ON THE COVER: After a long, punishing winter, when early spring brings balmy warmth, what is more nurturing to mind and body than to sit, contemplate, doze under one of Washington and Lee's majestic trees—as this student is doing near McCormick Library. Trees—hundreds of many varieties—are a major part of the University's heritage. For a picture essay on these leafy friends supplied by Dr. Charles W. # President Huntley cites further needs in report on the development program

On Founder's Day, 1972, President Huntley and the Board of Trustees announced a development program to raise $36 million for Washington and Lee by the end of 1976. On Founder's Day, 1977—five years later—President Huntley reported on the progress of that development program. His remarks follow:

Customarily our Founder's Day assembly is held on the birthday of Robert E. Lee, who above anyone else in this school's long history is its founder. On only one other occasion that I am aware of in recent history have we held Founder's Day on Washington's Birthday, and that was five years ago when the University's Trustees and I announced the University's current development program. Because my primary remarks today will be addressed to an accounting to you on the phase of that program that ended in December, it seemed appropriate here five years later to have this assembly on the birthday of that founder who initiated our financial development with his gift to this institution in the eighteenth century.

The announcement made on Founder's Day in 1972 represented the culmination of several years of planning and work by the Board of Trustees and by many others to determine what the University's total financial needs would be during the decade of the 1970s. Many of the elements had already been rather clearly identified by 1970, and efforts to attract gift support were under way by then, with a good measure of success, before the complete plan was ready for announcement in early 1972.

The dollar totals were startlingly large, and all of us working with them approached the totals with some trepidation. There were several reasons why the figures seemed larger than anything in our history had prepared us for. Washington and Lee had often, over the decades, sought and received large gift support, but never before had the school sought to project over a period of five or ten years what the total of all gift support from all sources, for all purposes, would have to be.

Also, we faced a coincidence of requirements for additions to and renovations of the physical facilities on the campus, several of which were becoming insistent needs at the same time. And another factor was this: we concluded that increases in tuition would have to be restrained to approximately the rate of inflation in the economy and could no longer be counted on to increase as a percentage of the operating budget as it had done over the two decades before. Specifically the Board's plan was—and is—to hold tuition to approximately 60% of the educational and general budget of the University each year, or about 50% of the total budget, including financial aid and auxiliary enterprises. I might note we've managed since 1970 to stick with this objective. Tuition since that time has increased only at an average annual rate approximating the national rate of inflation.

Since Washington and Lee depends entirely upon tuition and gift revenues, entirely I would emphasize, this of course meant any real increases in our level of expenditures for current operations, for endowment, for buildings, would have to come almost entirely from increased giving—for both capital purposes (that is, buildings and endowment) and current operations.

Our estimate was that during the decade of the 1970s the University would need gifts of nearly $60 million in total—a staggering figure. To refine this estimate with a bit more precision the Board decided to deal first with those requirements that seemed most insistent and most immediate during the five or six years just ahead. This study eventually led to the program which was announced five years ago—$36 million by the end of 1976.

My primary purpose today, therefore, is to account to you and to W&L's alumni and friends everything concerning the results of our development efforts during the first six years of this decade, through the end of December 1976.

First, I should like to state what in these days is commonly called “the bottom line”: we clearly exceeded the dollar total which we stated as our objective. The total as of December 31 is nearly $37.5 million, or to be more precise, $37,469,000.

All of us have every reason to be proud of that achievement—and we are proud of it—and all of us have every reason to be grateful to literally thousands of persons who have made this possible. The total includes more than 32,000 individual gifts. In this very room today, particularly among the staff and faculty, are many whose gifts not only swelled the dollar total but also set an example of devotion and generosity for others who are scattered across the nation.

I am reminded at this point of a joke told of a fellow who had won the Irish Sweepstakes. When he was notified of his victory and the large dollar total that would come to him as a result of it, he was asked what he was going to do with it. He was heard to reply that he was going to apply it on his debts—as far as it would go.

Approximately $21.6 million of the total thus far given through 1976 is for physical improvements, notably for the new law building, Lewis Hall, for the new addition to the gymnasium and the other athletic facilities, for the new undergraduate library on which construction was begun last summer, for numerous improvements to the back campus area and to utilities that serve the campus, and for some of the initial steps in renovation of our old historic buildings on the front campus. Because of these generous gifts, although the dollars we have raised have not done all for us that we thought they would in 1972, we have built or have under construction all the physical facilities which we announced as objectives for fulfillment by this time.

Approximately $10 million of the total has been given or committed for endowment, which has been and will continue to be among our most pressing needs.

These capital gifts, and by capital gifts again I mean gifts for buildings and endowment, included some very large gifts, as we knew would be essential if we were to have any chance of success.

There were six gifts of more than $1 million. The largest of these was the gift of $9 million from Frances and Sydney Lewis of Richmond for the School of Law, assuring our ability to construct the needed facility and providing $2 million in special endowment; $3.8 million came to us from the estate of Mrs. Miriam McClure of New Orleans, the daughter and wife of an alumnus; $1.6 million came to us from the estate of our beloved alumnus of Lexington and Lynchburg, Richard E. Gooch; $1.5 million was given to us by Miss Ruth Parmly of New York City, who had had no prior connection with Washington and Lee, but who found here an expression of her ideals in education which reflected in her view the teaching career of her father at the City College of New York nearly a half century ago; $1.5 million came to us from the estate of our beloved alumnus of Leesburg, Virginia, Wilbur C. Hall, in whose memory the library in the new law school is named; and $1.3 million came to us from our good Trustee Jack Warner of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, who is a long-time member of the Board and a devoted alumnus.

In addition to these six gifts of more than $1 million, Washington and Lee has received for capital purposes 43 gifts ranging from $100,000 to $1 million, 47 gifts ranging from $25,000 to $100,000, and 131 other capital gifts of more than $5,000. And let me add that $13.9 million of the capital gift total came from our Board of Trustees. We owe gratitude to many people, not all of whom we can thank here today or indeed ever, but I would mention specifically the work of the hundreds of volunteers organized under what we called the Achievement Council and chaired by our Trustee John Stemmons of Dallas, Texas, the work of the Alumni Board, and indeed, above all, the work of the Board of Trustees.

To recapitulate, approximately $31.6 million has been given to us for capital purposes by the end of 1976. The remaining portion of the $37.5 million total I announced earlier is represented by approximately $5.8 million given over the six years for current operations. And I should like to pause here to emphasize that this amount is more than 50 per cent larger than we projected; that is, annual giving has increased more rapidly than we had hoped—or than we had expected would be necessary. I shall allude later to the importance of this fact as a major reason for our ability to maintain a balanced budget thus far. Annual giving for current operations is in many ways the bellwether indicator of our future, and so it is especially encouraging to note its good progress—thanks to our alumni and parents and friends who give each year and thanks to the business community of Virginia who supports Washington and Lee through the Virginia Foundations for Independent Colleges.

As I have already mentioned, the capital gifts, as splendid as they have been, have not done for us all that we had expected. The primary reason for this has been the far higher rate of inflation than we predicted—an inflation which has hit construction costs with particular severity, in some instances as much as 1 per cent a month, making some of our cost estimates for physical construction virtually obsolete, notably for the new undergraduate library begun recently, and so more of our effort has had to be devoted to building funds than we had anticipated.

We are at this moment approximately $1 million short of the total gift commitments required to fund that project—an amount which must be raised in the months just ahead.

On the endowment side of the capital ledger, the short fall is even greater. We had projected the need for $14 million in new gifts for endowment; we have received $10 million. Furthermore, the erratic performance of the stock market in the intervening years of the 1970s has inhibited endowment growth significantly. The net result is that our current endowment of about $22.75 million is approximately $6 million less than the endowment we had projected as necessary six years ago to provide a balanced budget in this current fiscal year.

That we have thus far managed to keep the budget in balance is a function of several factors, but largely a result of the greater share of the burden borne by annual giving, which, as I stated, exceeded our expectations. One of our great challenges for the immediate future results from the certainty that the rate of growth in annual giving—20 per cent a year in recent years—cannot possibly continue to close the widening gap produced by the diminished share of the burden carried by endowment.

This situation would have had all the earmarks of an immediate crisis if it were not for the news we received last year of the amazingly generous bequest for Washington and Lee in the estate of the late John Lee Pratt of Fredericksburg. The bequest—which is not included in any of the figures I have mentioned today—is expected to be approximately $12 million when it is finally distributed to us later this year.

Already, in the current year, we are using some of the income from the undistributed estate to assist with faculty salaries and with scholarships, the purposes which Mr. Pratt specified.

When Mr. Pratt's estate is distributed and used over the decades ahead as he specified, it will assist measurably toward achieving the same objectives primarily served by permanent endowment, that is, salaries and financial aid. But it is clear that additional endowment in the years immediately ahead remains our most insistent need if we are to have any real expectations of continuing to meet this University's educational aspirations.

The Board of Trustees has begun an intensive study of the financial requirements of the next several years. Nearly every one in this room will be involved in that process in some way in the months immediately ahead as will the Board and the alumni.

Let me pause a moment to emphasize again that among the many blessings of this University is the strength and dedication of its Board of Trustees. I know many other college presidents and something about many other institutions of higher learning, and I know of none that can boast of the dedication and ability and generosity of a Board of Trustees like ours. Particularly, I would like to mention the Rectors or chairmen of the Board who have served during these last seven years and who had so much to do with the success of the program to date, the late Dr. Huston St. Clair, the late Ross Malone, Dr. John Newton Thomas, and the current rector, Mr. Marshall Nuckols.

We already know what some of the elements of our needs in the years immediately ahead will be because we identified them some years back, and they are entailed by the developments we have already undertaken. We know, for example, on the physical side of the ledger, that we must renovate the old library when it moves into new quarters so that that building can receive the School of Commerce, and we know of needs on the physical side also for renovation, and we know for sure there will be others. We know already, as I have mentioned, that the needs for endowment will be extensive, and the Board is intent upon moving quickly to identify accurately what the other needs for the years just ahead will be. The process will be a difficult one in many respects, not the least of which will be the time it will consume for all of us. But the success that we have had in meeting our aspirations both in recent years and over the long sweep of our history—our heritage, our distinctive role in education generally, and the particular standard of excellence to which we have always subscribed, to which we continue to subscribe, with more determination and optimism than ever before—these demand that we do no less.

Fund-raising is a creature, not the cause, of our aspirations. Our form of fiercely independent education is now as it always has been an act of faith, and our institution represents one of the original statements of that act of faith. And, for all of us, I restate that act of faith here today.

ODK honors five prominent alumni during Founder's Day convocation

Five prominent Washington and Lee alumni were honored by initiation into Omicron Delta Kappa, the national leadership fraternity founded at W&L 63 years ago, during the Founder's Day convocation at which President Huntley reported on the University's development program. Fifteen students were also "tapped" into ODK membership.

The honorary initiates were:

William H. Flowers, '33, of Thomasville, Ga., board chairman of Flowers Industries Inc., wholesale bakers and distributors. He is a former Georgia state senator, a director of the National Association of Manufacturers, a board member of West Point Pepperell Inc., the textile manufacturer, and a director of several other professional and business concerns.

Oliver M. Mendell, '50, senior vice president of Chemical Bank of New York, the nation's seventh-largest. He has been with Chemical Bank since 1958 and is now responsible for business development among its 252 branches. He is president of the Fifth Avenue Association, a member of the board of governors of the Citizens Budget Commission, a trustee of Adelphi University's Center of Banking and Money Management, a fellow of Brandeis University, and a trustee of the federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

Dr. Robert L. Pinck, '42, of Cresskill, N. J., director of radiology at Long Island College Hospital and a leader in establishing X-ray technology training programs in New York state. He earned his M. D. degree from Duke University and has been with the Long Island College Hospital since 1956. He is a fellow of the American College of Radiology and the American College of Physicians. An outstanding athlete at W&L, Pinck received the Sports Illustrated All-America Award in 1967.

Col. Harold J. Sullivan, '32, of Oklahoma City, a leading lawyer in the Southwest. (He could not attend the convocation because of illness and was honored in absentia.) Col. Sullivan earned his law degree from Oklahoma University in 1935 and has practiced law in Oklahoma City since then. He was assistant municipal

U.S. Rep. G. William Whitehurst, '50, of Virginia Beach, Congressman from Virginia's Second District. He was elected to his fifth term last fall. He holds the M. A. from the University of Virginia and the Ph.D. from West Virginia University. He taught history at Old Dominion University, Norfolk, from 1962 until his election to Congress in 1968 and was dean of students at ODU from 1963 as well.

The fifteen students initiated into ODK were:

Law: William John Braaksma of Kalamazoo, Mich., Jeffrey William Morris of Coventry, R. I., and James Edwin Nicholson of Bethesda, Md.; Undergraduates: John L. Bruch III of Muncy, Pa., William E. Craver III of Charleston, S. C., Thomas H. Hunter III of Charlotte, Thomas N. Keigler, of Towson, Md., Walter D. Kelley Jr., of Norfolk, Paul J. Larkin of Jackson Heights, N. Y., David J. ## TREES OF W&L

The trees on the campus of Washington and Lee are a part of our heritage that grows and improves with the years. Photos taken in the 19th century show buildings towering over the small trees; today, however, the reverse is true. Many of the trees were set out by University grounds personal or by faculty families living on campus; others were gifts from friends of Washington and Lee. The result is an extraordinary variety of fine specimens. Dr. Charles Turner, professor of history, supplied the information for this picture essay and engaged W. Patrick Hinely, '73, to make the photographs.

The yard of the Lee-Jackson House is graced by several very old and very beautiful dogwoods first planted at the fencelines back in the days when cattle and horses roamed the Front Campus. These several large rows of dogwood amidst the residential buildings continue to bloom so profusely every spring.

There are more mountain ash at W&L than any other species. Perhaps the most familiar is the "Graduation Tree" at the intersection of the walks leading to Lee Chapel and Red Square on the south side of the campus, where for the past quarter century or so graduating classes have received their diplomas. This tree was planted during Gen. Lee's administration.

More than a century ago, Gen. Lee planted twin ginkgo trees along the walk to the then-new President's House, creating a sort of living entrance. Just to their left is the majestic Norway spruce, which has been W&L's Christmas tree for more than 40 years; behind the house, out of view in the photograph, is a huge oak almost in the hedgerow of the garden which dates back to the time when Washington Academy moved to its present site in the first years of the 18th century.

Down the campus toward Red Square and the Memorial Gate is located a wonderfully shaped larch tree, probably planted by the occupants of the Tucker-Fishwick house some 70 years ago. Its light green needles furnish a charming contrast to the darker foliage of neighboring trees in the summertime.

Toward Lee Chapel is located the finest white oak anywhere in the area, its companion poplars and maples seemingly looking up at it in their midst. Its dark red leaves cling until late fall and add majesty to every winter scene. Dr. Turner surveys its height.

This large maple beside the Dean's House, close by McCormick Library with its stately old ashes, oaks and magnolias, has shaded the way of generations of students as they approach Newcomb Hall. Through the limbs of this ancient specimen in 1864 was shot Hunter's famous cannonball that lodged in the side of the house and is still there.

The lawn in front of the Colonnade is open today, providing an exquisite view by day and night, held fondly in memory by every alumnus and visitor. There remains a beautiful fringe of trees about the edge of the Front Campus, however, and a striking linden tree grows directly in front of Robinson Hall.

The largest of the three copper beech trees at Washington and Lee stands not far from several beechnuts in the yard of the residence closest to Tucker Hall; they were planted by Dr. James L. Howe during the half-century he lived in the house. Dr. Turner stands beneath it.

Also in the "Hollow," close by Miss Annie Jo White's house, stands a fine grove of black walnut, maple, and ash trees in which generations of campus children have climbed and built tree-houses.

Across Letcher Avenue, down in the "Hollow," are two huge spruce trees that marked the entrance to the "Old Blue" Hotel, which stood there until 1947. Birds still seem to find their boughs and berries especially inviting.

The birds are never at a loss for nesting and perching places on Washington and Lee's leafy campus.

Ah, this is the life.

FANCY DRESS 1977

Wall-to-Wall People

The theme was "An Evening in Paris." The dress was black tie (though many wore top hats and tails). The decorations were the most intricate they've ever been in 70 years of Fancy Dresses (which is saying a lot indeed). The band was Woody Herman's (above, left; facing page, left center) in front of nothing less Parisian, nothing less elegant, than the Arc de Triomphe. The people were wall to wall—and their faces, 3,000 of them, proved they were having the time of their lives. There were students and alumni and the press and faculty and trustees (witness Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Brooks, below left). Old George was decorated again (opposite, top right; note his evening clothes, not to mention his lacrosse stick and six-pack), resurrecting a tradition which perhaps upsets the University accountants, who have to come up with a little extra money to rehabilitate him again, but almost no one else.

Just as in the olden days, Fancy Dress is a whole weekend and a half. The Ball is the highlight, but the revelry begins the day before, as it always did, and lasts for a day or three afterwards, depending on your stamina. This year, winter's bitter cold broke just in time for an estimated 4,000 students and their dates and their friends from other colleges, some still (or newly) in costume, to gather as best they could at water's edge, the Buffalo Creek, not too far from Lexington, to cap off what they proved is still "the outstanding collegiate social event in the South"—and surely beyond.

W&L FARES WELL IN COMPARATIVE SURVEY OF FACULTY COMPENSATION AND TUITION

A comparative survey this winter of 29 private colleges and universities in the east ranks Washington and Lee fifth in the compensation it pays its faculty—while showing that charges at W&L for tuition, room and board are lower than those costs at 21 of the other institutions.

W&L's 1976-77 compensation figure—that is, salary and fringe benefits combined—is an average of $22,878 for all faculty ranks. Among the other schools which participated in the survey, the four with higher compensation figures are Princeton, Duke and Brown Universities and Amherst College. (All four also have student costs substantially higher than W&L's.)

The charges at Washington and Lee for tuition, room and board total $4,500. The range among the institutions surveyed was $6,737 (Brown University) at the high end, and $3,715 at the low end (Presbyterian College, South Carolina). The cost figures are for next academic year.

The annual survey is conducted by Davidson College.

The Davidson survey data point out an unusual level of financial efficiency at Washington and Lee, with the University comparing favorably among the 29 institutions in terms of both its most important expenditure, faculty salaries, and its largest source of income, tuition.

For many years, Washington and Lee has stressed high faculty salaries as an important way to attract and keep a gifted teaching faculty. And the University has also determined that tuition costs must be kept relatively low—at 60 per cent of the general educational budget, with the gap to be met primarily by annual gifts and endowment income—and that tuition increases should be no higher than the approximate increase in the general cost of living.

A POLITE SIT-IN

It happened at last. Washington and Lee had its very own 1960s-style "sit-in" this winter. But, characteristically of W&L perhaps, it was marked by civility every step of the way.

About two dozen black students—frustrated by an apparent lack of progress in recruitment of black faculty and by what they sensed to be diminished vigor in recruiting black students, among other issues—staged a demonstration in the reception area of President Huntley's office. Traffic wasn't blocked, and voices weren't raised. The students said they felt it necessary to make their presence conspicuous, however, and they did. In all, it lasted from a little after nine in the morning to a little before eight that evening.

The issues were complicated by a separate problem which occurred simultaneously (and which triggered the demonstration)—the conviction of a black student of a violation of the Honor System. Such matters are considered to be strictly internal, though inordinate media attention resulted in the January case. The University steadfastly maintained a "no comment" posture, its rule in Honor System matters. Because the University's by-laws give no one other than the student body any voice or power in the administration of the Honor System, the question was eventually settled in a routine way by the Student Executive Committee. Black students continued to express apprehension, however, over alleged procedural irregularities in the particular case which the black students believe, according to the Ring-tum Phi's account, resulted in a "railroad" conviction.

The other issues raised—faculty and student recruitment; financial aid policies; perceived discrimination and lack of support with regard to athletic and social activities—are being discussed in a continuing series of meetings between the interested students and the pertinent administrators and faculty committees, with an eye toward keeping the students up to date on efforts W&L has long been engaged in, with varying degrees of success, and keeping the University aware of specific concerns on the minds of the students. The ad hoc meetings will become a regular means of two-way communication, both groups agreed.

VIRGINIA DEMOCRATS TO DEBATE AT W&L

The two announced contenders for the Democratic nomination to run next fall for governor of Virginia, Atty. Gen. Andrew P. Miller and former Lieut. Gov. Henry Howell, will be at W&L for a debate April 28. The event will take place in Lee Chapel and is sponsored by the W&L Young Democrats.

GLEE CLUB SINGS AT ST. PATRICK'S MASS

The W&L Glee Club sang for Sunday Mass in March at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City—the high point of its annual winter concert tour. Under the direction of Dr. Gordon P. Spice, assistant professor of music, the group also sang in Maryland and Pennsylvania on the tour, and took an evening out to see The Wiz on Broadway.

VISITORS TO CAMPUS

Speakers and performers who visited Washington and Lee during January and February included:

—Former Massachusetts Supreme Court Justice Paul C. Reardon, author of the so-called "Reardon Report" on the free-press versus fair-trial dilemma, for a series of seminars and classes with law and journalism students and for a public address, "Fair Trial: The Conflict Between the First and Sixth Amendments to the Constitution," sponsored by a new Visiting Scholars Series under the auspices of the Student Bar Association in the School of Law;

—The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts' Commedia dell'arte troupe, a "traveling clown show," for a performance in the Troubadour Theatre;

—Dr. Harry A. Bent, professor of physical chemistry at North Carolina State University, "Molecular Architecture: A

PHI BETA KAPPA ELECTS 34

Washington and Lee's Gamma chapter of Phi Beta Kappa has elected 34 new members—17 undergraduate seniors, 11 juniors, and six 1976 graduates.

Newly elected seniors are Howard C. Alexander Jr., Montgomery, Ala. (chemistry major); Christopher E. Attinger, Crozet, Va. (pre-medical studies); Lance C. Brambeck, Huntington, N. Y. (music); Paul W. Cella, Powhatan, Va. (English); Landon W. Garland Jr., Richmond (interdepartmental);

Also, Edward B. Gerhardt, Lynchburg (biology and chemistry); Stephen Q. Giblin, Baltimore (politics); Sinclair J. Harcus Jr., Bloomfield Hills, Mich. (biology); Warren L. Jervey, Radford, Va. (French); John W. McNamara, Norfolk (politics); Stephen B. Norris, Dallas (administration);

LAW ESSAY TAKES NATIONAL HONORS

A 1976 graduate of the School of Law, Frank L. Duemmler, has taken fifth-place honors in a nationwide competition on copyright law sponsored by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP). Duemmler's essay, "Library Photocopying: An International Perspective," was chosen from among 61 papers entered in the competition by students from 44 law schools throughout the nation. Duemmler had previously won a first-place award at W&L for his research.

MASTERS OF MIME IN RESIDENCE

Five members of the famed Warsaw Chamber Opera Mime Company are at Washington and Lee during the winter term as adjunct teachers in the drama department.

The mimes are instructing W&L students in the use of various theatrical styles and directing them in applying those techniques. Their form of mime is a combination of ballet, dance, music and pantomime, more advanced than Marcel Marceau's popularized form of the art.

The Warsaw players' six-week visit to W&L is sponsored by the Glasgow Endowment, established 17 years ago by Arthur Graham Glasgow to promote the creative arts at the University.

CONTACT '77

Contact, W&L's student-organized symposium series, opened this winter with an address by U. S. Sen. Joseph Biden (D.-Del.) and two lectures, one on Lebanon and another on South Africa, by Talcott W. Seelye, the former ambassador to Tunisia and Presidential emissary to Lebanon, who is now deputy assistant Secretary of State for African affairs.

Other Contact speakers this spring will be:

—Charles Kuralt, CBS News correspondent (the popular "On the Road" series for the evening news);

—Bruce Jenner, last year's Olympic gold medal-winner in track;

—Randall Meyer, president of Exxon USA; and —Vincent Bugliosi, chief prosecutor in the Charles Manson case and co-author of Helter Skelter.

'77 Lynchburg Citation goes to Lea Booth

LYNCHBURG. Lea Booth, '40, executive director of the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges (VFIC), was awarded the Lynchburg Citation at the annual banquet in February of the Lynchburg chapter.

Booth has been executive director of the VFIC since it was established in 1953. The VFIC is a joint fund-raising agency of 12 private four-year colleges, working primarily with Virginia businesses and industry. Last year, it raised $1.3 million in contributions, providing the largest amount of money per college and the largest amount per student of all 40 similar college funds throughout the United States. W&L's proportionate share of that total was $123,000.

The citation presented to Booth remarked on his "unbelievably dogged and persistent efforts" in convincing prospective VFIC donors to make their gifts each year. The citation also credited him with "bringing a quality of humor, joy and zest to the task of elevating simultaneously the performance of [Virginia's] colleges and the standards of responsible citizenship in this Commonwealth."

After graduation from W&L, Booth worked for a time as a reporter for United Press (now UPI) in New York City. Following Navy service in World War II, he returned to W&L as public-relations director and assistant professor of journalism. In 1950 he became staff director of the U. S. House of Representatives' Administration Committee, a post he held until joining the VFIC three years later as its first full-time worker.

He received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree last year from W&L.

Booth was the originator of the annual Lynchburg Citation—which is now regarded as the most important honor any Washington and Lee alumni chapter can confer. Others who have received it in past years include the late Frank J. Gilliam, dean of students and director of admissions at W&L for more than 30 years; Frances and Sydney Lewis, donors of $9 million to W&L's law school; Edgar F. Shannon Jr., former president of the University of Virginia; and Dr. John Newton Thomas, a W&L trustee for more than 30 years and rector of the board from 1970 to 1974.

The evening's speakers were Prof. R. H. MacDonald, head of the Department of Journalism and Communications, who outlined to the Lynchburg alumni the recent technological revolutions in both print and broadcast journalism and the ways W&L's journalism program has moved forward to meet them; and Bertram R. Schewel, '41, whose annual "state of the chapter" report has become one of the most popular (if outrageous) features of the annual Lynchburg banquet.

NEW ENGLAND. An enthusiastic group of about 45 alumni, their wives, and friends from Boston and the New England area joined for cocktails and dinner at the Marriott Motor Hotel in Newton, Mass., on Jan. 13. Dr. Lewis G. John, '58, dean of students, was the guest of honor. Dean John presented a full and up-to-date report on the University, dwelling particularly on his special responsibilities in the areas of student affairs and admissions. John Mello, '72, newly installed president of the chapter, made the arrangements for the meeting, the first held in several years. Mello recently returned from a tour of duty with the Peace Corps in Mali. He made several announcements and encouraged alumni of the area to support a more active program for the chapter in the years ahead.

GULF STREAM. Members of the chapter began the new year on Jan. 11 with a meeting in the University Club in Miami. A large group of alumni and their guests attended the reception and dinner. Guests of honor included President and Mrs. Robert E. R. Huntley, Rector Emeritus John Newton Thomas, '24, and Athletic Director and Head Football Coach William D. McHenry, '54. McHenry was the principal speaker. He discussed the overall athletic program at Washington and Lee and explained some of the recent NCAA rulings affecting the University. Both President Huntley and Dr. Thomas reported on the state of the University. A. J. Barranco, '64, chapter president, and Larry Craig, '66, made the arrangements for the meeting.

The 1975 Alumni Directory

The Indispensable Reference Book
For Every Washington and Lee Alumnus

The new up-to-date Washington and Lee Alumni Directory, 1749-1975, is now available at only $5.00 a copy, including postage. The unique feature that distinguishes this directory from past editions is that the 1975 issue was produced by a computerized method.

The directory has three sections:

Alphabetical—Every person who has attended W&L since 1749 is listed alphabetically, together with his class, his degree, his address, and his occupation.

Class List—A full list of the members of each class, including degree holders and non-graduates, appears in this section.

Geographical—Alumni are identified by states and by cities within these states as well as in foreign countries.

No Washington and Lee alumnus can afford to be without this valuable reference book in his home or office. Use the form below to order your copy. Mail to Washington and Lee Alumni, Inc., Lexington, Va. 24450.

Please send me..... copy(ies) of the Washington and Lee Alumni Directory at $5.00 each, including postage. Check is enclosed.

In the next issue

It was a hot winter for W&L athletic teams. The basketball Generals finished the regular season 23-3—its best on record—was ranked fourth nationally in the NCAA Division III, won the Old Dominion Athletic Conference championship, and then fell in the first round of the Division III South Atlantic Regional Tournament. The season brought Coach Verne Canfield 203 career victories at W&L and the team a 17-game winning streak—another record. The wrestling team finished 10-3 and won the ODAC title. The swimmers completed their dual meet season at 6-3 and had seven individuals qualify for the nationals. The indoor track and field finished as runner-up in the ODAC meet. Full coverage of the winter athletic scene will appear in the next issue of the magazine.

At press time, thoughts were turning to spring and lacrosse. The lacrosse schedule (home games in capitals) follows:
