

A SPLENDID NEW HOME: Mudd Donates Book Collection

Roger Mudd '50, the acclaimed television journalist, has donated his extensive collection of 20th-century Southern writers to the Leyburn Library. He presented the first 100 volumes at a program sponsored by the Friends of the Library on Oct. 21 during the weekend of Homecoming and the presidential inauguration.

The collection comprises first issues or first editions of the complete works of almost 200 writers, including William Faulkner, Eudora Welty, Robert Penn Warren and Ellen Glasgow. His initial gift is the complete works of Faulkner, Glasgow and Erskine Caldwell.

Mudd dates his love of books to age 8. Once he got to W&L, he said, "It was Marshall Fishwick (professor of American studies from 1949-1962) who really got me started and convinced me book collecting was a hobby worth pursuing." In fact, Mudd made the donation in memory of Fishwick, who passed away in May 2006.

"We are delighted that Roger Mudd has seen his way to make this important donation to W&L's library," said University Librarian Merrily E. Taylor. "A complete collection of this magnitude is rare, and we are very fortunate to be able to make it available to W&L students and faculty, as well as the public. We are also honored to preserve this fine collection for use for generations to come."

Mudd has run out of space and has stopped collecting. However, "not collecting does not mean that I have lost my fascination with books," he said, "their welcoming warmth, their heft, their permanence, the brilliance of their creation from the first little hints and scribbles to the final shiny product with its distinctive fragrance.

"Above all, giving my Southern collection to my alma mater means that those thousand friends I got to know over the years, those friends who lived in our home and slept on our shelves, will get to stay together as a family in a splendid new home, with proper climate and protection, where I know they will give as much pleasure and joy to those who love books and love Leyburn Library as they gave to me."

As I walked along the Colonnade early on Oct. 21, 2006, I was struck at how little the scenery has changed along that particular stretch of campus. That stroll, in fact, may very well be one of the only experiences that all alumni share

ALONG THE COLONNADE

Presidential Inauguration

That day, I was honored to be part of the inauguration of President Ken Ruscio '76 at Homecoming. We were blessed with a picture-perfect, crisp autumn morning; the blue chapter flags waving in the breeze; a large, joyful crowd on the lawn. It was exciting and heartening to witness Ken's installation and the support from all factions of the University: trustees and trustees emeriti, faculty and faculty emeriti, staff, alumni chapter presidents, student leaders, members of the Law Council and Alumni Board of Directors, plus the five living former University presidents and the mayor of Lexington. They, too, have walked down the Colonnade.

And they, too, were pleased to celebrate as Ken, who gave an inspiring address, directs the University forward while also respecting our rich tradition and heritage. It is wonderful to welcome Ken, Kim and Matt Ruscio back to beautiful Lexington and to have their talents and passion.

Alumni Enthusiasm

The same weekend included a successful, well-attended conference of alumni chapter presidents. More than 50 percent of our chapters were represented, and the program was motivating and informative. The conference focused on diversity in chapter programming, resources available from the Alumni Office and using the MINK Conference for chapter success. Our volunteers' enthusiasm and our alumni's gifts and accomplishments were evident.

Each year, the Alumni Association bestows annual awards for Distinguished Alumni and Distinguished Young Alumni. We know there are alumni who have achieved great success in their communities, professions, public service and philanthropy. Please let us know who they are.

The Alumni Board also seeks nominations for the Board of Trustees. Every two years, we forward a slate of candidates, and you can tell us about great choices from your community. Please see the call for nominations on p. 28 from Beau Dudley '74, '79L, executive director of alumni affairs, and Dan Einstein '83, chair of the Selection Committee.

Finally, we also solicit nominees to the Alumni Board of Directors. We are interested in nominees who have exhibited devotion to the University with their participation in and support of alumni activities, and in nominees of both genders and possessing diversity of geography, race and ethnicity. Please forward these confidential nominations to me at 600 17th St., #2800S, Denver, CO 80202, or to Beau Dudley c/o Alumni Office, Washington and Lee University, Lexington, VA 24450-2116, by Jan. 31, 2007.

It is exciting to be on the threshold of a promising new era at the University. I urge you to spend time with your fellow alumni—who also took that stroll down the Colonnade.

More Greats from the Williams School

I read with great interest the alumni magazine featuring the centennial of the C-School (81:3:2006). Conspicuous by its absence was any mention of one of the stalwarts of yesteryear, Lewis Kerr "L.K." Johnson.

Teaching marketing was his forte. Through my son, Robert Carl Peniston '75, who took all of L.K.'s marketing courses, I came to know this legend. The circumstance under which I met him was not pleasant: The day after my son's funeral, on April 11, 1975. L.K.'s manner in recalling my son as a student and a Washington and Lee genrleman was most comforting.

L.K. was not a dean of the C-School, but he belongs among those gentlemen depicted on pp. 26-31 of the aforementioned magazine. Many graduates who benefited from his teaching and wise counsel, I am sure, will agree.

> Robert C. Peniston Honorary Alumnus Lexington

The commentary on Lew Adams, or, as he was affectionately known in our household, "Curly Lou," was extremely interesting, as well as the few brief, insufficient comments regarding my father's and my dear friend, professor and advisor, Claybrook Griffith.

Unfortunately, you completely overlooked and neglected the man who was indeed the Commerce School-Lewis K. Johnson. If there is one individual who had a more marked impression on more graduates in the business curriculum, I don't know who it would be!

L.K. will be forever remembered for often stating that his "standards are higher than others'." While the majority of my education from L.K. came from his lectures, he most definitely had an unlimited positive impact upon my father, Mike Malmo '49. Dad would say he could trace all of his business successes to the fundamental principles he learned from L.K. Without his guidance, nurturing and education, many of us would not be as fortunate or successful.

> Gerald M. Malmo III '79 Winston-Salem, N.C.

I was pleased to receive the issue-then a bit saddened when I looked in vain for any mention of Lewis Kerr Johnson. L.K. was not just a close friend. He was a very challenging professor who required his students to learn vast lists of principles. He was an outspoken maverick with a refreshing scorn for dominant orthodox trends in the social sciences that abandoned principles in favor of trivial quantification. And he was rare in his academic environment: he had a commitment to the principles of a free society and a free market economy.

That is why those of us who created the first and only issue of the W&L Commerce Review (May 1973), the only journal of the business school, dedicated it to L.K. The firestorm that erupted within the faculty in response (see the Ring-Tum Phi in May 1973) underscored how rare an original thinker L.K. was and how embarrassed and embarrassing were some of his colleagues.

I also remember the late Dean Bill Watt fondly. When I wrote a term paper that was the sole grade for a philosophy course, but which collided with the prejudices of my professor, Watt was nice enough to "encourage" the professor actually to grade the paper. Some fond memories at W&L!

William H. McIlhany '73 Beverly Hills, Calif.

The pictures and articles about the Commerce School faculty were wonderful.

When I was a second-year student at Harvard Business School, a fellow student had a date with a girl who worked in the admissions office. When I met her, she said, "I know you. You are Dean Lew Adams' boy, and I want you to know how hard he worked to help you get admitted." I am sure this story could be told many times about his efforts for other students.

Marshall Fishwick

In the early '90s, my wife, Suzanne, and I were at the Greenbrier. I noticed that Marshall Fishwick was speaking at 9 a.m. As it was already 9, we hustled down to the theater, hoping to slip in unnoticed. As we entered, Marshall looked up and, without missing a step, said, "Come on in, Mr. Sinwell. I see you are late for class-again!"

I will always remember his wit and wisdom and outrageous sense of humor.

COOKING UP A CAUSE

At Campus Kitchen's Turkeypalooza in November, volunteers cooked, packaged and delivered Thanksgiving meals. "This is a time when Campus Kitchen goes above and beyond our normal services," said Caitlin Schopp, Campus Kitchen coordinator. "We want our clients to know that we care and are thinking of them during the holidays." Left to right: Schopp, Chris Kramedjian (intern at Reformed University Fellowship), Alice Shih '08, Jenny Sproul '08.

hat compels W&L students to snap on hairnets and spend hours laboring in an industrial kitchen? It's all for a new campus organization—Campus Kitchen.

Since 2001, the national Campus Kitchens Project has sponsored student volunteers at universities, colleges and high schools all over the country. The workers transform their institutions' leftover food into nourishing, appealing meals and then deliver them to residents of their communities. People in need receive food and companionship; social agencies, such as the Rockbridge Area Department of Social Services, get a financial break; schools reduce waste; and the students who run the program come to know the pleasures of hard work and good works.

"I was constantly astounded by the amazing community at W&L and how that sense of community extended to everyone on campus."

INGRID EASTON '06

Getting Involved

The Campus Kitchen (CK) arrived at W&L thanks to Ingrid Easton '06. She got involved after her Shepherd Poverty Program internship in Washington, when she visited the national offices of the Campus Kitchens Project and its parent, the D.C. Central Kitchen. Before she set foot in either place, Easton had read and admired Begging for Change: The Dollars and Sense of Making Nonprofits Responsive, Efficient, and Rewarding for All, a book by Robert Egger, the D.C. Central Kitchen's president. After the visit and a long talk with Egger, she said, "I was hooked."

"To be perfectly honest, I didn't know if W&L would be a great place for CK," said Easton. "I knew that I was surrounded by incredibly giving, passionate and driven students. That was clear. I also suspected that the W&L administration, development and staff would be supportive. However, as I researched the program, I was constantly astounded by the amazing community at W&L and how that sense of community extended to everyone on campus." As it turned out, "my biggest challenge was managing the positive response and support we had along the way."

Getting Started

Easton learned a lot about herself and the students who signed on. "The coolest part of the year," she said, "was watching leadership team members take over events and making them so much better than I ever could have. Knowing that my weaknesses were balanced by their strengths was one of the most rewarding realizations."

Her education also proved its worth. "The classes I took in the Shepherd Poverty Program didn't just fill my head with statistics about poverty or tell me how to think about the issues. Instead, they taught me that poverty is a complex issue that you could spend a lifetime digging into." Easton graduated with a B.A. (cum laude) in economics.

As you'd expect, faculty members rallied around her cause. "All of my professors were really encouraging, and each supported me in different ways," she said, especially Mike Pleva (chemistry), Art Goldsmith (economics) and Timothy Diette (economics). She also tips her hat to the Shepherd Program's Harlan Beckley, director; Stacy McLoughlin Taylor, acting director, 2005-2006; and Aubrey Shinofield, service learning coordinator. "Although she is much too humble to admit it," said Easton, "CK would definitely not exist if it weren't for Aubrey's enthusiasm."

Getting Underway

The September kickoff of CK drew an enthusiastic crowd. "You and I aren't going to solve hunger and homelessness ourselves," Maggie Puryear '07, who interned with CK at Gonzaga last summer, told the guests. "But we can make individual differences."

In its first week of operation, CK prepared and served 305 meals. Caitlin Schopp directs the project from the Beta Theta Pi house. Key players in its establishment were Alex da Silva, director of auxiliary services; Joe Calicchio, director of catering; Kirsten Engle, event planning manager in charge of catering; and Dawn Watkins, dean of students. Faculty, staff and students donated time and money from the get-go, as did Mike and Brenda Gregg, owners of Lexington's Blue Sky Bakery, who contribute leftover food. W&L's branch is the 11th in the nation and the first in Virginia.

Easton lives in San Francisco and works for Gap Inc. as a merchandise planning analyst. She was happy to discover that her employer supports its employees' volunteer efforts. She also was pleased when the national office of CK named a prize after her—the Ingrid Easton Student Visionary Award.

At the kickoff, President Ken Ruscio '76 told the attendees, "The most important leadership development is when a student realizes it's about the needs and interests of others." His words describe Easton, Puryear and all the students of Campus Kitchen.

NOT-SO-PETTY PHILANTHROPY

Count another alumnus, Thomas R. Petty '83L, as a devoted supporter of Campus Kitchen. The Washington lawyer serves as board chair of the D.C. Campus Kitchens Project. Pro bono work for the group initially drew him in, and now he spends 25 to 30 hours per week on those duties in addition to his practice with Anderson Kill & Olick L.L.P. "I find it so fulfilling," he said. "I was drawn to the enthusiasm of the students, and the fact that it's student-run."

President Ruscio and Thomas R. Petty '83L

Petty, who attended the September campus kickoff of CK on campus—that's him on the right in the photo, talking with President Ruscio—said the principle behind the organization is simple. "You can connect with people. The students, over a meal and a conversation, will be changed by talking with the people they serve." That goes for anyone involved with the program, he added.

Before his fall visit, Petty hadn't been to Lexington in 10 years. "This is a great way to come back to W&L," he said.

Harlan Beckley, director of the Shepherd Poverty

Program, agreed. "What a wonderful way to welcome back an alumnus."

Shenandoah Pays Tribute to Tom Wolfe '51

Don't miss the Spring 2007 issue of Shenandoah: The Washington and Lee University Review, which centers on Tom Wolfe '51, a founding editor of Shenandoah, and contains works by W&L alumni, students and faculty.

Contents of the special issue include pieces by current and past professors:

- David Caudill, formerly of the Law School, on Wolfe's novels and the law
- Marc Conner, associate professor of English, on Wolfe and African-American literature
- Doug Cumming, assistant professor of journalism and mass communications, "Tom Wolfe: Reporter," an essay on the bridge between old-style journalism and the New Journalism
- Robin LeBlanc, associate professor of politics, "Seeking the Empire of Women with Tom Wolfe"
- Eduardo Velásquez, associate professor of politics, "Tom Wolfe's Ghost in the Machine: Neuroscience, Consciousness and the Soul in I Am Charlotte Simmons"

Alumni weigh in as well, with fiction by William Hoffman '53 and poetry by William Hollis '53 and Lyrae Van Clief-Stefanon '93. Current student Lorna Golder '07 takes a look at Wolfe's sartorial and satirical styles. Pam Simpson, professor of art history, examines Cy Twombly '53, and a photo gallery of Wolfe images rounds out the issue.

Subscriptions are $22 for one year, $40 for two years and $54 for three years. Add $8 for foreign subscriptions. To subscribe, send a check made out to "Shenandoah," to Shenandoah, Mattingly House, 2 Lee Avenue, Washington and Lee University, Lexington, VA 24450-2116. You may also use your Visa or Mastercard. See shenandoah.

A Supreme Occasion

Lucas Morel, associate professor of politics (left), took a sidebar with John Roberts Jr., chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States (right), this spring. The occasion was the 2006 Leon Silverman Lecture Series, sponsored by the Supreme Court Historical Society, of which Morel is a trustee. Roberts introduced Morel, who delivered the talk "The Dred Scott Dissents: McLean, Curtis, Lincoln and the Public Mind." Morel also brought along his family and the students from his spring term course on black American politics; the students, alas, were unable to meet the chief justice.

TOM WILLIAMS TO LEAVE THE PROVOST'S OFFICE

Tom Williams, who has served three presidents as provost since 2003, will step down from that position on June 30, 2007. "As only the second person to hold that position, Tom leaves the provost's office with a remarkable legacy," said President Ken P. Ruscio '76. "Three presidents, including me, have been well-served by his sage advice, his extraordinary work ethic and competence, his scholarly brilliance and, at all the finely timed moments, his inimitable wit."

Three Decades of Service

Williams has been a member of the faculty since 1974, helping to build physics and engineering into a student-centered, collaborative research department. He chaired the department from 1989-2000 and in 1994 was named W&L's Edwin A. Morris Professor of Physics.

Williams was associate dean of the College from 1986-1989. He also has served on numerous academic committees, including presidential search panels, and has published 29 scientific articles on theoretical nuclear and particle physics. He served as a consultant to the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory from 1987-1993 and as a consultant to the National Bureau of Standards from 1974-1986.

Strategic Planning

As the co-director for strategic planning (with trustee Burt Staniar '64), Williams has guided the University through the strenuous process of defining itself for the next five to 10 years. He will continue to serve as a special assistant to the president on strategic planning. He has been a central figure in three presidential transitions, planning the renovation of the Colonnade, hiring 21 new faculty and constructing Wilson Hall.

As a member of the physics faculty, he continues to teach quantum mechanics and to conduct what he terms "modest research" in quantum computing with Paul Bourdon of the mathematics department. During the 2007-2008 academic year, he will split his time between teaching and strategic planning.

The University will conduct a national search for Williams' successor.

Creditworthy

Robert J. de Maria, professor of journalism and mass communications, produced a short video, "New Orleans: A Place Nobody Knows." It documents 10 volunteers who went there in June to help in the post-Katrina clean-up.

Jonathan Eastwood, assistant professor of sociology, has received a Fulbright for his project, "Nationalism and Liberalism in Venezuela," which will entail spending three months in Caracas next summer. The Fulbright will allow Eastwood to continue his research at the point where his forthcoming book, The Rise of Nationalism in Venezuela, leaves off.

Ceorge W. Kester, Martel Professor of Finance, received the Faculty of Economics and Commerce Dean's Award for Excellent Postgraduate Teaching at the University of Melbourne, Australia, and the title of Honorary Visiting Professor for a term of five years by vote of the Faculty Senate of the University of Liubliana, Slovenia. He teaches at both universities during the summer.

Pamela Simpson, professor of art and architectural history, received the 2006 Best Essay Award from the Southeastern Chapter of the Society of Architectural Historians for her chapter, "Cereal Architecture: Late-Nineteenth-Century Grain Palaces and Crop Art," which appeared in Building Environments: Perspectives in Vernacular Architecture X, edited by Kenneth A. Breisch and Alison K. Hoagland (Knoxville: The University of Tennessee Press, 2005).

Dabney Stuart, professor emeritus of English, won the Library of Virginia's 2006 Literary Award for poetry for his book, Family Preserve.

New Prof Lands Important Grant

Fred LaRiviere, a new assistant professor of chemistry, is one of only seven people in the nation to receive a $30,000 research grant from the 2006 Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation Faculty Start-Up Awards Program. The award goes to new faculty members in their first tenure-track position at a predominantly undergraduate institution.

LaRiviere's research interest is in RNA, one of the nucleic acids, along with DNA, that carry genetic information in cells. "I am extremely fortunate to have been selected for this award," says LaRiviere. "It is very exciting, because it helps me to open up new research opportunities for our students at W&L.

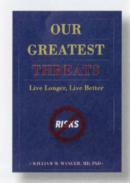

"It will allow me to purchase new equipment essential for starting my research lab. As a bonus, most of this new equipment will not only benefit myself and my research students but will also be used by many other students in our newly expanded biochemistry teaching lab."

LaRiviere was previously a Dreyfus teaching and research fellow in the chemistry department at Colby College. He has a B.S. in chemistry and biochemistry from Clark University and a Ph.D. in biochemistry from the University of Colorado. He was a Damon Runyon Cancer Research Foundation Postdoctoral Fellow at Brandeis University.

Last year, to commemorate the 60th anniversary of the end of World War II, we ran the names of W&L alumni who died in that conflict. Some thoughtful readers suggested that we also publish the names of alumni who perished in other wars. So here they are, as compiled from the latest alumni directory and from the plaques on W&L's War Memorial. We present them with gratitude and remembrance.

CLASS OF 1963, CHEMISTRY PROF CONCOCT A SYMPOSIUM

The Class of 1963 and Erich Uffelman, associate professor of chemistry, hosted a symposium on campus this fall, "Recent Developments in Art Conservation and Conservation Science: Considering the Works of Rembrandt and Other Master Painters." Speakers included Jaap Boon, of AMOLF-FOM (Institute for Atomic and Molecular Physics), in Amsterdam, the Netherlands; Melanie Gifford, research conservator for painting technology at the National Gallery of Art, Washington; and Petria Noble, head of painting conservation at the Mauritshuis art museum, in The Hague, the Netherlands. The Class of 1963 sponsored the event to celebrate the new John and Anne Wilson Hall and the 400th anniversary of Rembrandt's birth. Left to right: Uffelman, Gifford, Boon and Noble.

Asali Solomon, assistant professor of English, has published Get Down (Farrar, Straus and Giroux), a collection of short stories.

The W&L Traveller program voyaged from Rome to Barcelona this fall. In addition to the Vatican, Portofino and other sights, we visited two churches in Barcelona.

The Heart of Barcelona

The Cathedral St. Eulailia is in the Barrio Gotico, the heart of medieval Barcelona. Before entering this Gothic masterpiece, we strolled past some suggestive remnants of early Roman settlement, then ascended a narrow lane to gain access to the church. The soaring interior was full of shadows, despite the brilliance of the stained glass windows and the incandescent spotlights set high in the towers of the nave. Our guide, Amada, secured access to the cathedral's central choir through an iron gate, attended by a sexton keeping out unfunded—this is about paying, not praying.

The elaborately carved wooden choir chairs were very impressive, including the one done in ample proportions for use by a visiting King Henry VIII, from England. Amada had us study one of the more opulent side chapels, given in the late 16th century by the shoe guild, whose fortunes no doubt came from those grown rich from the exploitation of the New World. The pervasive gold leaf seemed especially thick.

The Passion of Gaudi

The visit to the Cathedral of St. Eulailia was in some ways strategic to our appreciation of the Sagrada Familia, the Church of the Holy Family, which Antoni Gaudi (1852-1926) began early in his career, 1883, and continued to work on for the rest of his life. For one thing, seeing it still many years from completion gave us a glimpse of what the citizens of the Middle Ages must have experienced as the great cathedrals of their towns and cities rose from generation to generation with painstaking slowness into the sky. Amada guessed that it might be finished in 30 to 40 years, depending on the generosity of citizens—the construction draws no funds from either the state or the Vatican. That would mean that the church would have a lifespan of construction extending at least 150 years.

Gaudi's fantastic extension of a church of Gothic dimensions is brilliantly conceived, though again the surface intensity and bizarre elaborations have given it something of the effect of an amusement park. At this point, eight of the bell towers, each of them soaring to more than 350 feet high, have been completed, as have two of the gates. Work continues on the main gate and the roof. Work on the central tower, which rises to more than 500 feet on the drawing board, has not vet begun, for no one has vet calculated how a bell tower of that height can be safely constructed.

Most of us followed Amada around the structure, while a few members of our group, either weary from our morning tour or simply uninterested in such ecclesiastical shenanigans, waited for us at an outdoor café. Especially poignant in the record of the church's construction is one of the side galleries, finished during Gaudi's lifetime and now grown dark with age. While Gaudi worked on the church virtually his entire career, he did take on other commissions in order to buy groceries. However, he was devoted fully to the project during his later years. He died in a pedestrian accident, fatally injured when a tram struck him. According to Amada, at the time of the accident, his dark suit was covered with plaster dust.

There are John H. Ward III '39, his son John H. Ward IV '68 (a member of the Alumni Board) and John '68's sons Peter M. Ward '98 and Andrew B. Ward '00. After Andrew died in April, the Alumni Board of Directors honored his memory in a special way—with a donation to restore the minutes of the Board of Trustees from 1845 to 1873.

Alumni Board president Rebecca Brandt '90 led the effort to raise funds from her fellow board members. "The Alumni Board was interested in a unique and distinguished means to honor Andrew," she says, "one that exemplified his character and devotion to W&L."

governing body of W&L for a critical period," explains C. Vaughan Stanley III, head of special collections. "It covers the time of Hunter's Raid on Lexington and Washington College in 1864, Robert E. Lee's selection and acceptance of the presidency in 1865 and George Washington Custis Lee's first years as president."

Merrily Taylor, University librarian, unveiled the beautifully restored volume to the Alumni Board at its October meeting. Blue Ridge Book Conservation of Ivy, Va., performed the expert work. "This volume was heavily used for research purposes for well over a hundred years and was physically deteriorating before its repair," says Stanley. "We are exceedingly grateful to the Alumni Board for the donation to ensure the continued viability of this priceless record of our history."

The Significance

"I encourage any member of the W&L community to visit Special Collections, to view the restored volume and appreciate its significance to the University," says Brandt. "We were delighted to direct our gift to Special Collections and the restoration of the book, and are pleased that Andrew's name and memory will forever be connected with an important part of Washington and Lee's history."

RUGBY ON THE ROAD

Forty years after its birth in the spring of 1966, the Washington and Lee Rugby Football Club, the Screaming Minks, continues to thrive and prosper as the top competitive club sport on campus for players and spectators alike. A yearlong celebration commemorated this milestone.

The festivities began in March, when the club hosted Scotland for a three-match tournament. W&L went undefeated. This summer, the team and alumni enjoyed a golf outing in Washington. In the fall, the team hosted the Rugby Alumni Weekend (RAW) in Lexington, with a golf outing, a cookout, A and B side league matches and a chance for alumni to strap on their boots.

The highlight, however, came in April, when the club traveled to Argentina for its first international tour. Sixteen players and Coach Tom Lovell '91, senior associate director of alumni affairs, spent four days in Mar Del Plata and three in Buenos Aires. Through endless nights and tireless days, everyone enjoyed matches (0-1-1) against Universitario Rugby Club M-23 and Centro Naval, one training session led by an Argentinian Select-Side coach, city tours, a sunset cruise, tango lessons and visits with alumni and parents.

W&L trustee Jorge Estrada '69 (father of Ana

'04, Carolina '05 and Juan '06) hosted the team for lunch at his family's estancia. The group also visited Trinity College, which W&L parents Marcela Tovo (Tino '07) and Stella Suarez (Guadalupe '09 and Santiago '07) run.

Jan. 19, 2007, will mark the 200th anniversary of Robert E. Lee's birth. W&L is commemorating his life, with a special focus on his tenure as our president. One of his successors, former president Robert E.R. Huntley Jr. '50, '57L, got things off to a good start with his September convocation address, "Not Unmindful," when he spoke of "Lee . . . the sine qua non, the one without whose five-year role in our past our school likely would not exist at all."

Here's what we have planned, tentative and subject to change:

- ★ January 2007—Original Lee manuscripts, exhibition, Boatwright Room, Leyburn Library.
- ★ Jan. 11, 2007—"Robert E. Lee— Shades of Gray," play, written and performed by Tom Dugan, including the premiere of new material about Lee's presidency of W&L. Keller Theater, Lenfest Hall.
- ★ Jan. 19, 2007—"Re-Visioning Lee," exhibition, Wilson Hall.
- ★ January and February 2007—Lee birthday parties at alumni chapters throughout the country, possibly featuring guests and speakers from W&L.
- ★ Winter 2007—Undergraduate alumni magazine.

ROBERT E. LEE AT 200: CALENDAR OF EVENTS

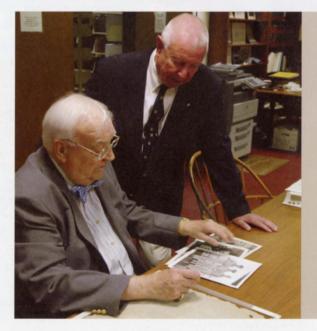

- ★ Spring 2007—Lee family lecture series.
- ★ Summer 2007—"Lee the Educator," exhibition, Lee's Office, Lee Chapel.
- ★ Summer 2007—"Not Unmindful of the Future," exhibition reinstallation, Lee Chapel Main Gallery.
- ★ October 2007—"R.E. Lee— Educator," Web exhibition.
- ★ October 2007—"The Washington-Custis-Lee Family Connections," exhibition, Lee Chapel & Museum.
- ★ October 2007—Alumni chapter events in connection with the exhibition about Robert E. Lee and Ulysses S. Grant (sponsored by the Virginia Historical Society and the New-York Historical Society, curated by William Rasmussen '68, Lora M. Robins Curator of Art at the Virginia Historical Society), at all venues currently planned: the Virginia Historical Society, Richmond; the Missouri Historical Society, St. Louis; the New-York Historical Society, New York City; the Museum of Southern History, Houston; and the Atlanta History Center.

- ★ Oct. 8, 2007—Special Anniversary Lee Memorial Program, Lee Chapel.
- ★ Ongoing—Special merchandise available in the W&L Bookstore.
- ★ Ongoing—Lee Family Digital Archive at W&L.
- ★ Upcoming—Video on Lee the educator.
- ★ Upcoming—A W&L reissue of the 1929 book General Robert E. Lee After Appomattox, edited by the late Franklin L. Riley, a W&L history professor from 1914-1929.
- ★ Upcoming—A broadside featuring a poem, "Lee in Winter," by R.T. Smith.

auren Partridge '05 returned to campus this fall for a whistle-stop visit. Her mission: to tell current students interested in studying education and poverty about her experiences teaching in Nicaragua. Support for her venture comes from W&L's Sarah G. Ball Teaching Award.

How It Works

The Ball family established the award in 2003 to honor Sarah Ball '01. It recognizes excellent preparation for teaching in elementary and secondary schools and goes to a graduating senior committed to teach a community of learners with diverse needs. The Shepherd Poverty Program and the Teacher Education Program oversee the award process. The recipient receives a salary supplement of $4,000 for the first year of teaching, renewable for the second year. This year's recipient is Joseph Franzen '06, and Partridge, last year's winner, received her follow-up sum. Her campus visit to talk with students was part of the deal.

Ball Award Encourages Teaching Careers

"It was in my senior year that I began to feel a little restless and tired of being comfortable. I also felt that I hadn't seen enough," says Partridge. So she found a two-year position teaching English literature, her major, at the Nicaragua Christian Academy in Managua.

How It Helps

She then applied for and won the Ball Award. "It enabled me to buy everything I needed to teach English," she says. "I also volunteer at an orphanage in Nicaragua, so I bought shoes, backpacks and books for them as well."

She found Managua "overwhelming" when she arrived in August 2005. "There is probably only one building left standing in the town," she says. "That's because it was hit with first an earthquake in 1972, and then with a hurricane in 1998."

Partridge's new environment is quite different than Lexington. "The private school I teach in is more middle class, but I still have an openair classroom with a tin roof," she says. "In the rainy season you get rained on, and in the dry season you have to deal with the dust and dirt. Geckoes like to crawl in things that are hot, so every few months we find a dead one in the photocopier."

Teaching has become a passion. "My students are 65 percent Nicaraguan, 10 percent Korean, and the rest are the North American children of missionaries," she says. "The students are awesome—they love to read and to think, and they're excited about the possibility of changing their country. I teach seven classes a day, including English literature, domestic arts, Bible class and debate. I also coach the basketball team."

Partridge has "absolutely no spare time, so there's no chance to feel homesick." In addition to her duties at the school, she volunteers at the orphanage every Saturday, where she tutors in reading and plays soccer. "They can't afford to pay an adult, so this helps them out."

On Sundays, she visits three families for whom W&L students built houses during February break, and tutors the adults in reading. "In return, they're teaching me how to make hammocks."

What the Future Holds

After her stint in Nicaragua is over in July 2007, Partridge plans to study divinity and social work in graduate school, with a focus on education. "I think if I were to return to Nicaragua permanently, I would probably teach in the public school system, because right now students are only educated to the sixth grade, and they have no resources."

In the meantime, it's back to the tin-roofed classroom, eager students and overheated geckoes.

how find time to participate in more than 100 organizations that encompass everything from rugby to Habitat for Humanity. While each group offers its members a feeling of belonging, the Gay-Straight Alliance (GSA) makes that feeling its main mission.

Its mailing list contains more than 100 students, 90 percent of them straight; monthly meetings attract 20 to 30. The organization works with others, including the General Activities Board, Minority Students Association, Women's Studies Program, Programming for the Respect of Individuals and Diversity in Education (PRIDE), Knowledge Empowering Women Leaders (KEWL), OUTLaw, Contact, the College Republicans and the dean of students. The Executive Committee and some alumni provide funds. "Students recognize it's OK to support GSA,"

A Spirit of Community: The GayStraight Alliance

by WENDY LOVELL '90

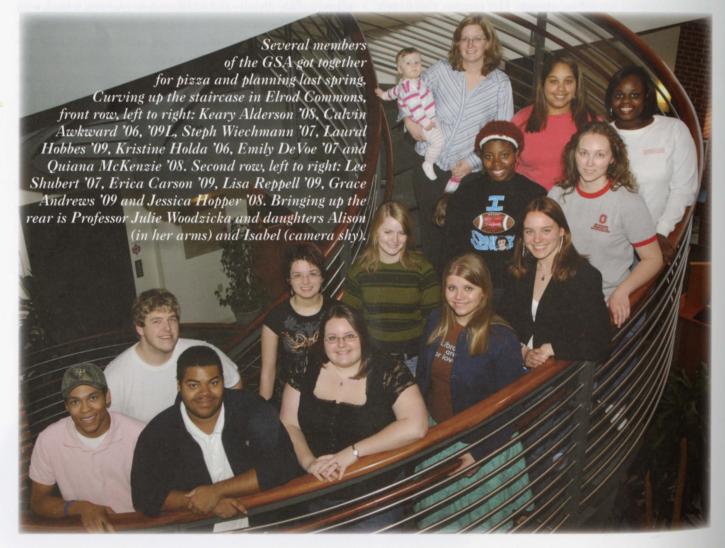

says Margo McClinton, director of the Elrod Commons and campus activities, "and, ultimately, the event raises awareness for all students."

From the Beginning

The GSA is about five years old. In the fall of 2000, Nicole Gilkeson '02 and several other students created its precursor, Safe Place. With help from the dean of students' office and other departments, they printed up stickers with the Safe Place logo that staff and faculty posted to represent their commitment to providing a refuge for all students, for any reason. Gilkeson, who attends law school at Georgetown University, says the program made the campus aware that many people at W&L accepted lesbian, gay and bisexual students. The GSA soon followed Safe Place.

Three dedicated co-chairs—Kelly Jo Larsen '05, Rian Lewis '05 and Steven Martinenza '05—first steered GSA. "I could count on one hand the gay people I knew before W&L, and I thought it was my civic responsibility to get involved," says Larsen, who's studying higher education administration at The College of William and Mary. "Steve, Rian and I focused on making the GSA a mainstream organization, one that the average W&L student could support. We are not an advocacy group, but one that is dedicated to providing a safe place for lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgendered students and their friends to come together."

Reaching Out

The trio "reached out to students, faculty and the administration to build the organization, and handed the club over to new leaders at the end of their junior year," says Julie Woodzicka, a psychology professor and former GSA faculty adviser. "As seniors, they served not only as members but also as consultants to help continue its success." The current faculty adviser is Professor Megan Fulcher, also of psychology.

The GSA sponsors pizza socials, film screenings, photo exhibits, National Coming Out Day and Rainbow Week. It also offers speeches; in April 2004, Judy Shepard, mother of Matthew Shepard, the young gay man who was murdered in Wyoming in 1998, gave a memorable talk. "It brought together so many organizations," says Larsen. "It was so wonderful to see."

Gilkeson believes that the GSA gives "straight students a way to be involved." Case in point is Steph Wiechmann '07, current co-chair, who hopes her involvement will help her family understand a bisexual relative. "When we celebrated Rainbow Week last year, it warmed my heart to see people wearing the color of the day," she says. "However, while we've done a lot, there's more we can do." The other co-chair is Theresa Dougherty '08.

Dr. Kirk Luder, a psychiatrist in the University Counseling Service, says the students he counsels "have found the GSA really valuable in the sense of having a large student group to support them and advocate for full acceptance," he says. "I think the consensus is that there has been a lot of progress in this area in the last several years, and a sense of optimism that gay/bi students will continue to move toward being fully accepted and valued."

The Positives

Cathy Resmer '97 is pleased about the GSA's forum of acceptance. She first heard about it during an Annual Fund phonathon call from Larsen. "I didn't come out until my senior year at W&L," says Resmer, a writer who lives in Vermont. "Once I became more honest about who I was, I had a great time at W&L. People were so much more supportive of me than I thought they would be."

Steve Martinenza, who is gay, hopes that an evermore accepting population will be part of GSA's legacy. He is pursuing a master's degree in advertising at Virginia Commonwealth University. "By the time I graduated, there were more openly gay students on campus than ever before," he says. "What remained the same, thankfully, was the spirit of community that continues to pervade the University."

Members of the W&L administration appreciate such an upbeat message. "GSA has consistently provided strong campus programming focused on raising awareness," says Dawn Watkins, dean of students. "Its approach tends to be that of concentrating on the positives of W&L."

Community and cooperation—just two of the many positives of W&L, and the GSA.

WASHINGTON AND LEE ARMCHAIRS AND ROCKERS

The chairs are made of solid hardrock maple in black lacquer finish with cherry arms. The five-color crest of the University is painted on the back of each chair or rocker. They are attractive and sturdy pieces of furniture and are welcome gifts for birthdays, graduation, Christmas, anniversaries and weddings. All profit from sales of the chairs goes to the scholarship fund in memory of John Graham '14.

goals and four assists. He also picked up 163 career ground balls en route to earning All-South Atlantic and Third Team

All-America honors as a senior. As a fullback on the football team, Farrar was the team's second-leading rusher his final three seasons, totaling 886 yards and 10 touchdowns for his career. He also posted 47 career receptions for 480 yards and three more scores. Farrar garnered Second Team All-Virginia football during his freshman and sophomore seasons, earning a pair of letters. In lacrosse, Clements served as backup College Athletic Association accolades as a senior.

Bob Clements '80

The 19th group of W&L athletic greats joined the Athletic Hall of Fame on Sept. 15.

Mike Daniel '72

Daniel shone as a four-year letter winner and captain of the men's basketball team. A two-time First Team All-College Athletic Conference honoree, he garnered First Team All-State and Honorable Mention All-America honors as a senior, when he averaged 24.3 points, 8.6 rebounds and 3.0 assists per game. Daniel twice led the Generals to the CAC title while being named to the CAC All-Tournament team his final two seasons. He also received the honor of CAC Tournament MVP in 1972 and entered the Hall of Fame ranked fourth on the school's all-time scoring list, with 1,665 career points. W&L posted a 70-30 overall record during his four seasons. An excellent student as well, Daniel twice earned Academic All-America honors.

Jim Farrar '74

Farrar received letters all four years in both lacrosse and football, serving as co-captain of the lacrosse team during his senior season. During four seasons of lacrosse, he helped lead the Generals to three NCAA Division I Tournament appearances and a 51-7 overall goalie and primary face-off specialist his first two seasons before assuming the starting nod in goal and earning Second Team All-America honors as a junior. As a senior, he ranked second nationally with a .702 save percentage and garnered First Team All-America accolades. He also received the C. Markland Kelly Award as the top goalie in the nation that season. Clements enters the Hall of Fame ranked second all-time at W&L in season (.702)

OF FAME NOMINATIONS

The Hall of Fame Committee chooses the inductees. To be eligible, an alumnus or alumna must have participated in two full seasons of varsity intercollegiate competition at W&L. Alumni are eligible at any time beginning 10 years after receiving their bachelor's degrees. Coaches, trainers, managers and anyone else who have made outstanding contributions or offered extraordinary service to W&L athletics are eligible, as are alumni who have made outstanding contributions or offered extraordinary service to W&L athletics after graduation.

If you wish to nominate someone, please fill out the online form at athletics.wlu.edu/hall_of_fame/nomform. htm. You also may print out the page and mail or fax the completed form to Jim Farrar Jr. '74, chair of the selection committee (who didn't have anything to do with his selection this year!), or to the director of athletics, at Athletics Department, Washington and Lee University, Lexington, VA 24450-2116, fax: (540) 458-8669.

and career save percentages (.657) and fourth in career saves (499). He also posted a 176-165 (.516) career record on face-offs. As a defensive back for the football team, Clements tallied 104 tackles and four interceptions.

Marilyn Baker '95

Baker was awarded four letters for the women's tennis team and captained the squad her senior season. She earned First Team All-ODAC honors each of her four seasons and enters the Hall of Fame as the only woman to win three ODAC Player of the Year awards in tennis. Baker garnered All-America honors three times and advanced to the NCAA Individual Championships each season. She received the ITA Arthur Ashe Sportsmanship Award in 1994, and was named the ITA Division III Player of the Year in 1995, when she teamed with Natalia Garcia '97 to win the NCAA Division III Doubles title. The 1995 Washington and Lee Senior Female Athlete of the Year, Baker ranks third all-time at W&L in career singles victories (100-16) and is tied for eighth in career doubles wins (83-18).

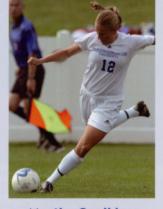

SOCCER AND FOOTBALL PLAYERS MAKE THE GRADE

Five soccer players and seven football players earned the honor of inclusion on the CoSIDA/ESPN The Magazine College Division Academic All-District III teams. CoSIDA is the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Soccer

From the women's team, midfielder Martha Caulkins '08 earned first-team honors, while midfielder Kate Corr '09 and forward Anne Van Devender '09 were named to the second team. On the men's side, defender Scot Pittman '07 and midfielder Rhett McCraw '07 were tabbed for the first team.

Caulkins played in all 23 of the Generals' contests this season and ranked third on the squad in points, with 28 (11g, 6a). Corr also saw action in all games, and had two goals and four assists. Van Devender led the Blue and White in points with a school-record 57 (23g, 11a).

Martha Caulkins

Pittman anchored the W&L backfield, which allowed a mere 0.52 goals per game. McCraw played in all 17 of the Generals' matches and had three goals and one assist.

With their first-team selections, Caulkins, Pittman and McCraw go on to the national ballot, where they could earn Academic All-America honors.

Football

Wide receiver D.J. Hackett '07, tight end Ryan Neff '07, linebacker

Chris Joseph '07, defensive lineman Walker Williams '07, defensive backs Kyle Luby '08 and Mark Snoddy '08 and linebacker Kyle Harvey '08 were named to the 23-member first team.

Hackett started all 11 games this season and claimed eight catches for 113 yards and three touchdowns. Neff was named to the first team for the second season in a row. He started 10 games and recorded 11 catches for 101 yards.

Joseph played in all 11 games and notched 43 tackles, including 2.5 stops for a loss. Williams also started all 11 contests, and recorded 60 tackles, including 8.0 tackles for a loss. He also claimed one interception and two sacks.

Luby started all 11 games and ranks among the team leaders with 73 tackles. The three-time All-ODAC selection also tallied two interceptions and one fumble recovery. Snoddy was named to the first team for the second straight season. He started all games, recording 32 tackles and ranking among national leaders with nine interceptions. He ranks highly in Division III, with 20 passes defended, and set the W&L career interceptions record (17) this season. Snoddy was a First Team All-ODAC honoree in 2005 and this year.

Harvey played in all games, recording 70 tackles, including 4.0 tackles for a loss. He also had one sack and returned an interception 47 yards for a touchdown in a win over Emory and Henry on Nov. 4.

OPEN DOORS: CELEBRATING THE MILLHISER MOOT COURT ROOM

by Louise Uffelman

n Oct. 21, 2006, a glorious fall day, the University celebrated the presidential inauguration of Ken Ruscio '76, a win on the football field—and the opening of the Millhiser Moot Court Room in Lewis Hall.

At the ribbon-cutting ceremony, Ruscio noted the Law School's debt to all those who contributed to the project, especially the Millhiser family. He joked, "It smells like a new car," and then added, "Orange carpeting can take you only so far. Things change and the Law School also needs to adapt. This Moot Court Room is a wonderful adaptation."

State of the Art

The $1.6 million renovation replaced the former circular configuration with a setup similar to that of the renovated classrooms. New windows bring in natural light, and the state-of-the-art audiovisual systems allow the room to be used for classes, symposiums and moot court competitions.

State of the Law School

At the dedication dinner, Tom Millhiser '81L spoke about the qualities the Law School embodies: honor, collegiality, community, close student-teacher relationships and the focus on teaching. "These core values are what make the Law School great and what distinguishes it from the other top law schools," he said. "These core values also were the foundation for my mother and father's great admiration and respect for the Law School, and persuaded my father to make his $1 million gift literally a couple of days before his death. My parents unfortunately did not live long enough to learn that the Moot Court Room will be named after them. Nevertheless, it is a great honor to my parents, and one by which they would be humbled if they were alive."

Closed for the summer to undergo extensive renovations (see law. wlu.edu|mootcourtroom|gallery.asp for more photos), the Moot Court Room officially opened for business on Oct. 19, when Trustee Bill Goodell '80L (right in photo) joined Brian Murchison, acting dean of the Law School (left), and the first-years for a conversation on important issues facing members of the legal profession.

Mary-Rose Papandrea, a rising scholar in First Amendment studies and professor of law at Boston College Law School, delivered the inaugural Charles S. Rowe First Amendment Lecture. "The Press and National Security in Wartime" addressed the recent clashes between the executive branch and the press over leaks relating to Abu Ghraib, the CIA's secret interrogation camps and the National Security Agency's wiretapping activities.

"Leaks of classified information seem to be part of correcting excessive executive control," she said. "The White House often tries to persuade reporters not to publish sensitive information." Noting that editors and the executive branch have reached compromises in the past over reporting national security issues—The New York Times held back the NSA wiretapping story for a year—she suggested, "Rather than threaten journalists with jail time, the executive branch should engage them. You can't ask the press to withhold publishing information."

The dedication of John and Anne Wilson Hall on Oct. 27 capped two joyful weeks at W&L, following as it did Homecoming on Oct. 20-21 and the inauguration of President Ken Ruscio '76 on Oct. 21. Continuing the festive mood, W&L celebrated the opening of the long-awaited building with homegrown art and music. As you can see, Wilson Hall was worth the wait.

Taking the long view: Wilson Hall, on the left, joins the Lenfest Center to make a unified complex. Larry Stene, art professor, says his favorite thing about Wilson Hall is "the potential. The culture-of-creativity component. The energy. It's not about ceilings, floors and/or doors. It's about the potential this common roof has for all the arts. When the growing pains get healed and the kinks get worked out, we finally have a home for the arts! A chance for the arts to grow, prosper and be enjoyed."

Students benefit from Wilson Hall both inside and out.

Wilson Hall boasts 22 new pianos in gleaming studios for students and faculty.

The Lykes Family Atrium overlooks Woods Creek. "I love the beautiful views of Woods Creek," says Christa Kreeger Bowden, assistant professor of art. Pam Simpson agrees; the art history professor says her favorite thing about Wilson Hall is "the view out the window of Woods Creek. It is wonderful and ever changing."

The Woods Creek side of Wilson Hall, as seen from the top of the Lenfest Center. Jerry Myers' favorite thing about the new building? "Space," says the associate director of choral activities.

Art lovers in the Staniar Gallery. "The openness of the space is wonderful to walk into every morning," says Betty Hickox, fine arts secretary, of Wilson Hall.

The musical piece commissioned for the opening of Wilson Hall came from Terry Vosbein, professor of music: "Music's Empire," a salute accompanying text by Andrew Marvell, the 17th-century poet. The University Chorus and the University Chamber Singers performed the work in the new recital hall, along with "Danny Boy" and Gustav Mahler's finale from Symphony No. 2, "The Resurrection," at the dedication ceremony. Jerry Myers and Gordon Spice conducted, while Josh Harvey '00 and William McCorkle provided accompaniment.

The Wilson Hall celebration included two shows in the new Staniar Gallery. Paul Seifert '04 had the honor of the inaugural exhibition, "Where Fishing Is Life," paintings, drawings and photos from his year of Watson Fellowship travel to fishing villages around the world. His show hangs on the walls in this photo. The second show presented two works commissioned from faculty members for the opening. At center is the first, "Faultless and Fearless," a sculptural assemblage of images of Lee and of 20th-century art, by Larry Stene. At right is the second, "The Visitor," by Kathleen Olson-Janjic, a painting drawn from her travels in Italy.

THE INAUGURATION

The crisp, sunny fall weather on Saturday, Oct. 21—inauguration day for President Kenneth P. Ruscio '76—made for the kind of day that elicits that good-to-be-alive feeling.

The processional began with the platform party. It also included trustees; representatives from such organizations as Phi Beta Kappa and the Lee-Jackson Foundation; delegates, many of them with W&L connections, from other universities and colleges; 24 students representing everyone from athletes to dorm counselors; and alumni bearing the good wishes of chapters all over the country. As the members of the processional marched down the lawn and took their seats facing Lee Chapel, a mood of celebration washed over the crowd.

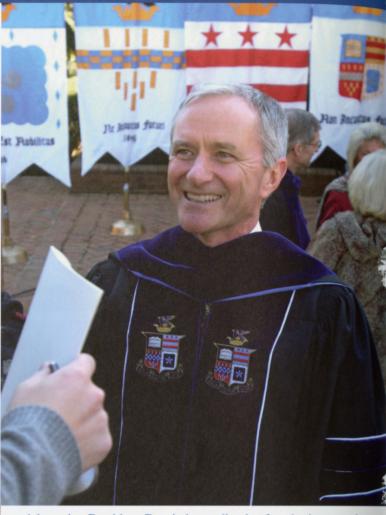

In addition to the people mentioned in these captions, there were several other participants. Burr Datz '75, coordinator of religious life, gave the invocation. Greetings came from members of the community: Robert A. Strong, professor of politics; Edward W. Mays, systems operator in the Marketplace; Robert E. Rain '07, student; Rebecca K. Brandt '90, president of the Alumni Association; Mayor John W. Knapp, of Lexington; and President Steve Bisese, of Omicron Delta Kappa.

This handful of images is accompanied by excerpts from the new president's eloquent inaugural address, which concluded the ceremony. You can also watch a video of President Ruscio's inauguration and read his full address by visiting inauguration.wlu.edu.

The three living University rectors. Left to right: J. Frank Surface Jr. '60, 1997-2003; Philip W. Norwood '69, 2003-present, who swore in our new president; and A. Stevens Miles Jr. '51, 1990-1997.

"A Washington and Lee education should convey this compelling message: A strong community is one where we learn in common that which we cannot learn alone. When we claim to be developing character, that is what we mean."

A beaming President Ruscio immediately after the inaugural ceremony.

"As all of us—alumni, students, faculty, staff, friends and supporters—embark on our journey together, I hope we create an educational institution that calls upon the best qualities of humanity. I hope we foster conversations in which the objective is to understand rather than prevail. I hope we develop within our students a commitment to something greater than the self. And I hope that we will always offer an education that cultivates those better angels of our nature."

Flags representing alumni chapters snapped in the wind.

"Our alumni, many of whom have taken center stage in public life, have been models of independence, integrity and intelligence."

OF A PRESIDENT

"For although a presidential inauguration is about a transition in one office, it is far more importantly about our community, a time to reflect on its values, to take stock of where we are and where we have been and to prepare for what lies ahead. That is why we are here today, and it is why I am privileged and honored to be joined by my predecessors.... Their presence and our fond memories of John Elrod send the unmistakable message that I need not go back to the presidencies of Francis Pendleton Gaines or Robert E. Lee to realize that I have big shoes to fill."

Like its honoree, the ceremony had a low-key sense of humor. Here, Ruscio and the Honorable J. Michael Luttig '76, who offered an affectionate speech, react to the remarks of June R. Aprille, provost of the University of Richmond.

"Mike, fellow member of the Class of '76 and longtime friend, is now senior vice president and general counsel of Boeing; he suffered the ultimate indignity of having to fly commercial to be with us today. June's presence, I'm sure, was motivated by the need for assurance that the deal is closed—that her troublesome dean of the past four years is in fact safely installed, no longer a threat. . . . She can now safely report back that all is well. Seeing is finally believing. They are true friends, the best that anyone could hope for, and they have made this very meaningful day even more so."

The University Chorus offered a stirring version of "Shenandoah" at the close of the ceremony.

"From across the centuries come stories that reveal our principles and values; from literature comes the intangible sense of place, in words that resonate with members of the Class of 2010 as easily as they do with those of an earlier vintage."

Brian Richardson '73, University marshal, led President Ruscio and the rest of the inaugural party into the sunshine of a fine October day.

"I can't help but feel even more acutely than I did before the power of the history of this place. There are the standard stories we all know so well, such as the saga of George Washington's gift of James River Canal stock. . . . Washington never slept here, but his legacy is direct and real. From that point on, a sense of duty and integrity became part of our fabric. Then, of course, there is Robert E. Lee, assuming the leadership of Washington College after the Civil War. . . . We build upon the legacy of Lee, the educator, with an ongoing commitment to educating citizens and leaders for a complex world."

The extended Ruscio clan was on hand for the big day. Here are three members, left to right: Matt, Fred and Kim Ruscio, the son, father and wife of the new president.

"My father . . . almost exactly 35 years ago . . .

stood with me by the tree over to your right and took a picture we would later show my mother, a picture of me as a high school senior on the front lawn of a college we knew almost nothing about... Our prayers that day were focused entirely on the prospects for admission. This particular moment was far, far beyond the realm of our imaginations."

CALLING ALL ALUMNI

Ladies and Gentlemen:

On behalf of the Selection Committee of the Alumni Board, we ask you to please tell us about good candidates for any of the following. Your input is very helpful in making sure that we know about strong, diverse and talented alumni from across the country.

Board of Trustees. Every two years, the Alumni Board submits three names for consideration. The trustees and the Alumni Board are keenly interested in identifying the very best candidates from our alumni population. The Selection Committee will submit three names to the Board of Trustees in May 2007.

Distinguished Alumni Award. The Alumni Board gives this award at its discretion to one or more people who bring credit to Washington and Lee by virtue of their professional, civic and/or public service accomplishments. (Please remember that valuable public service does not require a high profile or high income.)

Distinguished Young Alumni Award. Under the same criteria, but for alumni who have graduated within the last 15 years.

Please send all names (which will be held in strict confidence) to Dan Einstein at deinstein@rosenfeld einstein.com, to Beau Dudley at wdudley@wlu.edu, or to Beau Dudley, c/o Alumni Office, Washington and Lee University, Lexington, VA 24450-2116, no later than Jan. 31, 2007. The Alumni Board and the University welcome your participation in this important work. Thanks in advance. Please contact either of us if you have any questions.

Small World Times Two

Two W&L families ran into each other during a recent vacation—in Africa. To their mutual surprise, the Folsoms and the Gottwalds met up at the River Club near Livingstone, Zambia, just up the Zambezi River from Victoria Falls, in South Africa. Left to right: Andy Folsom '03, Bill Gottwald '70 (trustee emeritus) and John Folsom '73 (current trustee).

This August, when the vacationing Lee Rorrer Hollifield '92 (of the Alumni Board) and Michael Hollifield '89 showed up for their tour of the parliament in Budapest, Hungary, Lee thought another tourist in the crowd looked familiar. When she spotted the man's W&L bag, Lee realized he was Dennis Cross, vice president for University advancement, who was in Hungary on an Alumni College trip. Left to right: Michael, Lee and Dennis.

W. Henry Jernigan Jr. ('75L), an attorney with Dinsmore & Shohl L.L.P. in Charleston, W.Va., was named one of the nation's leading lawyers in business in litigation.

Michael C. Schaeffer

began his 27th season as head men's soccer coach at the University of North Carolina at Pembrooke in August. His past three teams have qualified for the NCAA Division II National Tournament, and the 2005-2006 team finished the season ranked 19th in the nation, with a record of 12-3-5.

J. Stanley Taylor

reports that both his daughters got married this past year. Emily Taylor '04 wed M. Damian Horan '03, and Darby Taylor '02 married Dan Berra in January. He lives in Houston.

Chester F. Burgess III

was elected president of the Metro Atlanta Chapter of the Georgia Association of Enrolled Agents. He also serves on the board of the GAEA. In that capacity, he spearheaded the formation of an educational foundation to assist tax practitioners with the expenses involved in preparing for the IRS examination for the enrolled agent license, and to help licensed tax professionals with educational expenses of training to represent taxpayers before the IRS.

Thomas O. Rainey III

is in private practice with Robert Hill '79L in Colonial Heights, Va. He and wife Sally have three children: Thomas IV (Hampden-Sydney '06), Kelly (Randolph-Macon '08) and Stephen (Emory and Henry '10). They live in Dinwiddie County, Va.

D. Hart Slater

and his wife, DeAnne, moved from London to Houston in early 2004. He has worked for Mobil (now ExxonMobil) for more than 28 years. Their children are all in school: Jill is in graduate school at the University of Melbourne, Melanie is working toward her master's at West Virginia University, and Ben has completed his first year at the University of Toronto.

1976 Kenneth J. Holda has spent a lot of time on campus lately. He was here on May 5-6 for his 30th reunion, on May 20 to see his daughter, Kristine '06, perform in "The Pirates of Penzance," and on June 1 for her graduation. Kristine majored in biology, was co-captain of the women's swim team and participated in University Chorus and the theater.

30th Reunion May 3-6, 2007 1977

Charles D. I. Powell

has been married to his wife, Betsy, for 26 years, and they've lived in Dallas the whole time. He practices law, and Betsy is in real estate management. They have two sons, Charles, 21, and Bryan, 18. Charles is a junior at Texas Christian University, where he is studying e-commerce, and Bryan is a senior at the Episcopal School of Dallas, and plans to pursue engineering or architecture in college. They visited the campus last summer and say it looks great. He wishes Ken Ruscio all the best as our new president.

A. Jeffery Bird

Everyone Looks Here First! Send News and Photos for Class Notes

How to Submit Class Notes

By Mail: Alumni Office, Washington and Lee University, Lexington, VA 24450-2116

By E-mail: magazine@wlu.edu

On the Web site: alumni.wlu.edu/web/page/normal/59.html

Dos and Don'ts

DO send us news about yourself for Class Notes—marriages, births, jobs, honors, travels, retirements and so on.

Because of space limitations in the magazine, we DON'T print news about future events, such as engagements and pregnancies (although we do send our best wishes), and we DON'T print photographs of babies. (We DO, however, run those photos on the class home pages.)

DON'T worry if you don't see your published item right away. It takes several weeks to process class notes and produce an issue. Your item may arrive in the Alumni Office when Class Notes have already been laid out by the Communications Office. So your item will probably appear in the next issue.

DO send us news of your friends and classmates, which we happily add to our files. But DON'T necessarily look for that news in Class Notes—we must get an OK directly from the alumnus/alumna himself or herself in order to publish it.

Photos

DO send us photos of your chapter gatherings, visits with old friends, trips to exotic locations, golf outings, sorority reunions, etc.

DO send your wedding photos.

If possible, DO identify everyone in the photo—including yourself.

DO send either an actual photographic print on glossy paper, or e-mail a jpeg file of 300 dpi or higher.

DON'T send paper printouts of digital images or photocopies of photographs. They don't reproduce well.

DO include your name and address on the back of the print if you want us to return it.

Books and CDs

We publish notices of books and CDs by alumni, staff and faculty, so DO send us a copy of your new book, a jpeg of the cover or the cover itself, along with brief information about the publisher and content. After publication in the alumni magazine, we send the books and CDs to the University library for the collections. Mail items to the Alumni Office or e-mail a jpeg file of 300 dpi or higher.

Clark Winter '37 drove the development of an item that many alumni carry in their wallets: the American Express Card. He retired as senior corporate executive and treasurer of the American Express Co., and lived in New York City and Cashiers, N.C. More than 70 years ago, a drive of a different kind led him to W&L, where a friendly greeting changed his direction.

Discovering W&L

In 1934, when Winter was in high school in Freeport, N.Y., he and his best friend, the late C. Russell Doane '37, decided to go to the same college. Dartmouth accepted them, but the two young men had heard about a new school in Durham, N.C., that sounded interesting, so they drove there to check out Duke University.

On their way home, the duo stopped in Lexington and enjoyed lunch at the counter in McCrum's Drugstore. Following the meal, they visited Washington and Lee, then unknown to either of them.

Winter and Doane were immediately impressed with how friendly everyone seemed at W&L. The students and faculty all greeted each other, and said, "Good afternoon, gentlemen," to them. A student even approached the two young men, asked if he could help and offered a tour.

"It really got my attention when the student who offered us a tour set his books down and went off with us to see campus," said Winter. "It was only later that I realized W&L had an honor system that ensured the safety of his books."

During the tour, the three young men ran into Dean Frank Gilliam in Washington Hall. Gilliam invited the two visitors into his office, where they spent the better part of an hour talking about W&L. At the end of their visit, Gilliam presented Winter and Doane with catalogues and applications.

Resuming their journey, the two young men had reached Staunton when they decided to apply to W&L. They turned their car around, headed back to Lexington and submitted their applications. Winter graduated with a B.S. in business.

"One of my continuing recollections of W&L is that it is a friendly place. That was my first impression, and it remains true today," said Winter. "My experience as a student was great—it was the most memorable four years of my life as well as being the most enjoyable and fruitful."

Clark Winter '37 and his wife, Caroline.

Helping Others

With 2005 and the arrival of his 90th birth-day, Winter considered how he could help others to benefit from the school and the experiences he had found so memorable. With the encouragement of his family, he contacted W&L and established a charitable remainder unitrust. His decision made him a member of the Doremus Society, which recognizes donors of planned gifts.

"A unitrust is a rather ingenious way of making a gift," said Winter. "You enjoy an income tax deduction now and you receive income for life, plus you know someday your gift will make a difference for others. I recommend it!"

He continued, "It was a fulfilling decision, knowing that someday my gift will provide scholarship aid to W&L students who might not be able to attend the University without assistance."

Who knows, perhaps future students who will benefit from Winter's generosity might decide on W&L in the same way as their benefactor—a drive through town and a timely encounter with the speaking tradition.

If you would like to explore joining the Doremus Society by making an income-retained gift to Washington and Lee, please contact us at (540) 458-8421 or by e-mail at ahumphreys@wlu.edu.

Larkin Mason Fowler Jr. '65, '68L, of Moultrie, Ga., died on July 4. He received his law degree from Emory University. He moved to Thomasville in 1969 to practice law and then to Moultrie in 1972, when he opened his own office. He was admitted to the state bar of Georgia in 1970 and served on the board of governors from 1979 to 1981. He also belonged to the Georgia Trial Lawyers Association and the Moultrie and Southern Circuit bar associations, serving as the president for the latter from 1973 to 1974. He received the American Jurisprudence Award. Fowler belonged to Sigma Phi Epsilon social fraternity.

John C. Hale '75,

of Baltimore, Md., died on Sept. 2. He worked for many years as an environmental consultant in the Baltimore area. He was a loving and devoted father to his children, especially his daughter, Veronica-Ryan, who graduated in June with a degree in journalism. He enjoyed golfing with his friends and his son, Reese, whom he loved to watch play all sports.

Derek L. Brooks '99L.

of Roswell, N.M., died on June 2. He majored in geology at Carleton College and earned a master's degree in geology at the University of Wyoming. In Roswell, he practiced at the law firm of Hinkle, Hensley, Shanor and Martin, where he made partner. His love of the outdoors enabled him to restart Boy Scout Troop 149 in Roswell, which resulted in five Eagle Scouts. He was also able to experience Philmont Scout Ranch twice, for a backpacking trip and a horseback expedition.

Homer L Shook '31 died May 5,

Ceorge Elliot Kearns Jr. '42, '48L died March 8, 1995.

Hank Woods '42, Benefactor

Henry Harper "Hank" Woods Jr. '42, of Gulf Shores, Ala., a devoted alumnus and one of W&L's most generous benefactors, died on June 10. He was 86.

"Hank represented the best of Washington and Lee," said President Ken Ruscio '76.

"Hank's support of his class reunion efforts, his active participation in the Alumni College and his generous philanthropic spirit and support of W&L helped advance the mission of the University. Generations of students past, present and future have benefited and will continue to benefit from the generosity of Hank and Anne Woods. Hank was one of W&L's quiet leaders, and we shall forever be in his debt."

Woods was born in St. Louis, Mo., and grew up in Webster Groves, Mo. At W&L, he received a B.A. in geology, belonged to Beta Theta Pi fraternity, played varsity football and participated in varsity track and field.

During World War II, he served in the U.S. Navy, working on aerial reconnaissance and photo interpretation and editing the Navy's aerial photo manual describing Japanese weaponry. During his service, he survived a plane crash, during which he crawled into the wreckage despite a broken back and rescued the pilot, and a near-fatal case of malaria.

Woods pursued varied business interests. In 1946, he opened Lanier & Woods, a retail and wholesale operation in Jasper, Ala. He soon bought out his partner and ran the business for 23 years before selling it. He then worked in accounting and as an advisor to small businesses before becoming president of a telephone concern. In the 1980s, he partnered in an investment company, retired from it and then turned to the exploration of oil and precious metals.

Woods and his wife, Anne, donated to the Class of 1942 55th Reunion Alumni House Renovation and the Edgar M. '42 and Deborah H. Boyd Scholarship, and then, through charitable trusts, established the Henry and Anne G. Woods Professorship and two undesignated gifts. "He was particularly proud of his philanthropy to his beloved alma mater," said his daughter, Louise Priest.

The Woods Circle on campus near the Williams School honors their generosity and also provides a pleasant spot to relax. The couple belonged to the Doremus Society, and their names are engraved on the Benefactors' Wall in Washington Hall.

Woods' W&L roommate and longtime friend, the late Edgar M. Boyd '42 (another generous benefactor of the University), called him "probably one of the two brightest guys I've ever known." Boyd and Wood remembered with glee their youthful exploits at W&L, especially the time they appropriated a cannon from VMI on that school's parade day—and escaped detection.

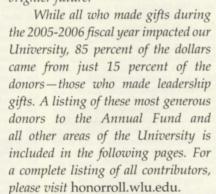

Woods is survived by his beloved wife of 60 years, Anne; daughters Louise Priest and Katherine Kidd (and husband Scott); son Hank Woods III (and wife Marion); granddaughter Eloise Priest '02; and grandsons Taylor Woods '08 and Robbie Woods.

Dear Friends:

Washington and Lee's alumni, parents and friends have again demonstrated their passion and loyalty to the University through their generous gifts and pledges. It is clear that our new president, Ken Ruscio '76, can count on the support and dedication of the entire W&L community as he leads us to an even brighter future.

Hatton Smith '73

There are many stellar facts and figures to highlight from the individual and collective efforts of all those who supported Washington and Lee during the past year. New gifts and pledges to the University increased 28.4 percent over last year to $19,524,975. The amount raised in new gifts and pledges is the best annual indicator of effectiveness in our fund-raising efforts and a testament to the generosity of our alumni, parents and friends. Included in this total is $2.9 million for the Law School (a whopping increase of 175 percent over 2004-2005), more than $5 million for the renovation of the Co-op and generous commitments to programs across the University.

Through the extraordinary leadership of Annual Fund chairman Michel Marcoux '66, P'01,'04 and more than 200 dedicated Class Agents and Parents Council volunteers, the Annual Fund exceeded its $5.2 million goal and set a new record of $5,312,688.31 from 11,111 donors—also a new record. The entire University community is indebted to Michel for his two years of service that led the Annual Fund to new heights. He is ably succeeded by Bill Wallace '74, '77L, P'02,'06,'09, longtime Class Agent and former Alumni Board president.

Included in the Annual Fund total is $704,630 from Law alumni and $730,643 from current and past parents. We are grateful to Rob Aliff '91, '97L, and Carol and Paul Garcia P'08 for their leadership of the Law Annual Fund and Parents Fund, respectively.

Finally, I am pleased to recognize our faculty and staff as well as the Class of 2006 for their support of the University. Assisted by Mike Evans and Mike Young, co-chairs of the Faculty/Staff Scholarship Campaign, W&L's faculty and staff contributed more than $137,000 to need-based scholarships, the Annual Fund, and many other areas of the University. Not to be left out, more than 68 percent of the Class of 2006 made a gift to the Annual Fund through their Senior Gift campaign. I am personally grateful for the participation of our newest alumni.

Again, on behalf of your Board of Trustees, President Ruscio and the faculty, staff and students of Washington and Lee, thank you for your gifts, which make such a difference for our University.

Planned Gifts Life Income and Estate Plans

The following individuals have either created an irrevocable deferred gift on behalf of Washington and Lee, or have informed the Planned Giving Office that they have included W&L in their wills or estate plans, or have entered a revocable arrangement with the University.

Irrevocable deferred gifts are charitable arrangements whereby income is retained for the lifetime of the donor and/or his or her beneficiaries. In most cases, an income-tax deduction is available at the time the deferred gift is created, even though the principal does not pass to Washington and Lee until the death of the beneficiaries.

In 2005-2006, 23 individuals created new planned giving arrangements with Washington and Lee having a face value of $2,364,857.

HOMECOMING 2006

While the inauguration of President Ken Ruscio '76 took center stage during the weekend of Oct. 20-21, the hundreds of visitors to campus also enjoyed the many Homecoming activities. Here is a cross section of people and events.

Kay and Darrold Cannan'53 got to see for themsekves how many people can fit onto their namesake space.

How are they going to get those checks for chapter awards on the flights back home?

Enjoying the perfect

fall weather.

That's Entertainment!

Longtime fans of W&L's theater scene will remember these five fine actors (right), who reunited in November at the Troubadour for a reading of Paula Vogel's "The Oldest Profession."

The zesty performance was the finale of the 2006 Flournoy Playwright Festival, which involved many students and featured the works of Vogel—plus a visit by the playwright herself. Vogel attended a performance of "How I Learned to Drive," the senior thesis production of Michael Wagoner '07

The Flournoy family, all from Texas, visited Lexington in November for their namesake festival. It brings notable plays and playwrights to campus for the enormous benefit of students and the rest of the W&L community. Left to right: Dan '64, Sarah '97, Ruth and John '99.

and the play for which she won the Pulitzer Prize, as well as "The Long Christmas Ride Home," which brought together a variety of arts media, including puppetry. "As edgy and dark as Vogel's plays are," said Rob Mish '76, director of the Lenfest Center for the Arts, "we all found her to be most gracious and open and truly honored that we were performing her work."

The cast of "The Oldest Profession," directed by Tom Ziegler, professor of theater, shared the stage with a smokin' combo with plenty of W&L talent: Doug Cumming (saxophone; assistant professor of journalism and mass communications), Doug Harwood '74 (drums), Dan Newhall (bass; W&L technical services) and Betty Bond Nichols (piano).
