-18. Mr. Young has delighted me by telling me that paid reservations have come in already for about 400 people. This occasion promises to bring to the campus the greatest group of alumni that ever assembled in Lexington. With every sincerity of the heart, we plead that all alumni who can possibly arrange the trip should be with us at that time.

Francis P. Turner
President

Reunion in Lexington

You will see more of your friends than ever before

Circle these dates on your calendar: June 16, 17 and 18.

They are the dates of the National Bicentennial Celebration and Alumni Reunion. They are the days when Washington and Lee will welcome more of her returning sons than have ever gathered on the campus at one time in the 200-year history of the institution.

A program you will enjoy is being arranged with the collaboration of an Alumni Advisory Committee. But considerably more important than any program is the dead certainty that, no matter what class you belong to, you will see more of your classmates here at that time than you ever have since you were a student or may ever see again. An advance survey indicates that at least a thousand alumni are already planning to attend; this is the year when every class can hold a reunion, and the program—at the demand of the Advisory Committee—is leaving you plenty of opportunity to foregather with your classmates and friends.

Now for the details:

Registration will be held in a big tent that is going to be set up in front of Doremus Gymnasium. There you will sign in, and there the committee will assign you to your quarters, and tell you where you can get in touch with your classmates. Every class will have a headquarters somewhere on the campus.

Thursday night at 8 o'clock there will be an informal get-together for those who have arrived; music will be provided, registration will continue, and you can look over the crowd and see who's here. This is when your wife is bound to run across somebody she knew at Sweet Briar, St. Agatha's, or Stonewall Jackson High School.

Registration will start again at 7 a.m. Friday morning and will continue until 10.

There will be a religious service in Lee Chapel at 10:30 a.m.—thanksgiving for the work that Washington and Lee has been permitted to do for two centuries, prayer that she may keep true to her ideals in the Third Century.

At 11 a.m. there will be a general alumni meeting in the Gymnasium to get through the business of the Alumni Association, elect officers, and plan the program for the coming year. Business will be over at 12 noon and the fun begins.

Then we will inaugurate something that is new to W. and L. reunions—a "parade" (W. and L.—not V.M.I.—style) past a "reviewing stand" to the Memorial Gateway. Each class, marshalled by its chairman, will march in a body, and you'll have a chance to see who got here fustest with the mostest.

At the gateway there will be an old-fashioned barbecue pit. Your class will assemble around its banner, and you will eat in the shade of the trees on the lower campus. Alumni and wives will be the guests of the University at this meal, and it will be the only one where everybody will eat together. That's because we're going to have so many people back that there's no one eating place in Lexington that will accommodate all of them.

Your other meals, incidentally, will be taken with your classmates and their wives. We can't tell you which group will eat where until the advance registration is over, and we get an idea of just how many there will be in each group.

Finals, 1948

Some groups will eat in the dining hall, some in several fraternity houses that will be kept open, and others in various Lexington eating places. That's the way the alumni poll indicated it should be.

At 5 that afternoon there will be a tea at the home of President and Mrs. Gaines, to which all returning alumni and their wives are invited.

Then, at 9 p.m. there will be a dance at the gymnasium. This will be the Alumni Ball, but it will not be just a side-show of the Final Dance Set. Finals and commencement will be over. The entire reason for having the Reunion late this year is because if school were still in session we wouldn't have room in Lexington for everyone who is planning to come. This Alumni Ball will be informal, so you don't have to bother about packing your tux. Tell your wife she won't need an evening dress, but she will probably want an afternoon formal for that tea at the President's home.

The dance will go on until 1 a.m., but you can sleep late Saturday morning.

The Convocation which marks the National Celebration of Washington and Lee's 200th anniversary starts at 11 o'clock sharp Saturday. There will be a speaker of national prominence (maybe The President), the 200th session of Washington and Lee will officially close, and the University will be embarked on its Third Century.

After that we're leaving you on your own. You can get together with your fraternity brothers, or the Kentucky Club you used to belong to can stage its first get-together in "too many years." Here's a chance for the Sigmas to join forces, or the ex-editors of The Ring-tum Phi, or the Southern Conference championship teams, or the old-timers from the Albert Sidney and Harry Lee boat clubs, or the law alumni, or the Gauley Bridge Hunt Club.

That afternoon those of you who wish to can taper off with a quiet expedition to Goshen Pass or Cave Mountain Lake, or play golf, or drop by to settle that unpaid bill with your old landlady, or run down to Natural Bridge, or climb House Mountain, if you think you're still young. Our part of the show is definitely over, but we'd like to have you stay around and frolic freely.

Now, if you'll glance back over that schedule, you'll notice that we've left you plenty of time to develop your own recreation, to visit friends in the vicinity or to chat with your old friends—Thursday evening, from two to five and from six to nine Friday, and after the convocation on Saturday. If the ladies want to stage a bridge tournament, we'll provide the tables in the Student Union, if somebody wants to organize a ball game between classes, Cap'n Dick Smith will scare up some equipment, and all of Wilson Field and the Alumni Intramural Field are at your disposal. You may want to use the rowing shells for a crew race on the James.

Here's some important information about accommodations:

Information about accommodations was sent out January 20 with reply cards and envelopes (if you didn't get one, write Cy Young immediately), and reservations will be made in order of the receipt of these cards.

This is the general plan of accommodations:

Older alumni and their wives will be housed in Lexington and Natural Bridge hotels, which have already been reserved by the University. No hotels are booking accommodations direct, since we have contracted for all the rooms available during the three-day reunion.

The younger alumni will be accommodated in the remodelled dormitories (if you're thinking of Lees Dorm as it looked when you bade it goodbye in 1937, you're in for a pleasant surprise) and in some of the fraternity houses.

The best quarters will be reserved for those alumni who are bringing their wives, but the accommodations are being arranged so that you will room and eat in the same building with the fellows you were in school with. There is a place on the card for you to indicate your class preference in case you are one of those whose stay here was interrupted by a war, or if for some other reasons you are better acquainted with the members of another class.

A number of the fraternities are being kept open to provide meals, and you can eat with your classmates either there or at some other eating place in Lexington. House mothers will remain in town to welcome you, and you will be invited to use the lounge and facilities (ice cubes and mint included) of the house to which you are assigned.

If you want to assure yourself of the best possible accommodations, be sure to get your card in by the deadline—March 15. And don't forget to enclose the reservation fee of $5 per person. This will be returned to you May 15 if something occurs before that time to keep you from coming. Otherwise, the fee will go toward paying for your room.

The rates at the hotel will be the ones they usually charge for the room you occupy. Rates in the dormitories and fraternities will be slightly lower. The only other charges you will have to pay will be the cost of your meals.

The University is appropriating a sum to cover the barbecue, the dance and all the other expenses in connection with your entertainment.

The cost of keeping the dormitory and fraternity houses open for an extra week will be pro-rated, and a flat per person charge will be made for your stay.

If you wait until after March 15 to send in your reservation card, we don't guarantee that we can provide you with quarters, but we'll still try our best.

If you have been in the habit of staying at the home of friends in Lexington or near-by, make your own arrangements. However, we suggest that you write immediately to arrange for this, since we know that accommodations will be at a premium, and you will do better to allow yourself time to book a room through the Reunion Committee in case friends can't accommodate you.

Bicentennial Academic Convocation

The academic exercises which mark the Bicentennial of Washington and Lee University will be held in Lee Chapel on Washington-Cincinnati Day—April 12—before a gathering of prominent American educators.

President Harold W. Dodds of Princeton University, the institution from which Washington and Lee inherited its philosophy of independence and individualism and the core of its liberal arts curriculum, will make the principal address.

His audience will be the presidents of the colleges in the Southern University Conference, presidents and faculty representatives of other institutions of higher learning and foundations, eminent American scholars, and representatives of the students and alumni of Washington and Lee.

About two hundred other institutions will send delegates to the celebration. The invitations are being limited to those colleges with a historical organization, geographical or functional relation to Washington and Lee.

"We profoundly regret that the limited capacity of Lee Chapel—and a ceremony of this importance could not be held elsewhere—does not permit us to invite delegates from many other institutions for which we have high respect." Dr. Gaines said.

President Harold W. Dodds

He explained that the academic ceremonies will not be open to the public, for that reason and also because of the lack of accommodations in Lexington for out-of-town guests while the student bodies of W. and L. and V.M.I. are in residence.

"We feel that these ceremonies, while they have the greatest significance to us as one of the oldest academic groups in the nation, will not be of sufficient interest to alumni to warrant a trip to Lexington just two months before the National Celebration and Bicentennial Reunion in their honor, which will draw the largest crowd ever to gather on the campus."

The committee of National Sponsors of the Bicentennial, the board of trustees and the faculty of the University will be present. The alumni will be represented by the president and board of trustees of Alumni, Incorporated, and the students by the president of the Student Body and a delegation of undergraduates. The remaining students and others interested may hear the address and exercises by public address system.

After the academic procession into the Chapel, the ceremonies will begin with a recognition of the delegates of other institutions. Then honorary degrees will be awarded to men of letters who have attained prominence in the educational and literary life of America.

President Dodds is expected to discuss liberal education in America and the future of the liberal arts college.

Following the ceremonies, the delegates will gather for luncheon at the Natural Bridge Hotel, at which time several representatives of other groups will make short speeches of congratulations.

During the afternoon, delegates and their wives will be the guests of President and Mrs. Gaines at a tea at the President's home.

The day's program will conclude with a complimentary full-dress review by the cadets of Virginia Military Institute.

The date of the celebration—April 12—is that of the annual Washington-Cincinnati Convocation which commemorates George Washington's gift of endowment and the gift of the Virginia Society of the Cincinnati which enabled Augusta Academy to become Washington College.

On the following two days, the Southern University Conference will honor Washington and Lee by holding its annual conference in Lexington as the guest of the University.

Alex M. Hitz, '14, Author

Alex M. Hitz, '14, is the author of "A History of The Cathedral of St. Philip," Diocese of Atlanta, Georgia, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, published by the Cathedral Chapter in connection with its centennial anniversary, 1847-1947. Mr. Hitz is Historian of the Cathedral and Registrar of the Diocese.

Law School Centennial Celebration

The Centennial of the Washington and Lee University School of Law will be observed May 10 and 11, when the Honorable John W. Davis will inaugurate the John Randolph Tucker Memorial Lectures in Law. The second lecture will be delivered at a Convocation on May 11, commemorating the founding of the Law School in 1849. Founded by Judge John White Brockenbrough in 1866 as the Lexington Law School, this was affiliated with Washington College at General Lee's invitation in 1866 and in 1870 became one of the regular Schools of the institution.

John Randolph Tucker

The Tucker Memorial Lectures—which will be delivered annually and published by the University—commemorate the distinguished contribution to legal education of Dean John Randolph Tucker.

Mr. Davis will deliver two lectures on the subject: John Randolph Tucker—The Man and His Work. The first lecture will deal with Mr. Tucker's life and personality, the second with his principles of constitutional law as viewed in the light of the present day situation.

Mr. Davis received his academic degree from Washington and Lee in 1892 and his law degree in 1895, taught in the School of Law in 1896 and 1897, and was awarded an honorary LL.D. degree by the University in 1915. A former Solicitor General of the United States, and a leading member of the Bar of the Supreme Court, Mr. Davis is an Honorary Bencher of the Middle Temple (England) and in 1922 was president of the American Bar Association. In 1924, he was Democratic nominee for President of the United States, and was Ambassador to Great Britain from 1918 to 1921.

Mr. Davis is general chairman of the University's Bicentennial Celebration, and is a member of the University Board of Trustees.

Dean Clayton E. Williams of the School of Law has announced that all alumni of Washington and Lee are cordially invited to the lectures and Convocation. Plans are being made to invite the faculties of other law schools in Virginia and neighboring states, and the members of the Virginia State Bar Association.

The Bicentennial Office

W. and L.'s Commemorative Stamp

Roy J. Grimley, '21

Through the persistent and untiring effort of Roy J. Grimley, '21, Jesse M. Donaldson, Postmaster General of the United States, announced on November 23 that a 3-cent stamp, commemorating the Bicentennial of Washington and Lee University, would be issued from the Lexington, Virginia, Post Office on April 12, 1949.

Because the Post Office Department had a surfeit of issues of postage stamps in 1948, and because it had refused commemoratives to other colleges and universities, the first request to the department for this stamp, made by Lloyd A. Myers, '31, of Bristol, Tennessee-Virginia, was definitely refused. Nothing daunted by what seemed an impossible situation, Roy Grimley, a philatelist and stamp editor of the Ridgewood, New Jersey, Herald News and the Teaneck, New Jersey, Sun, and five times president of the New York alumni chapter, decided to pick up the ball.

With the cooperation of Dr. Francis Pendleton Gaines, President of the University, who wrote Mr. Donaldson and appointed Grimley "general" of a staff that he, Grimley, was to select, he went to work. Dr. L. J. Desha, '06, recently Dean of the University and now Director of the Bicentennial Program, rendered valuable assistance, as did Harry St. G. T. Carmichael, '99, member of the University Board of Trustees; John C. Morrison, '25; Lloyd A. Myers, '31; Dr. James Lewis Howe and Carter Glass, Jr., '14, both of whom are nationally known philatelists; Clayton E. Williams, '12, Dean of the Washington and Lee School of Law; Hon. John W. Flannagan, '07; Hon. Clarence J. Brown, '16; Edmund D. Campbell, '23, and Chapin Boyd, '49, who acted as a student representative on the committee. Non-alumni who rendered valuable help were A. Willis Robertson, junior Senator from Virginia and Senators McKellar and Barkley (now Vice-President Barkley).

The crusade was not easily won. Roy Grimley is not a grim man, under normal conditions, but he felt his cause was just, and he and his associates left no stone unturned until their mission was accomplished.

Illustrated herewith is the final design for the stamp, adopted by the Post Office Department. It was suggested as the design by the Washington and Lee committee. It shows portraits of Washington and Lee as well as the ancient Washington

Hall, over which can be seen a statue of General George Washington.

April 12 will really be a busy day on the Washington and Lee campus, and the town of Lexington will be crowded. Local caravansaries have already been booked solid for the guests of the University for the Academic Celebration scheduled for 11 a.m. on that day. However, on January 3, Dr. Gaines appointed a committee on local arrangements to coordinate the philatelic with the academic features of the celebration. With Dr. James Lewis Howe and the Hon. Carter Glass, '14, as advisory members, and with far from grim chairman Grimley as busy as a bird dog smilingly offering invaluable advice to those ignorant of stamp matters and "building fires" which are still burning brightly throughout the college community, the committee is now working on the final details of arrangements which it is hoped will make the day memorable for both doctors of philosophy and for those philatelic phriends who might also qualify as doctors of philately.

Postmaster General, the Hon. Jesse M. Donaldson, has been invited as a guest of the University for the occasion, and there will be a 'First Day' ceremony, in front of the McCormick Library at 9 a.m., during which President Gaines will be presented with the album containing the first stamps.

Official First Day Covers

"Official First Day Covers" have been designed and ordered, and one will be sent to each alumnus containing a stuffer card with a message from the University. The cachet on these envelopes will be an engraving in five colors of the coat of arms of the University with a suitable wording underneath. Additional covers, served with a single stamp (absolutely no block of four or plate numbers), will be available at twenty-five cents each, or four for one dollar. Profits from sale of the covers will be turned over to the War Memorial Scholarship Fund now being raised by the students in memory of Washington and Lee men who died in World War II.

Orders for these additional covers should be addressed to: The Stamp Committee, Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Virginia, with the cash enclosed.

ODK 'Taps' Alumni

In the annual "tapping" exercises of Omicron Delta Kappa, held in the Washington and Lee Gymnasium on December 10, 21 undergraduates and 18 honorary memberships were awarded outstanding men in their fields. Omicron Delta Kappa was founded at Washington and Lee in 1914 and since that time 53 groups have been established in colleges throughout the nation. The purposes of the organization are three-fold; to recognize men who have attained a high standard of efficiency in collective activities, and to inspire others to strive for conspicuous attainments along similar lines; to bring together the most representative men in all phases of collegiate life, and thus to create an organization which would help to mould the sentiment of the institution on questions of local and inter-collegiate interest; and to bring together members of the faculty and the student body on the basis of mutual interest and understanding.

Henry R. Luce, editor of Time and Life, was the principal speaker at the assembly ceremonies, and was among those tapped by the society.

Alumni elected to ODK include:

Mr. John B. Atkins, '20, leading business man in Shreveport, Louisiana.

Hon. Fadjo Cravens, LL.B., '20, Representative, 76-80th Congresses.

Mr. Henry W. Dew, B.S., '11, Jacksonville, Florida, business executive.

Mr. Benjamin F. Fiery, A.B., '13, Cleveland, Ohio, attorney.

Hon. John W. Flannagan, Jr., LL.B., '07, lawyer, Bristol, Virginia.

Mr. George Evans Goodwin, Jr., B.A., '39, reporter on the Atlanta Journal and winner of Pulitzer Prize, 1948, for "distinguished local reporting."

Mr. Garland Gray, M.A., '22, banker, Waverly, Virginia.

Mr. Walter E. Hoffman, LL.B., '31, Norfolk lawyer and prominent alumnus.

Mr. David D. Johnson, LL.B., '23, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, attorney.

Judge Alonzo G. Lively, LL.B., '12, Lebanon, Virginia, lawyer, former judge of 27th Judicial Court.

Mr. Gilmore Nunn, '31, Lexington, Kentucky, business man and radio broadcasting executive.

Judge Richard Buckner Spindle, Jr., LL.B., '10, Norfolk, Virginia, member of Judicial Committee, Virginia State Bar, member, Judicial Council of Virginia.

Mr. William L. Webster, A.B., '12, auto distributor and hotel owner, Schenectady, New York.

The four other honorary appointments in addition to Mr. Luce, were:

Senator Thomas G. Burch, Martinsville, Virginia.

Mr. John D. Ewing, editor and publisher, Shreveport Times and president of two radio stations.

Mr. Walter C. Johnson, secretary manager of Southern Newspaper Publishers Association and representative of that organization on the American Council on Education for Journalism.

Hon. Thomas B. Stanley, Stanleytown, Virginia, former member and speaker of Virginia House of Delegates.

More Scholarships Balance Tuition Increase

The Washington and Lee board of trustees has voted an increase of $100 in tuition fees, effective at the beginning of the 201st session next September.

Announcement that tuition would be raised to an average $450 a year was made by President Francis P. Gaines in his annual "State of the University" address delivered at Founder's Day exercises January 19. Dr. Gaines said the raise was necessary "to meet greatly increased costs of operation."

Dr. Gaines told the assembled student body and faculty that "a fundamental problem of every institution today is the increase in basic operational expenses. Our auditor's report shows that the cost of coal has more than doubled since 1940-41, costs of building supplies and labor for upkeep and maintenance have tripled, wages have more than doubled, scientific equipment costs have gone up 50 to 150 per cent, and we expect 85 teachers in the next term as compared with 69 before the war."

In addition to rising operational costs, President Gaines cited the University's obligation to raise faculty salaries to meet universally increased living expenses. Figures compiled by the University's department of accounting and statistics reveal that instructional cost per student, based entirely on teacher salaries, has risen from $212 in the 1940-41 session to $293 this year.

In the academic divisions the tuition, computed on the basis of semester hours work carried by the student, will average $180 a semester. Law school tuition will be a fixed $180 a semester. The University Fee, allotted for causes for which the University merely serves as agent, such as medical, hospital, library, recreation and similar elements, will be raised from $25 to $45 a semester.

While the Washington and Lee tuition is generally higher than other southern institutions, the present $350 tuition is far out of line with comparable colleges and universities over the country. For example, Swarthmore, Haverford, Dartmouth, Williams, Colgate and Oberlin all have appreciably higher tuition rates than Washington and Lee.

Counter-balancing the possible adverse effect imposed by the tuition raise upon some students and prospective students is a proportionate increase in the number of new scholar-

Bicentennial Progress Report

The Bicentennial Office is happy to report excellent progress for 1948. During that year the total cash fund increased $737,000 to a total of $1,643,000; the number of alumni subscribers grew from 500 to 3225; and alumni contributions showed a gain of $308,000. Thanks to the heavy flow of subscriptions late in December we were able to claim, and have banked, the last of the $300,000 conditionally pledged by the General Education Board.

The figures in the tables which follow are based on cash receipts from the beginning of the campaign through December 31, 1948. The tables are self explanatory and further comment seems unnecessary.

After careful consideration, we decided against our original plan of publishing the names of contributors at this time, as was done a year ago. To do so would swell this issue of the Alumni Magazine most unreasonably—or else would compel the omission of much material of greater immediate interest. And, lacking the 1949 subscribers, the record would still be incomplete. Instead, it has been decided to reserve this list for the final and complete report which will be issued at the end of the Bicentennial year.

In the meanwhile, we take this opportunity to express again our sincere appreciation both to the four thousand alumni, parents, and friends who have given of their means, and to the several hundred alumni who have given also of their time, their counsel and their efforts. Counting on this support in the future as in the past, and cheered by the record of 1948, we are pressing forward toward our three million dollar objective.

The Race with the G. E. B.

The Story of the Last Few Days of 1948

If you're an average alumnus, the chances are you sat down to your desk one late day in December, opened the drawer that was bulging with the publications Washington and Lee has been sending you for two years, looked sadly at a checkbook that had more stubs in it than blanks, cut short wishful thinking about how you wanted to give to the Bicentennial, settled for whatever you could give that day, and put it in the mail before December 31 so the General Education Board would add 25 per cent to it.

That's what more than a thousand average alumni did during December, and so we say:

"Thank God for the average alumnus!"

The spate of letters that started early in December reached its crest the week after Christmas, when gifts came in from all over, from chairmen, from committeemen, from class agents and from individuals—in business reply envelopes, by regular mail and special delivery, by telegraph and by hand. No checks came in by telephone, but one chairman did phone from west of the Mississippi to say that he had been sick and unable to mail in some gifts. He asked Cy Young to deposit cash to cover them so Washington and Lee would get the Rockefeller money.

Everybody in Washington College got in on the act, as alumni, parents and friends addressed letters to whoever popped into their minds. Dr. Gaines got scores of checks, as did Treasurer Earl Mattingly and Alumni Secretary Cy Young. Some were addressed to Deans Gilliam and Leyburn, and some to the Registrar. Even the Editor of the Bicentennial Alumni Directory got a few.

On December 1st, the Bicentennial was $192,000 short of the amount needed to claim every dollar of the GEB's provisional offer, and this had to be raised by the end of the month. When the students left for the holidays, we were $98,000 short, and when the Bicentennial staff went home on Christmas Eve, we were still $23,000 from the goal. At the close of business on Wednesday, December 29, we thought we would go over, and when the Post Office called Thursday morning to say there were more letters than the P. O. box would hold, we knew it.

The G.E.B.'s final check was deposited, and when the dust had cleared and the 1948 receipts were added up, the grand total came to $1,642,937.85, including the $300,000 from the G.E.B.—every cent of it. We actually made it with a margin of some $50,000 to spare.

It was mid-January before all the gifts received in December—1747 of them—were totalled and put through the complicated accounting system that insures each gift will be credited to the donor's class, and earmarked for the particular fund for which he designated it. It was even later than that before President Gaines—who insisted on seeing and acknowledging every contribution—waded through the pile of gift records on his desk.

So, if your contribution was not receipted immediately, blame the delay on dimensions of a job that overwhelmed our officials and staff. More gifts were received in December than in the entire preceding eight-month period.

Perhaps the most influential appeals, to judge from the letters and notes which accompanied many of the checks, were the series of letters written early in December by Christopher T. Chenery, '09, executive chairman of the Bicentennial, and the letters which many Class Agents wrote to their classmates during the fall.

Mr. Chenery's letters stated that only 17 per cent of the alumni had contributed. Within three weeks after the letters had been received, the number of alumni contributors had almost doubled. Coincidental with the flood of correspondence here in Lexington there was a backwash of replies and checks in Mr. Chenery's office in New York that demanded all the resourcefulness of his secretary. (She even got one letter addressed to Christopher Wrenn.)

The current total of alumni contributors (the number of gifts is larger, because many of these alumni have given several times) is 3190—the largest group, both numerically and percentage-wise, ever to contribute at one time to Washington and Lee.

W. and L. Montgomerys of Montgomery, West Virginia

Beginning with Laurence Montgomery, who entered Washington and Lee in 1923, a member of this family has been in attendance here consecutively, with the exception of the war period, for 26 years. The mothers of the Vickers and Carson were Montgomerys, all of them from Montgomery, West Virginia. They are: Laurence Montgomery, '23-'28, LL.B.; Arnold Vickers, '26-'31, LL.B.; Howard Carson, '27-'33, B.A., LL.B.; Carl Vickers, '28-'34, B.A., LL.B.; A. W. Vickers, '33-'37, B.S.; Laurence Carson, '36-'40, B.S.; William Carson, '39-'43, B.S.; Earl Vickers, '41-'43, '46-'49, LL.B.; and George Vickers, '46-'47.

Dr. Charles W. Turner of the Washington and Lee history department has just published his tenth in the series of articles on the history of Virginia railroads. These articles, covering phases of railroad history, have been published in various historical publications.

The latest article, "Virginia Railroads' Service to Farmers 1829 to 1860," appeared in the fall issue of Agricultural History Magazine, publication of the history section of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It compares the services rendered farmers by the railroads with other means of transportation, dealing specifically with 17 railroad lines. The increase in land values and population and the part the railroads played in this is dealt with.

An opportunity has come to Washington and Lee to purchase for the museum of the biology department a mounted specimen of the extinct passenger pigeon. These native American birds, depicted by Audubon in his ornithological studies have been extinct along with the Carolina Paroquet, since the early part of this century. Both birds were native to Virginia in the early days.

At the present time no specimens are available except as a private collection of birds becomes broken up for sale. Another specimen may not be available for many years and then only at a higher price than the present price of $200.00. It is hoped that some alumnus of Washington and Lee, or group of alumni, or friend of the University who reads this note may desire to purchase this passenger pigeon for the University.

Wytheville, Virginia, Alumni Dinner Meeting, November 9, 1948

With the Local Chapters

ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

Alumni of Washington and Lee held a dinner meeting in the George Vanderbilt Hotel on December 29. The film, prepared in connection with the 200th anniversary of the founding of the University, with scenes of the campus, was shown. WYTHEVILLE, VIRGINIA

Washington and Lee Alumni of Bland and Wythe Counties held their first dinner meeting at the George Wythe Hotel in Wytheville, Virginia, on November 9, 1948, with thirteen alumni, their wives and guests present. After an enjoyable dinner, Judge H. Massillon Heuser entertained those present by reminiscences concerning his experiences at Washington and Lee in 1889-90 when he attended the Law School. Among the interesting experiences related was his attendance with the Student Body at the unveiling of the Lee equestrian statue in Richmond in 1890. Following Judge Heuser's talk the Washington and Lee sound-color movie of the University was shown. Those present expressed their approval and pleasure at this excellent portrayal of the campus and the traditions of Washington and Lee. Arrangements for the dinner were made by Marion S. Sanders, '17, who presided.

Tuition Increase

ships available to young men possessing every qualification for satisfactory college work and future usefulness except financial resources.

Through the generosity of donors to the Bicentennial Fund, the University was able to announce almost simultaneously with the tuition increase that new "Third Century Scholarships" worth more than $50,000 to recipients are being offered to young men desiring to enroll as freshmen for the 201st session.

When added to the present program of grants-in-aid now available through permanently endowed and departmental scholarships, more than 100 men may attend Washington and Lee with financial assistance. The 30 new scholarships already created in the Bicentennial program range in value from a top of $3,500 down to $900 each. Other scholarships may possibly be added before the beginning of the September term.

Applications are now being received by the committee on scholarships. Candidates will be required to take the aptitude test of the College Entrance Examination Board.

An announcement of the new scholarships distributed to preparatory and high schools says aid will be awarded "on the basis of academic record, character, need, and promise of future usefulness."

Dean Frank J. Gilliam, chairman of the faculty committee on scholarships, said that "In awarding these scholarships the committee in charge will make every effort to select those candidates who have the greatest promise for future usefulness. The distribution of awards will be on as wide a geographical basis as possible, consistent with the stipulations of donors."

Dean Gilliam added that alumni throughout the nation can support the scholarship program by encouraging promising young men who meet the qualifications to apply directly to the scholarship committee.

George Barclay, New Football Coach

By Bill Bien

George Barclay eased his substantial frame back in the revolving chair and flexed his fingers; he'd just finished shaking the hands of assorted football players, students, faculty members, and well-wishers and his hand was getting tired.

Outside, two workmen were busy tacking a new sign on the door: "George Barclay—Football Head Coach."

Washington and Lee's new coach succeeds Art (Pappy) Lewis, who resigned his position as head coach in December to follow former VMI head coach Arthur (Slick) Morton to Mississippi State. Lewis gave up his W. and L. contract, which had two more years to run, for a line-coaching job.

It's going to be a tough job molding a football team out of what's left of last year's material and Barclay knows it.

But, he told his new charges at a football banquet early in February, "The first thing you have to do is to hit the books hard this semester." Washington and Lee is no athletic club, he realizes, and he knows the value of football men who are also good students.

Tipping the scales at 200 pounds, Barclay has edged past the 180-pound playing weight he carried at North Carolina in 1934 when he made all-American guard under Carl Snavely. Graduated in 1935, after three varsity seasons at UNC, Barclay played four games with the Brooklyn Dodgers professional football team, but retired with a smashed knee.

In 1936 he served as line coach at V.M.I. under Bill Raferty, and moved on to North Carolina as freshman football coach in 1937. Barclay left Carolina in 1940 for the job of football line coach and basketball head coach at Oberlin, and then went into the service.

During his three years in the Navy, the former all-American coached football at Georgia Preflight and Jacksonville Naval Air Station.

Following the war, Barclay moved to Dartmouth for one season as line coach, and then joined Jim Tatum at the University of Maryland as line coach. Barclay and Tatum had played together for three seasons at Carolina, and the new W. and L. grid pilot was Tatum's first choice when he was awarded the Maryland coaching position.

Barclay has a Bachelor of Arts Degree from North Carolina and has completed work for his master's degree except for a thesis.

"But I doubt if I'll get much time to finish it next year," says Barclay with a wry smile.

The W. and L. mentor has a wife and two daughters who are still living in College Park, Maryland. Reason: They have no place to drop their gear in Lexington.

"I'm still looking for a place to live all right," Barclay said. "Sure would like to meet an interested alumnus with a place for rent in Lexington."

"But, speaking of alumni," Barclay continued more seriously, "I wish you'd put in your story that whenever any Washington and Lee alumni are in town, I'd like very much to meet them. After all, the alumni are the ones who can influence good students who can also play football to come to school here."

Barclay is a young man with plans.

One of his plans is a four-day practice week next fall, and he warned the W. and L. gridmen recently: "You can make up your minds that some of you are not going to be playing the same positions next fall. We're going to be very weak through the line and some of you backfield men will be learning tackle plays before September."

"This pass-happy technique is out," says Barclay flatly. Next fall, if Washington and Lee is nothing else, it will be a team that knows its fundamentals. With a split-T formation that I'm planning to use, we'll have to do a lot of running; that means plenty of blocking.

So it looks as if the "aerial circus" has gone out of business. "It's out—this passing where half the time you catch the ball and the other half your opponent gets it."

The tackle slot is Barclay's chief pre-season worry. Two lettermen—Bob Smith and Don Fergusson—are doubtful starters because of crippling injuries, and another regular, John Tulloh, has left Washington and Lee because of scholastic difficulties.

But, meanwhile, spring practice will get underway about the end of February—weather permitting—and will run for five weeks. Then, says Barclay, he will have a better idea of just what he has in the way of material.

Regular practice sessions will open next September 1, no earlier because of conference regulations, which forbid opening workouts before that date. If, and that's a big one, all the players make grades all right this spring, Barclay will probably have 45 men on his varsity roster to open the season.

"The first four games next fall are the ones that worry me," he states. "If we can get by West Virginia, Georgia Tech, and those big outfits without too many injuries, we should roll along in good style."

No matter what happens next fall, you get the impression when talking with George Barclay, that he has confidence in himself, and that he'll turn out a fighting ball club—win, lose, or draw.

A Resumé of Winter Sports

By Bill Bien

With towering Bob Spessard at the helm, Washington and Lee's basketball squad is beginning to sizzle again this winter in a way reminiscent of old-time Blue Comet quintets.

As usual there is little tall timber around Doremus Gymnasium, but the Generals are still being mentioned prominently for a playoff spot in the annual Southern Conference Tournament at Durham, North Carolina.

GI Freshman Jay Handlan has grabbed many of the headlines this winter, through his high scoring accuracy, but several veteran squadmen are also playing major roles in the 1949 version of the Spessard court epic.

Joe Auer, a '47 transfer from West Virginia University, has sparked the Blue five in early contests. It was Auer who slated away a recent 64-58 victory over Roanoke College by dumping three quick baskets in the final minute of play.

Bob Goldsmith, playing his second year at center for the Generals, has been facing double-thick defenses all season but has still connected for an average 14 points per game. Notoriously near-sighted, Goldsmith recently received new shatter-proof glasses. His first comment: "So that's what the basket looks like!"

Auer and Handlan have been playing the forward positions, and Goldsmith at center. In addition, coach Spessard has a capable pair of starting guards.

Fred Vinson, Captain of the team, is playing out his last year of eligibility. As in past seasons, he's the man who keeps his teammates steady under fire.

Although Steve Ulaki labors under the handicap of a "trick" knee, he handles the other guard post in an efficient, aggressive manner. Most valuable as a floor-player, Ulaki makes few points but is always a crowd-pleaser with his fake-pass antics.

Behind these five stand a group of seasoned and dependable reserves, including forwards George Pierson and Chris Compton; and guards Ed Thomas and Jim Fahey.

Washington and Lee dropped a sleeper to East Tennessee State 50-44 in the season's opener, but came right back, to defeat George Washington 59-53. On the holiday road trip W. and L. lost to Western Kentucky 89-43, and to Morris-Harvey 68-67. They dropped one more to Duke at Lynchburg, 58-45, before smacking University of Virginia, 75-66, on the Cavaliers' home court.

Following the Virginia victory Spessard's quintet lost two more—to William and Mary 42-39 and North Carolina 69-52—and then evened accounts by winning two important ones from Virginia Tech, 66-58, and Roanoke College, 64-58. For good measure, the Generals rolled up a 73-48 count against Fort Meade just before examinations.

* * * * *

Wrestling Coach Harry Broadbent's major problem this season seems to be attempting to keep his matmen at Washington and Lee. Southern Conference 175-pound titleholder Bob Mahoney left the university last spring, and following latest exams 121-pound SC champion Cal Guest has withdrawn. Guest had been out of action part of this season, returning several weeks ago to pin his opponent when the Generals met and defeated Auburn, Southeast Conference champions last winter.

However, W. and L. still looks like the team to win the Southern Conference mat crown again this year. Such stalwart veterans as Ted Lonergan (128-pound class), Joe Sconce (136), Ken Finley (145), Irv Wicknick (155), Ken Lindell (165), Bill Metzel (175) and Jerry Jack (Heavyweight).

In five matches this winter the Generals have registered victories over Virginia, Hofstra, Auburn, and Newport News, while dropping a single match to Lehigh. Meanwhile the freshman squad has won two straight, from Virginia School for Blind, and Jefferson of Roanoke.

* * * * *

Freshman basketball coach Carl Wise is also pretty happy about his corps of first-year cagers, who haven't yet lost a game, and look like a lead-pipe cinch to race off with the state frosh title.

Boys like Talbot Trammell, Harry Deweese, Chuck Grove, Gil Bocetti, and Dave Hedge have been the sparks in the Brigadiers' victory drive.

WAR CRIMES

An amazing turn in the investigation of war crimes in Germany recently made public is revealed in what Time magazine terms an "incredible report" submitted to the U. S. Supreme Court and the U. S. Army on the notorious Malmedy massacre of American soldiers captured by the Germans in the Battle of the Bulge late in 1944. Handling the investigation and subsequent report which transformed what had originally appeared as an open-and-shut case in the German war crimes trials into something far more sinister was Atlanta lawyer Willis Meade Everett, Jr., class of 1920.

Everett, president of the Washington and Lee alumni chapter in the Georgia capitol, had been appointed by the United States to serve as defense counsel for 73 Germans brought to trial for the Malmedy massacre. After all the Germans had been found guilty of atrocities at Malmedy, 43 of them sentenced to death, Everett spent two years, at his own expense, pleading the case. As Time reveals, "Everett was no longer defending the Germans, most of whom he believed guilty; he was defending justice."

An Army commission set up to review Everett's findings finally corroborated the Everett report that U. S. prosecution teams had confessions from the Germans through a series of brutalities not unlike the misery to which the Germans had exposed their American prisoners at Malmedy. As a result of Everett's sensational disclosure, a U. S. commission has commuted the death sentences of 31 of the 43 condemned Germans and recommended clemency for the remaining twelve.

Howard-Rogers Legal Society, 1948

LEGAL SOCIETY FOUNDED

Washington and Lee saw the foundation of the Howard-Rogers Legal Society in the Spring of 1947, when thirty-eight law students, who planned to practice in West Virginia, banded together primarily to facilitate the transition from the class room to the court room.

The society was named to honor the memory of two Washington and Lee men, James Robert Howard, Gary, West Virginia, and James Patterson Rogers, Wheeling, West Virginia, both members of the class of 1939 at W. and L. and who were killed in service in World War II.

The program so far has consisted of meetings with outstanding members of the legal profession in West Virginia, and organized preparations for the bar examinations. Among those who have addressed the society are Arnold M. Vickers, W. and L., '31, of Montgomery, past president of the West Virginia State Senate, and Seldon S. McNeer, '16, of Huntington, past president of the West Virginia bar association.
