DEAN PUSEY BECOMES ACTING PRESIDENT AS DR. COLE DEPARTS

Professor Shillington bestows the kiss . . .
And you give the cheers . . . at Homecoming

Professor Shillington always draws cheers when he kisses Washington and Lee's Homecoming Queen. But this will be just one of the events to shout about on this year's Homecoming schedule—Saturday, November 11.

Fraternity houses will be gaily—and competitively—decorated. There will be a pep rally and torch light parade Friday night. Alumni will register and have coffee at the Alumni House Saturday morning and attend a luncheon at 12:30 p.m. at Evans Hall.

Washington and Lee will take the field against Southwestern at 2 p.m. on Wilson Field. Professor Shillington will bestow his kiss at halftime, and a post-game party at the Alumni House will cap the day.

Make your plans now to attend.

Dean Pusey Is Acting President

DR. WILLIAM W. PUSEY, III, dean of the College, has been named acting president of Washington and Lee. He assumed the duties of acting president Sept. 1, the date President Fred C. Cole left the University to become president of the Council on Library Resources, Inc., in Washington, D. C. Dr. Pusey will continue to serve as dean of the College.

Dr. Pusey's appointment was announced by Dr. Huston St. Clair, rector of the University's Board of Trustees. Dr. Pusey will serve as acting president until a new president is selected and takes office.

A selection committee of four trustees, in consultation with a faculty advisory committee and representatives of the Alumni Board of Directors, is working to choose a new president. The committee chairman is Dr. John Newton Thomas of Richmond, Va., a member of the Board of Trustees since 1938.

Dr. Pusey, 56, joined the faculty in 1939 as an associate professor of German and subsequently became a full professor and head of the department. He was named dean of the College in 1960.

A native of Wilmington, Del., Dr. Pusey received the B.S. degree from Haverford College, the A.M. from Harvard and his Ph.D. at Columbia. He has traveled extensively in Europe and Germany, studying at Bonn, Heidelberg, and Munster. His most recent trip to Germany was in August.

During World War II, he served 39 months in the U.S. Naval Reserve, attaining the rank of lieutenant commander. He was cited for his work as an interpreter in interrogating the German Naval Command at the close of the war.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa, Dr. Pusey also has held membership in the American Council of Learned Societies, the Southern Humanities Conference and the Modern Language Association of America. He is a member of Region V of the Selection Board for the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowships.

He is a former member of the Lexington, Va., and Rockbridge County School Boards and is a former president of the area Community Chest Drive.

Dr. Pusey is married to the former Mary Hope Smith of Mundy, Tex. They have two daughters, Mary Faith and Diana Enid. Their home is at 618 Marshall Street in Lexington.

President Cole: Regret and Acclaim

Eight Years
Of Hard Work
And Solid
Achievement

DR. FRED CARRINGTON COLE'S decision to leave the presidency of Washington and Lee University to become president of the Council on Library Resources, Inc., evoked an outpouring of regret on and off the campus. But this lament was the preface to acclaim of him as an effective educational administrator and as a good and true man.

A resolution adopted unanimously by the faculty said: "It is not too much to say that, because of the progressive attitude which has marked his eight-year tenure in the presidency, Washington and Lee has been brought to a new awareness of the distinctive contributions it can make to higher education. He leaves Washington and Lee with the potential and capability of maintaining and expanding its position of prestige and respect among the nation's academic community."

The Executive Committee of the Student Body, in a resolution of appreciation and respect, said:

"We congratulate the Board of Trustees on their action in bringing Dr. Cole to Washington and Lee eight years ago, and we only hope that they may find a successor as knowledgeable in the field of higher education, as capable in University administration, and as farsighted in his ideas as he."

An editorial in the Roanoke

A visitor's view of PRESIDENT COLE in his office.

Times noted that "the period of Dr. Cole's tenure has not been a placid one at the 218-year-old university over which Robert E. Lee once presided," but that he "was equal to the task" and made "lasting contributions."

Said the New-Gazette of Lexington: "Dr. Cole's term at the college has spanned what might be called a period of transition. Attitudes have been changing rapidly, especially among the young people. Integration has played its part, particularly in the educational world. He has met the problems arising from these developments squarely, with moderation but with firmness and dignity... It is not given to many men to have the impact on an institution that Dr. Cole has had on Washington and Lee in so short a time. His place will be difficult indeed to fill. But as expressed by one of his colleagues, the University has been fortunate to have him this long."

The Virginian-Pilot of Norfolk said, "Virginia is gratified at having benefited from his energies and vision." And Norfolk's Ledger-Star, after summarizing Dr. Cole's academic career and contributions to education at Washington and Lee and elsewhere, said, "And though Virginia's intellectual community suffers through Dr. Cole's departure, there is no doubt that education, whose roots are in the nation's libraries, will benefit as a whole."

Dr. Cole's personality, temperament and style came in for comment. "Quiet and unobtrusive," said the faculty resolution. The Virginian-Pilot spoke of "his calm, wise counsel" and called him a "man of quiet, understatement." Many persons who know him intimately refer to him as "basically a shy man." All attest to his courtesy and fair-mindedness, and many know that he can be incisive and emphatic about matters that mean much to him and to education.

At Washington and Lee, he exhibited little of the flair for dramatics that sometimes marked the administration of his predecessor, Francis P. Gaines. His oratory seldom touched peaks of eloquence. But he spoke well and effectively in matter-of-fact language that conveyed conviction and sincerity. He kept his emotions in check and eschewed sentimentality except on rare occasions as when he was visibly moved by the faculty's standing tribute to him at its June meeting.

Dr. Cole's personal ambitions, it might be said, coincided with his ambitions for Washington and Lee—to do the best he could for the institution he held in trust. As he succeeded, so did the University.

The faculty's resolution of tribute (the text of which accompanies this article) outlined Dr. Cole's major contributions to the University. A review of these contributions and others, even in brief, makes an impressive list:

- SUBSTANTIAL INCREASES in faculty salaries to make them competitive with those of much larger universities.

■ THE MORE THAN tripling of financial aid to students.

■ ESTABLISHMENT OF THE Robert E. Lee Research Program for undergraduates, an innovation that has been adopted at many other schools across the nation.

■ ENCOURAGEMENT OF FACULTY research together with additions to the faculty and curriculum.

■ REORGANIZATION OF THE administrative staff, including the establishment of an office of development.

■ FIRM CHAMPIONSHIP of the freedom of expression on the campus.

■ WINNING OF A GRANT of $250,000 from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation to strengthen teaching and research in the sciences.

■ BRINGING TO SUCCESSFUL fruition a policy of non-subsidized intercollegiate athletics.

■ RESTORATION OF Lee Chapel with funds from the Ford Motor Company Fund.

■ CONSTRUCTION OF THE $1.5 million New Science Building.

■ CONSTRUCTION OF NEW dormitories, the renovation of Reid Hall, the renovation of a campus house as an Alumni House, construction of a new bookstore, completing plans for the student union, installation of a modern computer and data processing center, and establishment of a campus FM radio station.

■ INTEGRATION OF THE University without incident or fanfare.

Throughout all this, no one was more assiduous than Dr. Cole in insisting upon the preservation of the traditions that have made Washington and Lee distinctive as a place where gentlemen teach gentlemen. He once put his philosophy this way:

“There is a vital place for schools that put a premium on honor and integrity, for schools where time-tested student tradition—not rigid university policy—has given undergraduates an opportunity to distinguish themselves from current student attitudes in some places in matters of honor, courtesy, appearance and responsibility.”

Dr. Cole's influence and counsel extended beyond the Washington and Lee campus, and his “extra-curricular” activities brought credit to the University.

He was for three years president of the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges, an organization which annually attracts funds for private colleges from business and industry. And for a time he was chairman of the Board of Trustees of the College Entrance Examination Board. He is chairman of the Department of the Army's Historical Advisory Committee, chairman of the Advisory Council on Research of the Office of Education, a trustee of the George C. Marshall Foundation, a member of the board of the Ford Motor Company Fund Scholarship Program, and chairman of the nominating committee for Phi Beta Kappa. He represented the United States at international educational conferences in Tokyo in 1965 and in Geneva in 1966.

He worked as a trustee establishing the Prince Edward County Free School Association, a move backed by federal and private grants that succeeded in reopening the county's public schools.

Dr. Cole is a historian. He came to Washington and Lee in 1959 from Tulane University, where he was successively an associate professor and professor of history, dean of the college of arts and sciences, and academic vice president. At Tulane he played a large role in the upgrading of that university through a large-scale building and educational program.

He is a native of Franklin, Texas. He received his A.B., M.A., and Ph. D. degrees from Louisiana State University, where he was an editor of the Journal of Southern History, of the Southern Biography Series, and of the Louisiana State University Press. And from 1946 to 1953, he was associate editor of the Mississippi Valley Historical Review.

During World War II, he was a gunnery officer in the Navy and saw extensive sea duty before undertaking the editorial revision of the Navy's Manual of the Medical Department, for which he received a special commendation from the Navy's surgeon general.

While he was still at Tulane, he took a year's leave of absence to work with the Ford Foundation as a staff associate and consultant. He was one of two administrative vice presidents to Vice President McPeak, whose responsibility was to formulate plans for grants to education. From this work sprang a three-fold program: one of $260 million for faculty salaries, one of $20 million to create the national merit scholarship program, and one of $5 million to initiate the Council on Library Resources, Inc., whose purpose was to develop new library methods and techniques. In 1960, the foundation awarded a sustaining grant of $8 million for the Council's continuing support. Dr. Cole has been a member of its board of directors since 1962.

Thus when Dr. Cole succeeded Verner W. Clapp as Council president on September 1 he became head of an agency he had a major role in creating.

Whitney North Seymour, in announcing Dr. Cole's election said: "Dr. Cole is an academic administrator of great experience and competence. During the period that he served as a full-time consultant of the Ford Foundation he had a part in many important decisions that have affected American education. He was one of the first to realize that the Ford Foundation had a significant role to play in scientific research as applied to the development of libraries. As an academic administrator he understands the complex problems facing research libraries today. The Council on Library Research regards him as an ideal man to lead in the attack on these problems."

Dr. and Mrs. Cole moved to Washington, D. C. in late summer. They are the parents of a daughter and three sons: Miss Caroline Cole, assistant director of admissions and alumni affairs of Pembroke College of Brown University, Providence, R.I., Fred C. Cole, Jr., of Washington, D. C., Grey Cole, who graduated this spring from the University of the South, and Taylor Cole.

Asked recently what fondest recollection he would carry with him from Washington and Lee, Dr. Cole said, "The friendships with the students and faculty, one of the finest groups with whom you could have the privilege of associating."

So Fred Cole has come and gone. He left Washington and Lee a better place than he found it, and the entire University family owes him thanks and best wishes in the years to come.

Resolution Honors President Cole

*Adopted
By the Faculty
And Sealed
By a Standing
Ovation*

The resignation of Dr. Fred C. Cole, president of Washington and Lee University since 1959, having been announced to the faculty on May 22 and to the public shortly thereafter, the faculty of Washington and Lee wishes to place upon record its sense of profound regret, and its appreciation of the policies and programs which have been realized under his leadership.

During his years on this campus President Cole in his own quiet and unobtrusive style has achieved an impressive list of what the Roanoke Times editorial of May 24, 1967, aptly characterized as "lasting contributions." These will readily come to mind, especially to those faculty members who have served throughout Dr. Cole's period in office. A glance about the campus reveals the $1.5 million New Science facilities which were planned under Dr. Cole's guidance, and equipped through matching federal grants made possible by his interest and support, the rebuilding of Reid Hall for the use of the Department of Journalism and Communications, a new University Radio Station, the installation of a modern Electronic Language Laboratory, the renovation of a campus residence as a handsome Alumni House, the construction of new dormitories, and a tastefully restored Lee Chapel, the last-named made possible by a $370,000 grant from the Ford Motor Company Fund.

Outstanding features of Dr. Cole's presidency have been substantial increases in faculty salaries, encouragement of faculty research, additions to the faculty and curriculum, and reorganization of the administrative staff. President Cole's awareness of the American academic picture, and his sympathetic understanding of departmental needs have been of great assistance in recruitment of faculty, as heads of departments can attest. Last December a grant of $250,000 by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation of New York to Washington and Lee (in company with grants to twenty of America's leading colleges and universities) was announced to provide for the strengthening of the science program.

The importance of a modern computer and data processing center was recognized early in Dr. Cole's administration. This facility has made possible modern techniques of analysis in the social sciences, commerce, the natural sciences and has immensely improved the administrative procedures of the university.

President Cole's concern for the welfare of students is shown by the actions he has taken in tripling financial aid to students, in completing plans for a new student union, and in establishing a campus bookstore. His imaginative and constructive leadership is clearly demonstrated by his establishment of the Robert E. Lee Undergraduate Research Participation Program, an innovation which has subsequently been adopted throughout the nation. Relating to another important facet of student life, the faculty strongly commends the program of non-subsidized athletics, brought to such successful operation at Washington and Lee in the past eight years.

In other significant areas, the faculty desires to record its staunch endorsement of basic admissions policy decisions recently adopted by the Board of Trustees and implemented by the administration, which places Washington and Lee in line with the overwhelming majority of reputable institutions of higher learning in this nation. President Cole's firm championship of freedom of expression on this campus is by no means the least of his contributions.

For these and other accomplishments the faculty wishes to affirm its gratitude. It is not too much to say that, because of the progressive attitude which has marked his 8-year tenure in the presidency, Washington and Lee has been brought to a new awareness of the distinctive contributions it can make to higher education. He leaves Washington and Lee with the potential and capability of maintaining and expanding its position of prestige and respect among the nation's academic community.

The faculty wishes President Cole success in his new work, which we are happy to note will be in a significant educational field. President and Mrs. Cole carry with them our thanks for all they have done for Washington and Lee, and our best wishes always for happiness, health, and prosperity in the years ahead.

Students Join the Praise And Express a Hope

We, the members of the Executive Committee of the Student Body, express our sincere regret at the resignation of President Fred C. Cole, and our deep appreciation for his outstanding service to the University during the past eight years.

Dr. Cole has proven himself a farsighted and extremely capable administrator, and has achieved, despite considerable obstacles, a significant record of progress in solving the problems of Washington and Lee. The great improvement of the science departments, the maintenance of competitive faculty salaries in a rapidly rising market, the introduction of undergraduate research programs, and the extensive capital improvements undertaken during the past few years have seriously taxed the financial resources of Washington and Lee. Yet Dr. Cole has met each of these needs despite disappointing support from those sources which would normally be expected to take an active role in providing funds.

The long-delayed integration of the University was accomplished through Dr. Cole's persistence and integrity in overcoming great resistance and the creative concept of "Lee College" demonstrated the breadth of his vision for the future of Washington and Lee.

We congratulate the Board of Trustees on their action in bringing Dr. Cole to Washington and Lee eight years ago, and we only hope that they may find a successor as knowledgeable in the field of higher education, as capable in University administration, and as farsighted in his ideas as he. To Dr. Cole we express our gratitude for his cooperation with the Executive Committee of the Student Body, and his active interest in our efforts. We sincerely hope that he may find satisfaction in his new position.

COMMENCEMENT is a hoary ritual. And to the hundreds of people gathered in the shade of the big hardwoods on the front campus on the sunny morning of June 2, Washington and Lee's 1967 finals program may have seemed like any other.

It was and it wasn't.

The order of the exercises was the same. The organ played. The faculty and the graduating seniors marched in stately procession through Washington Hall, along the Colonnade, and down the curving path to the rostrum decked in greenery and to the rows of chairs before it. Mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles, and girl friends of the graduates craned for a better view or lined the paths to take pictures. The program proceeded much as it always has—invocation, announcement of scholarships, awards and commissions, valedictory address, conferring of degrees, the president's remarks, the singing of "College Friendships," benediction, and adjournment.

The crowd broke up into little patches of hand-shaking, back-patting, hugging and kissing, smiling and laughing, and more picture taking under the bright sun of noonday.

The year was over. But it wasn't the same ending altogether.

Certainly, for the 264 graduates it was unique. It was their graduation from Washington and Lee—an indelible mental and emotional experience.

Certainly, it was different for President Fred C. Cole. It was his last commencement at the University over which he had presided for eight years. And if during the singing of "College Friendships," his eyes became misty, who would deny him sentiment at such a moment? And who could fail to respond to the sincerity of the closing words of his remarks to the graduates? "I, too, shall treasure the great honor and privilege and opportunity that were mine to know you and to work with your distinguished faculty and to make what contribution I could to this University. I hope it will always merit your loyalty and affection as it will mine."

There were other items that set this commencement apart.

It was a particularly special day for Philander (Phil) Priestley Claxton, III, of Washington, D. C. and his family. He was a "double graduate." He carried twice the normal load during much of his time at Washington and Lee and earned two degrees. He received first from the hand of President Cole the B.S. degree with special attainments in commerce, cum laude. Then he returned to the line and received a B.A. degree in economics.

It was more than a special day, too, for Alan Gary Cohen of Pulaski, Tenn., and his family. He was valedictorian, which gave him the privilege of addressing the commencement assemblage. His academic average was close to a straight-A. He will study medicine.

And for Garry Apgar of Barrington, Ill., it was a day to remember for sure. All year, his Feiffer-like cartoons had appeared in the Ring-tum Phi, picking and poking at this and that, mostly faculty members. One of his last showed President Cole agonizing over what to say at graduation. Was the President displeased, perhaps hurt? In any event, the redoubtable Mr. Apgar decided to slip the original cartoon up the sleeve of his academic gown and hand it to the President when the President handed him his diploma. He did and left the President smiling. Further exoneration came later. The President took note of the cartoon in his commencement address and referred to Mr. Apgar as "a talented young gentleman in the audience." That left Mr. Apgar smiling. And the audience smiled, too.

Honorary degrees were presented to four distinguished men. Doctor of Laws degrees were bestowed upon Wilbur C. Hall of Leesburg, Oates, professor of humanities at Princeton University.

Mr. Hall, who was a member of the Virginia House of Delegates for 18 years, was cited as "a lawyer's lawyer...wise counsellor...author and sponsor of far-sighted legislation."

Gen. Clay was cited for his distinguished military service and his economic leadership, particularly for his "determination and calm perseverance" in dealing with the Berlin Blockade and again during the Berlin crisis of 1961 for his service as the President's special envoy in inspiring the people of Berlin "in their renewed struggle for freedom and security."

Mr. Armistead, who rose from reporter to president and chairman of the board of the Times-World Corp., was cited for "a life of unselfish labor in behalf of his community, his state and his country," and for his "talent, initiative, enthusiasm, and remarkable ability to accomplish the difficult task..."

Dr. Oates, who is an authority on Greek drama and ancient philosophy, was instrumental in establishing the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, the National Foundation for Arts and Humanities, and Princeton's Council of the Humanities. He was cited as "a teacher of supreme ability" and as "a national educator," who "has reached out to influence the careers of thousands of young scholars, including many from this University."

For a time, it appeared that for the first time in decades the commencement exercises would have to be moved indoors.

Days of chill rain preceded Commencement Day. The Baccalaureate Service, the day before, was transferred from Evans Dining Hall to Doremus Gymnasium because of the threat of rain. This was done so that the luncheon sponsored by the Alumni Association originally scheduled to be held on the lawn, could be held in the dining hall.

But the rain held off as Dr. David W. Sprunt, chaplain and professor of religion, delivered the Baccalaureate sermon. "The heart of Biblical faith," he said, "is not to be found in idealism, nor in creed, nor in a code, nor in a ceremony. I speak, rather, of a living awareness... of eternal truth, dynamically drawing together the scattered fragments of man's expanding knowledge... I mean, above all the experience of the life-changing power of God's love which so shatteringly exploded on the human scene in the personality of Jesus."

Clear weather held. And in Lee Chapel, the next day, Gen. Frank S. Beeson, Jr., commanding general of the U. S. Army Materiel Command, spoke and presented commissions to 31 seniors who had completed the University's Army ROTC program. Two others received Navy commissions and one a Marine commission.

The sun was still bright by the time the academic procession started at 11 a.m. An estimated 1,700 people were present.

Dean C. P. Light, Jr., presented 46 candidates for the LL.B. degree, and Dean Lewis W. Adams presented 42 candidates for the B.S. in commerce and 25 for the B.A. in political science or economics. Dean William W. Pusey, III, presented 127 candidates for the B.A. degree, 22 for the B.S. and two for the B.S. with special attainments in chemistry.

The total of 264 graduates was just four short of last year's record high.

First, the speech.

A Word for Big Universities That Say: 'You're Too Small'

BY CONFERRING honorary degrees on our distinguished guests on this platform the University has sought to recognize the outstanding achievements of these gentlemen and their great service to mankind. By conferring baccalaureate degrees upon you graduates Washington and Lee recognizes your accomplishments as students and, of greater significance, affirms the great promise each of you possesses for important contributions to the common good of all people. I congratulate you again most sincerely.

A few days ago there appeared in the student newspaper by a talented young gentleman in the audience a cartoon depicting me in the throes of beginning to think of preparing my remarks for this occasion. I was, at first, slightly piqued because I felt that the artist had treated me somewhat unfairly. I did not believe that I had as many chins as were shown. Then I looked in the mirror. The young man had been kinder than I deserved. He suggested in his cartoon "balloons" that I was reviewing what I had said in the past. He decided for me that since you had not been here for long it would be an opportune time to "dish back" (his words) at this class what I may have said before perhaps on "The Firm Foundation" bit. I have given much thought to this suggestion and others he made. An education from Washington and Lee is indeed a "firm foundation." And if my remarks to the 1967 graduates need a title, I think this would be appropriate. I have discussed his other subjects and some others as well.

I have spoken on the high quality of the faculty here and the good fortune of the students in their association with them. I reaffirm this evaluation.

I have spoken of the high quality of the students, particularly those who graduate, and the good fortune of the faculty in having them as associates. I reaffirm this view.

I have spoken of the beauty of this campus and of this community and of this Valley and of its effect upon the students and the faculty and all who come into association with Washington and Lee and Lexington—a beauty which makes learning more meaningful. I reaffirm this feeling.

I have spoken of the alumni of Washington and Lee who enjoy positions of influence far out of proportion to their numbers, and of our justifiable pride in the contributions they have made to human welfare. I reaffirm this truth.

I have from time to time in my years here talked about matters of current importance to this University and to higher education generally. Let me note briefly another such topic—not the most important one facing us today but important nevertheless.

There is a sharp debate today among many educators about reforms that should be made in the large universities to make them more tractable for effective education, especially of undergraduates. Whatever the recommendations for improvement, and there are many, all appear to seek to bring back or to develop conditions that prevail upon this campus now: high faculty morale; association among scientists and humanists and social scientists; close relationships among students—one with another and between students and faculty; a general concern for the individual student at all levels of teaching and administration; a sense of community.

In the past few years I have seen many colleges let these conditions slip away from them.

Sheer size alone sometimes robs universities and colleges of their sense of community and the other highly-coveted conditions that I mentioned. Frequently, it should be said, there is no other alternative open to schools whose major commitments are to the general public and its tax support.

Some educators have become so preoccupied with the problems of growing bigger that they have concluded that it is virtually impossible for their institutions to exist if they remain small...or relatively small. The warning is heard that the relatively small colleges and universities are in serious trouble; that they eventually, if not soon, must be absorbed into the systems of the larger institutions or fail entirely. This view tends to put the smaller schools—especially the independent ones—on the defensive. The big universities say

*"I believe the smaller schools—
the manageable schools—might be more positive in answering their critics."*

Then, relaxation.

to institutions such as ours: "You're too small to be any good!" And sometime our answering argument is no more persuasive than "You're too big!"

I believe the smaller schools—the manageable schools—might be more positive in answering their critics. Tactfully, the leaders of the good, effective smaller universities might suggest that some of the answers to the larger universities' problems might be found at places like Williams, Amherst, Davidson, Sewanee, and Washington and Lee. It may not be too late for large universities to reorganize themselves into more manageable, autonomous or semi-autonomous units. Perhaps graduate and professional schools could exist entirely apart from the undergraduate schools, rather than in the customary relationship that all too often works to the undergraduates' disadvantage. Perhaps some of the problems of the graduate and professional schools today could be solved if the undergraduate faculties, such as the one here, were consulted both in terms of what is to be taught and who should be taught.

My purpose in mentioning this now is to underscore for you, the graduates, how fortunate you are in my opinion to have earned your degrees at Washington and Lee. This University has its problems as do all schools, but these problems are not insoluble. There should be, of course, continuous thought on the part of students, faculty, and alumni alike as to the direction Washington and Lee will follow in the years ahead. There must be concern about this University's obligation to help educate more of the highly qualified students who wish to come here. There must be a continuous self-evaluation. A good beginning in these regards has been made and I am certain improvements will result.

Last November, at the conclusion of a self-study period of over two years at this University professors and administrators from ten other universities and colleges visited the campus in order to review our report and to submit their findings to the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. A portion of the report of this Visiting Committee was addressed to the President of this University. I believe that it indicates the significance, beyond the campus, of the work that is done by Washington and Lee, and I should like to read from that statement:

"We felt that it was our central responsibility to bring a creative and objective intelligence to the University to look at much that may have become dimmed to the eyes of the native by close familiarity and long association. We hope also that we were able to bring a richly varied experience from other institutions that share Washington and Lee's high regard for excellence even as we pursue it in different ways. We believe we have at no point attempted to impose our private views upon an institution that is itself proud of its own distinction. We have not hesitated, however, to report or recommend measures that in our corporate opinion would improve the University in any of its programs. An institution of Washington and Lee's prestige in the academic community has an obligation to all of us, as well as to itself, to be as superior in every fact as it is in reputation."

When Dr. Nathan Pusey, president of Harvard, spoke at my inauguration here he reviewed the basic strengths of an institution such as yours. "What makes a college good," he summarized, "is its magic power, perennially renewed, to widen experience, and in so doing, to work those transformations, even exaltations, in young minds and hearts, indeed in all of us, drawing us into fuller and deeper life..."

My experience here has proven to me this is a "good college."

I hope you will take with you a keen awareness of the privilege that has been yours in your years at Washington and Lee. We thank you for all you have been—for all you have done for Washington and Lee. I wish each of you much success.

I, too, shall treasure the great honor and privilege and opportunity that were mine to know you and to work with your distinguished faculty and to make what contribution I could to this University. I hope it will always merit your loyalty and affection as it will mine.

It's Mock Convention Time Again

*The Search Is On
For Elephants
And the 'Man Who'*

WHO WILL IT BE? Romney, Nixon, Reagan, Percy, Rockefeller... or Joe Smith? Right now, even the most daring political prognosticator is unwilling to say. The public opinion polls at this stage are little help. Certainly, the candidates themselves don't know. Even their wives are in the dark.

So Washington and Lee students have their work cut out for them. They will spend the next eight months trying to pin down the answer to one of 1968's big political questions: Who will win the Republican nomination? The odds are very good that their answer will be correct.

Planning is well under way for the University's 14th Mock Convention to be held May 3-4 in Doremus Gymnasium. And when the shouting and the balloting are over, Messrs. Romney, Nixon, Reagan, Percy, et al. will be keenly interested in the results.

For the W&L Mock Convention is more than a popularity contest, more than a mere reflection of student opinions. It is a highly organized and systematic attempt to mirror what will actually happen later in the year at the real national convention—the Republican National Convention in this case, since the W&L convention is always held for the party out of power.

The students spare no effort to make the convention as realistic as possible. The student delegations build and maintain close liaison with the actual delegates to the Republican convention, often keeping a "hot line" open during the balloting for instructions from the real political leaders on what to do next.

The conventions have come up with the correct nominee nine out of 13 times, including the last four in a row. The last miss was in 1948 when the students picked Arthur Vandenburg over Thomas E. Dewey, the nominee that year.

The Mock Convention is an all-student affair, and the 1968 chairman is a rising senior from Elmont, N.Y., Steven R. Saunders, who almost cut his teeth on Republican politics in his native Nassau County, adjacent to New York City. He was chosen by the Student Body Executive Committee.

Saunders is working this summer as assistant campaign manager for the Town of Oyster Bay Republican Committee, helping to run the campaigns of candidates for town council, supervisor and other town offices. Now 20, he has been doing such work since he was 17, and in 1965 he was a special assistant to U. S. Rep. John W. Wydler of New York. At Washington and Lee, he has been an editor-in-chief of the Ring-tum Phi and will head the Student Publications Board this school year.

Although the convention is a student show, Saunders said a little help from alumni would be welcome. The estimated cost of the convention, he said, is $15,000, and so far there is little in the coffers to pay the bills.

"We need alumni contributions," Saunders said. "We need elephants for the parade, also bands, and any commercial floats that want to participate."

"Maybe some alumnus is an elephant fancier and will lend us two or three from his collection. There is no end to the versatility of W&L alumni."

Saunders has already enlisted one alumnus, Sol Wachtler, '51, of Sands Point, N. Y., to be chairman of the National Advisory Council of the convention. Wachtler is currently supervisor of the Town of North Hempstead and a candidate for the post of county supervisor in Nassau County. Other members of the council include Rep. Gerry Ford, Sen. Everett Dirksen, Rep. Melvin Laird, Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, and William E. Miller, Goldwater's running mate.

Helping Saunders with the thousand and one arrangements that have to be made for the convention is a 10-man student steering committee.

The committeemen are Tom Baremore of Shreveport, La., director of state delegations; Jim Lowe of Towson, Md., secretary; Mike

Miles of Austin, Tex., finance chairman; Bob McLaughin of Pittsburgh, parade director; Jim Crothers of Rising Sun, Md., editor of convention journal; Ed Allen of New York, publicity director; Steve Meixner of Collegeville, Pa., and Kim Ladewig of Charleston, W. Va., decorations co-chairmen; Stafford Keegin of Princeton, N. J., chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Val McWhorter of Charleston, W. Va., chief of protocol.

Thousands of people have traditionally journeyed to Lexington to see the opening parade down main street. The convention also attracts a large segment of the national press.

The opening session of the convention is devoted to the keynote address and other convention business. The keynoter—always a person high in the ranks of party for which the convention is held—will be announced this fall. The 1964 keynoter was former U. S. Rep. Walter H. Judd. Others have been former President Harry Truman, Sen. Alben Barkley, Sen. Frank Carlson and U. S. Rep. Clarence Brown.

The final day is devoted to the balloting when Washington and Lee students, turned convention delegates, will nominate the "Man Who," the man who may well be the 1968 Republican nominee and perhaps the next president of the United States.

CONVENTION CHAIRMAN SAUNDERS

BILL LEVERTY and his student rim men go to press.

End of 15-Year 'Press Run', Maybe

By John E. Hughes

MOST TEACHERS are dedicated; however few would drive 70,000 miles just to teach one class.

But that is just what William G. (Bill) Leverty has done. Every spring, Leverty makes his weekly trip by car from Richmond, where he is a fulltime assistant managing editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, to Lexington, where he is a visiting lecturer to journalism students at Washington and Lee University. It's a 300-mile journey, round-trip. And he does it on his days off.

He's been doing it since 1953, hence the estimated 70,000 additional miles he has put on his car in that span.

As Leverty describes it, "For 15 years I've watched the snow recede and the dogwood blossom, as I come through the Blue Ridge mountains."

He's also driven it more than once in a blizzard, and once ran off the road into a snowbank. On one such occasion the normal three-hour trip took 7½.

"I was afraid to stop," Leverty explained.

This past spring marked Bill's finale as a visiting lecturer, or so he says. He plans to "retire" as a teacher although he'll still be a full-time editor on the Times-Dispatch.

As a visiting lecturer, Leverty teaches a course in newspaper editing, make-up, typography and headline writing. He prefers an informal approach to teaching, and thus gathers his students around a newspaper-style "copy desk" or rim. For teaching aids he uses actual newspaper copy and pictures he has accumulated during the week as front page makeup man for the T-D.

The students are free—indeed are encouraged—to interrupt him at any time with questions.

"I've always tried to make them ask questions," Leverty remarked. "There must be thousands of them they want to ask."

"It's different when you have a working newspaperman teaching one day a week. It's entirely different from teaching out of a book. In the newspaper business, you learn by making mistakes."

Leverty's informality has led to frequent sessions out-of-doors when the weather was pretty. His picnic "class" at scenic Goshen Pass nearby has been an annual highlight for journalism students.

Leverty has a variety of other interests. He enjoys sailing, carving wood blocks, lithography and painting landscapes in oil. But "I don't really take any of it seriously," he said. "It's for my own satisfaction."

Originally "a Connecticut Yankee" with a "rock-ribbed New England background," Leverty has been a reconstructed Southerner since "I came to Richmond in the '20's, and married an Alabama girl in 1928."

Leverty worked as a reporter for the Times-Dispatch, then after stints as an advertising man and drugstore operator in Alabama, he returned to Virginia's capital city in 1937.

"I came on a visit, but I dropped in on John Dana Wise, the Times-Dispatch publisher, and he offered me a job, so I stayed."

From a reporter, Leverty rose successively to become Sunday editor, news editor, universal copy desk editor and finally assistant managing editor.

And then, at the request of O. W. Riegel, head of the W&L Department of Journalism and Communications, he began his career as a visiting lecturer.

For the reason why, Leverty replies simply, "Newspapermen are always interested in making other newspapermen."

To Bill Leverty, satisfaction comes in his students' success. His former pupils have become reporters, Pentagon correspondents, editors, even publishers.

"I haven't heard of any who haven't done well in their field," Leverty remarked.

"That's what makes it all so worthwhile, to see students go out and do well, to see young men develop and sort of catch fire. . ."

Gunn Is Honored

■ THE 1967 CALYX, the University's yearbook, was dedicated to John M. Gunn, Jr., associate professor of economics. The citation noted that Prof. Gunn had written that the endeavor of W&L is to "blend academic excellence and moral integrity, fortified by self-confidence, self-discipline, and large vision, and enriched with taste, courtesy and a touch of graciousness." It said Prof. Gunn "fulfills this prophesy in its idealism and in its specific aims." Prof. Gunn is an alumnus of the University and has been a member of the faculty since 1957.

Faculty Promotions

■ Promotion of 12 faculty members was announced this spring. Promoted from associate professor to professor were Dr. Harrison J. Pemberton, philosophy; Henry L. Ravenhorst, engineering; and Dr. Milton Colvin, political science. Promoted from assistant professor to associate professor were James Boatwright, III, English; William W. Chaffin, English and speech; Dr. William B. Newbolt, physics; Dr. H. Robert Huntley, English; Dr. John F. DeVogt, commerce; John M. Gunn, Jr., economics; and Dr. S. Todd Lowry, economics and commerce. Promoted from instructor to assistant professor were Dr. Sterling M. Boyd, fine arts, and Dr. Robert W. McAhren, history.

Dr. Tucker Dies

■ DR. ROBERT HENRY TUCKER, former dean and professor of economics at Washington and Lee, died at his home in Halifax, Va., on June 25.

ROBERT HENRY TUCKER

He was buried in Danville. A former dean at Oklahoma State Agriculture and Mechanical College, he was appointed professor of economics at W&L in 1919. He was acting president during part of 1930 and was made dean of the University in 1932. He retired from teaching in 1950. An economic adviser for several Virginia administrations, he was chairman of the State Industrial Commission, the State Commission on County Government, and the Committee on Taxation for the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce. He was also a member of the Commission on State and Local Revenues, the Executive Committee of the American Economic Association and was a past president of the Southern Economic Association.

An editorial in the Richmond Times-Dispatch said: "Dr. Tucker was not only one of the great University teachers and administrators of his time during his extended tenure as a member of the Washington and Lee faculty, but he was also a public servant of the first magnitude."

Faculty Additions

■ THE APPOINTMENT of one new associate professor, two new assistant professors and 11 new instructors was also announced in the spring.

Named associate professor of biology was Dr. Cleveland Pendleton Hickman, Jr., coming from the University of Alberta in Canada.

Named assistant professor of physics was Dr. James J. Donaghy, a former teacher at VMI who had been doing government work in Hawaii. The new assistant professor of military science is Capt. John F. Owen, who joined the faculty last March.

The new instructors named were Richard E. Szlasa, physical education and varsity lacrosse coach; Sargent Bush, Jr., English; Bradley Hunt Gunter, English; Thomas Atteridge, III, geology; Thomas O. Vinson, Jr., mathematics; David A. Hall, fine arts; Arthur B. Scharff, romance languages; Michael C. Thomas, sociology; David Gordan Elmes, psychology; Frederick L. Schwab, geology, and Thomas J. Davies, physical education, assistant trainer and assistant basketball coach.

New Law Professors

■ THE LAW SCHOOL will have two new assistant professors this fall. They are Louis Henry LaRue and Andrew W. McThenia, Jr., both graduates of W&L. Prof. LaRue, who studied law at Harvard, was a trial attorney with the U. S. Department of Justice. Prof. McThenia, a 1963 law graduate of W&L, was associated with the Alexandria law firm of Boothe, Dudley, Koontz, Blankenship and Stump.

New Lacrosse Coach

■ RICHARD E. SZLASA is Washington and Lee's new head lacrosse coach,

succeeding Dana Swan, who became head football coach at Haverford College. Szlasa was varsity lacrosse coach at Towson State College and an All-American lacrosse player at the University of Maryland, where he graduated in 1959. At W&L he will also assist in football and teach physical education courses.

MRS. BETTY MUNGER (left) will mind the bookstore while Mrs. JANE RUSHING is away.

New Bookstore Manager

■ MRS. BETTY MUNGER, wife of Dr. Robert S. Munger, a Lexington physician, will manage the University Bookstore this academic year, in the absence of the permanent manager, Mrs. Jane Rushing, whose husband, Robert, is taking a year's leave of absence from the Washington and Lee Law School to teach at the University of Illinois.

Mrs. Munger said she plans no major changes in the operation of the store, which last year was a center of intellectual activity on campus. "It's such an exciting, jumping place," Mrs. Munger said. "If I can keep it lively, that's all I want. If I can just return it to Mrs. Rushing in the same condition I'm receiving it, I'll be pleased."

Student Body Officers

■ RICHARD NASH of Louisville, Ky., was elected president of the Executive Committee of the Student Body during the elections in April. He had served on the committee for three years. Gil Faulk of Monroe, La., a second-year law student was named vice president. Jody Kline of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., was chosen secretary, and Luke Crossland of Short Hills, N. J. was named president of Fancy Dress.

Outstanding Debaters

■ CHRISTOPHER H. MILLS of Denver, Colo., and Michael L. Beatty of Montebello, Calif., rising juniors, were named the winners of the Noell-Eckes Trophy as the outstanding debaters of the 1966-67 season at W&L. The silver cup was donated by Dean Emeritus Frank J. Gilliam in honor of two Washington and Lee graduates who carried the University to the national debate championship in 1963.

'Deferred Rushing'

■ IN A STRONGLY WORDED resolution passed at its May meeting, the faculty requested the student Interfraternity Council "to present to the faculty for approval not later than Nov. 1, a plan of deferred rush to be implemented in the fall of 1968. The University's 18 social fraternities now "rush," or campaign, for members among incoming freshmen during the first week of the school year, before classes begin.

Faculty complaints over the present rush system center around the contention that freshmen are introduced to the social aspect of college before academics, and subsequent pledging and fraternity activities interfere with studies. The faculty resolution stated "an acceptable plan would incorporate one of the following programs: deferral until the end of the first semester, or deferral until the end of the freshman year." The fraternities' reluctance to defer rushing stems from the fact that they would suffer some financial hardships if new members' dues came in at a later date.

Color TV Donated

■ THE STUDENT LOUNGE of the Department of Journalism and Communications has been provided with a color television set, the gift of Louis Spilman, publisher of the Waynesboro, Va., News-Virginian. The lounge was furnished by the News-Virginian in 1964 when Reid Hall was remodeled, and was named the Louis Spilman Student Lounge. Other equipment includes an AM-FM stereo radio receiver.

'Pass-Fail' Option

■ THIS YEAR W&L juniors and seniors may undertake certain courses on a "pass-fail" basis, with no letter grade given. The faculty voted to try the system for a year. It is designed to encourage students to take more difficult courses while lessening the hazard of a low grade pulling down their overall aca-demical average. The system is limited to juniors and seniors and to one elective course, not in the student's major, each semester. If the student passes with the P grade, he will receive hours credit toward his degree, but the course will not be used in computing his semester or cumulative grade-point ratio. If he fails, he will receive no degree credit, but the F will be used in computing his grade average.

Gilliam Award Winner

■ JACK W. CHAFFIN, a rising senior from Pulaski, Va., was the 1967 winner of the Gilliam Award, named in honor of Dean Emeritus Frank J. Gilliam and given each year to the student who has made outstanding contributions to the University. The award was presented by President Cole at a banquet sponsored by the Alumni Association in honor of graduating seniors.

Chaffin was recognized for his organization of students not affiliated with social fraternities into a new group named the Gaines Society in honor of the former president and chancellor of the University, the late Dr. Francis P. Gaines. Chaffin is president of the organization. The award carries a $100 stipend, plus the privilege of designating another $150 to a campus organization. Chaffin gave the money to the Gaines Society.

Ring-tum Phi Awards

■ AT THE SENIOR BANQUET, the first Ring-tum Phi awards were presented to five persons who rendered outstanding service to phases of life at Washington and Lee during the year.

The winners were Jack W. Chaffin of Pulaski, Va., also winner of the Gilliam Award; William R. Jeffress, Jr., of Richmond, student body president; Verne Canfield, head basketball coach; Mrs. Jane Rushing, manager of the University bookstore, and Stafford W. Keegin, of Princeton, N. J., coordinator of the student intellectual symposium, CONTACT.

A Whoop From Oregon

The Generals have a devoted fan in Jim Ligon of Corvallis, Ore. Witness these excerpts from a recent letter:

"I have followed athletics at the South's greatest University for most of my life, and you have always been my favorite team.

"Although I never have been able to see my favorite team play in person, I have always followed you very closely through our local newspaper, and through material you have been kind enough to send me in the past . . .

"I wonder if you could possibly find and send me a copy of your 1966-67 basketball press book. I also wonder if you could send me some programs.

"If you could send me that material it would sure help my Washington and Lee sports collection, of which I will always be very proud. Thank you, and the best of luck to your always great basketball Generals, and, of course, best of luck to Coach Canfield, the number one coach in all America."

Athletic Honors

■ WILLIAM S. WILDRICK of Jacksonville, Fla., and Warren E. Stewart of Stevenson, Md., both seniors, were winners of W&L's top two athletic honors, presented at the University's annual sports awards barbecue. Wildrick won the Wink Glasgow Spirit and Sportsmanship Award, given to the athlete who has demonstrated the highest qualities of W&L spirit and sportsmanship throughout his college career. Stewart was named the Most Valuable Athlete. This award is presented for performance and proficiency in W&L athletics.

Wildrick was a member of the Generals' cross-country, swimming, and track teams for four years and earned 12 letters. Stewart performed in football, wrestling and lacrosse and earned 11 monograms.

More than two dozen other awards were presented at the barbecue, and a total of 350 varsity monograms and freshman numerals were handed out.

Creative Writing Awards

■ THE ANNUAL George A. Mahan Awards in creative writing, sponsored by the Department of English, went to four students. Prose awards went to Steven H. Greenia of Charlotte, N. C., Mark L. Faverman of Norfolk, Va., and Marvin C. Henberg of Laramie, Wyo. Richard V. Johnson of Chesapeake, Va., won the poetry award. Henberg also received special mention for a series of five poems.

The competition was established by an alumnus, the late George A. Mahan of Hannibal, Mo. Each of the 1967 award-winning entries was published in the spring issue of Ariel.

Student Editors

■ EDITORS NEXT YEAR of the campus newspaper, Ring-tum Phi, will be Michael R. Dunn of MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., and Robert S. Keefe of Milford, Conn. Keefe will edit the Tuesday edition and Dunn the Friday edition. Both are rising seniors and history majors.

Others appointed by the University Publication Board were C. Willard Isley of Martinsville, Va., editor of the Ariel, student literary magazine, and Bernard D. Feld, III, business manager of Ariel; Gregory E. Parker of Louisville, Ohio, business manager of the Ring-tum Phi; and John H. Lawrence of West Simsbury, Conn., director of photography.

Library Study Grant

■ THE UNIVERSITY HAS received a grant of $75,000 from the U. S. Office of Education to study the impact of modern technology on small college libraries. The study is aimed at identifying the critical problems of the liberal arts college libraries and finding solutions through the efficient and economical application of the latest technical innovations and equipment. Particular attention will be given to the use of microfilm methods of storage and to the use of computers to facilitate access to the material. The findings will be made available to all libraries and are expected to be especially beneficial to research libraries of 200,000 volumes or less.

Dr. Edward F. Turner, professor of physics and head of the department, will direct the project, which will continue through mid-December, 1968. He will be assisted by a full-time librarian and by consultants as needed. He will devote full time to the study during the summers and one-half time during the school year. Dr. Turner is a member of University's library committee and has been a consultant on library problems to the Ford Foundation.

New Sociology Head

■ DR. EMORY KIMBROUGH, JR., has been named head of the Department of Sociology, succeeding Dr. James G. Leyburn, who has reached the retirement age for department heads. Dr. Leyburn will continue to teach. Dr. Kimbrough joined the W&L faculty in 1962 and was promoted to associate professor in 1966. He is a graduate of Davidson College and received his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from the University of North Carolina. Dr. Leyburn came to Washington and Lee in 1947 and is a former dean of the

KIMBROUGH

University. He is a graduate of Trinity College, now Duke University, and received his A.M. from Princeton and his Ph.D. from Yale, where he taught for 20 years before coming to W&L.

Art-Show Take Off

■ MODERN GODIVAS, it seems, have swapped steeds for speed. At any rate, when it came time for the spring student art show, W&L junior Robert V. Cosel, Jr., dreamed up an advertising poster not to be ignored. At the right, he is shown sketching it out. He had a real motorcycle to go by, but no real live girl. At the bottom is the final dressed-up (well, almost) version. The poster became ubiquitous on the campus and in downtown Lexington. Some 40 students displayed more than a 100 works at the show. Artist-in-residence Ray Prohaska called the student artists "some of the best I've ever seen in creativity, and certainly the most prolific." Was the show a success? The naked truth is, "Yes!"

1967: The Generals Seek Pay Dirt

TO PUT IT IN A NUTSHELL, Washington and Lee's football team is looking for a little prosperity. Not since the 1963 season, when the Generals finished 5-3-0, have head coach Lee McLaughlin's forces been able to assemble a winner. And in the span dating back to the 1964 campaign, W&L has put together an over-all 9-16-2 record (1964: 4-5-0; 1965: 3-6-0; and 1966: 2-5-2).

If McLaughlin rescues his slumping Generals this fall, he'll do it with a sizeable crew of sharp looking sophomores, an improved effort from the offensive line, and a good showing from five—that's right five—quarterbacks.

The latter factor is probably the most important single element blessing McLaughlin's team. Senior Andy Bloom, who experienced a difficult, if not dismal, 1966 season, should be hitting again with his bullet-like short tosses and floating long-rangers. He should easily surpass the 702 yards he netted last year when he had poor blocking and inadequate receivers.

Junior Alan Tomlin, a smallish-type field commander who is back with W&L after a year's layoff, is McLaughlin's No. 2 quarterback choice. At 5-9 and 165 pounds, Tomlin drew praise from all quarters during the Generals' spring drills last February, so it could be that his eagerness to play football again will inspire him right into a starting assignment sooner than most realize.

Depth is provided by three sophomores—Jack Baizley, Jay Dorman, and Chuck Kuhn. They're all capable signal-callers, but most likely they will be stationed in the defensive secondary in order to utilize their talents. As McLaughlin puts it: "They're just too good to keep on the bench."

So, at last, it looks as though W&L will be able to find someone to charge up its offense, and with that come touchdowns and winning games. At least, the Generals appear ready to have a go at it. Bloom and Tomlin have the equipment, as do the three sophomores, and there is comparable talent found elsewhere.

Numbers alone show that. Only seven players have graduated, leaving 13 seniors, 22 juniors, and 31 sophomores. Additionally, McLaughlin probably will weed out a few freshmen for varsity play from the 35 to 40 expected newcomers. Thirty lettermen will be available.

The performer to watch out of all that group will be junior line-backer John Wolf, perhaps an even better defensive player than was Tiny Terry Fohs. Wolf has only one philosophy about the game of football, and that is to hit. He averaged close to 10 unassisted tackles per game last season, helping in six others each contest. No doubt, he's genuine Little All-America prospect if he can get some assistance from his teammates in starting a comeback effort.

If not, then Wolf goes unnoticed and McLaughlin's team absorbs a few more lumps.

Everybody's getting tired of that.

A. MICHAEL PHILIPPS, '64, is director of sports information at Washington and Lee.

FRESHMAN MEL CARTWRIGHT was primarily responsible for the abundant success this year of the Washington and Lee basketball Generals, but three other first-year players—Mal Wesselink, Norwood Morrison, and Stuart Fauber—were key figures, too.

Sophomore John Carrere finished with an 11.7 average as a guard, while injured classmate Rob Bauer still managed to hit for an 8.9 mark even though playing less than 10 minutes a game.

Center Earl Edwards came through with some timely shooting, and senior Tommy Cox, almost forgotten in the pre-season notices that raved of something new in Lexington, put on some defensive exhibitions that would have rivaled a thief in an open-air market.

Such was the tenor of Washington and Lee University's basketball Generals this season, a team that:

—Completed the first winning campaign at W&L in 10 years, ending with a 20-5 record, the second time in history a score of victories had been posted (the last came during the 1956-57 session when the Generals finished 20-7).

—Won the College Athletic Conference championship (held in Lexington in late February) by taking a 58-55 overtime victory over defending champion Sewanee in the semi-finals, then breezing to a 75-59 win over Southwestern of Memphis for the title.

—Received feelers from the regional NCAA selection committee concerning a possible at-large berth for the small college play-offs in Evansville, Ind. (Stetson of Florida, however, got the bid and eventually wound up losing to nationally-ranked Kentucky Wesleyan.)

—Was listed among the nation's small college defensive leaders throughout the second half of the season. Washington and Lee's year-end 66.2 average placed the Generals 29th in the country.

COACH VERNE CANFIELD exhorts his players to new heights.

'The Basketball Program'

Canfield's Boys Deliver

—Placed Cartwright and Wesselink on the All-Virginia team, put Cartwright on the honorable mention list of the Little All-America squad, and received one Virginia sportswriter's acclaim as the "Team of the Year."

Some of the highlights of the schedule included eight-, five-, and four-game winning streaks, the latter which will be carried into next year; a 77-26 victory over St. Andrews of North Carolina, which was instrumental in putting W&L on the NCAA defensive list; and a 94-75 rout of Old Dominion, at that time the state's top small college team.

Canfield's Reconstruction

It would be a mistaken notion to believe that what happened this past season just happened. "The Basketball Program," as head coach Verne Canfield likes to call it, is a painstaking organized effort to rebuild the basketball fortunes at W&L.

Not only does it cover the rudimentary details of practice, scouting reports, recruiting trips, and game plans, but also a gamut of other, more obscure elements—student assistants who are willing to type letters and do other mundane work, the presentation of a cake on a player's birthday, and the availability of a freshman named Tom Dawson, who's got to be the most gung-ho manager ever seen in these parts.

That "Program" has paid off in reaping quantities, to such an extent that a once-apatetic campus is behind the effort in numbers never before imagined. During the Friday and Saturday night CAC tournament games, over 1,000 people burgeoned the gym on each occasion, chanted wildly "We're No. 1," and hoisted Canfield and Cox to each net for cutting ceremonies when the title had been won.

MEL CARTWRIGHT at the free-throw line, his mask no bother.

Cartwright's Contribution

Through it all, no other player generated as much excitement as Cartwright did time and again. He scored 32 points one night, 29 on two other occasions, 27 in his first game as a college player on Dec. 1 against Bridgewater.

His forte was a baseline drive that left defenders numb and shaking their heads in consternation, and that was one reason he averaged 20.1 points a game. He was the team's top rebounder, and led in assists, too.

The only time he was stopped cold came on Feb. 16 against Old Dominion. Late in the game, he and Norwood Morrison went after a rebound, but the only thing Cartwright got was Morrison's elbow on the nose. Result: Cartwright suffered a fracture that was later to require a post-season operation. In the interim, he wore a protective mask that didn't seem to bother him at all.

In fact, nothing seemed to bother Cartwright and his teammates this year. The Generals were a loose bunch, confident of their abilities and determined to put W&L back on the road to basketball respectability.

And that's just exactly what they did.

Tennis Championship

The fast-rising Verne Canfield again was the man of the hour, as last spring his Washington and Lee tennis team completely swept aside all opposition to take yet another College Athletic Conference title for the University.

You had to be in Memphis, the site of the CAC's Spring Sports Festival, to believe it. Drawing seeds at every position because of their fine 8-3 regular-season record, the Generals sent all six singles performers into the finals, then did the same thing with their three doubles teams.

That, quite naturally, was a first in the five-year history of the conference.

Washington and Lee eventually ended up with three singles champions—sophomore Ray Turman at the No. 2 spot, senior captain Phil Thompson at No. 4, and freshman Tom McJunkin at No. 6—while Turman and sophomore Tommy Rueger gave the Generals the No. 1 doubles title.

By winning the CAC tennis competition with a record-breaking 40 points, the W&L players presented their coach his second league championship in the same year.

That, also quite naturally, was another first in the five-year history of the conference.

Elsewhere at the Spring Sports Festival, the Generals could do no good. Head coach Joe Lyles' baseball team was defeated by Sewanee, 6-3, and Washington University 14-0, to finish last among the five tournament entries. Some consolation was gained, though, when captain and first baseman Eric Sisler was named to the All-Conference team.

Head Coach Norm Lord's Track squad also finished last, its 22 points far behind Southwestern's 94 total. Junior Corbett Bryant's second-place finish in the three-mile run was the best W&L could manage.

The Generals' golf team, under head coach Cy Twombly, came in fourth with a 36-hole 624 total, 19 shots behind champion Southwestern. Sophomore Bill McLeod's 80-78 performances were W&L's best.

CHAPTER NEWS

RICHMOND

■ THE ANNUAL BUSINESS meeting of the Richmond chapter was held Tuesday afternoon, June 20, at the Downtown Club. Among other items of business was the discussion of the proposed entertainment program for the Washington and Lee alumni in the Virginia General Assembly. The following new slate of officers was elected: Robert J. Smith, '46, president; William H. Abeloff, '57, vice president; Tyson L. Janney, '53, secretary, and William E. Woodroof, '52, treasurer. A motion was made and unanimously approved to express the deep appreciation for the entire chapter to Lee A. Putney, '53, the outgoing president, for his outstanding leadership during the past year.

PHILADELPHIA

■ PARTICIPATING IN a spring social, alumni gathered in Philadelphia's Society Hill area at the restored town house of President Roland Davies on June 9. The timing coincided with an aquatic program and a fireworks demonstration sponsored by The Towers. Alumni Secretary Bill Washburn was present. In addition to a tour of the restored house President Davies announced plans for a chapter program in honor of the new students entering Washington and Lee in September.

CLASS NOTES

SINCE JUDE, 1966, JOSEPH R. BLACKBURN has been retired from the West Virginia State Road Commission. He remains active in community affairs in Charleston, West Virginia.

DAVID W. EARMAN is actively engaged in the practice of law in Harrisonburg, Virginia, although he is now eighty-two years old. He has practiced in Harrisonburg since 1910, and from 1920 to 1940 he served as Commonwealth's Attorney for Rockingham County.

FOR MORE than thirty-six years, the name of JONAH L. LARRICK was widely known to students at the Medical College of Virginia. On June 2 the former Virginia Civil War Centennial Center building in Richmond, which was acquired by MCV, will be dedicated as the Jonah L. Larrick

Student Center. Larrick was secretary of the MCV chapter of the Central YMCA from 1923 until his retirement in 1959. He helped guide a student government into being and organized athletic teams at the small MCV campus. He also helped students find places to live—there were no dormitories then—and he helped them find jobs if needed. Larrick watched MCV grow. In time Larrick became universally known among the students for his deep interest in them. His career has included service as physical education director for the Army YMCA at Fort Ogelthorpe and Ft. McPherson. He went to France with the American Expeditionary Force during WW I. He married Mademoiselle Petite Pierre of Paris in 1921 and returned to the United States. The Larricks have two daughters. With the restoration of the Larrick name into active life of MCV, there will also be a reviving of the official green and white MCV flag. Larrick became custodian but since his retirement the MCV flag has been forgotten.

Air Tragedy Touches Washington and Lee

July 19, 1967, was a day of shock and sadness for the nation, particularly for Washington and Lee University and Lexington. On that day a Piedmont Airlines jetliner carrying nearly 80 persons collided with a small private plane near Hendersonville, N. C., exploded, and crashed. There were no survivors.

Among the dead were PRESTON R. BROWN, '42, and his wife, the former Alma Susan Simpson, of Lexington; JAMES B. CHIDSEY, JR., '49, of Rome, Ga., and Mrs. Cynthia Farr Williamson of Los Altos Hills, Calif., wife of JOHN ALDEN WILLIAMSON, II, '53-'56L, and two of their children, John, 11, and Lee Farr, 9.

Mr. Brown was owner and operator of Pres Brown's, a Lexington sports and clothing store, which he opened as Brown's Sports Shop in 1947. His wife was operator of a Lexington, gift shop, known as Suzy's. They were married in 1943 and are survived by a son, Preston Hieatt, 23, a student at Furman University.

Mr. Chidsey was a food broker in Rome and was en route to a conference at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. He is survived by his wife and four children.

Mrs. Williamson was on her way to visit friends and relatives in Virginia. She was once a secretary of Prof. O. W. Riegel, head of the Department of Journalism and Communications. She and her husband moved to California shortly after his graduation from law school. Since then, he has been engaged in the home loan and mortgage business and is presently president of the California Plan, a loan brokerage business. A daughter, Julia Carmack, 4, survives.

Mrs. Williamson is a sister of another alumnus, JOHN A. FARR, JR., '49-'52L, formerly of Roanoke, Va., and now a lawyer in Anderson, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown were en route home from a visit to Atlanta. Pres was an outstanding W&L football player for four years, playing halfback and end. He also played baseball for three years and was captain in 1942. He was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma and president of the Monogram Club.

After graduation he was named assistant football coach at W&L, but was called to active duty with the Marine Corps in October, 1942. He was commissioned a lieutenant and served in the Marshall Islands, receiving the Purple Heart. After the war, he played pro football in the Dixie League for a year and coached at Deep Creek High School until he went into business. He traveled widely throughout Virginia selling athletic equipment to high schools and colleges. He was a charter member of the Virginia Sporting Goods Dealers Association and a former president.

No Time for the Clock

The afternoon is wearing on. The clock in the tower of Lee Chapel is pushing three. Still there is time to inquire, to discuss, to analyze, to set aside all barriers to intellectual curiosity. The clock in the steeple is unmindful. But Washington and Lee University is not unmindful of its duty to foster in its students a desire to learn, to esteem honor, and to value humanity. So the clock ticks unnoticed. A question is the thing of moment, and the search for truth the essence.

The Student is KIRK FOLLO of Gadsden, Ala. The picture was made by JOHN HUGHES in the Moffatt Seminar Room in Payne Hall.
